CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 69—No. 14. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3452.

Editorial.

A GOOD TIME FOR REVIVALS.

Almost any time is a good time for a revival if preacher and people feel in their hearts a need of the manifest presence of God—and most of them feel that always. But the week preceding Easter Sunday is, in most cases, an especially favorable time for holding a series of meetings that will fix the minds of the people upon Christ as the center of saving faith and that will afford them the opportunity of reconsecrating their lives to the service of God. A glorious Easter is even more glorious if it marks the entrance of even one man or woman, boy or girl, into the blessedness of fellowship with the risen Christ.

GENERAL CONFERENCE LEGISLATION.

The approaching meeting of the General Conference at Hot Springs, Ark., on May 3, will have before it many matters that are of vital interest to the church. It is impossible, of course, to tell in advance what the action of the supreme law-making body of the church will be in any given case, just as it is impossible to know in advance all that will be presented to it for consideration. It may be of interest, however, to set down some of the things that will engage the attention of the Conference, and some of the things that have been proposed for its consideration. Some of these will arise in the regular order of its business; others may or may not get further than reference to committees; still others, in spite of discussion beforehand, may not be presented for consideration at all. We are merely setting down here some of the matters that have been discussed as being proper subjects for General Conference action, some of them being embraced in memorials properly adopted, others proposed only by individuals. We have not attempted to arrange these subjects in logical order, giving them simply as they occur to us. We may add that the New Orleans Christian Advocate will give a full account of the proceedings of the General Conference, enabling its readers to keep in touch with what is being done.

1. Election of bishops and other connectional officers. The suggestions concerning the number of new bishops needed range all the way from none to six.

2. Legislation concerning the presiding eldership. The suggestions concerning this office include such things as providing for their election by the Annual Conference; their appointment by the bishop upon nomination of the Annual Conference; doing away with the office altogether; providing for fewer presiding elders by requiring districts to be larger; restricting their appointment to not more than four years consecutively; providing that not more than one shall be eligible for election as a delegate to the General Conference from an Annual Conference.

3. A change of the name of the church, eliminating the word "South."

4. Limiting the tenure of office of the bishops.

5. Requiring the bishops to live within their episcopal districts.

6. Election of resident bishops for foreign mission fields.

7. Assignments of bishops to their various fields by a committee of the General Conference.

8. Establishment of a "brotherhood insurance plan" for church property, providing for the insurance of all such property.

9. Changing the Creed so as to substitute synonymous words for the expression, "the holy catholic church."

10. Abolishing the General Rules.

11. Appointment of a commission to investigate the character of teaching in church schools.

12. Consolidating into one publication the Nashville Christian Advocate, the Methodist Quarterly Review, the Epworth Era, and the Missionary Voice.

13. Consolidating Conference organs.

14. Providing for the "open cabinet" in all Conferences.

15. Discontinuing some of the Boards of the church and reducing the number of secretaries.

16. Providing for the publication of a new Standard Hymnal.

17. Providing for the election of all local church officers by the church conference without nomination by the pastor.

18. Making adequate provision for superannuate preachers.

19. Settlement of the Unification question.

20. Reduction of the "overhead" expense in administering the affairs of the church.

21. Adjustment and correlation of the functions of the Sunday school, the Epworth League, and the Young People's Missionary Society.

22. Removal of the time-limit altogether, or its restoration to a definite term of years.

23. Appointment of a commission to work out a standard system of report blanks for every department of church work.

24. Conservation of Centenary and Christian Education movements.

25. Strengthening of the publishing interests of the church.

26. Providing for the inclusion of reports from local churches in general records of the church.

27. Fixing the headquarters of the General Boards of the church in various cities throughout the church.

28. Adoption of a Constitution.

The above list is not complete, of course, and it is intended to be only a suggestion of the many things that will occupy the attention of the General Conference during its approaching session.

We do not look forward to the enactment of any radical legislation. Our own feeling is that this will be one of the most conservative assemblies in recent years, our opinion being based upon the fact that a large number of the delegates are serving for the first time and the well-known tendency of those newly charged with heavy responsibilities to move carefully. In our opinion, too, this is as it should be.

THE EASTER OFFERINGS FOR OUR ORPHANAGES.

As Easter Sunday approaches, our thoughts naturally turn to the institutions of our church which are doing so much to exemplify the Christ-spirit in their ministry to helpless children—the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage and the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home. These institutions are wholly dependent upon the church for their maintenance, and it is a beautiful thing that an offering on Easter Sunday is applied to their support. It is impossible to estimate the good these institutions are doing in furnishing Christian nurture for the little ones who have been deprived of the love and care of their parents, and it should be looked upon as a real privilege to assist them in their great work. We hope that every Sunday school and every church in our patronizing Conferences will give their members and friends an opportunity on Easter Sunday to contribute to the support of these institutions, and that the offering will be so liberal that their financial burdens may be greatly lightened.

It should be a matter of pride to Louisiana and Mississippi Methodists that their orphanages should be ranked among the most useful and most efficiently administered in the whole church, and they should, both as a duty and a privilege, stand by them with the utmost loyalty and devotion. Let us make this a notable Easter in the liberality of our offerings for the support of these institutions that make noble men and women out of helpless and dependent children.

THEY WILL WORK.

The fact that the American Cast Iron Pipe Company of Atlanta, Ga., has determined that the teachings of Jesus Christ are to be the ruling principles of its business, was thought of sufficient importance to be given rather extended notice in a recent number of the New York Journal and Commercial Bulletin. The platform upon which the officers of the corporation carry on their business is stated as follows: 1. A reasonable living wage to the lowest paid workman; 2. Constant employment for every member of the organization; 3. An actual application of the Golden Rule to all relations between employes and employer. On general principles we are convinced that Christ's teachings are thoroughly applicable in modern industry; and the testimony of this company, and of others that have put them into practice, shows conclusively that they are practicable. In fact, modern industry will never be organized right until it is organized according to Christ's teachings. The problems of capital and labor are not economic problems so much as they are religious problems. The great glory of Christianity is in the fact that it works in every case where it is given a chance.

HOME HUNGER.

By Harold Trowbridge.

There lies a glory on familiar places,
Born of old dreams and long-remembered faces,
Touching all earthly things of mortal fancy
With an unearthly and immortal necromancy.

In that warm light lost hopes have being,
Dim figures live; there clouded eyes have seeing
Beyond the stars mysteriously wheeling,
Beyond Time's slow, inexorable revealing.

All hungers change, forever and forever,
Save the one hungering that changes never;
While that endures there may be cause for laughter—
Laughter, and the brave hope that follows after.

LEAVES FROM MY NOTEBOOK.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

III.

A Printing Plant.

The printing plant deserves a special paragraph. At the beginning of the quadrennium there were two small papers circulating among our Mexican churches, one on each side the boundary line. In 1919 it was agreed to combine the two and to issue only one paper. That plan has been followed with great success, and we now have an attractive, well printed, well edited sixteen-page paper, with two editors, one from each side of the Rio Grande. The paper is printed at Chihuahua by our own plant. This plant was started at first in the basement of the boys' dormitory, and succeeded from the beginning. In 1920 we were fortunate to be able to secure a building located on a corner of one of the principal streets, only a square from the main business street of the city, and less than two blocks from our Centro Cristiano. This building was altered at small expense to answer our purposes and we now have a bookroom for the sale of books, tracts, stationery, a business office, pressroom, composition room, and storeroom. Under the able management of Brother Newberry, the printing establishment has been fairly well equipped and well organized. Our Conference paper is printed and job work is done in large quantities and at such prices as to produce a good profit, which is used to improve the equipment, and to print devotional and doctrinal tracts for free distribution. It is a heartening sight to look in the show windows and to see Gospel tracts, and the Bible itself, on public sale in a city where only a year ago the Catholic archbishop called upon the people to bring their heretical Bibles to be burned. No money will count for more in the evangelization of Mexico than the $20,000 invested in our printing plant. We greatly need a good linotype machine, which would so reduce the cost of composition that much greater profit could be made on our job work, and more money be free for colportage work and tract distribution.

A New Center.

At Parral we received a church and school property and a residence in exchange from the Congregationalists. In order to obtain adequate and convenient quarters, property adjoining the church and school has been purchased, and by some rebuilding, some rearrangement, some tearing down, and some new building, a good parsonage and good school quarters will be secured. The large residence on the edge of the city is being repaired and will furnish excellent headquarters for the presiding elder, Brother J. Thacker, who has just taken up his residence there.

We also took over from the Congregationalists a school in the country community of Las Onevas, which has three teachers and about one hundred scholars, which we hope to house suitably at an early date. Work will also be begun at Jiminos and Santa Rosalia, and property secured as soon as Brother Thacker can make satisfactory investigation.

In Torreon there has been a great advance. We already had a well located, well built church, with a fair parsonage for the American pastor adjoining, and a three-room, two-story school building adjoining the parsonage. A neat, comfortable parsonage for the Mexican pastor has been built on the rear of the lot. A two-story building with four good classrooms and a porch has been added to the rear of the present school building. Two large, fairly well-built houses, directly adjoining our school building, have been bought and will give accommodation for thirty or forty boarders when we are ready to open a boarding department. At present these houses are used as a home for our physician, for dispensary work and such patients as may be taken. We have bought an entire block of land, fronting south on the Alameda Plaza, and are now erecting a hospital at a cost of $30,000, which is built on such a plan that it can be enlarged as necessity may require. The citizens of the town seem interested in our plans and have promised to contribute the $10,000 necessary to purchase our hospital lot. The Woman's Council has definitely decided to purchase property and open a Centro Cristiano similar to the one at Chihuahua during the coming year, if possible. The number of workers at Torreon and in the Laguna country has increased from two to nine in three years.

In the city of Durango, all our work was suspended during the revolutionary period, except that our Mexican pastor stayed on the field and held the church together as best he could. In 1920 the school was re-opened, the Annual Conference was held in Durango, and now within less than eighteen months the school has over 150 students, the church has taken the entire support of the pastor, a large hall has been rented near the Roman Catholic Cathedral, in which very well attended meetings are held two or three times weekly. The Woman's Council already owns a valuable property about mid-way between church and school, and will open a Centro Cristiano there, similar to the one in Chihuahua.

Three circuits have been formed in the outlying district from Durango, but all of them have not yet been supplied with pastors. A new district has been cut off the Monterey District, with Piedras Negras as the center of operations. We secured by exchange from the Disciples a building prominently located near the public buildings and railroad station, but not well adapted for the work we wish to carry on. Still we have gone right ahead, and have utilized it as best we could, for day and night schools and for dispensary. The dispensary has been a great success from the beginning, and has not only treated hundreds of cases, but has been self-sustaining, except the salary of Dr. C. W. Maoune, who has managed it so well. We must, however, have a large school building in different locations before we can meet the needs of the hundreds of children who are ready for our ministry. Evangelistic work is being carried on with great success in the country between Piedras Negras and Del Rio on the west and Allende on the south, and a number of preaching appointments and three day schools have been opened. Similar work also is being done on the Allende circuit, there being eight preaching appointments regularly filled, and a day school at Rosales. I have written, however, several times of the phenomenal work at Allende, where the last Conference was held, and attended by 600 pupils. We are hoping to build school chapels at Sabinas and the mining town adjoining, and also at Lampacitas. Even the ancient capital of Monclova has awakened from her slumber and our work there is steadily growing.

Another New Field.

We secured in exchange from the Southern Presbyterians the beginnings of an industrial school at Montemorelos. Fortunately, we also secured Brother John N. McKay from the West Texas Conference to take charge of the school. He has taken up the work of construction, and by the end of the year will have finished the building, and installed part of the machinery and begun work. We have several acres of orange trees, and it is proposed to train the boys in the cultivation of citrus fruits and small vegetables, in dairying, and machine work. We are expecting great results from this new school.

Marvelous Educational Growth.

The growth of our educational work north of the Rio Grande is the outstanding feature. In San Antonio, the boys' school has developed steadily, and has a great future before it in that strong Mexican center of population. A new school for girls has been opened at Pharr. Holding Institute at Laredo is not only ready, but clamoring for the promised new buildings to accommodate its ever increasing roll of students. Kindergartens have been established at Alpine, Marfa and Roswell. A central lot 80x250 has been bought for a new school at Nogales, Arizona, which will, when built, draw a large patronage from Nogales, Mexico, and from the States of Senora and Sinaloa. The Woman's Council has purchased at a very low price a block of land in the midst of the Mexican population of Los Angeles, and is carrying on a Centro Cristiano, and in the same building the Sunday school and preaching services are held, with the largest Mexican Sunday school enrollment in the United States.

In El Paso, a large school building was purchased from the City School Board and converted into a Community Center, in which the workers live and carry on varied and useful forms of service.

Effie Eddington, our school for girls, has been removed entirely from its old quarters; two fine, well built adjoining houses have been bought in a good residential section, and a dining room and assembly hall and classrooms added on the back of the lot, at a total cost of approximately $50,000.

Additional adjacent lots have been bought for Lydia Patterson, and the Mitchell Annex has been built—all at a cost of about $175,000, giving a plant worth about $300,000, performing a great service in training Christian workers. Altogether there has been spent about $275,000 in the development of our institutions in El Paso during the past three years.

It is not extravagant to say that nowhere in the church has there been a greater proportionate increase in the number of native workers, exclusive of missionaries, in the number of pastoral appointments, in the number of Sunday schools scholars, of scholars in day schools, of scholars in boarding schools, and of church members, than in our Mexican work. And it is probable that nowhere has money been spent to better advantage in the erection of churches, hospitals, schools and social centers than in the Mexican field. Our presiding elders and superintendents are men of faith and vision and know what is needed to develop the work.

The Centenary Vital.

But no words can emphasize too strongly the tremendous, the absolutely vital significance of the Centenary Movement to the great work which has been done. The work could not have been done without the money and the workers furnished by the Centenary. There have been those who have not been enthusiastic supporters of the Centenary Movement, some for one reason, some for another. But taking it for granted that all such persons are honestly and earnestly praying and working for the coming of Christ's Kingdom among men, I do not believe that they can thoughtfully consider what has been made possible in our Mexican work by the Centenary Movement without agreeing that while there may have been some mistakes in the details incident to carrying on so great a work (and who is infallible in the world except the Pope(?), yet after all has been said, the Centenary Movement has, under the blessing of Almighty God, been the greatest single method, operation, movement, call it what you will, in our church in the present generation, for bringing in the Kingdom of God. And I steadfastly believe that the two great movements projected by the last General Conference, the Centenary Movement and the Christian Education Movement, will make this present quadrennium to stand out as a great landmark, a point to reckon from in the future life of our church. May the coming General Conference have the faith, the vision, the courage, the consecration, to raise its Ebenezer of praise and thanksgiving, and crying aloud, "There remaineth much land yet to be possessed," sound forth a call to renewed consecration and effort, that will inspire our great church to assume joyously the responsibilities to which our Lord daily calls us!

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Well, this is funny! In one of my Pelican Pines letters I let the cat out of the wallet by saying that if there should be any profit from my forthcoming autobiographical book, "The Spirit of the Saxon," I intended to get me a few acres of land where I can "atavistleally revert" to the occupation of my boyhood, renew my youth and prolong my years by contact with mother earth, and so forth. I may not succeed in it. It is exactly what General R. E. Lee earnestly desired, yet never realized. When he was President of Washington-Lee University, or Washington College as it was then, he would mount Traveller, and ride off alone to the country, where one of his veterans had a little farm. There he would dismount, and leading Traveller, would walk by the side of the humble farmer as he plowed, and talk with him about the farm. So far as I have gone, which is only to express my desire, I am in mighty good company. But what is there funny about the case? Why, here comes a letter from a Supreme Court judge, subscribing for my book, but saying: "Away with that farm idea. Stay on your job!" And another letter, also subscribing for the book, but enclosing a cartoon, which shows a farmer lying flat on the ground, his skinny hand clasping a limp pocket-book, and a boll weevil standing on his breast, with uplifted spear about to deal him his death-blow, but pausing to ask, "Who is your favorite undertaker!" Did you ever! Now let me say this: I shall stay on my job.

"Happy if with my latest breath,
I may but gasp his name;
Preach him to all, and cry in death,
Behold, behold the Lamb."

And Brother Alley did not have me in mind when he drew the boll weevil cartoon, for no matter how much land I might have I would not cultivate cotton; and the boll weevil is a specialist in his department. No, all I want is a few acres in the Pelican Pines, where I can have a big garden, grow a plenty of berries, and set out some fruit trees, have a pig or two to remind me of old times, and a cow to revive memories of when, rain or shine, melting hot or freezing cold, I had to get up at 4 a.m. and milk nine of them, and so on! But especially where I can have a walk in a bit of woods, like Plato had in the suburbs of Athens; a shady path under the Pelican Pines, hidden away, where I can enjoy the great brotherhood of nature; breathe the atmosphere of perfect freedom; select my company, and associate with the intellectual aristocrats of all the centuries! In my woodland cloister, a mere lean-to perhaps, but idealized by fancy into a stately library, I would have my favorite poets, Homer, Dante, Tennyson and Browning; the big books in all departments of knowledge; a big rocking-chair and my type-writer! In such halcyon environment, how tame and stale, and beneath the dignity of serene thought, would be the piddling ambitions of men for office! Whether in church or State ambition for office always seemed to me the infirmity of little minds. I always admired the ex-emperor, Dioeletian. After his abdication he settled near Nicomedia. After some time, when there seemed to be no one who could rule the turbulent empire, a delegation from Constantinople came to induce him to resume the purple. He received them kindly, and after they had told their errand, he invited them to take a walk with him. He showed them his garden, called special attention to his fine cabbages, and told them he would rather grow collards than pester with politics!

We all have our ideals. Mine can bloom best in the private and sequestered walks of life. I spent four years in a "Secretary's" office, and that was enough for me. I am not built that way. Cog-wheels are necessary in all machinery, but I prefer to be the steam that makes them go. My present work is delightful, all except absence from home. And when I get my secluded den among the friendly Pelican Pines, where I can relax, discard the check rein, and let "nater caper," I can write in a vein that will make "loathed Melancholy" ashamed of herself! I have half a dozen books I am anxious to write. Recently I have felt an almost irresistible inclination to review the course of study we had at Emory and Henry College fifty years ago; renew my acquaintance with Cicero, Horace, Livy, and Taeitus; read again Herodotus and Thucydides, Homer and Sophocles, and revive the classic flame. My study in the College was the old Hermesian Hall, whose walls had resounded with the crude oratory of beardless Ciceros. It was a garret room, spacious and with two dormer windows. It had been long a haunt of rats, and bats, and spiders. When I discovered it, and asked the President, Dr. Wiley, if I might use it, he said if the ghosts had no objection, he had none. I quickly negotiated with the uncanny occupants, ousted them, and had the most commodious quarters in the College. Old White Top mountain, with its wintry crown of snow, was visible from my window, and mountains piled on mountains. To that den came Dr. John L. Buchanan, "Old Buck," Professor of Latin, and far into the night we discussed big questions. It was "Reconstruction" times, and we had something to talk about! Sometimes I heard the footsteps of Captain C. E. Vawter at the door, and he lingered till the moon rose over the hill, and reminded him that his wife would stay up till he returned! Vawter taught Mathematics and Hebrew, and we talked of the first chapters of Genesis. I asked puzzling questions, and Vawter advised me to postpone them for ten years! Wise man. He would not imperil the tender but growing faith of a student by premature discussion of problems which perplex older minds. I understand them now and they do not disturb my faith. Once or twice Dr. Wiley climbed to my den, and honored my cloister with his company. These are all gone. The last to depart was Dr. Buchanan, and his setting is like the fading of the evening splendor from the brow of old White Top!

Yes, I must have my den among the leafy seclusion of the Pelican Pines. Then these memories of the long ago will fan my spirit with golden plumes, and all the fountains of inspiration will overflow!

The gist of co-operation is this: Have a common cause and then work the other fellow's way if he won't work yours.—Selected.

CONCERNING THE EXISTENCE AND NATURE OF GOD.

By Robert Edwin Meek.

"The fool hath said in his heart there is no God." On a parity with those who contend that there is neither sickness nor death, stand those who say there is no God. When the fact that their very existence and their whole fate in life, from the cradle to the grave, is entirely in God's hands is considered, their foolishness in denying Him is very evident. They seem to think that they can do away with God by shutting their eyes and ears to Him, and thus putting Him out of their lives.

The mightiest truth in the universe is the striking reality that there is a living and reigning God. There is an influence for good felt in the human heart and manifest in the affairs of the world that does not come from men. It is of divine origin. All people at some time in their lives feel this gentle, restraining force. John Wesley called it "a strange warming of the heart." John Henry Newman spoke of it in his great hymn as a "kindly light amid the encircling gloom." It is God seeking to direct men's lives by the agency of the Holy Spirit, the third Person of the adorable Trinity. The presence and action of the Holy Spirit in the hearts and lives of men, women and children is a proof of the existence of God.

The purity and greatness of God's character furnish further evidence of His reality. Men could not create a fictitious being possessing God's attributes and perfection. In order to show that this statement is true, we have only to take the gods of all the heathen nations of the past or present and compare them with our Jehovah. How their characters shrink in the comparison! It is well to note the difference between man-made gods, constructed out of material things, and the living God—the spiritual, divine Father.

It is impossible to conceive of creation being wrought by blind, inanimate force. It requires intelligence to start forces into constructive action and to direct them after they have been started. There is no intelligence in force, unless it comes from or is controlled by a personality. In our small circle, lifeless things do not move with intelligent design unless they are acted upon by living things. Why should it be contended that the earth and the forms of life found upon it have sprung into being as the products of senseless force? In considering the creation of all things, we must determine upon a starting factor—a first great cause, for we well know that nothing happens without a cause. In the present instance, the cause must be such as to have existed by its own might. This is our God. If no admission of His existence is made, we can never form a satisfactory explanation of creation. To call God some unknown force, is to try to deny Him in an unfair manner. It may be hard for the finite mind to conceive of God having always existed, but we have to start with something; and it is much harder to think of the world and the life it contains as having come into existence of their own accord or as having always been here. Wherever we see tasks done, we know there has been a worker. Creation required the efforts of a worker. The continued existence of the world and life demands that worker's constant care. Knowing this to be true, how much easier and wiser it is to think that we ourselves and our world have been created by the command and under the direction of so great a being as God.

The mission of Christ in the world has greatly increased man's assurance that there is a living God and his knowledge of Deity. Christ is the second Person of the Trinity, and He bore the strongest possible testimony to the other two Persons when He was in the flesh and dwelt upon the earth. No one can deny one Person of the Trinity without rejecting the witness of the other two Persons. The Son did not testify of Himself, for He said such testimony would not be good, but of the Father and the Holy Spirit. The Father and the Holy Spirit both testified of the Son when He was baptized by John in the river Jordan

Scientists speak of the value of the study of astronomy as a means of broadening the human mind. It will make men's minds still broader to think on God, for He must necessarily be greater than His works. Too many scientists worship the material works of God instead of God Himself. What an awful mistake!

How great and powerful a being is God! He only is great and good in the highest sense, and He only deserves to be worshiped. If He chose to be unjust or cruel, who could resist Him? But happily His government is founded upon love, justice, mercy, righteousness, peace, and truth. He knows all things, and there is nothing new to Him or that is hid from Him. His presence fills the universe. But He is not a part of the universe. He is distinct in Himself. Bible students need to guard against adopting pantheistic theories concerning God.

God is all powerful, but He will not do anything that is foolish or useless. What He does, He does with design. His power is unlimited, but He has never abused it. In all His reign up to the present time, we know of no unjust or unworthy act upon His part. He rules not only because He is the most powerful being in the universe, but also because He is the most worthy in the strength and beauty of His character. He will not do evil. That is contrary to His divine nature, and He hates it. Unlike man, God never goes contrary to the laws of His own nature. Evil is the one unsightly thing that troubles the heart of the eternal God. When He looks upon the work of His hand He can no longer pronounce it wholly good. A malignant enemy has sought to hurt Him in the only place where it was possible for him to do so.

God is the source of all life. He is exalted and holy. In heaven the majesty of the Most High is always carefully respected. The angels do Him reverence joyfully and with love. He is a sovereign to them in the truest sense. They apparently never forget this fact. What must they think when they hear foolish men denying God's existence, teaching false doctrines concerning Him, or taking His name in vain? How often do they see men seeking to put God's stamp of approval on things that are purely human and often entirely unworthy of Him. Let these men beware and desist, for the great God will bring them to judgment and punish them according to their guilt for their wickedness in misrepresenting and dishonoring Him.

The hope of the world is in the living God. With God reigning there is room only for optimism in our hearts. And He does reign. Who can doubt it? Even Satan will finally be forced to acknowledge His supremacy, when he has run his discreditable course. There will be a final reckoning with him. We may be assured that he will be severely punished for all the wickedness that he is doing in the world. In seeking to destroy others, he is really working his own destruction by increasing the transgressions for which he will be condemned and punished. God has sent His Holy Spirit into the world to aid and comfort men in their fight against Satan and the powers of darkness. If they reject the leadership of the Spirit and do not fight against sin, they deserve the fate that awaits them, though it be a hard one.

Black Hawk, Miss.

LOUISIANA METHODIST ORPHANAGE.

In accordance with our custom in the churches of the Louisiana Annual Conference, collections will be taken in the Sunday school and church for this institution. It is hoped that every church and Sunday school in the State will make an extra effort to secure funds for this cause on Easter Sunday, April 16.

We have 140 children in the home, all healthy, vigorous and growing. Food, clothing and schooling must be provided for all, and necessarily our expenses are heavy. We depend on the collections taken on Easter Sunday for the money necessary to carry us through the spring and summer months, and as we have no other method of raising funds it is very important that each and every church and Sunday school contribute as generously as possible, and we sincerely hope that none will fail to do their part.

Conditions at the Orphanage were never better than now. The work being done is of that order and class to deserve the loyal and hearty support of our people. Our children are being fitted for useful life, and are securing the best of educational and religious advantages, and the fact that these children have none other to look to but the people of our church, makes it imperative that all our people do what they can to secure the necessary funds that will enable us to "carry on."

Grateful for the help rendered us in the past, confident of the loyalty and devotion of our people to this great work, and assuring them that we are doing our utmost to make it worth while in every respect, I am, Sincerely,

ROB'T W. VAUGHAN,
Superintendent Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

DEFEATING CULTURE FOR UNWORTHY ADVERTISING.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

There is a stir among even the more wealthy and worldly institutions with reference to intercollegiate athletics. Some would attempt to modify the evil, while others would abolish it altogether.

The movement for reform has not begun too soon. It has not come sooner than most serious-minded educators have desired.

The leading educators of the United States have become weary, not to say disgusted, with the mania for games which defeat all the worthy purposes of a college or university.

President Lowell of Harvard, President Angell of Yale, President Butler of Columbia, Dean Roe of the University of Wisconsin, and President Foster of Reed College have spoken in strong terms in condemnation of the evil, and what they have said has found response in the hearts of most of the ablest educators of our country.

Many who are silent on the subject are strongly opposed to the pernicious system, but are restrained by what they consider a proper prudence from speaking out as they really feel. I have received scores of letters which establish this fact. It may be doubted if there are a dozen competent educators in all the colleges and universities of the United States who do not desire the whole system of intercollegiate athletics abolished.

They are not indifferent to the need of physical training for students. On the contrary, they are deeply interested in the proper care of the bodies of the youths whom they instruct; but they believe that physical education is hindered by intercollegiate athletics, and in the belief they are undoubtedly correct.

They do not look with an evil eye upon the recreations of student life. They know the place of play in life, and they look kindly upon all proper and wholesome sports among their students. But they do not believe that intercollegiate athletics supply such recreation as is best for the well-being of young men in college. They know that this commercialized sport has become a business from which the recreative element is excluded.

Their convictions were well expressed by President Schurman of Cornell when a few years ago he called for a better system of physical education "to take the place of the unhealthy athleticism which has usurped so large a place in the life of our colleges and universities, and which not only seriously interferes with their real work, but tends to pervert their essential objects and to misinterpret them alike to the general public and themselves. The whole could, it is believed, be organized and conducted in a way that would gratify the natural impulses of young men, awaken and sustain their interest, and so displace the vast anomaly of organized intercollegiate athletics with its handful of highly trained players, its show games, its elaborate and costly agencies and paraphernalia, its gate receipts, its serious interference with the work of students, its betting and gambling, and its conspicuous misrepresentation of the proper function and service of the universities in the life of the nation and humanity."

Sensible and sincere educators know that they can not succeed with their work with so many of their students frequently absent on intercollegiate jaunts and always excited, both before and after the games, to a degree that is utterly incompatible with careful study and the formation of habits of study. How can any man teach such young men living and roaming and screaming in intercollegiate contests?

There lies before me the baseball schedule of a certain university in the South as published recently in the daily papers. That schedule shows the team will be engaged in games on March 24, 25, 27, and 28, and on April 12, 13, 15, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 28, and 29, and on May 1, 2, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 12, and 15—in all twenty-four days, not counting the days occupied with going to and returning from the various places at which the games are to be played and the days consumed in training for the contests. This same university had an equally extensive schedule of football games during the fall term. It has also its basketball team, its soccer team, and sundry other student organizations that involve absence of young men from the institution and create distracting excitements when not absent.

This institution is not exceptional; but does any sane man believe its work can be successful under such conditions?

The faculties of the university doubtless object; but the coaches, who are more highly paid than any professor and who exercise a degree of influence and authority more dominating than all the members of all the faculties, decree these numerous and expensive games, and thus education is sacrificed to gate receipts to pay coaches.

In this connection it is worthy of remark that the control of not a few institutions has been usurped by the coaches to the subversion of government both by faculties and trustees. What the coaches say "goes."

Just the other day a callow captain of a football team took President Lowell to task for his views on intercollegiate athletics, using a luncheon attended by the learned president of Harvard as the occasion for his attack. The young man is a fair specimen of the conceit and arrogance of his craft.

Can the faculties and trustees of colleges and universities consent to turn over to coaches the control of the institutions committed to their care? If so, will they not thereby pervert the resources put into their hands by philanthropists and States for the education of the youth of the land?

Of course, there is in every faculty one or more professorial demagogues who would sacrifice an institution in order to win a spurious popularity with students. And there are some lazy instructors who are glad to get days off while their classes are adjourned for games. There are also "sports" among teachers who are as excited by games as are the rawest undergraduates; for there is beginning to appear in the educational world teachers produced since the mania for intercollegiate athletics began about thirty years ago. They have more degrees than culture, and bear grateful recollections of how some of their degrees were won by generous allowance made for them on account of their place in "teams."

The superficial work of men who were brought up under the system of intercollegiate athletics, and participated in it during their schooldays, is already damaging many institutions. Such work led President Wilson to say a few years ago: "I have found everywhere a note of apology. Learning is on the defensive. We have fallen of late into a deep discontent with the college. The college has lost its definiteness of aim. There is utter confusion and a hopeless dispersion of energy."

If this evil continues, the superficial men in faculties will become more and more numerous, and serious men, like Woodrow Wilson, will withdraw from the distasteful work which is dominated and defeated by coaches. Then what will result?

The games will be increased; for the number of games in any season tends to constantly increase in coach-controlled institutions, doting on large gate receipts. Study will be decreased to make room for the ever-increasing games. Philanthropists and States will cease giving money to game-ridden institutions, and the whole cause of higher education will be discredited and damaged. Already we are in sight of that bad goal.

Can coach-trained men serve efficiently as instructors and presidents of educational institutions? Can coaches and game-men alumni erect necessary buildings and provide adequate endowments from gate receipts? Can they command the confidence of those who can? Hardly.

Sensible and observing men are beginning to see and deprecate the evil results upon intellectual culture already accrued from intercollegiate athletics. For example, Dr. Craig Stewart, the able rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church of Evanston, Ill. (a college center), said recently, "A good many hundreds and thousands of students come through a university course perfectly immune to ideas, or knowledge of truth, of any sort, because they are doing everything they can to develop their bodies, and they come through magnificent specimens of physical strength, but they have small, undeveloped, childish minds."

Commenting upon this utterence of Dr. Stewart, the Hon. Josepbus Daniels says in an editorial which appears in the "News and Observer" of Raleigh: "It is likely that most colleges pay too much attention to athletics. The best advertised college in the country is one in Kentucky which put out a winning football team. One never hears of a college getting wide newspaper publicity as a result of intellectual achievement of any sort. Athletics are necessary and important, perhaps; but after all, colleges are for the development of the mind, and training for the body is important only to the degree that it enables the mind to reach the maximum of capacity." That is a strong deliverence from the Ex-Secretary of the Navy, and he might have made it stronger without transgressing the limits of truth.

He puts his finger on a point of special peril and dishonor to colleges when he intimates that institutions of learning use intercollegiate athletics for advertising purposes. What would be thought of any other learned profession if it used such advertising to secure patronage? Imagine a lawyer or a physician resorting to such methods to obtain publicity! Will that profession, which underlies and is designed to qualify men for all other professions, degrade itself by a species of advertising that would be disreputable in the lawyers and physicians of the land?

A minstrel, with its brass band on the street, in gawdy garments and with blare of horns, trying to beat up an audience, is quite as dignified and deserving of respect as a college faculty sending over the land a crowd of schoolboys in gaming costume, directed by money-loving coaches and attended by noisy "rooters," in order to induce other boys of the same type to enroll in the institution. Bah! such advertising methods by educators "wearies contempt and fatigues disgust."

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS, TREASURERS AND WORKERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Co-workers: Thinking probably the rain might have interfered with your plans for collection week, so much so that you did not get to finish your work, I am suggesting that you by all means continue the campaign until every subscription has been paid; and I would further suggest that if for any reason the "World Sunday Speaker" did not get to your church on "World Sunday," that you still have this message, from either yourself or some one else in order that the people in your churches may have the opportunity of hearing the Centenary message.

I would like to suggest again that you continue as a permanent committee your collection committee, and let them continue to work until the end of the five years, and all the pledges have been paid for the five years.

Please send in your final reports on your collections, not later than April 22.

Thanking you for your interest and co-operation, I am, Yours for Service.

W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Centenary Treasurer,
Conference Missionary Secretary.

OUR GOD WILL ANSWER PRAYER.

By Mrs. W. E. Neely.

We need not fear, we need not dread,
When we have done the best we could,
For God is watching overhead,
And if we trust him as we should,
He'll surely answer prayer.

We need not care what others say,
Just do what's right and go ahead,
For he who watches o'er our way
And listens to each word that's said,
Will surely answer prayer.

And if we doubt just what is right,
Go read his Word, and there you'll find
Sweet comfort for the weary soul
And hidden treasures for the mind,
And that he answers prayer.

It does me good to hear that song,
"Our Father Knows." Ah! Yes, he knows.
He knows our every right and wrong.
He knows the very path we chose,
And he will answer prayer.

How careful, then, should each one be
To pray to Christ, who lives above,
That he our souls from sin will free
And fill our hearts with perfect love,
For he will answer prayer.

What consolation, then, to think
We have a friend so near at hand,
Who will not from his duty shrink,
And never fail to understand,
And that he answers prayer.

Then cheer, faint-heart, and go your way.
Just do what's right and never fear.
He'll listen while his children pray,
And, some day, dry each falling tear,
For he will answer prayer.

And though my lot is humble here,
I would not willingly exchange
This blessed truth, these words of cheer,
For all the wealth the world contains,
Our God will answer prayer.

Grenada, Miss.

JOHN WESLEY ON "RICHES."

"How unspeakable is the advantage, in point of common sense, which middling people have over the rich! There is so much paint and affectation, so many unmeaning words and senseless custom among people of rank, as fully to justify the remark made seven thousand years ago, 'For in such an elevated condition of life common sense is generally very rare.'" (July 1, 1758, p. 276, Vol. 4, Journal.)

"I cannot but wonder at the infatuation of men that really love and fear God, and yet leave great part of, if not all, their substance to men that neither love nor fear Him! Surely if I did little good with my money while I lived, I would at least do good with it when I could live no longer." (April 5, 1779, p. 227, Vol. 6, Journal.)

"As many of our members increase in worldly goods, the great danger I apprehend now is their relapsing into the spirit of the world; and then their religion is but a dream." (Oct. 21, 1760, p. 417, Vol. 4, Journal.)

"Riches increased; which not only led you, step by step, into more conformity to the world, but insensibly instilled self-importance, unwillingness to be contradicted and an overbearing temper. * * * Can you be too sensible how hardly they that have riches enter into the Kingdom of Heaven? Yea, or into the Kingdom of an inward Heaven? Into the whole spirit of the gospel? How hard not to conform to the world! How hard not to bo a little overbearing, especially to inferiors." (Letter, June 26, 1769, p. 323, Journal.)

"The society at Anghrim is well nigh shrunk into nothing! Such is the baleful influence of riches. The same effect we find in every place. The more men increase in goods (very few excepted) the more they decrease in grace." (April 25, 1785, p. 71, Vol. 7, Journal.)

"Sir: You are on the borders of the grave as well as I. * * * I reverence you as a magistrate * * * but I fear you are covetous, that you love the world. * * * Suppose that some make an ill uso of what you give, the loss falls on their own head; you will not lose your reward for their fault * * * you are not the proprietor of anything, no, not one shilling in the world. You are only a steward of what another entrusts you with, to be laid out, not according to your will but his. And what would you think of a steward who laid out what is called your money according to his own will and pleasure. * * * I beseech you, examine yourself whether you do not love money. If so, you cannot love God." (Oct. 26, 1754, letter, Journal.)

At the age of eighty-four: "Provide for family needs but beyond that do not increase your substance. As it comes, so let it go, otherwise you lay up treasures upon earth; and this our Lord as flatly forbids as murder or adultery. Every pound you put into earthly bank is sunk; it brings no interest above. But every pound you give to the poor is put into the bank of heaven and it will bring glorious interest." (P. 519, Vol. 3, Tyerman's "Life and Times of John Wesley.")

At the age of eighty-six: to rich men—"O how, pitiable is your condition! Few dare speak as plain to you as they would to your servants. You have helped me, when I stood in need. I would leave one word with you before I go hence. * * * O let your heart be whole with God! * * * Sit as loose to all things here below, as if you were a poor beggar. Be a good steward." (P. 594, Vol. 3, Tyerman.)

"Does it not seem (and yet this cannot be) that true Christianity has a tendency, in process of time, to undermine and destroy itself? For wherever it spreads it must cause diligence and frugality, which, in the natural course of things, beget riches. And riches naturally beget pride, love of the world and every temper that is destructive to Christianity. * * * I can see only one way to hinder riches from destroying religion. * * * Give all you can, otherwise I can have no more hope of your salvation than of Judas Iscarlot. I advise no more than I practice." (Pp. 637 and 638, Vol. 3, Tyerman.)

"O ye lovers of money, hear the word of the Lord! Suppose ye that money, though multiplied as the sands of the sea, can give you happiness? * * * Have those the largest share of content who love the largest possessions? Is not the very reverse true? In seeking happiness from riches you are only striving to drink out of empty cups." (P. 348, Vol. 3, Tyerman.)—Zion's Herald.

When God started to write a creed for us He did it not in words that might change their meaning, but He set before us a life, as though to teach us that whereas theology is a science which may be argued about, Christianity is a life that can only be lived.—Quintin Hogg.

CROSSING THE NORTH ATLANTIC IN MID-WINTER.

By Mrs. J. L. Neill.

Do you like cold weather? Well, we can tell you one time and place where you could have found it: we left New York on January 7, 1922, and crossed the North Atlantic, making stops at Halifax, Nova Scotia; Plymouth, England, and Cherbourg, France, landing at Antwerp, Belgium, late in the afternoon of January 18. Perhaps the saying, "first impressions are lasting," caused me to mention the cold weather first, because there were many very interesting things in connection with our trip.

We were to sail on the Red Star Line S. S. Finland. We had followed the "red tape" to the boat, all of the baggage was on the pier, so it was "forward, march" onto the boat for us. But the second person in line, who was our eleven-year old daughter, failed to "march." When I inquired why she did not follow her daddy, she turned, and with one foot on the gangplank, and eyes, swimming in tears, she said, "Mother, I don't want to go, I don't want to leave the States." But after a few hurried words of comfort, she followed and we went at once to our cabin. As soon as the door was closed behind the three of us, she threw her arms around us and burst into tears. We reasoned with her, but she was only giving expression to the feeling that was deep in the heart of each of us: we were leaving "our country," we were going to live in a strange country; we were leaving loved ones and friends, we were going to live among strangers; the responsibility of the success or failure of the work of our church in Czecho-Slovakia was upon us; so why feel happy? But at once came the thought, "I will not leave you nor forsake you." After a few words of love and consolation from her father and mother, she was ready to begin the long journey that was ahead of us, to the capital of that new Republic in Central Europe, Prague, Czecho-Slovakia.

For a number of years it has been a pleasure to watch a crowd of people pass and try to discover a distinguishing mark or feature in each person. As the boat was not to leave for more than an hour, we decided to spend that time on deck, watching passengers and their friends, not one of whom we had ever seen before.

See! Are those kodak dealers who have come to sell their "wares" to the passengers who failed to provide themselves with this almost necessary article to travel, before boarding the boat? No, those kodaks are focused on the gangplank and a man is at each, ready, for what? A look at the passenger list revealed the names of several distinguished persons: Mrs. Roosevelt, wife of the ex-President, a "Sir and Lady" Somebody, General Evans, a native Mississippian, who was military attache in Berlin during Bismarck's life, two American Vice-Consuls, and a few others. How interesting it was to watch these people! It did not take long to decide that those nine cameras belonged to newspaper men who wanted to get a picture of somebody, "just before sailing for Europe." The warning signal was sounded, good-byes were said and friends went ashore, but not until the gangplank was removed and they knew that no more passengers would come aboard did they fold their cameras and with disappointment written on each face, go ashore on the freight elevator, all but one. His eagle eyes had spied the object of their quest on the bridge deck; quietly and quickly he secured the picture. The party was the young lady daughter in a family, the Stillman's, that has become "noted" because of a divorce suit. (This picture appeared in the Jackson, Mississippi, Daily News a few weeks later.)

Going out of the harbor at New York is a thrilling experience! What conflicting thoughts one has: the many ships in the harbor that have come from ports all over the world, and the cargo of each; the ships in dry dock that are being prepared for another voyage, and if they were not prepared to resist the winds and the waves what would happen? How fast one thinks! But I suppose the one thing that has attracted as much attention in New York harbor during the past few years as anything else is that monster of ships, the Leviathan. What a picture of despair she presents as she "rests" in dry dock while expert mechanics and engineers try to discover the secret mysteries of her construction! (And they will be successful!)

The skyline of New York reveals some of the wonders of the present age. The Woolworth building, which is fifty-nine stories high, attracts much attention, as well it might because it is a marvel both inside and out. As you pass the Statue of Liberty, one unconsciously bows his head in reverence to the significance of its meaning. Out into the Atlantic we go and head north because Halifax, Nova Scotia, is to be the first port of call.

The purser asked Mr. Neill to conduct the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning, which he was glad to do. Most of the ship's crew—by the way, they were very fine men—and a number of the passengers attended the service and seemed to appreciate it. The offering taken at the service was given to the Seamen's Charities.

Early Monday morning land was sighted and about eight o'clock we docked at Halifax, Nova Scotia. My, but it was cold, snowing hard and freezing as fast as it fell. The wheels had been taken off the wagons and carriages, and runners put on. This was the first time we had ever seen sleighs, but we would have known them anywhere because they looked just like the pictures we had seen ever since we were children—there were the sleigh bells and the people were wrapped in furs from head to foot. It was quite interesting to watch them. I have heard, and sometimes used, a slang expression about being in Halifax but I had never thought that I would really be there. Since being there, that slang expression has less meaning than ever. We took on a number of passengers, mostly second class, and quite a lot of mail. On account of ice, the St. Lawrence River had been closed for some time, so there was much mail for Europe. But about noon we "weighed anchor" and headed out into the open sea. We went in a southeasterly direction in order that we might miss the Grand Banks, fishing banks, south of New Foundland.

Shortly after midnight Monday night we were awakened by the noise of something falling. Tho light switch was convenient, but before either of us could get out of our bunks we decided that it would be best not to try it. Combs, brushes, talcum powder, and a few other such articles, fell one after the other, some one way, some the other. It was really amusing to lie in our bunks—we managed to stay in them—and hear things falling in the cabins near us. We had run into rough seas, and we "could dip into the future" just a little. Sure enough, the next morning when the bugle was blown for breakfast, only four passengers responded, of the hundred and nine on board, first class. Our boat rolled and rocked all day and part of the night, but by morning the sea was calmer and most of the passengers had recovered enough to venture to the dining room for breakfast.

Though cold, the weather was unusually good for this time of the year and the passengers could enjoy their deck chairs most of the time. We ran into snow twice, but one of the prettiest sights we had on the ocean was a hailstorm. The effect of this on the clouds and water was beautiful. It was a study to watch the course of the boat as the captain would have it steered this way or that in order that we might miss rain.

Mr. Neill was asked to hold service again the second Sunday. It was a pleasure to do it because passengers and crew seemed to enjoy it. While we were at service we noticed that the boat was rocking very badly again and after service when we went on deck we saw the cause of it. As far as one could see the waves were piled high with foam on top of each. They looked like snow-capped mountains. We thought we would walk on deck a few minutes before lunch, but discovered that it was impossible because we were rolling and tossing furiously. The deck chairs were tied to the boat, life lines were strung on deck, the life preservers, which usually hang on the railings, were taken down, long ropes fastened to them and placed on a bench ready for use at a minute's notice. How funny the tables looked when we went to lunch! They were latticed off with strips about two inches high, the plates and dishes fitted into the squares, and fastened onto one of the strips was a metal rack into which the tumbler fitted. How we did roll and rock! But strange to say, the passengers did not get sick. Most of them spent the afternoon in their deck chairs. The water was quite pretty and certainly interesting to watch and try to guess where the next wave would pile up and how high it would go. As we sat there, we thought of Columbus and his men in their three frail little boats. How courageous they were! No wonder the men of that day thought there were monsters in the ocean, for surely only a monster could move the waters so! That night, "Rocked in the cradle of the deep, I lay me down in peace to sleep." We were to reach Plymouth, England, about dark to next day. A crew of ten men spent the entire day Monday lifting the baggage and mail from the hold of the boat. What a pile of mail, over six thousand bags for England! We were making good time when all at once the boat hit a wave, swung far over on the one side and "A bag of mail overboard," was shouted by the captain who was watching from the bridge. He ordered the ship turned around. Six men in a life boat were lowered to the water and for a few minutes excitement was high, as the passengers naturally thought some one was overboard. The rudder of the life boat was soon whipped off by the heavy sea, but the men continued their search, and how they were cheered when, drenched to the skin, they returned to the ship!

It was so late at night when we anchored in the bay at Plymouth, that the passengers were not required to go ashore, but with a lighter on each side of the ship, a crew spent the night unloading the baggage and mail. An early breakfast was served the passengers who were to disembark, and we were soon on our way to Cherbourg, France, the next port of call, which we reached early in the afternoon. We did not tarry long at Cherbourg as there was not much baggage and mail to be unloaded. While anchored there, a French submarine passed us. What a neat, trim little thing it was! The English Channel was on its best behaviour, so very early the next morning we were anchored at the mouth of River Scheldt. Here a quaint old Dutch river captain came out from Flushing, Holland, and piloted our boat the fifty-four miles up the river to Antwerp, Belgium, where we landed just at dark on the twelfth day from New York. This last lap of the journey is very much like the first few miles up the Mississippi after passing the jetties, the most striking difference being the great number of Dutch windmills and quaint little villages nestling under the famous dikes.

"If any man." There is no arbitrary selection in Christ's dealings. He does not choose here a man because he is of singularly beautiful character and say, "That man will become my friend." He does not single out there a woman because she is of a spiritual nature and say, "That woman will come the more readily into my fellowship." But with all the breadth of the great love of God he says, "If any man!"—J. Stuart Holden.

Is God's presence a practical power in our lives? Does it ever try a fall with some strong sin and come off conqueror? Is it a principle of life for us? Does it come into our calculations and rule our estimate of things? Does it rise within us ever like a fountain of fresh force when we find ourselves near one in need of help? Does it sometimes surprise us with its suddenness of assistance, its strange opportunity of aid? Does it fill our future for us? Is life for us a growing experience of getting to know God?—R. W. HOW TO HELP.

"When I am grown a man,
I'll help my dearest mother
The very best I can.
I'll walt upon her kindly;
She'll lean upon my arm;
I'll lead her very gently,
And keep her safe from harm,"
Said Peter Paul Augustus.

"But when I come to think of it,
The time will be so long,"
Said Peter Paul Augustus,
"Before I'm tall and strong,
I thlnk it would be wiser
To be her pride and joy
By helping her my very best
While I'm a little boy."

HOW KATE LOST HER CHAIN.

Billy and Kate were interested In a pair of Magples that had gone to housekeeping In a tall hedge close to the house. The big black and white birds with the long tails, which glistened blue, green, purple and gold In the sun, were not at all afraid of the children. Billy and Kate were very careful not to frighten them, and the pert, gay birds grew so tame that they went into the kitchen for scraps of food.

Billy and Kate had watched Mrs. Magpie and her husband build the dome-shaped house in the hedge. They saw them carry sticks of wood for the foundation and loads of wet mud for plaster. But when the birds put a roof on the house the children were delighted.

"They are making It of thorny twigs," Billy whispered to his sister.

"And crossing and recrossing the twigs until It looks like a lattice on our back porch," his sister observed. "It Is wonderful!"

When the roof was finished, the birds lined the cradle with fine twigs and fine rootlets. Billy and Kate watched them from an upper window. One morning they looked through the roof of the house In the hedge and saw seven greenish blue eggs marked with brown, in the cradle. A few weeks later there were seven ugly, big babies In the nursery crying for food.

"We must help feed them," Billy told his sister. "We will keep a plate of scraps on the kitchen table and leave the door open."

Then the funniest thing happened. The children were eating their breakfast, and Mr. Magple flew right into the room, snatched the bun Billy was eating, and carried it away to his babies In the hedge.

"He is a bold father," Billy said, laughing as he watched Mr. Magpie fly away with the bun.

"It is big enough to feed the whole family," Kate added. "Let us watch them eat breakfast."

The little Magpies enjoyed their breakfast and then went to sleep, for there was not a sound in the nursery. Even the father and mother that chattered most of the time were silent. Billy and Kate ran into the garden to weed the flower-beds. Suddenly they heard a great chatter in the hedge. Father, mother and all the little Magples were talking at once. They ran to see what had happened. Kate was the first to understand what the mischievous birds were doing. "They are thieves!" she cried. "Billy, Mr. Magpie has stolen my gold necklace, and they are trying to hide it in the hedge."

Both the Magples were holding the chain, one at each end. Mrs. Magpie pulled one way and her husband the other.

"They can't agree where to hide it so that you can't find it," said Billy.

At last Mrs. Magpie could keep still no longer, and she began to scold. The chain dropped from her beak, and away went her husband with the necklace.

"I am afraid he'll lose it," sighed Kate.

"He is going to hide it," Billy cried. "Let's follow him."

And where do you think he hid it? In a robin's nest. Billy climbed up the tree and got the chain for his sister.

"We would have thought the robins stole it if we hadn't caught the thief," Kate said as she took the chain from her brother.—The Presbyterian.

THE MAGIC WORD.

The manager of a department In a big store said to one of his aisle managers:

"I like the way you keep things running smoothly in your section, Parker. It sets a good standard for those who might not be so particular if your good results didn't keep them keyed up to their own best efforts."

Warmed with the words, the man went about his work with new zest. It wasn't long before he was saying to an alert little salesgirl:

"You have a very successful way of handling hard customers, Miss Belle. I'm going to see what can be done for you by way of rewarding such real merit."

Miss Belle flushed with pleasure. She was so happy that she was more successful than ever with the next troublesome, cranky buyer; and when she went out to lunch, she just couldn't help saying to the deft girl who served her order: "It's good of you to be so prompt. You must have guessed that I want to take a walk this nice noon hour."

The deft waitress carried the cheer of the friendly words in her heart all the rest of the day. It spoke out when her younger brother settled down to his studies that evening:

"It's not every girl who has a brother who stays in at nights and studies and gets ready to make something of himself, instead of running the streets and getting into bad company. I'm proud of you, Jimmy boy. You're my heart's comfort," and Jimmy dug into his work all the harder and put away for good a certain "What's the use after all?" feeling that had been trying to get a foothold in his heart of late. The next day he said to the teacher, who had patiently explained a hard point: "You certainly know how to make it clear; I wish I knew as much as you do," and a little nagging imp of discouragement fled from the tired teacher's heart at once.

On her way home she paused to say to the small boy who sold her a paper:

"It's nice to know I can depend on finding you here, right on time, every afternoon, Billy. You'll make a good business man some day," and she smiled as she paid him.

Billy went home in a such a glow of good feeling that he fairly shouted at sight and smell of the homely, substantial dish of hash for supper:

"Say, mother, but you're a dandy cook! A fellow can put in his best licks with a supper and mother like this at home waiting for him." And at the word—the magic word of praise—there vanished endless baskets of clothes to be washed and endless office floors to be scrubbed; and the world was a good place to live in after all, when one had a fine boy like Billy coming home nights with his bit of money and his blarney.

Nor did she dream—nor do we dream, often—how that magic word had been traveling from heart to heart, touching each with the joy of sincere appreciation, inspiring each to better work and living, before it passed on to repeat its good work.—East and West.

THE UPWARD WAY.

The great test question with which the believer should start each day, and with which he should close each day, is this: Am I more like Jesus Christ than I was? Is there in my life more of the love that believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things, more of the love that taketh not account of evil? If we can say, Slowly but surely we are getting more like Him, then let us rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for Him, knowing that at last we shall see Him and be like Him.—G. Campbell Morgan.

He who rears up one child in Christian virtue, or recovers one fellow-creature to God, builds a temple more precious than Solomon's or St. Peter's, more enduring than earth or heaven.—Channing.

Now, I pray you, let your mouth be filled with laughter, your tongue with singing, and your heart with holy ecstasy, as you think of who your Well-Beloved is, how great He is, and what greatness He puts upon you by virtue of His union with you. We cannot very well remember Christ as we should while we carry about with us a heavy heart.—C. H. Spurgeon.

A BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS.

We are of the opinion that the time has come for the General Conference to establish an independent Board of Home Missions. At present, as is well known, the Home Mission work of the church is administered by the Department of Home Missions of the Board of Missions. It is with no thought of criticizing the administration of the Department of Home Missions that we make the suggestion of the establishment of an independent Board of Home Missions, but with the thought of making adequate provision for a phase of our work that is becoming increasingly important and that needs the support of an independent Board.

While the organization of the Board of Missions makes no distinction between Home and Foreign Missions and while theoretically both fields may be properly administered by co-ordinate Departments of the same Board, we believe experience has demonstrated the impracticability of doing full justice to both fields by the same organization. Without the remotest suggestion that we should give less attention to the growing work of Foreign Missions, we believe that we have not yet, as a church, been able to work out a comprehensive program of Home Mission work that will enable us to provide properly for the development of the home mission territory of the church and to solve the problems arising from the constant influx of foreigners to our shores.

A very practical difficulty in the way of the fullest success of our present plan is the lack of time for the proper consideration of these problems at the meetings of the Board of Missions. There is no disposition, we are sure, to make of Home Missions a side issue, but after devoting several strenuous days to the problems of the foreign work, the members of the Board have not the time, and they are not in the proper frame of mind to deal with the problems of the home field that are just as important and just as pressing as those of the foreign field. We have never attended a meeting of the Board of Missions—but we have information which leads us to believe that our Home Mission work is not given the attention it needs—not by intention, of course, but through necessity.

We are well aware of the feeling on the part of many that there should be a consolidation of our Boards, rather than the organization of a new Board; but that feeling grows out of a desire to secure the greatest possible efficiency in our work at the least cost; it seems to us to be evident that in this case greater efficiency at no greater cost would be assured by the organization of an independent Board to administer a phase of our work that has become too great for merely departmental supervision. Consolidation at the cost of efficiency should never be the policy of any organization.

We are disposed to believe, too, that the organization of an independent Board of Home Missions would relieve a situation that at times is embarrassing to all the work of the church—the feeling that too much authority is centered in the Board of Missions. While we cannot feel that there is any disposition on the part of any Board to assume any authority beyond the limits of its own organization, the mere fact that one Board is charged with so much responsibility makes it almost inevitable that a dominant influence come to be exercised by that Board, to the possible disadvantage of other departments of the work as a whole. We believe in a consolidation of the agencies of the church when efficiency is to be gained thereby; but we do not believe in a centralization of power that makes one organization the dominant influence in the church at large. We do not know, but we imagine all the interests concerned would welcome the establishment of such a Board as we have suggested. A memorial from the New Orleans Methodist Preachers' Meeting will be presented to the General Conference, requesting that such action be taken.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Press reports indicate that a great revival is in progress at Flora, Miss., under the leadership of Rev. W. M. McIntosh.

Rev. T. L. Oakes, of Cockrum, Miss., has laid plans for a revival campaign throughout his charge, and he is looking forward to great results.

Things are moving along well on the Adams charge, Mississippi Conference, and the pastor, Rev. W. W. Nelson, is looking forward to a good year.

A fine revival meeting has just been brought to a close at Pittsboro, Miss., in which the pastor, Brother Bullard, was assisted by Rev. W. A. Wilson.

Brother Byron Smith, of Peoria, Miss., has been a subscriber to the Advocate since 1875, so he informs us in a letter renewing his subscription for another year.

Announcement has been made that Bishop James Atkins will preach the commencement sermon for Southern Methodist University, and that H. N. Snyder will deliver the literary address.

Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, speaking under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League of America, will deliver an address in the Methodist church at Ellisville, Miss., on Easter Sunday.

The 36th Annual State Convention of the Louisiana State Sunday School Association will meet in Shreveport, La., on April 11, and continue through April 14. Mr. J. Van Carter is the efficient State Secretary.

Dr. R. L. Russell, Home Mission Secretary, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Saturday of last week. He was passing through the city en route to Houma, La., where he was to conduct the opening service in the new church on Sunday.

Dr. H. Walter Featherstun is having a delightful pastorate at Bay St. Louis, Miss. The people are attentive and appreciative, the attendance upon all the services of the church is good, and the prayer meeting and the Sunday school show special enlargement.

The "Big Brother," of Greenville, Miss., speaks very highly of the series of addresses recently delivered by Dr. S. A. Steel in the Methodist church at Greenville.

Dr. Bradford Knapp, dean of the College of Agriculture in the University of Arkansas, who was instrumental in securing the location of the Western Assembly for Fayetteville, Ark., is a brother-in-law of Mr. A. M. Mayo, the great Methodist layman of Lake Charles, La.

Rev. John C. Chambers, Mississippi Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Saturday of last week. He was passing through the city on his way to Ocean Springs, Miss., where he is engaged this week in holding a Sunday school institute.

The Advocate office greatly appreciates the calls made by members of the faculty of the New Orleans District Standard Training School now in session in this city. The latch-key always hangs on the outside for members and friends of the church who have occasion to visit New Orleans.

The church auditorium at Indian Bayou, La., has been materially improved as a teaching place by curtaining off nine classrooms. These, with the use of the tabernacle, furnish splendid quarters for a large Sunday school, and Rev. P. O. Lowrey, the pastor, is active in pushing forward the work.

The Methodist Sunday schools of Shreveport, La., are among the most wide-awake organizations we know of. One secret of their success is to be found in the fact that they advertise liberally in the daily newspapers. The First Church and the Noel Memorial schools are especially aggressive in their campaigns of publicity.

The publication in this issue of the Advocate of the obituary of Lamar Lowrey, son of Rev. and Mrs. P. O. Lowrey, of Indian Bayou, La., brings keenly to mind the loss occasioned by the death of that splendid young man and the sorrow of his family and friends in his going away. The comforting grace of the gospel is a blessed support in such bereavement.

Rev. R. W. Tucker, of Homer, La., has sent to the Advocate this year 108 subscriptions. This is in keeping with his record in every charge he serves. He believes in the circulation of the church paper—and he circulates it. There is no secret about the method he follows in securing these subscriptions, the explanation of his success being in the fact that he goes after them. We hope to have Brother Tucker tell in an early number of the Advocate just exactly how he goes about it.

The Missionary Voice of April will be a special rural number. It will deal with the needs of the country church, at the same time showing in a most interesting way what our church is doing to meet these needs. This will be the best piece of rural church literature published thus far by the church, and every town and country preacher should read it. Extra copies of this issue may be secured without cost upon application to Dr. R. L. Russell, Home Mission Secretary, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

The work of our church at Haynesville, La., is developing well. To date, the pastor, Rev. A. J. Gearheard, has received 56 members. The old parsonage has been sold, and a modern 8-room bungalow, built and completely furnished at a cost of $7,500, has taken its place. The contract for a new church, to cost approximately $40,000, will soon be let. Brother Gearheard is developing some interesting plans for the strengthening of the two country churches that are connected with Haynesville.

The New Orleans District Standard Training School began its sessions in the First Methodist Church last Sunday afternoon with an attendance that was encouraging and inspiring. Every member of the faculty was in place, and all the details of organization were perfected. The faculty consists of Dr. Thos. Carter, Nashville, Tenn.; Professor C. A. Bowen, Jackson, Miss.; Rev. J. W. Hitch, Dallas, Tex.; Mr. C. M. Dannelly, Montgomery, Ala.; Mrs. W. M. Walker, Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. W. F. McCann, Mobile, Ala.; Rev. E. R. Stanford, Nashville, Tenn. Rev. C. D. Atkinson, the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, is giving close attention to the affairs of the School, Mr. J. H. Carter being in charge of the local management.

The editor had the privilege on Wednesday of last week of visiting our church at Bogalusa, La., in company with Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, the Louisiana Conference secretary-treasurer, and addressing a meeting concerning the Centenary Movement. The pastor, Rev. E. C. Gunn, is busily engaged in looking after all the interests of the church, and marked progress is being made in every department of activity. One of the notable features of the Sunday school is a men's Bible class that has already enrolled about 160 members and is still growing. So far as we know, this is one of the largest classes of men in the State. Work on the new church will begin soon. We had the pleasure of hearing the unusually efficient choir rehearse a part of a cantata that it is planning to give on Easter Sunday as part of a fine program that has been prepared for that occasion.

An official statement from the headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League deserves the widest circulation possible at a time when the enemies of prohibition are doing all in their power to discount the enforcement of the prohibition laws. The statement is as follows: "We are confident every candid, well-meaning citizen is fully assured in his own mind that in spite of lax enforcement, prohibition has adequately proved its worth. Police and prison records testify for prohibition. In New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, and the ten other largest American cities, the average number of deaths from alcoholism in 1920 was less than one-sixth what it had previously been. Commander Evangeline Booth declares: 'Drunkenness among the men frequenting the Salvation Army hotels and Industrial Homes has almost entirely disappeared.' The above are 'straws' which show which indicate the 'way the wind is blowing.' The great danger to the cause of prohibition is the apathy of its friends. Too many are quitting—our enemies are fighting. We must continue the struggle."

Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, president of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., attended the meeting of the Southern Lumbermen's Association in New Orleans last week, and paid an appreciated call at the Advocate office while here. He gave a most encouraging account of the affairs of the college under the influence of the present great forward movement. Every detail of the management is conducted in the most business-like way, and it is evident that the institution will soon take its place as one of the best endowed and best equipped schools in the church. Already there have been 161 inquiries and applications for admission to the college next year, these applications coming from States other than Louisiana—ranging from New York to South Carolina, and from New Hampshire to California. The great problem confronting the administration now is to provide room for all those who desire to enter. A greater educational opportunity never presented itself to the church than is now furnished in Louisiana.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. E. G. Mohler, Sardis, Miss., 2; Rev. T. A. Ferguson, Silver City, Miss., 3; Rev. C. Y. Higginbotham, Hermanville, Miss., 2; Rev. Leon I. McCain, Lafayette, La., 5; Rev. G. W. Robertson, French Camp, Miss., 2; S. M. Collins, Monroe, La., 2; Rev. J. L. Carter, Wesson, Miss., 20; Rev. J. T. Little, Pleasant Hill, La., 2; Mrs. M. E. Cribbs, Lyons, Miss., 2; Rev. R. W. Tucker, Homer, La., 66.

VERY FAR BETTER.

Thus the revised version of Philippians 1:23 places Christian dying in contrast with living. Paul's chief reason is that to be with Christ in Paradise brings unmarred satisfaction. The spirit world must be a real adaptation to our disembodied sensibilities. The spiritual fellowship with Christ and eternal verities will be a blessed substitute for all earthly associations. We will not painfully miss the circumstances of earth, so much will we be enamored with the heavenly. Our vision there will be clear. It will remedy all misunderstandings. Our employment will be a consummation of service performed in this life. "He that is holy, let him be made holy yet more." "He that is filthy, let him be made filthy still." Yonder Lamb-lighted world is the climax of our best ideals here. Now our goals recede like will-o'-the-wisps. After victorious death, our ambitions will come and sit down with us. Treasures laid up in heaven will meet us and become our only abiding investment. Living right is glorious; for "to live is Christ." It makes Him real and divine, personal and precious. But away with all fright; "To die is gain." We dare not shorten our stay here. Others need us. But get ready to shout your own departure! That is "very far better."—G. F. Oliver.

MORE FRUIT.

Such is the clue to many of His mysterious dealings. They disturb us and cut us. We may be stripped of much that we valued, and the process seems ruthless. But at the heart of it is God's perception that we are gathering round us what is showy rather than what is serviceable, and it is on fruitfulness of service that his mind is set. That is the object of our communion with Christ. "God loves us," said Augustine once, "not for what we are, but for what we are to be." Therefore, he can not spare us the discipline that involves suffering and straitening. We are here, in living connection with Christ, for ends which God only knows. He alone knows how much more can be made of us than we suspect. He sees rich results that are possible, if we are restricted and purged for the time being. And because he sees all this, he prunes our life of what is exuberant and superfluous. Times may come that bring little but severity and discomfort. Let us take courage as we reflect, modestly and firmly, that we must be worth God's interest. There must be something in us, something in store for us, that draws upon us this discipline. These anxious moments, these uncongenial experiences, justify us in believing that the Father who never acts willfully or wantonly, sees capacities in us which require such discipline in order to be ripened. Jesus says, it is just because you bear fruit, just because you prove yourself capable, that you are to be honored with God's sharper training.—British Weekly.

DAY BY DAY.

The daily walks of every day seem often trifling; we may do them without thinking as ordinary things, yet they are the scenes of our appointed lot—appointed by God for you and me. The ordering, the application of these ordinary occupations, is the appointing of the Divine purpose; it is for ourselves to carry them out. And secretly our character forms according as we handle them. Give thy heart to God Eternal, since thou art thyself eternal.

Join thy heart to what He has given thee to do. Join thy heart to His teaching, and thou becomest of a will like to His own will. Nothing comes by pure accident, not even the interruptions in our busy day. And such as follow on to know God's will see in all events what may lead to good, and so trust grows into a habit, as habit grows by perpetual use, till every circumstance may be seen to be but a fresh manifestation of the will of God working itself out in us.—T. T. Carter.

AN APPRECIATION.

Sad news, indeed, to learn through the Advocate of the death of W. A. Mangum. If my memory serves me correctly, he was the only one remaining in the Louisiana Conference who came in as I did at Monroe in 1912. He was the last preacher I saw when I left Louisiana on my way to the Panhandle. While remaining in the car, my wife and I congratulated him on the new church he had under construction. After a short conversation with him, he pointed out to us the road to Marshall, Tex., and we bade him a last farewell.

I think he was one of the coming men of the Conference. I am sure this was true so far as real usefulness to the church was concerned. He was deeply spiritual. His record will show that every interest of the church prospered under his ministry. His going is a distinct loss to the Conference and to the church.

I am sure he is better off. He is with his Lord he served so well. I trust our great church will be blessed with many more preachers of the Mangum type. His summons is another of the many reminders of the brevity of life. Life's struggles will soon be over. We that are still permitted to live must soon fight our last battle and gain our last victory for our Master. We know, however, "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." May the blessings of heaven abide with his loved ones.

God wants a ministry of gladness. We must show people something better than they have, and we must carry the advertisement with us, and be living samples ourselves of a gladness which rises superior to all circumstances, and which draws men to its own divine fountain.—A. B. Simpson.

We are apt to be very pert about censuring others where we will not endure advice ourselves. And nothing shows our weakness more than to be so sharp-sighted at spying other men's faults and so purblind about our own.—William Penn.

LAMAR, eldest son of Rev. P. O. Lowrey, was born at Lake Providence, La., May 12, 1903. When quite a child he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Grand Cane, La. A few days after his sixteenth anniversary he was graduated from the Pleasant Hill High School. Then he entered Centenary College, where he was pursuing his third year's work when illness forced him to leave college for medical treatment. He was apparently recovering and recuperating at the home of his uncle in Mansfield, La., when, after some dental trouble, septicemia set in which proved fatal. He died at DeSoto Sanitarium, Mansfield, Feb. 23, 1922, at the age of eighteen. President George S. Sexton, of Centenary College, assisted by the Dean, officiated and the funeral was held from Mansfield Methodist Church. A large number of Lamar's team mates and schoolmates attended the last sad rites. The floral offering was beautiful and profuse. While the heavens mingled their tears with ours, we laid all that was mortal of our boy, Lamar, to rest in the beautiful Mansfield Cemetery to await the resurrection of the dead. R. E. SMITH, Dean.

Centenary College, Shreveport, La.

Brother B. H. NOBLES was born May 11, 1847, and was called to his reward December 28, 1921. On December 22, 1870, he was married to Miss Laura A. Martin. To this union were born eleven children, seven of whom survive. Most of the nearly three score and fifteen years of Brother Nobles' life were spent in the Shiloh neighborhood, in Rankin County, Mississippi. For fifty-seven years he was a faithful member of the Shiloh Methodist Church, much of the time an official member. As a neighbor and friend, he was kind and sympathetic, always ready to extend a helping hand to those about him. As a citizen, he was the soul of honor and integrity. His word was his bond. He never betrayed a trust nor intentionally wronged his fellow-men. No wonder he could say to his pastor just before he died, "In my long life in this community I have made no tracks that I would care to cover up." Would that we had more men in the world like Uncle Henry Nobles! The pastors at Shiloh will miss the helpful friendship of this good man. To this fact the writer, a former pastor, bears loving testimony. PAUL D. HARDIN.

Meridian, Miss., March 29, 1922.

Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord—they rest from their labors and their works do follow them. J. W. MAXEY, Jr.—"Bill," as he was generally known—was twenty-eight years, nine months, and five days old. He gave his heart to God at an early age and lived a consistent life till death. In February he became a prey to influenza; then complications of pneumonia and jaundice followed. Like a beautiful flower, he was plucked away and transplanted in God's own beautiful garden, to await our coming, and to welcome us to that city celestial. He leaves a wife, two little girls, mother, father, brothers and sisters, besides a large number of friends to mourn his going away. May his going away draw us closer to God, so at the "sounding of the trumpet, when the saints are gathered home," we shall greet each other by the crystal sea. What a gathering of the faithful that will be!

ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas God, in his infinite wisdom, has called our friend and brother, GEORGE B. RAMSEY, to his reward; and whereas his life as an example has been worth so much to the community and church, be it resolved:

1. That the church has lost one of its most useful members and one of its most active stewards.

2. That we, the members of the board of stewards, shall miss him much in our board deliberations and more in our brotherly church relations.

3. That we extend to the bereaved wife and children our deepest sympathy, and that we pray that God indeed will be the needed support in this time of sorrow.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the quarterly conference, a copy be sent to the town paper, a copy to the family, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Adopted unanimously Mar. 20, 1922.

Committee, Board of Stewards: R. J. Deckard, L. C. Lipsey, G. L. Bennett; R. A. Tucker, President; F. A. Howell, Secretary; R. P. Neblett, Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS.

In the untimely passing away of our well-beloved friend and co-worker, MRS. LESLIE FLETCHER, her family and friends, her church and community suffered a loss beyond the power of words to express; a more consecrated and consistent Christian never dwelt in our midst.

In the family circle she was ideal, tender and true, great of heart and of noble bearing. To her friends she was always gracious, generous and faithful. By all who were privileged to know her in this life, she was honored and loved and respected; to them her good name is as precious ointment poured forth.

Through her devotion and wise counsel, she made for herself a place in our Society that cannot be filled, and in our hearts, she won for herself a love that is as enduring as eternity.

With her loved ones, we too grieve; their sorrow and their loss are ours; therefore be it

Resolved, That we hereby express to the sorely bereaved family our tenderest sympathy and heart-felt love, and assure each one of a constant interest in our prayers at the Throne of Grace and Comfort; and be it further

Resolved, That a page in the Minute Book of our Society be dedicated to her precious memory by transcribing a copy of these resolutions thereon; that a copy be sent to her family, one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and one to our town papers for publication.

Signed by: Mrs. D. L. Bingham, Chairman; Miss Ethel Gillispie, Mrs. Robt. Bingham, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS ON THE DEATH OF REV. J. D. HARPER.

Whereas our Heavenly Father has seen fit in his infinite wisdom to remove from the walks of men Rev. JACOB D. HARPER; and whereas the life of this noble and generous-hearted man was a benediction to humanity, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of Harmony Chapel, where he preached his first sermon, some fifty-two years ago, mourn the loss of a friend and brother in the church of God, and shall treasure in our hearts the memory of the deeds he performed and the life he lived. These shall ever be an inspiration to us.

2. That we extend to the family our sincerest sympathy, and share with them in no small measure the sorrow and loss incident to his departure to another life, and earnestly pray that God's grace shall sustain and comfort them.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be given the family of our departed friend and brother, a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that they be spread upon the minutes of our church conference.

Signed by: L. M. Green, Committee, for the Church Conference of Harmony Chapel, Dubach Circuit, Louisiana Conference.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

Saturday and Sunday were spent at Georgetown. Brother J. W. Sells, the pastor, organized a Boy Scout Troop of 15 boys. This will mean much for the boys and for the church. The Sunday school is well organized for a small school. They have faithful and loyal workers. Their school grades Progressive and better. They are going forward. Brother Sells is doing a fine work.

The Seashore District Institute meets at Poplarville at 2:30 p.m., April 19.

Vicksburg District Institute meets at Anguilla on Wednesday, April 19, 2:30 p.m.

Newton District Institute meets at Forest, April 26, 10 a.m.

Hattiesburg District Institute meets April 27, 2:30 p.m.

A written report from each school in the hands of an accredited representative is expected.

Sunday School Day Programs have been ordered sent to each pastor. If you have not received yours, let me know. Please give us the day promptly. Pray for the work and workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Orders for Sunday School Day programs are coming in slowly. The weather is all right, but how is your heart? Remember, I am not at home half the time and I cannot send out orders when I am on the train or when holding an institute. The programs have to be ordered from Nashville before they can get to you.

I see only one way to get a correct list of our Wesley Bible classes, and that is for the pastor to give the names of his classes, the numbers, and the teachers. It will be possible then to get in touch with the classes and render a service that cannot be given in any other way. It takes a lot of work to do big things and it calls for a number of people to work together. Please send me these facts now.

The time to prepare for the observance of Children's Week is at hand. Do you know of anything worth more than our children? Is any matter more pressing? Is any task more delightful? The leaflets that are to be used by the speakers are of a high order and, more than that, they are furnished for the asking. I beg you to send for them, if you do no more than read them. They are as follows: "The Physical Environment of Children in the Sunday School," "The Place of Play in the Life of Children," "Sunday with the Children in the American Home."

The Greenville District Elementary Council held at Shelby, the 24th and 25th, was a decided success in every respect. More than half the charges in the district were represented by teachers deeply interested in the welfare of the children under their care. Mrs. W. W. Adams, of Memphis, rendered the best of service to the teachers studying the needs of beginners. Miss Lynda Ramey had a large class of women with children of primary age. Her quiet, gentle manner made a lasting impression on her auditors. Mrs. H. L. Talbert, of Clarksdale, the instructor for junior workers, always overflowing with enthusiasm when she talks about "the golden period" of childhood, made the teachers think there is nothing finer than a junior boy or girl. Dr. Chapman, pastor at Shelby, led the services with skill. Rev. J. H. Felts, presiding elder, took an active part in the discussions and showed himself thoroughly alive to the importance of giving religious instruction to the people in his district. Rev. E. S. Lewis, Chairman of the Sunday School Board, is a leader worthy of our great cause. Parks, of Tunica, John Robertson, of Rosedale, made a large contribution to the pleasure and profit of all who attended. To sum it up, all gave something and all received a blessing. The close of the two great days projected a greater event in that Dr. Chapman said Shelby wants the Greenville District Standard Training School, October 15-20. Amen.

SELFISH AIMS.

By G. W. Robertson.

Man to-day is prone first to look after his own selfish interest and neglect God's work.

The sluggard, of course, is to be pitied, but we are not thinking seriously of people less fortunate than ourselves.

There are various ways to serve humanity, such as will spiritually fill the hearts of men and set aflame the love of God on earth.

Brotherly love and friendly advice, given by the right man, at the right time, in the right spirit, is often invaluable.

In charity work man is largely repaid. Many people are absolutely on the mercies of the world, not always through laziness or the lack of energy, but caused by some unfortunate event, sickness, or family trouble.

Man, many times, is self-conceited. He seems to forget that there is anybody better or bigger than himself. If the same man were to die, the world's business would continue just the same.

Selfish motives must be eliminated from the church of God if Christianity is to reign supreme in the heart of the earth.

We all recognize God, as Christian people; but if we know him, love him, obey him, he will recognize us, and in this service we will not only serve God, but the people and the age.

Thrift has led to a mode of living and a view of life conducive to success. It is in time translated into character.—James J. Hill.

FROM ST. MARTINVILLE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We closed a meeting at Palmetto on the 26th, which, in spite of inclement weather keeping the people from the surrounding country to attend during the latter part of the week, was a good revival.

A good number publicly acknowledge Christ and five were received into the church. Just before leaving for home I was informed that four more want to take the vows the first time I go back to this appointment. Due to bad roads, they were not present to identify themselves with the church the last night of the meeting. A few more whom we have been working with are on the verge of decision.

I had the right kind of help in the person of Rev. Lee R. Sparks, the pastor-evangelist of Franklin, La., whom I had the pleasure of assisting as song leader in another meeting recently held at Franklin, where he had sixty-four accessions. He is a man of prayer and faith, who does not mince words, but has a message red-hot from the heart. With earnestness of speech and the blessed energy of the Holy Spirit, he is a real fire-brand, kindling the fire of religion. His preaching has a spiritual thrill that pricks his hearers to the heart and awakens those who wish to slumber on in their sins. He is an able expositor of Bible doctrines, a strong preacher, and of a gentle and deeply spiritual nature. It gives me pleasure thus to recommend Brother Sparks, and I am doing this unknown to him and without solicitation.

Trying Times.

The reconstruction period after the great war is characterized by what may be called high pressure days. The demands of business, the wants of the family, the requirements of society, are more numerous now than ever before.

The first effect of the praiseworthy effort to keep up with all those things is commonly seen in a weakened or debilitated condition of the nervous system, which results in dyspepsia, defective nutrition of both body and brain, and, in extreme cases, in complete nervous prostration. It is clearly seen that what is needed is what will sustain the system, give vigor and tone to the nerves, and keep the digestive and assimilative funcions healthy and active. Many persons from their own experience recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for this purpose. It acts on the vital organs, builds up the system, and fits men and women for these trying times. In cases where there is biliousness or constipation, it is well to take Hood's Pills. They are a thorough cathartic, a gentle laxative.

TO EPWORTH LEAGUERS AND PASTORS!

The second Sunday in May, according to the Discipline, should be recognized in every church as Epworth League Anniversary Day. Those churches without Epworth Leagues are supposed to observe it as Young People's Day. If it is not practical on the second Sunday, then the observance should be had on some Sunday near that time.

The theme this year is "How the Epworth League can help the church and how the church can help the Epworth League." Here is an opportunity to quicken in both the Epworth League and the church the spirit of mutual helpfulness.

May we urge that pastors and Epworth Leaguers everywhere interest themselves in the observance of this day? Fraternally yours,

E. O. HARBIN.

Patience is the finest and worthiest part of fortitude, and the rarest, too.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Children's Work.

We, your committee on Children's Work, recommend:

1. That the attention of the Adult Auxiliary be called to the fact that its most important work is the conservation of the child life of the church.

2. That since the duty of training the children of the church and of giving them a vision of world service through missions devolves upon the superintendent of children's work, each auxiliary choose its most faithful, efficient, and consecrated worker for superintendent of children's work.

2. That the Junior Auxiliary be represented at the annual meetings by the superintendent of children's work and that the adult auxiliary be asked to pay her expenses.

4. That the adult auxiliary provide refreshments for the quarterly mite box openings.

5. That the Superintendent of Children's Work and one or more Juniors represent the Juniors at the district meetings.

6. That, although the Conference banner is given for the greatest financial report, no auxiliary shall be awarded the banner that does not also reach the Standard of Excellence.

7. That the making of missionary posters and scrap books be encouraged and books brought to the district meetings for exhibition.

8. That a committee from the Adult Auxiliary be appointed quarterly to visit a meeting of the Junior Society and bring a report of the work being done.

9. That each superintendent of Children's Work endeavor to have the Junior Society give a public demonstration of its work once during the year.

10. That the children use as their slogan for the year, "Each One Win One."

11. That every Junior Society have a "Prayer Special."

12. That where ages differ decidedly a division be made in Junior Societies, grouping according to age.

13. That standing rule three, page 47, be amended to read, that the attention of the superintendent of Children's Work be called to the fact that theirs is not an honorary office, but one of great responsibility and opportunity; and rule seven amended to read, that at each District Meeting, the work of the children be magnified and presented by the Conference Superintendent of Children's Work or her appointee.

14. That recommendations 3, 4 and 6 be made standing rules.

MRS. R. P. NEBLETT, Chairman.
MRS. T. H. LIPSCOMB, Sec'y.

—Conference Bulletin.

THE CHILDREN'S WORK OF THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is keenly alive to the potential value of the young life of the church. In forty-six hundred and five groups or auxiliaries, one hundred thousand eight hundred and forty-eight children have been gathered and taught the great principles of service and love. Last year these little folks gave $198,494.74 to the cause of missions.

ST. MARK'S HALL.

The plans for the new St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans, La., are under way to make this the greatest institution of the kind in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This will represent the greatest investment in city mission plants among the many splendid centers for city work in the Church This new St. Mark's Hall is not only to minister to the needs of the Italian people of this section, but is also to become an observation plant for workers in training.

MARGARET WILLIAMSON HOSPITAL.

The Margaret Williamson Hospital for Women, in Shanghai, China, is a union institution in which the Woman's Council is a participating body. This is a new hospital, opened in January, 1921. Already the results are noteworthy. From January to December 1550 in-patients were treated and a monthly average of 2500 clinic patients. This is the first woman's hospital in China to open a dental department, and here is located Dr. Fang, a graduate of Ann Arbor, the first Chinese woman dentist.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

A Statement from the Corresponding Secretary.

New Orleans, March 18, 1922.

Dear Auxiliaries: This is to ask you to send your reports to your District Secretary on time. This will help your officers to do the work of the Conference in a creditable and systematic way. If you want to be on the "Honorary Roll" this year, now is the time to start. This one item of reporting on time will give you five points toward the Standard of Excellence. We cannot stand still. We must either go forward or backward. Which shall it be? You are to determine.

The Conference minutes will soon be out, and you will be furnished with a quiz prepared by the Secretary. In this way special attention will be called to matters of greatest importance. Study the reports of the officers and district secretaries, also the committee reports, and see wherein you can make an improvement over last year.

The meeting at De Ridder was one of the best in the history of the work. May we not make the one at Monroe next year "the Best"?

Following is the list of Conference officers:

President—Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, 5830 Prytania st., New Orleans.

Vice President—Mrs. R. H. Harper, 5830 Prytania st, New Orleans.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. S. A. Montgomery, 7926 Elm st., New Orleans.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. Geo. S Brown, 2030 Broadway, New Orleans.

Hatch, Humphreys, La.; Lake Charles District, Mrs. Joe Wynn, Rayne, La; Monroe-Ruston District, Mrs. J. W. Darby, Mer Rouge, La.; New Orleans District, Mrs. J. D. Rumph, 1429 Nashville ave., New Orleans; Shreveport District, Mrs. J. W. Giles, Spring Hill, La.

Distribution of Literature—Mrs. S. A. Steel, Mansfield, La.

Editor of Woman's Page in the New Orleans Christian Advocate—Mrs. J. G. Snelling, 631 Freret st., New Orleans.

Communicate with the head of your department, in order that she may know who you are and that she may be able to help you in your work.

March and April have been designated as "Periodical Month," in which you are asked to make a special effort to get new subscriptions to the Missionary Voice and Young Christian Worker. The Woman's Page in the New Orleans Christian Advocate always has something of interest to the auxiliaries. Do you see it?

Very Cordially,
MRS. S. A. MONTGOMERY,
Corresponding Secretary,

Loss of Appetite is also loss of vitality, vigor, tone. To recover appetite and the rest take Hood's Sarsaparilla,—that strengthens the stomach, perfects digestion, makes eating a pleasure. It also makes the blood rich and pure, and steadies the nerves.—Adv.

B-Z-Z-Z-Z!

Grandfather was taking a nap and his little grandson was sent to call him to dinner.

"Was he asleep?" asked his mother when Tommie came back.

"All but his nose," was the reply.

—Boys' Life.

Vitamines and Your Blood

An abundance of vitamines, so necessary for the proper nutrition of the body, results from taking Hood's Sarsaparilla either just before or after eating.

This medicine aids digestion, promotes assimilation, converts into blood, bone and tissue, and is of great benefit for humors, eruptions, catarrh, rheumatism, that tired feeling and run-down conditions. It is pleasant to take; and builds up the whole system. It thus provides an abundance of vitamines, gives the lips and cheeks the hue of health, brightens the eyes, gives vigor and vim. This is the testimony of thousands of letters voluntarily written.

ALL THE GOOD IN YOUR FOOD

FRECKLES

Now Is The Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Linton Tells How Helpful Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is at This Period

Denver, Colorado.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for seven years and I cannot tell you the good it has done me. It is good for young and old and I always keep a bottle of it in the house, for I am at that time of life when it calls for Lydia E. Pinkham's help. My husband saw your ad. in the papers and said 'You have taken everything you can think of, now I want you to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound!' So I let him get it, and I soon felt better and he told me 'I want you to take about six bottles.' So I did and I keep house and do all my own work and work out by the day and feel fine now. I tell every one about the Vegetable Compound, for so many of my friends thought I would not get well."—Mrs. R. J. LINTON, 1850 West 33d Avenue, Denver, Colorado.

After reading letters like the above, and we are constantly publishing them, why should any woman hesitate to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound if she is in need of help? It brings relief where other medicines fail.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL FEDERATION IN SIXTH SESSION.

The Louisiana Conference Sunday School Federation met in Mansfield March 21, 22, 23, for its sixth annual session. This was a great Federation, perhaps tho best that has ever been held in the State. The faculty sent by the General Sunday School Board at Nashville was of the highest quality. Miss Pauline Suddath was in charge of the Elementary work and it was well done. She is a great Elementary worker and an expert when it comes to the child problem.

Rev. R. E. Stanford led the Intermediate-Senior work and was full of the work and gave this department excellent service. Rev. W. C. Owen had charge of the Young People and Adults and did some very efficient service. Every one came away saying that they knew more about Sunday school work than before and were fired with a greater zeal. Mr. M. W. Brabham led in the administrative discussions and there was much good accomplished. One of the great needs of the Sunday schools of our church is efficient leaders, leaders who know how to plan and get results. One could not listen to Brother Brabham without learning something about how to run a Sunday school.

Our Conference Field Secretary was at home in his leadership. He made us a good general. He is certainly putting his whole self into the task that his church has assigned to him.

Our beloved president, A. M. Mayo, presided at each session with ease and was always at his post of duty. He is one man that has given the best part of his life to the Sunday school work, having been superintendent of our school at Lake Charles for the past thirty years. He is loved by all. We are sorry to give him up as president, but he is willing to pass the honor on to others.

The Federation was well attended. There were others who would have been present had it not been that there was a lot of "flu" over the State.

The following were elected as officers for the next year: President, T W. Holloman, Alexandria, La.; Vice President, Claude McCrocklin, Mansfield, La.; Recording Secretary, D. B. Boddie, Glenmora, La.

The Federation adopted as Federation Week for each year the week between the third and fourth Sundays in March, the same as this year.

Upon request of T. W. Holloman, the Federation set as its 1923 Federation goal: 200 Sunday schools represented in the annual meeting and not less than 500 delegates in attendance. The next Federation meeting will be held in Alexandria.

We missed the presence of Miss Caroline Hess, our Primary Superintendent, who was busily engaged with the "flu."

Mansfield and Alexandria caused quite a little commotion over their promise to raise not less than $100 on Sunday School Day, and this challenge was followed by other pledges as follows: Noel, Shreveport, $100; Lake Charles, $50; Glenmora, $30; Lafayette, $50; Oakdale, $50; Grand Cane, $15; Naborton, $10; Logansport, $30; First Church, Shreveport, $100; Bogalusa, $75; Jena, $25; Natchitoches, $15. There were other churches that promised to do what they could, but what we want is something that can be counted. Who will be next? Send in your pledge right away and it will be published. Let every Sunday school in the State do this. D. B. BODDIE, Secretary.

FROM LUCEDALE, MISS.

I came here in December, 1921, and served this church and Shipman last year. The church at Lucedale showed signs of much improvement and last Conference was made a station.

There were 14 Sunday school rooms added to the church and a lot of work done on the parsonage.

The financial report was the greatest ever made by the church in one year.

One of our general evangelist conducted our revival and it was a time of seed sowing. We expect yet to reap the harvest in the fullest sense. Some of the results at that time were about forty members added to the church and a number of lives deciding for Christ.

Lucedale being a station, it became necessary to organize a Lucedale circuit. Brother J. C. Jackson is pastor of this circuit. The people seem interested and the outlook is encouraging.

No small town can boast of a better Sunday school attendance than Lucedale. Brother J. R. Bane is our superintendent and is tireless in his efforts to push the work. He has some faithful helpers who are growing in grace and trying to help others in the Christian life. The school comes nearer measuring up to our standard of efficiency than most schools of our Conference.

Our Woman's Missionary Society, after taking their mission study books last year, took up "The Pupil" and are now ready for their examination on this splendid teacher training book.

The work of the Epworth League is growing. Miss Elmo Hammond is the hustling president and the members are ready to work as directed.

Rev. C. M. Dunaway is to conduct our revival beginning the second day of August.

We desire an interest in the prayers of God's people that his "Word may be glorified."

J. W. THOMPSON, P. C.

THE WAY LOVE LEADS.

Thorns or flowers in life may be,
But the way Love leads is the way for me.

Never a question, never a fear
Under God's heaven, if Love be near.

Bitter the burdens of life, but still
I bear them meekly at Love's sweet will.

Knowing that Love of Life is Lord,
Not a rewarder, but a Reward!

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

Are You Rundown, Weak or Nervous?

If So, You Cannot Afford to Overlook This.

San Antonio, Texas.—"For a long time I had suffered with a weakness that was brought on by over-work and worry. Through this I became all run-down and extremely nervous. I had scarcely any strength left—the least exertion I would be all in. I was a physical wreck when I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it was very quick in building me up in health and strength, and I was so much better after taking this medicine that I feel I can safely recommend it to others."—Mrs. N. A. Briggs, No. 614 Adams Street.

WE TURN COTTON TO CHARACTER

Hundreds of thousands who worked in the Southern cotton mills as children have come to maturity with little or no cultural education. Thousands of these are so eager for common learning that they are willing to postpone marriage and work every other week to get to go to school every other week. They are highly experienced in textiles and make wonderful cloth which is trade marked "CHARACTER CLOTH", because of its marvelous intrinsic value, and the fact that its manufacture and sale form the financial basis for a great character-forming school.

"Character Cloth" is Guaranteed Superior to imported fabrics, and is cheaper in price. The reputation of a great educational institution is back of this statement. Adapted to shirts, pajamas, dresses, bathing suits, childrens' clothes. Many beautiful designs and colors.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

As has already been announced, the Alexandria District Conference will be held at Pineville, April 25-27, beginning at 2:30 p.m. on the 25th. Rev. W. W. Perry will preach the sermon on the evening of the 25th, and Rev. O. W. Bradley on the evening of the 26th.

Our Conference Sunday School Field Secretary is arranging a program for the eleven o'clock hour on the morning of the 26th. He has secured the consent of Rev. W. J. Pearson, of Mansfield, to be with us for the address. It is the plan of the presiding elder to have the election of lay delegates to the Annual Conference, the consideration of our district evangelistic campaign, and other matters of particular interest to the laity during the afternoon of the 26th. Some of the brethren in nearby charges are planning automobile parties from among their members for this day. Let all who can reach us for this day, come, bringing their lunches. We will have lunch served on the ground at the church and give the day over to matters of interest in our work. Let the pastors seek to secure such an attendance from their people. Attendance of Sunday school people is especially desired.

The following brethren are appointed to serve on committees: Licensing committee: S. S. Bogan, H. T. Young, Geo. Fox; local elder's orders: O. W. Bradley, A. M. Shaw, D. B. Boddie. Other committees will be announced at the conference. Brethren will please have their delegates elected immediately and send their names to Rev. W. F. Chase, Pineville, La., and to myself. Let every member of the district conference be present on time.

A WORD OF WARNING.

So much has been said and written about evangelists that I hesitate to speak of them at all, lest I might be misinterpreted. However, after much experience and observation, I am venturing to say this, knowing of course that none of us have infallible views, also that He who said, "By their fruits ye shall know them," is the one unto whom we must all give account.

Sometime ago we heard one of our evangelists who has been highly recommended by many of our strong pastors. While we know one sermon is not necessarily an index to any minister, and we believe this particular man is doing excellent work in many ways, nevertheless may we not profitably consider the following: This one sermon impressed us with the idea that this evangelist considered it his chief duty to entertain his audience. We cannot imagine any really great soul-winners producing SO MUCH levity in the pulpit. A little later we heard a good church woman, who had recently attended revival services held by an evangelist of another denomination, then had made a special effort to hear the above referred to evangelist of our church, say she was much disappointed in the latter. She seemed to get the same impression we did. This woman does not belong to either of the churches represented by these two evangelists.

We do not mean to be passing judgment on any one. Personally I feel that I owe much to the spirit of real Christian charity of the ministry and the laity. But might it not be well worth while for all of us, evangelists, pastors, etc., to review, study and pray over such passages as II Timothy 2:15?

I for one am convinced that there never was a time when the rank and file of the church more greatly appreciated the pure old Gospel, preached "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power."

The greatest of all drawing cards is our Savior, who said, "And I, if I be lifted up * * * will draw all men unto me."

All this is said in the spirit of love and good will to all, hoping it may help us all to know, love and serve Him better in this day when Satan is trying every possible way to hinder His work and when souls are perishing, while hungering for the gospel.

Scientific Discovery of Vitamines Quickly Builds Up Thin, Scrawny Figures—No Drugs or Dieting—Quick Relief For Tired, Worn-Out People. Sample Sent FREE.

THIN? You needn't be. Now it is possible for anyone to have smooth, full shoulders, rounded neck and a plump, trim figure. Alexander Vitamines, extracted from a wide range of foods, are primarily responsible for converting food into firm flesh and producing new vigor and vitality. Lack of Vitamines in the diet causes nervousness, loss of weight and vitality, headaches and many deficiencies such as skin eruptions and emaciation.

Alexander Vitamines

Quick Relief—No Drugs or DIETING. But when Alexander Vitamines are added to the diet, the results are amazing in their rapidity. Within a few days an emaciated, scrawny figure begins to round out—bony angles and ugly hollows disappear. Your weight quickly becomes what it should be according to your height. The flabby, useless tissues which are now a handicap become firm flesh and muscle—rich, red blood is produced—tasks now wearisome are quickly done because the food you eat is converted into energy.

Generous Sample Free

Send No Money I want everyone to have an opportunity to try ALEXANDER VITAMINES in their own homes at no expense. To introduce these vitamines in a million new homes, I will send a free sample to anyone who will write for it. I want to make it plain that this does not cost a cent, nor does it put you under any obligation whatever. Merely send me your name and address TODAY—a postcard will do if you wish. DISCOVERING THE RISEN LORD—AN EASTER MEDITATION.

Great Discoveries.

The pages of history are strewn with the records of great discoveries, and the progress of civilization can be measured by these discoveries, appearing as mileposts along the upward struggle of the race. Never yet has the mind of man been completely baffled by a problem upon the solution of which depended material welfare, intellectual enlightenment, or spiritual development. Many a time it may have seemed that the end of the journey was in sight—that impassable barriers had set themselves across the way and that the race was to be hurled back upon itself, hopelessly defeated and cruelly crushed; but always—even though it may have been in the nick of time—either a gleam of light has broken through from the other side that showed the way to further progress, or a glorious revelation has come that in its fullness made plain illimitable stretches yet to be traversed and magnificent heights yet to be attained.

The Greatest Discovery.

The greatest of all discoveries is that of the Risen Lord by the individual soul. It means a new life to the soul that makes it—a life that by that very fact is relieved of the limitations that have oppressed it, and that is endowed with new aspirations and enlarged capacities that change small hopes into an outlook as wide as the horizon, and painful struggles into joyous endeavors to know and do the will of God.

This discovery, too, means more to the world that all other discoveries ever made. Paul made it—and Europe heard the message of salvation; Luther made it—and a continent awoke from the lethargy of death to the joy of a living faith; Wesley made it—and all lands felt the warmth of the spiritual ardor kindled in his own heart. It is the discovery of the Risen Lord that has transfigured countless human lives and transformed the world into a place of hope.

A Personal Experience.

In the deepest sense, though, this discovery that has already been made by so many, that has meant so much to the world, still has to be made for himself by every man who would enter into the Kingdom. Other discoveries, once made, are available for the benefit of others upon the testimony of those who have made them and upon the fruits of those discoveries in the affairs of men; but this discovery must be made by each soul for itself.

As Easter Sunday approaches, when we celebrate the resurrection of the Lord, we may well ask ourselves the question, "Do I know that Christ is risen?" If we do not know for ourselves that Christ is risen, the Easter celebration can mean nothing more to us than a ceremonial—an empty form. Our main concern should not be the establishment of the resurrection as a historical fact, though that is important, but its personal realization as a present truth. Not from another, but for myself would I know that Christ has risen from the dead, that he lives to-day, and that he will live for evermore.

How Two Discovered Him.

There were just two of them traveling the road from Jerusalem to Emmaus that day. They were friends and they were journeying together. How richly suggestive is the companionship of friends! Sometimes a friend of ours—we call him friend—has to make his journey alone. His heart may be full of things he would say to us, and his spirit may yearn for the fellowship of a kindred spirit—but there is none journeying with him. We let him go away by himself, or we may have turned back after going part of the way with him, or we may have gone in another direction and lost sight of him; but he is a friend who would commune with us of the things in his soul—if we were by his side! Is there a friend by whose side we should be to-day?

These friends were sad and disappointed as they journeyed. They were sad because they had lost another friend—one who had sympathized with them in all the experiences of life, who had communed with them concerning the deepest needs of their souls, one who had loved them with all his heart, and whom they had loved. Now he was gone—crucified—buried—and they were sad.

They were disappointed, too, because they had believed that this friend was he who should be the Redeemer of Israel. They had heard him speak of his Kingdom, they had seen him do marvelous works, they had witnessed scenes such as mark the presence of the king; and they had expected him to assert his power, overthrow his enemies, and establish a government that should restore the ancient glory of the nation. Now he was dead and all their hopes were vanished.

And yet these friends were in a state of amazement, because they had heard on that day—the third day after the crucifixion—a marvelous report from some women that they had visited the tomb and found it empty, and who declared that an angel had announced to them that their friend was risen.

Thus, sad, disappointed, and yet in a state of amazement, they talked together of all these things which had happened. But while they talked, a Stranger joined them. Though they knew it not at the time, this Stranger was the Lord. Their hearts burned within them as he talked with them and opened to them the scriptures—but their eyes were holden. Too often is it true that we fail to comprehend the significance of those strange stirrings of the heart that ought to indicate to us the presence of the Divine Spirit; too often are we blind to the evidences all around us of the immanent God; too often are we unresponsive to the appeals that come to us from the high realms of the Infinite One.

As the small company drew near to the end of their journey, the Stranger made as though he would go further, but the two constrained him to abide and eat with them, and he consented. Has the Lord ever turned away from a pleading soul? How true are those beautiful words, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me!" Can it be that the Risen Lord has been by our sides for a time and then has passed on because we have not constrained him to remain with us? Can it be that he cannot reveal himself to us because we will only talk with him along the way—not knowing with whom we talk—and will not open our hearts and lives to him in the intimate way that is symbolized by the breaking of bread together? Well has it been said that "He is Lord of all, or not Lord at all."

It was at their simple meal, in the act of blessing and breaking the bread, that the revelation was complete, the discovery was fully made, and the glory of the resurrection for them was complete. The two friends hurried back to Jerusalem to tell the glorious news; and when they found the disciples, they heard them, too, saying those wonderful words, "The Lord is risen indeed!"

Companionship—communion—hospitality—what wondrous possibilities are wrapped up in those words! If we do not know the Risen Lord to-day, how sad we must be! But if we would know him, we may; and this Easter season may be the happiest that our hungry hearts have ever known. Would you know him? talk about him to-day with some friend like-minded, commune with him in your thoughts, take him into your heart of hearts—and your evening meal will be hallowed by the presence of the Son of God.

THE BEST OF ALL.

According to notices in the newspapers, we have just celebrated "Book Week." We do not know just exactly how the week was celebrated by the country at large—probably by devoting most of its time to reading the daily papers as usual—but we joined in the exercises by glancing through several suggestive, as well as several platitudinous, notes, essays, and articles in various periodicals concerning the necessity of reading good books. Of the making of books, there is no end; but there is one Book that stands so far apart from all others that its value can never be estimated and its superlative excellencies never exaggerated. With all thy reading, be sure to read the Bible!

CHOSEN LESSONS.

In the way that He shall choose
He will teach us;
Not a lesson we shall lose,
All shall reach us.

Strange and difficult indeed
We may find it,
But the blessing that we need
Is behind it.

All the lessons He shall send
Are the sweetest,
And His training, in the end,
Is completest.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Hon. C. L. Bates.

Thirteenth Paper.

I.

The government of the Southern Church was not formed upon any scriptural model; it is purely conventional, receiving its authority, form and force from the fiat of the whole Southern Methodist people who ordained and established it, basing it upon American civil analogies and political ideals, with which they were familiar.

Being an American church, organized as a result of an ecclesiastical revolution, in which there were sharp constitutional conflicts, which had been brewing for thirty years in the old church, under the conflicting political theories of Hamilton and Jefferson, it could not, in the nature of things, have escaped from American principles and ideals, and, indeed, made no effort to do so, but consciously and expressly adopted many of them.

II.

One of the principles of civil liberty embedded in the church constitution is what is known in English and American political history as Popular Sovereignty, or the Sovereignty of the People.

By this we understand that all governmental power is vested in the people; all government exists by their authority and for their benefit; by their authority laws are made and executed; and they are the sovereign owners and rulers of the government, its institutions, instruments, appliances and property.

This principle lies at the base of every governmental fabric where "Saxon Freedom" has found a firm footing among men

A fundamental principle of the British Constitution is: The laws of England do not receive their force from any power communicated by the king to Parliament, but such laws are made by and receive their force from the whole body politic, the whole realm of England.

The sovereignty of the people in this country is asserted in the preamble to the Federal Constitution:

"We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States of America."

Chief Justice Marshall, in one of his immortal judgments, discussing this subject, said:

"The convention which framed the constitution was indeed elected by the State legislatures. But the instrument, when it came from their hands, was a mere proposal, without obligation, or pretentions to it. It was reported to the then existing Congress of the United States, with a request that it might be submitted to a convention of delegates, chosen in each State by the people thereof, under the recommendation of its legislature, for their assent and ratification.' This mode of proceeding was adopted; and by the convention, by Congress, and the State legislatures, the instrument was submitted to the people. They acted upon it in the only manner in which they can act safely, effectively, and wisely on such subjects, by assembling in convention. It is true, they assembled in their several States—and where else should they have assembled? No political dreamer was ever wild enough to think of breaking down the lines which separate the States, and of compounding the American people into one common mass. Of consequence, when they act, they act in their States. But the measures they adopt do not, on that account, cease to be the measures of the people themselves; or become the measures of the State Governments." (McCulloch vs. Maryland, 4 Wheat., 316, 403.)

Here we have demonstrated, by judicial reasoning of the highest and most invincible character, the fact that the Government of the United States, the greatest in the world, the very flower and fruitage of "Saxon Freedom," was created, ordained and established by the sovereignty of the people—the people of the United States, acting, not as one consolidated community, not compounded "into one common mass," but as the people of the States, each respectively, assembled in convention in their several States.

And something exactly the same in principle was done by the people of the sixteen Annual Conferences which established the Southern Church, acting separately, distinctly and severally, and not as one consolidated body.

III.

A connected consideration of the successive steps taken by the sixteen Annual Conferences, or in which they were directly concerned, will make it manifest that the Southern Church was ordained and established by the Sovereign Power of the 500,000 Methodist people who at the time formed the constituencies of those Conferences, and that it has continued to exist by the sovereign will, authority and activities of those same constituencies and their successive generations in the faith and connection. A church cannot exist without a people, any more than a State; the preachers and their Conferences, Annual and General, important, noble and worthy though they be, are not the church.

"The General Conference, or a majority thereof, is not the church." So believed the Convention of 1845.

"The General Conference is in no sense the church, not even representatively. It is merely the representative organ of the church, with limited powers to do its business, in the discharge of a delegated trust." Such was the opinion of the Southern delegates in 1844.

But the majority faction of 1844 "took themselves" and the General Conference far more "seriously"; in their opinion, if the Conference was not the church itself, it was invested with irresponsible power over all its members and ministers, and might destroy them all; they, the majority, denied that a bishop was an officer of the church; they alleged that a bishop was the mere creature and officer of the General Conference, and might be destroyed without cause or a moment's notice; the church was nothing, and centralized, despotic power, with personal aggrandizement of those who wielded that power, was all there was in the system. The General Conference then had its Machiavelli, to whose personality was likewise added the character of a Robespierre. He delighted in ecclesiastical decaptions.

It was under such auspices, led by men of such views of the church, that the General Conference of 1844 dealt such a crushing blow to Southern Methodism that it aroused all the Methodist people of the Southland, who, then, by their own sovereign ecclesiastical power, erected the Methodist Church, South; and briefly and connectedly to trace the successive steps in that enterprise, the next paragraph will be devoted.

IV.

Following the deposal of Bishop Andrew on June 1, 1844, the following successive steps were taken by the Southern and Southwestern Annual Conferences to erect and establish the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to-wit:

1. On June 3, 1844, the said Annual Conferences, acting by their delegates, declared to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church their ecclesiastical independence; and in less than one year subsequent to that date the people of those Annual Conferences, acting separately, distinctly and severally, each within its own bounds, adopted, approved, ratified and confirmed the said Declaration of Independence by a vote of 95 to 5 in its favor.

2. On June 6, 1844, the said Annual Conferences, acting by their delegates, presented to the General Conference their "Protest" against its "attempt * * * to degrade and punish the Rev. James O. Andrew, one of the bishops" of the church, the protest reciting that it was on behalf of "nearly five thousand ministers, travelling and local, and a membership of nearly five hundred thousand, constitutionally represented" there, which Protest was likewise afterwards approved by the whole Southern Methodist people.

3. On June 7, 1844, the Committee, to whom had been referred the Declaration of the delegates, reported to the General Conference what is known as the "Plan of Separation," which was adopted and became a solemn and binding contract between the Methodist Episcopal Church on the one part and the Southern and Southwestern Annual Conferences on the other part. Those were the high contracting parties. They were competent parties. The competency of the parties, and the validity and binding force of the contract were declared by the U. S. Supreme Court; and the Court likewise held that the Southern and Southwestern Annual Conferences complied with their part of the contract.

By the "Plan of Separation," (1) the Northern Church relinquished its sovereignty, jurisdiction and authority over the Southern and Southwestern Annual Conferences, and ceded the same to them, and (2) stipulated that upon the division of the church certain property interests were and should be secured to the Southern Church.

The agreements and stipulations of the Northern Church contained in the "Plan of Separation" were based upon one condition only: that condition was that the "Plan" and its stipulations and provisions should be accepted "by a vote of the majority of the members" in the said Annual Conferences; that vote was necessary to make the paper operative and effective; the required vote was given, and by the mandate of the people the "Plan of Separation" became a Living Treaty Stipulation, and the high contracting parties became in fact, as well as in law, separate, distinct, independent ecclesiastical organizations. Vox populi est vox Dei.

4. On June 11, 1844, the Southern delegates issued to said Annual Conferences a call for a Convention of delegates to be held in Louisville, Kentucky, to determine the propriety of organizing a Southern Methodist Church in which the following direction was given, to-wit.:

"The several Annual Conferences shall instruct their delegates to the proposed convention on the points on which action is contemplated—conforming their instructions, as far as possible, to the opinions and wishes of the membership within their several Conference bounds."

A most remarkable feature of this call for a Convention is this:

Instead of waiting until the Convention should assemble and act upon the subject matter of the call, and then submit their action to the people for their approval, instructions were to be given to the delegates in advance "on the points on which action was contemplated"—and "conforming their instructions, as far as possible, to the opinions and wishes of the membership within their several Conference bounds."

And that programme was carried out to the letter, even to the changes, if any, which should be made in the Book of Discipline.

Simultaneously with issuing the above call, its authors issued and "sent abroad" an address "to the ministers and members of the Methodist Episcopal Church," in the territory covered by said Annual Conferences, in which, among other things, it is stated: "Some time before the adjournment, however, upon a declaration made by the Southern delegates, setting forth the impossibility of enduring such a state of things much longer, the General Conference, by a very large and decided majority, agreed to a plan of formal and pacific separation, by which the Southern Conferences are to have a distinct and independent organization of their own, in no way subject to the Northern jurisdiction.

"The plan does not decide that division shall take place; but simply, and it is thought securely provides that it may, if it be found necessary. Of this necessity you are to be the judges, after a careful survey and comparison of all the reasons for and against."

5. Pursuant to the call for a convention, the Annual Conferences appointed delegates to it, with full instructions "on the points on which action was contemplated"—upon all the great issues then pending before Southern Methodism, which had arisen out of the arbitrary and revolutionary action of the majority in the General Conference of 1844, the Declaration and Protest of the Southern delegates, and the stipulations of the Plan of Separation. The delegates were given no discretion upon those issues, but were bound by specific pre-convention instructions.

6. But before the Annual Conference convened and appointed delegates they, as required by the Plan of Separation, take a vote of the membership within their several Conference bounds," upon all the aforesaid points and issues, and "the opinions and wishes of the membership" so ascertained were made the instructions of the delegates. So that, as in all great political, social, and religious movements, the vital, determinative force arose spontaneously from the hearts of the people—indigenous Southern Methodism.

7. The vote of the Southern and Southwestern Annual Conferences was, each, separately, canvassed by the Convention, and it was found and declared by that body that the ministry and membership of the church, amounting to nearly 500,000, had voted upon the aforesaid questions and issues which had arisen and been submitted, as aforesaid; and that by an affirmative vote of 95 per cent, they concurred in and sustained the following propositions, to-wit:

(1) They concurred in, ratified and confirmed the Declaration of Independence of the Southern delegates in the General Conference of 1844, presented to that body on June 3; (2) they approved, ratified and confirmed the plan of separation adopted on June 7; and (3) they approved, ratified and confirmed the proposition that the relations existing between the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Southern and Southwestern Annual Conferences be dissolved, and that those Conferences be organized into a Methodist Episcopal Church in the South, based on the Book of Discipline, in which no changes at all should be made, except such verbal alterations as should be necessary to adapt it to the new organization.

8. The Convention took action in conformity to the instructions given the delegates by the vote, and then, on May 19, 1845, sent out its "Pastoral Address" to ministers and people, in which, after stating that "we have been able to conduct the business confided to us by you with great harmony," and after a recital of the canvass and results of the vote, it is declared that:

"So great appears to have been the unanimity of opinion prevailing, both among the pastors and people, as to the urgent necessity of the great measure which we were deputed to effect, by organizing on the basis of the Discipline, and the plan provided by the late General Conference, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

V.

The above outline of the facts of our Constitutional History, which are undisputed, and, indeed, are indisputable, demonstrates beyond all question the fact that the Southern Church was created, ordained, and established by the people, and that the principle of popular sovereignty—the sovereignty of the people—lies at the foundation of the whole fabric.

By and through the same Historical Induction, the people—the Southern Methodist people—adopted as their Constitution the little book of Discipline, and they adopted no other Constitution; and that little instrument embraces, in its protecting aegis, all of the canonical books of the Old Testament and the New Testament, and this is in all probability the reason why some of the Higher Destructive Critics of our church and ministry have been unable to find the Constitution of the church, for should they face the little document, it may appear that their teachings are in conflict with its doctrinal guaranties.

COMMITTEE ASSIGNMENTS.

The following are the committee assignments of the North Mississippi Conference delegates to the General Conference:

1. Episcopacy—J. R. Countiss, J. G. McGowen.
2. Itineraney—R. A. Tueker, Herbert Holmes.
3. Revivals—R. A. Tueker, Herbert Holmes.
4. Publishing Interests—R. A. Meek, J. G. McGowen.
5. Education—J. H. Felts, D. C. Hull.
6. Church Extension—J. R. Countiss, D. C. Hull.
7. Missions—R. A. Meek, D. H. Hall.
8. Boundaries and Finance—R. A. Tucker, D. H. Hall.
9. Temperance and Social Service—J. R. Countiss, D. H. Hall.
10. Sunday Schools—J. H. Felts, Herbert Holmes.
11. Epworth Leagues—J. H. Felts, D. C. Hull.
12. Church Relations—R. A. Meek, J. G. McGowen.
13. Laymen's Missionary Movement—D. H. Hall.

Perhaps it is well to state that the odd-number committees will meet on one day, and the even-number committees on the next day. This fact had to be taken into consideration in making these assignments.

Respectfully,

R. A. MEEK.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

The local collectors for the Christian Education Movement represent a score of persons who are serving the church without salary and at some personal expense, not to mention the time they give to the work. They need to be encouraged by those who love to build up the Kingdom.

Your local collector wishes to remit every dollar due and he does not like to keep sending out notices, so save him and the church further embarrassment by handing him your first payment. Unless different time of payment was specified when the pledges were made, the first installment has been due since November 1. The urgent need of our schools forces headquarters to put pressure on the immediate collection of the first payment.

In order to stimulate collections, Centenary College will offer three scholarships to the districts making the largest payment on their subscriptions. The full conditions for these scholarships will be worked out later.

CHRIST THE LIFE.

(Some Pen Sketches from A. B. Simpson's Splendid Book, "The Christ Life."

By Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook.

"I am the resurrection and the life." (St. John 11:25.)

We find from a close study of the Holy Scriptures that two of the New Testament books, the Gospel and the Epistle of St. John, treat of "The Christ Life." The mystery of nature at its best is life. The one thing man does not understand is life. The Epistle of John unfolds the source, the evolution and the outflow of His divine life. Let us study it through five successive, crispy chapter heads, as follows:

1. Christ is the Eternal Life. Before a planet rolled or an angel sang, Christ was Himself the embodiment of eternal life.

"This is the true God and the life eternal." From Him all life has come to mortal man. The power that moves the universe is His personal life, for "by Him all things consist." In Him we are secure.

Every new-born soul is begotten of His majestic life. The life of every saint is sustained every moment by the life of the living Head. He is of infinite duration.

2. The Life Manifested. "The Life was manifested." This covers the whole earthly life of the Lord Jesus specifically. Instead of giving us merely a written document, God sends us a living person to exhibit in the details of life the character of God and His purposes of love to the whole human race. Christ's earthly life was a complete pattern of all that God expects a life to be. For the first time in human history the Father beheld a man of whom He could say, "In Him I am well pleased" (I John 1:2.)

3. The Life Crucified. That life went out on the rugged cross. The life so divine, so human, was laid down as a sacrifice for all sins, a ransom for our guilt. The blood of Jesus Christ means His noble life, with all its infinite value, given as a substitute and ransom for one forfeited life. This vicarious death stands for a great and potential fact, but to be of value to us faith must enter into partnership with Him in that fact and know by personal appropriation "the fellowship of His suffering." For "if we suffer, we shall also reign with Him." That death was my death and through it I pass to union with a once crucified, but now risen Lord. (Romans 6: 5, 8.)

4. The Life Risen. Christ's death is only the superb background of His resurrection. The life that was laid down was taken up again and now He says, "I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore." He stood among His disciples and said, "Handle me and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have." He claimed once more the place of master and the touch of love in its fullest meaning.

We are saved and secure in His perfect life. He has conquered death, and now is the depository of all the fullness of God. (Col. 2:9-10.)

5. The Life Indwelling. This life is not for Himself, but for us. Having risen from the dead, He now comes to re-live His great life in us. This is the secret of sanctification as it is unfolded in the First Epistle of John, and it is the solution of every puzzling problem with that epistle as we view it. This epistle is shot through with a gospel of love divine, and, best of all, it is flowing with the milk of a full salvation for every one who will take the Calvary route. He poured out His great life there on Calvary's cross for man's redemption. The empty tomb of Joseph testifies to the world's hope. "He is not here; he is risen."

The Sinless Life.

The key to this great mystery is couched in two verses of this epistle. "Whosoever abideth in Him sinneth not." (1 John 3:6.) Our holiness is from God. It is only as we draw our life from Him that we are kept from the power and dominion of sin. It is the indwelling life.

Again, "Whosoever is born of God sinneth not, but he that was begotten of God keepeth him, and that wicked one toucheth him not." (1 John 5:18.) The only Begotten Son dwelling in us keeps us from the power of sin, and though the old devil vehemently strikes, yet we are not harmed or shipwrecked.

There is one more passage which belongs to this connection. "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." (1 John 5:12.) Our union with the person of Christ is one source of spiritual life. Christ dwelling in us is our hope of glory. He lives, and if we are joined to Him in a living faith, we shall ever live and reign with him also. "Unto him who hath washed us from our sins in his own blood, be glory both now and forever." This life shoots the star of hope into the trusting heart and makes it long for the reuniting of the sacred ties which have been so closely known here on earth. It cheers the dying saint, and leaves a balm of comfort to the bereft ones, as they look into the dismal tomb and know that some glad day their loved one will break its confines and come forth to enter in that larger realm of eternal life. His life in us is the bridge which spans the dreary distance between man mortal and God immortal. It is the power which lifts us out of the mucky path of death into that of the abundant life.

Jesus is passing in triumph to-day! See the joyous, grateful multitudes who sing to his name. The long line runs back through a thousand yesterdays to the dim horizon of Christian history.

"Lord Jesus, make Thyself to me
A living, bright reallty,
More present to faith's vision keen
Than any outward object seen,
More dear, more intimately nigh
Than e'en the sweetest earthly tie.

"Nearer and nearer still to me,
Thou living, loving Savior be.
Brighter the vision of Thy face,
More glorious still Thy words of grace;
Till life shall be transformed to love,

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The fourteenth session of Seashore Divinity School will be held on the Seashore Camp Ground, in Biloxi, Miss., from 8 p.m., Tuesday, June 13, to the same hour on Thursday, June 22. A programme which guarantees both mental and spiritual profit has been arranged.

Rev. W. A. Shelton, D.D., Emory University's gifted instructor in the Old Testament, will deliver the address at 8 p.m. and 11 a.m., through Saturday, the 17th. He is aware of the preacher's problems and responsibilities, and he will bring a message specially adapted to help the faithful man of God in this trying day.

Sunday, June 18, Bishop W. A. Candler, LL.D., one of the greatest preachers and leaders of our Southern Methodism, will bring the message of God, and he will speak at both principal hours each day through the remainder of the session. Bishop Candler needs no introduction to this section. We all know and love him, and we know a helpful and inspiring treat is in store for all who shall be privileged to sit under his ministry. Our preachers should give special heed to this great leader of God's hosts at this time.

Each of the four undergraduate classes will be specially cared for by efficient instructors from each of the patronizing Annual Conferences. These teachers are making diligent study and preparation for this work. Examinations will be given those who have previously read the course prescribed for their class.

The last General Conference showed appreciation of this work by putting it on the same basis as the Correspondence School. Our students say this has the advantage, because it has the instructor as well as the text book. Why should not all our young preachers avail themselves of this best of helps, and complete their course of study early in the year?

We are glad to report greatly improved boarding accommodations on and near the Camp Ground. We expect even better this year. Very satisfactory board and lodging can be had for $2 a day. We shall try to get even lower rates.

Seashore Camp Ground, in the quaint little city of Biloxi, Miss., is a delightful place for a summer outing. It is on the most beautiful section of the Mississippi coast, where the sea bathing is the best and the fishing and boating are superb. It would be hard to imagine a better place for rest and recuperation. And Seashore Divinity School will make your vacation a season of inspiration for worthier and happier service.

For further information write Rev. D. F. Ellisor, Publicity Agent, Chipley, Fla.; Rev. R. H. Wynn, Vice President, Shreveport, La., or myself, Brookhaven, Miss. H. M. ELLIS, President.

CHANGCHUN TO KIRIN.

By the Late Bishop W. R. Lambuth.

Our party left Changchun on the 9 o'clock train, Tuesday morning, July 26. The first sixty miles was through a broad plain, the mountains to the northeast barely visible in the distance. As far as the eye could reach, there were fields of millet, maize, soy beans and kaffir corn. The rains had been heavy. In some places the crops were slightly injured, but the soil was rich and capable, in the short hot summer, of producing almost anything. One has the feeling that he is traveling through either Missouri or Kansas. The soil reaches down in a heavy loam several feet in depth. An important eastern branch of the Sungari River lay on our left about noon. It was evident that much timber land exists in the upper reaches of this stream and its tributaries. There were indications on every side of abundant material for building and construction purposes.

On reaching Kirin at 12:30, a distance of 79 miles from Changchun, we were met by Brother Choi Soo Young, pastor of our little group, and a number of lay members. It was raining, the mud was deep, and the roads bad, so that we were driven through the town, into one gate of the Chinese city and out again, in a drosky, or Russian carriage, to the little chapel which was about two miles from the station. One finds for the first time in all Eastern Asia heavy board walks, another indication of the abundance and cheapness of lumber. A slab twenty feet long, ten inches wide and three inches thick, which would cost 5 to 10 yen in Korea, could be had here for one-fourth that amount.

Upon reaching the chapel, we found a group of thirty awaiting us, twenty-four men and boys and six women. Thirteen men were in European costume, two in Korean garb, and the remainder wearing Chinese clothes. After a short service, in which every member of our party had a share, the church gave us a warm reception.

Koreans are inclined to be stately and deliberate in such matters. We quietly awaited developments, while the leader posted the outline of the program on the wall above our heads, and referred to it from time to time. There were two songs which had been composed by the pastor. They were sung with spirit by the young men, who kept good time, and were in fair tune. An earnest prayer was offered on behalf of the evangelization of Manchuria and Siberia, and that we should be divinely guided in all our plans. The layman who delivered the welcome address was Mr. Pak Hui Paik, of about forty years. Six months ago he was a non-believer and joined in the persecution of the church. He has been soundly converted, and gives evidence of a deep religious experience.

The first song, to the tune of "Old Lang Syne" and composed for the occasion, ran as follows:

"Since the great loving Heavenly Father has given us the hoped-for opportunity,
Of giving this reception, we are indeed happy.
Jehovah God, who makes our desires to come to pass in this place,
Now pour out Thy blessings upon us.

Thou, Brother, who useth thy strength in our behalf,
Since you have now come in person and we have met thee,
We are truly grateful.

In this glad reception,
Let the love from Heaven come down and Write upon our hearts
That it may never be erased."

The Asiatic has a rare insight into spiritual things. This was brought out in the address which reviewed the needs of a scattered people, of a wide open field, of our providential coming and of God's grace. It was followed up by the presentation to the writer and Doctor Cram, the others not having been expected, with a silver medal each. On one side the design in relief is that of a man in his helplessness about to drown in a lake. A few yards from him a second man is seen in a boat pushing out from the shore to rescue his brother. The reverse of the medal shows a man with a lantern searching in the coves of the mountains for the lost. A spiritual truth was intended and applied in both. There could be no mistaking its significance—the search for the lost. The letters in English, "C. M. K. C.," signified "Centenary of Missions, Kirin Church."

When the medals were presented, a rather awkward situation developed. There were four missionaries and only two medals. Brothers Brannan and Taylor had not been included. Dr. Cram attempted to reassure the Koreans by saying, "Oh, that's all right, never mind." A dignified fellow in the last row, with some sense of humor, got up and replied, "All right for you because you got one, but how about the two who did not?"

The number and intelligence of the fine young men who were present were striking. They spoke Chinese well, some of them Japanese. They were vigorous in body and mind, one of them having represented China in the Far Eastern Olympic, and was the best runner in all China. They fully demonstrated their ability to sing.

In the rendering of the second song composed for the occasion, there was an interpretation of the designs on the medals.

1. The Vast Field.
   Since God protects us,
   Who are scattered,
   In far Manchuria and Siberia,
   His love is great.

   Chorus.
   Since He came to lift us
   Out of death and save us,
   We gladly receive you,
   We gladly receive you.

2. The Searchlight.
   In this broad plain,
   We have lost the way,
   But since Thou hast let the light shine,
   Great is Thy grace.

3. The Lifeboat.
   In these fearful billows,
   We who have no boat,
   Have been rescued with thine oar,
   And we are grateful.

4. Finding the Way.
   Since Thou hast helped us to find our way,
   With one mind and heart,
   We glorify the Lord and
   He will give even greater blessings.

Kirin is a great student center. There are several Middle Schools for Chinese in which the course of study is similar to that of schools of the same grade in Japan. One prominent feature of the city is a fine Confucian temple with yellow tile roof, which speaks of literary work in the past. The city itself has a population of from 60,000 to 100,000, including suburbs. In the city and the surrounding country, we already have eight groups organized with four hundred members. One bright young fellow desires to study for the ministry. The Siberia-Manchuria Mission is making headway with steady strides. We feel confident that God is moving upon and through the Koreans to a great religious awakening in the Far East.

OPENING OF THE NEW CHURCH AT HOUMA, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: I promised to write you as soon as our opening service was held. Yesterday was a great day with us. Dr. R. L. Russell preached two great sermons to crowded houses, all seats being taken, with children sitting on all convenient stoops. There were 107 in Sunday school. The offering for the day was $70. We received into the church six members.

On Saturday night we visited Labadieville, where we held service. On Sunday afternoon we were at Pointe au Chein, and at 6 at Bayou Blue, where we had about seventy-five people present. In our round the Missionary Secretary "flivered" something over 100 miles and made five addresses.

At Labadieville we have forty members and no house of worship; at Pointe au Chein we have near fifty members, and no house of worship, but the Secretary has promised help; in both instances services were being held in the homes of the people. This is surely the largest mission field in the United States. If any brother cares to make a donation to missions where he can visit and see his money at work, let him send it to me and I will see that it is wisely and properly expended.

I am enclosing to you a cut of the church; if you think it worth the space, please insert it in your paper.

Our next move is to organize an Epworth League, then to have a great campaign for the salvation of others. Pray for us that the Lord may continue his blessings upon us.

Fraternally,
F. J. McCOY, P. C.

GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Grenada District Conference will meet in Duck Hill, Miss., on Tuesday, April 25, at 2 o'clock p.m., and will continue through Thursday, April 27. Please note the change of place from Vaiden to Duck Hill. The pastor of Vaiden, Rev. J. W. Raper, is absent from his charge, recuperating from recent illness, and could not give the arrangements for entertainment of the conference his personal attention. Hence the change to Duck Hill.

Committee to Examine Applicants for License to Preach and Recommendation for Admission on Trial into the Annual Conference—J. E. Stephens, W. M. Langley, and R. G. Lord.

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

As has been previously announced, the Lake Charles District Conference will meet at Opelousas, April 26 to 28, beginning at 3 p.m., Wednesday, April 26.

Rev. L. I. McCain will preach at 7:30 p.m., April 26. Our Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, is arranging a program for April 27, from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The following brethren are appointed to serve on committees:

Licensing Committee—Rev. W. W. Holmes, Rev. H. W. Rickey, Rev. A. A. Bernard.

Local Elders' Orders—Rev. F. M. Freeman, Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, Rev. S. D. Howard.

Other committees will be announced at the conference. Brethren will please have delegates elected immediately and send names to Rev. S. L. Riggs, Opelousas, La.

J. B. WILLIAMS, P. E.

CENTENARY OBSERVATIONS.

The reports from some of the churches who put on the campaign for the collection of the 60 per cent due following "World Sunday" show that they collected more money during this week than they collected during the entire year 1921, and in one or more cases more than for 1920 and 1921. This emphasizes the FACT that if the subscribers are seen regularly about their pledges, the majority of them will pay.

Therefore, I am appealing to the treasurers and collectors to continue their work until the entire amount pledged by each subscriber is paid. The work of sacrifice you may put in this will be an investment that will pay.

Please let me have your report not later than the 23d, showing what you have done.

Let every treasurer report whether anything has been collected or not.

Yours for "Carrying On,"
W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Centenary Treasurer.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Hattiesburg District Conference will convene at Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, on Tuesday, April 25, at 2:30 p.m.

The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. A. W. O'Bryant, Tuesday evening at 7:30, followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, administered by Rev. W. M. Williams and Rev. J. L. Greenway.

The following committees have been appointed: Licensing Committee—J. E. Williams, C. M. Crossley; J. W. Thompson; Admission and Readmission—H. Mellard, J. M. Lewis, H. S. Westbrook; Deacons' and Elders' Orders—J. T. Leggett, J. L. Greenway, W. M. Williams. Other committees will be announced at the opening session of the conference.

The pastors will please see that the Quarterly Conference Records are on hand to be examined by the committee. Local preachers are urged to be present and make written reports as the Discipline requires.

Brethren, representing special interests of the church are cordially invited to be present, and a division of time will be given them.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE ANNIVERSARY DAY.

The second Sunday in May is set apart by the General Conference as "Anniversary Day" for the Epworth League. Whether you have a League or not, this is the time to get your young people interested. Please call attention to the matter, place a program in the hands of some of your young people and church leaders, with request that they assist you in getting this matter before the people. These programs will be sent you from Nashville, and if you need others, order them at the expense of the League Board. When the offering has been taken, send it at once to Mr. Victor H. Stevenson, Treasurer, Booneville, Miss.

R. P. NEBLETT,
Chairman Epworth League Board,
North Mississippi Conference.

TO THE BRETHREN OF THE SEASHORE DISTRICT.

Please see to it that the local preachers have written reports at the district conference, as the law requires. I trust they will attend the district conference, if possible.

W. M. SULLIVAN, P. E.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE SEASHORE DISTRICT.

Dear Brethren: The district conference will open at Poplarville, April 18, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Push Centenary collections, and please let me have the names of your delegates to the district conference. I can not complete my roll until I get them. Let us pray for a great meeting at Poplarville.

DON'T BECOME A CYNIC.

By Daniel L. Marsh, D.D.

Don't become a cynic, O my boy,
While the innocent years fast increase,
Though the things father brings,
And the songs mother sings,
May be labeled as bribes to buy peace;
For a cynical thought
Will produce the dry-rot
In the structural beams of your soul,
That, by merciless laws,
In the future will cause
A most awful collapse of the whole.

Don't become a cynic, O my lad,
In the wonderful years of your youth,
Though you hear people say,
Through the whole blessed day,
That they doubt both high honor and truth;
For a cynical twist,
Like a hard knuckled fist,
Soon will knock all the light from your face,
And the rainbow's bright gleams
Of your youth's happy dreams
Will but lead to a mocking disgrace

Don't become a cynic, O my man,
In the strenuous years of your life,
Though you've seen people bought,
And yourself have been caught
In the mesh of their mean, selfish strife;
For a cynical sneer
Will curse sympathy's tear
And then, like a malevolent fiend,
Will make darkness of light,
And make Wrong to seem Right,
And will jeer till the Lord is bemeaned.

How not become a cynic, you ask?
Build a fire of true love in your soul
Till the frost of cold doubt
Has been thawed, then look out
And see God, through the sky's upturned bowl,
Shine and rain, in frank trust,
On the just and unjust:
So a service unselfish will mellow your heart,
And you'll find that your mind
Is disposed to be kind,
If you're true, and in love do your part.

A JOURNEY TO THE ORIENT—ABOUT THE INLAND SEA.

By Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker.

XI.

From Nakatsu my way led to Oita, one of the places of lasting interest in connection with the work of the Lambuths, when the mission of our church to Japan was in its beginnings. The wisdom of the church in appointing Dr. J. W. Lambuth, a veteran missionary and a Spirit-filled evangelist, to lay the foundation and give permanent direction to this new building is everywhere evident. He and his apostolic son were as surely guided of God as was Israel when the pillar of cloud and of fire went before them. In my mind Oita is associated with an experience of which Bishop Lambuth had spoken. In peril by a mob he, Dr. S. H. Wainright, and a Japanese preacher experienced a baptism of the Holy Spirit by which they were endued with power; at the same moment awe fell upon the Japanese mob and in a short while when the missionaries went from the place of the Pentecost into the church these same men became quiet hearers of the message. Such a meeting followed that on the following morning the newspaper contained a local to the effect that on the night before the Christian's God had descended into his temple. Bishop Lambuth told me that his inner life had from that day undergone a great change. Was it the so-called "second blessing?" If one must interpret it by the exegetical peculiarities of some good men or by the psychological crudities of some others, certainly not. But I am fully persuaded that to every one who is to realize the largest possibilities of the Christian ministry there must come such an empowering. I am further persuaded that the lack of such an experience accounts for the fact that much preaching and teaching, though doubtless sincere, is merely "beating the air." It was the Pentecostal enduement that Drs. Lambuth and Wainright experienced and this experience marked a new day in their ministry. It was the typical experience of the early Methodists; both preachers and hearers were urged to seek and find it. Woe to their spiritual posterity if they lose the precious gift, and the "promise of the Father" remains unclaimed by the children of God!

On the other side of Kyushiu is Uwajima, another place of note in connection with the early work of the Lambuths, from which have come some of the outstanding men of Japanese Methodism. There a group of people desiring to learn about Christianity were advised to write to a certain Presbyterian minister, inviting him to visit them. He replied that he would gladly do so, provided they paid his expense of travel. To the one through whom the invitation had been extended the condition seemed likely to involve an unfavorable reaction on the part of his friends, and the matter was allowed to drop. Subsequently they were told of a missionary who would go anywhere; so an invitation was extended to the elder Lambuth. As Uwajima was then difficult of access and the voyage sometimes dangerous, the younger Lambuth proposed to go. "But," his father remonstrated, "Walter, it is I they have invited." Accordingly he went. On landing he found a line of gentlemen in high hats, white gloves and Prince Albert coats waiting to receive him. So punctilious were their attentions during the visit that when he was about to retire he found a deputation of young men in attendance to put him to bed. From this function he dispensed his over-careful hosts. Here also the gospel prevailed and some of the best material of the land was wrought into the kingdom of Christ. Mr. J. W. Frank, one of the most useful of our force in Japan, and his noble and capable wife are our resident missionaries at Uwajima; they may be depended upon to keep the ship of Zion true and steadfast in the course upon which she was then launched. I was regretful not only because I was unable to visit this scene of apostolic evangelism, from which a fame spread throughout the land, but because I was denied the pleasure of a visit to Mr. Frank, whom I had known in America.

Our missionary in residence at Oita is the Rev. T. W. B. Demaree. At his home, after many days of Japanese or semi-Japanese living, the visiting brother entered a paradise. The love of home is stronger than the love of country. There is not much poetry in John Howard Payne's popular song, but there is poetry in the soul of the most phlegmatic when the home emotions are called up, it matters not by what stimulus or association of ideas. How much stronger is the home feeling when it is called up by the memory of a Christian home; when the natural ties of family love have been wrought into the bonds of Christ's love; when the mutual consideration and honor without which a home becomes a horror, are strengthened by the motives of self-sacrifice and prayer; when the community of ideals attains a unity in faith and worship that else cannot be realized. At Mr. Demaree's I thought of these things the more because on the mission field I have found this type of home at its best and count it one of the missionary's strong demonstrations. The Christian nation, so called, has failed; the Christian home has not. I am glad the Japanese do not know America; I am glad they have some opportunity of knowing the American Christian home.

At Oita I addressed the Wesley Endeavor Society and visited the Women's Social Evangelical Center and residence, where Misses Whitehead and Van Hooser are carrying on the work in the absence of Miss Gist, the head resident, who was at Matsuyama, bringing up some language study. It is often the case that the exigencies of the work result in deflecting a missionary from studies by which alone the language can be mastered. Miss Gist is wise in refusing to allow herself to be permanently handicapped in her work by the heavy demands to which she had yielded. The new Centenary plant and residence is beautiful and commodious.

From Oita to Beppu, an hour's drive over such a road as the Japanese know how to build between the precipitous mountains and the sea, Mr. Demaree conveyed me. With the waves beating upon the revetment of stone that prevents erosion, and the mountains rising on the other side and circling the bay that soon come into view before us; informed by our kind host of many features of interest in the scenery and of their connection with the early Roman Catholic missions to Japan, which had their beginning here, and of which through centuries of fierce persecution there remained a seed until the reintroduction of Christianity in modern times, the drive was all too short. But Beppu is a wonder. We called at the parsonage and saw the Japanese bath, into which water runs from the earth at a temperature of 140 degrees F. This is decidedly an asset for a people to whom the daily hot bath is a necessity and who find fuel high. The Japanese bath ordinarily consists of an oval tub made of cypress or cedar about three feet in depth by four in length, in one end of which is a small, water-tight stove, fed through a door in the end of the tub. By this arrangement the water is heated at a minimum consumption of fuel, and the same bath is used by the whole family and the guest, if there should be one; each, however, is scrupulously careful to take a cleansing bath in advance in order to avoid polluting the water. Thoroughly washed, the bather is then ready to enjoy the luxury of a par-boiling. Of course, we Americans are too individualistic and too finical to conform with this custom of the land.

At Beppu, it is said, there are twenty-seven hundred hot wells; most of them have been bored, a few are natural vents of the heated streams below. Along the mountain-sides the vapor may be seen rising from some of the larger wells, and at a short distance and on an elevation above the city is a resort that bears the orthodox but horrifying name, "Heli," where one may look into the ever-boiling crater of a mud volcano, drink tea that has been made by steam from the volcano and eat eggs cooked by the same natural agency. The cost of this thrill is not affected by cheapness of the fuel, and the profiteer seems undismayed by the imminent suggestion of future torment that orthodox teaching should cause his kind to dread.

An excellent site for the erection of an institutional plant has been purchased at Beppu, which is an important health resort, to which yearly a million tourists and invalids come, affords opportunities and presents difficulties. Mr. Demaree had promised me a street meeting in Beppu, but we lingered so long amid the luxurious surroundings of a beautiful hotel, owned and operated by a Methodist, where we enjoyed the finest baths in the city, that time was wanting for the meeting. At Beppu free baths are provided for the poor, who do not seem to mind a degree of publicity at which American modesty professes to experience shock; but it is not much worse than what appears at some of our popular bathing beaches, where properities are ostentatiously violated and semi-nudity is affected with a self-consciousness that the Japanese are strangers to.

From Oita I crossed the Inland Sea to the Island of Shikoku, on which Matsuyama is situated. I had exact instructions from Mr. Callahan as to what train I should take on landing and what I was to say to the 'ricksha man at the station; but my joy was great when Mr. Callahan himself hailed me from the dock, thus a third time appearing when I did not expect him. Relieved of all anxiety of travel, I could watch the bright lights on mountain and shore, and later revel in the life and color of the gay streets of the city. Again, in the missionary's home, amidst the captivating refinements that are as truly of the "beauty of holiness" as the ritual of the temple! Mr. Callahan was both host and hostess until the next morning, when Mrs. Callahan returned from a sojourn in Kobe. The men of the mission are often excellent housekeepers, and that tells the story of some of the hardest experiences of the missionary's lot. The children must be educated in America and at certain ages cannot be left alone; and thus it is that the missionary's home is sometimes broken up for years. During this trip in Japan I was a guest in four such homes. Both the men and the women are heroic; no word of complaint emanates from them; and they are justified by their children, who, as far as I know, register a higher average of success and character than those of parents of any other class.

At Matsuyama I visited a remarkable night school, the work of a strong and holy woman of the Congregational Board, who has seen a small beginning of thirty-one years ago grow into a great institution, and that with scarcely any foreign help. I addressed the two hundred young women and then saw them in their classes. From this center three Sunday schools are carried on. Miss Judson, the founder, has always kept the evangelistic motive well to the front and the school has made its important contribution to the strong church in the city. Of its fruits eight young men and two mothers were to be baptized the following Sunday.

Of course I saw the kindergarten at Matsuyama. Everywhere in Japan the churches conduct kindergartens and our missionaries are unanimous in their opinion that these are among the most effective agencies for touching the life of the people. Through them access to the mothers is had, and in many cases the hold gained upon the child is retained throughout the years.

Mr. Callahan is interested chiefly just now in the construction of a great institutional plant, in which many forms of service will be carried on side by side with the preaching of the gospel. The land has been purchased with Centenary money and the building will be erected as the funds become available from the same source. I tremble even to think of the aborted enterprises that would remain to point to our shame if the Centenary subscriptions were to remain to any great extent unpaid. But they will not remain unpaid. The generosity of the subscribers will be equaled by their fidelity, and the enthusiasm of the great drive will be followed by the perseverance of the givers of the great offering.

WHAT CAN A LITTLE CHAP DO?

What can a little chap do
For his country and for you?
What can a little chap do?

He can play a straight game all through
That's one thing he can do.

He can fight like a knight
For the truth and the right;
That's another good thing he can do.

He can shun all that's mean,
He can keep himself clean,
Both without and within;
That's a very fine thing he can do.

His soul he can brace
Against everything base,
And the trace will be seen
All his life in his face;
That's an excellent thing he can do.

He can look to the light,
He can keep his thoughts white,
He can fight the great fight,
He can do with his might
What is good in God's sight;
Those are truly great things he can do.

Though his years be but few,
If he keeps himself true
He can march in the queue
Of the good and the great,
Who battled with fate
And won through;
That's a wonderful thing he can do.

And in each little thing
He can follow the King—
Yes, in each smallest thing
He can follow the King—
He can follow the Christ, the King.

—John Oxenham.

A RESURRECTION.

By Gertrude May Forge.

A bluish-green caterpillar spun, one October afternoon, a silken cocoon upon a willow-tree. There it hung all winter long, looking to the unobservant like a shriveled brown leaf.

The frosts of winter came, the icy winds blew and the snow drifted on and around the willow, but the leaflike home was not disturbed.

Spring at last had forced Winter to relax its hold on the meadow-land, where the brook now bubbled and gurgled over its pebbly bed, all tumultuous and joyous with awakened life. Catkins hung in tasselled daintiness on every branch of the bordering willows, and the elder bushes were beginning to put forth tiny leaves.

It brought also a message to the "shriveled brown leaf." From one end of the cocoon, a head with two feathered antennae pushed out, followed by the large, velvety body striped with red, brown and white. It looked all body, for at the sides were folded the moist and crinkled wings. Its strong, hairy legs anxiously sought a firm footing, and then, with a constant fluttering movement, those insignificant looking wings slowly expanded and dried until they measured five inches from tip to tip. Gorgeous white, brown, black and red markings were revealed which harmonized with its body colors. The Cecropia moth was ready for flight—a creature of exquisite grace and rare coloring.

From the repulsive, crawling, caterpillar stage of the year before, the same life, transformed and beautified, had emerged from its apparent death in the cocoon to a fuller, richer life of activity.

Thus at each joyous Easter season an intimation of the resurrection comes to us from God's wonderful insect world, breathing a message of hope and joy and infinite peace to all mankind.

"And with childhood's credulous affection
We behold those tender wings expand,
Emblems of our own great resurrection,
Emblems of the bright and better land."

—Our Dumb Animals.

BILLY'S WIND WOLVES.

They were three happy children, Jennie, Tom and little Billy. They lived in a quiet country district in New England from which the wild creatures such as their Uncle Charles had been telling them about had long ago disappeared.

Uncle Charles had ended a short visit and had started on his long journey to his interior Alaska home. The children had been delighted with him and had spent many hours romping with him. His stories of wild life in the great northland had made a strong appeal to their vivid imaginations. Jennie liked the caribou stories best and Tom preferred the bears; but little Bill, though only six years old, couldn't get his uncle to tell him enough stories about the great northland wolves, especially how they howl and how they sometimes hunt in packs.

Father and mother were comfortably settled before a blazing hearth—father with his paper and mother busily knitting a new sweater for Billy. Tom and Jennie were deep in their story books and Billy was stretched full-length beside Hunter, his beloved little mongrel dog. Outside the March wind was moaning through the trees, at times striking a livelier note that sounded more like echoing voices in the distance.

The stories so recently told by his Uncle Charlie were actively revolving in Billy's young mind and at the wind's first sharp howl around the corner of the house he gave Hunter a quick shake, whispering mysteriously: "Hear that, Hunter? They're comin'! The wolves are comin'!"

Rising cautiously, Billy tiptoed to the door; Hunter, alert, close at his heels. Putting his hand down close to the crack at the lower corner of the door, Billy waited a moment and then again whispered to his dog: "They're right out there, old boy. One sniffed my hand just now. Smell 'em, Hunter!" And the lad held his open palm for the dog's inspection. The little hand having been duly inspected Hunter obediently placed his nose to the crack to which Billy was pointing and drew a long breath as if trying to confirm his little master's words.

Soon a louder blast swept past the angle of the deep window, giving out a note that might well be called a howl. Thither Billy and the now excited Hunter went.

"Watch 'em, Hunter," whispered Billy. "We mustn't let 'em get into the old cabin to-night; there's maybe more of 'em than we could handle. You watch the window while I get my gun; then let 'em come if they dare!" and Billy quickly secured the wooden gun his Uncle Charlie had whittled out of a piece of pine board while telling some of his stories a few days before.

Just then a still wilder blast from the rising storm swept across the long porch at the end of the house, giving a swaying movement to a picture hanging on the wall.

"Hear that? They're breaking into our meat cache! They'll get our moose meat we hung in there a few days ago; we've just got-a-get 'em now, Hunter, old boy!"

"Oo-oo-ee-ee-e oo oo o," again wailed the wind, hissing through the door crack like the sharp breathing of some great animal, with nose pressed close.

"Here he is, Hunter, here he is!" and Hunter's eager nose was again pressed to the crack in excited search for evidence. And so intent was Billy on guarding his cabin against invasion by the great wolves that he did not notice that Hunter and he had an audience of three very interested observers—Jennie and Tom, with hands held tightly on their lips to restrain laughter, and father smiling broadly and trying to signal mother to share in the entertaining scene.

So excited had Hunter become at the mysterious movements and whispered urgings of his little master that when his bright eyes caught a glimpse of the large ball of sweater yarn moving jerkily beneath mother's skirt, he was sure the dangerous creature had been located and he went for it.

"I—I—was just havin' some fun with a pack of Uncle Charlie's big wolves, mother," Billy explained half ruefully as he saw what a mess Hunter had made of the yarn ball before it could be rescued.

Such a sorry ending for a wolf hunt! Poor Bill! Again stretching himself beside Hunter on the hearth rug, he was soon adventuring in the age-old land of dreams, Hunter occasionally touching his cheek with the merest mite of a caress, as if assuring the sleeper of safe keeping.—Robert Joseph Diven, in the Continent.

Dr. Briscoe Carter, of Minden, La., visited the District Standard Training School in New Orleans last week.

Dr. S. A. Steel delivered a series of lectures at Greenwood, Miss., on the Bible during the week beginning April 2.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bulla, mother of Dr. Chas. D. Bulla, celebrated her 100th birthday on March 22. Her home is at Albany, Mo.

The World's Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held at Philadelphia, Pa., November 11-16, 1922.

T. H. Yun, a leader among Korean Christians, has recently given $1500 to the mission school conducted by Rev. A. W. Wasson.

Rev. D. C. Bennett, of Coushatta, La., has been hindered in his work by "flu" and bad weather, but he reports the outlook as encouraging.

Rev. Victor G. Clifford, pastor of the Centerville charge, Mississippi Conference, is issuing a monthly bulletin in the interest of his work.

Rev. R. P. Neblett, of the North Mississippi Conference, is the author of the "League Rally Song," which has been set to music by Chas. B. Wiatt.

Rev. R. A. Forrest, of Toccoa, Ga., is assisting the pastor, Rev. H. N. Harrison, in a meeting at Felicity Street Church this week. The meeting will close on April 17.

The Florida Christian Advocate reports that it is now going into every home represented in the membership of 66 churches in its patronizing territory. The budget plan is used.

We saw a statement recently to the effect that during the pastorate of Dr. Clovis G. Chappell at the Representative Church, Washington, D. C., 1980 members have been added to the church.

Columbia College, New York, claims to have the largest student enrollment in the world—32,420. The University of California disputes the claim, declaring it has a bona fide enrollment of 43,266.

Rev. J. B. Williams, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, reports that all his preachers are busily engaged with their work, and that a great year is in prospect.

A list of nine subscriptions from Okolona was recently secured by "Aunt" Laura Murdock, 91 years of age. Her pastor, Rev. E. H. Cunningham, writes of her as a devoted worker in the Methodist church.

The meeting announced to begin at Waynesboro, Miss., on April 2 had to be indefinitely postponed on account of the prevalence of smallpox in the community. Rev. H. A. Wood is the pastor at Waynesboro.

Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Williams, of Purvis, Miss., are eagerly looking forward to the visits home next winter of their son, Frank Starr, in business in China, and their daughter, Mrs. Lillian Beanland, a missionary in Africa.

Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, of Winona, Miss., recently assisted his brother, Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, in a fine meeting at First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss. The Laurel Daily Leader gave good reports of the meeting each day.

The Methodist Sunday schools of Shreveport, La., reported the following attendance for last Sunday: First Methodist, 1285; Noel Memorial, 470; Mangum Memorial, 270; Texas Avenue, 197; Cedar Grove, 125; Bossier City, 82.

The Louisiana State Teachers' Association met in New Orleans during the latter part of last week. We had the pleasure of meeting several friends from over the State who were in attendance upon the sessions of that body.

We learn from the Midland Methodist that the wife of Dr. Jno. R. Stewart, pastor of Monroe Street Church, Nashville, Tenn., died suddenly recently. The sympathy of the whole church will go out to Dr. Stewart in his great sorrow.

Rev. J. B. Grambling, field worker of the Louisiana Conference Epworth League, made a pleasant call at the Advocate office on Tuesday of last week. He reported a most encouraging outlook for the Epworth League Assembly at Mansfield in June.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, requests us to announce that the date of the second quarterly conference of the Cleveland charge has been changed from Friday, April 21, to Monday, April 24.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, but now stationed at Columbus, Texas, has recently assisted in a great meeting at University Church, Austin, Texas. The University of Texas, located at Austin, has 5000 students, 1400 of whom are Methodists.

Rev. J. H. Bell, agent for the North Mississippi Conference Superannuate Endowment Fund, made a very successful visit to Okolona, Miss., recently. According to the press reports, Brother Bell states that interest in this great cause throughout the Conference is greater than ever before.

Dr. L. J. Miller will assist the pastor, Dr. W. Winans Drake, in a meeting at Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., beginning April 23. Dr. Miller recently held a meeting at Holly Springs, Miss., and the pastor there, Rev. W. R. Lott, is very much pleased with the results.

The Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention reports that it received last year $2,399,392.43, which was $1,600,607.57 less than the amount due for the year on the 75 Million Campaign, and that it has received this year only 68 8-10 per cent of the amount received for the same period last year.

A note from Rev. C. M. Crossley, pastor of the Court Street Methodist Church, Hattlesburg, Miss., informs us that work on the new church building, to cost $40,000, will begin about May 1. It will be recalled that the old building was destroyed by fire several months ago.

On April 2, the Newton Sunday school classes reported as ready in cash over $1600 for the purpose of building a Sunday School Annex. The Building Committee expect to begin work as soon as they have $2000 in cash. It is estimated that $10,000 will be needed for the completion of the enlargement, of which about $7500 has been subscribed.

On the second Sunday of March Rev. I. F. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Roanoke District, North Alabama Conference, preached morning and evening at Newton, Miss., and the congregation was so stirred by these two messages that they besought the pastor, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, to secure the services of his brother Ira for a revival meeting. Accordingly, this has been done, and May 30 is the date fixed for beginning the meeting.

We are grieved to learn of the death of Rachel Virginia, infant daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Pearson, of Mansfield, La., on Saturday, April 1, in a sanitarium at Shreveport, where she had been carried for treatment. She was buried at Mansfield on the following day, the funeral services being conducted by Dr. H. F. Brooks and Dr. W. Winans Drake. Our deepest sympathy goes out to Brother and Sister Pearson in their great sorrow.

The New Orleans District Standard Training School came to a very successful close on Friday night of last week. Fine interest was maintained throughout the week, the attendance was highly satisfactory, and the number of credits issued—51—shows that faithful work was done by instructors and students. The school was a blessing to the community, and we predict that much good will result to all the churches whose representatives completed the courses of study.

Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor of our Cedar Grove Church, Shreveport, La., is conducting special Easter services this week. Sermons will be preached by the pastor, Dr. W. Winans Drake, Dr. R. H. Wynn, Dr. R. E. Smith, Dr. H. F. Brooks, Dr. George S. Sexton, and Rev. A. S. Lutz. The Sunday school of this church is making a new attendance record nearly every Sunday. Some of the classes meet on vacant lots near the church and in nearby residences. Sixteen delegates from this school attended the recent Wesley Bible Class Federation meeting at Mansfield.

We have received the following, with request for publication, from Rev. D. F. Ellisor, of Chipley, Fla., publicity agent of the Seashore Divinity School: "To all cottage owners, Seashore Camp Ground: If you will rent your cottage, or rooms, for the use of the Divinity School for the ten days beginning June 13, please write me, giving me number of your cottage, its general condition, and your terms. We shall need your cottage; if you do not expect to be in it at the time, please let us have it. I will take pleasure in renting it for you without charge." Brother Ellisor may be addressed as above.

Rev. John A. May, of Montevallo, Ala., one of our general evangelists, and Rev. John M. Adams, choir director, of Tyler, Texas, began a meeting at Tupelo, Miss., on March 26, which will close on Easter Sunday. The Presbyterian pastor, Dr. Dudley, and his people are co-operating in this meeting. Much interest has been shown thus far in the meeting, and the indications are that much good will be accomplished. More than two hundred men heard Brother May at the courthouse on Sunday afternoon, April 2, on the subject, "Government, Law and Order." At the night service many people were turned away for lack of room in the church.

Our church at Batesville, Miss., Rev. J. D. Wroten, pastor, bas just closed a successful revival meeting, conducted by the pastor. During the afternoons, as many as forty people met in prayer meetings in homes and places of business. The evening services at the church were fruitful, several persons being added to the membership of the church, some of them on profession of faith. The Sunday school at Batesville is doing splendid work under the leadership of Brother M. E. Jarratt. Each Sunday some class opens the school with a special program, and these programs have proved to be very attractive features. The program last Sunday was given by Mrs. O'Bryant's class of boys—a class which nearly always has a perfect attendance record. The program was on the work of the Orphanage, as a result of which the Sunday school adopted the monthly payment plan for the upkeep of the Orphanage, the first offering amounting to about $20. Another feature of this school is the Men's Bible Class, which has an enrollment of more than 60. Dr. F. A. Stacy is the president of the class, and Hon. J. B. Caruthers is the teacher.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. R. A. Sibley, Decmer, Miss., 2; Rev. D. C. Bennett, Coushatta, La., 3; Rev. A. J. Henry, Ebenczer, Miss., 2; Rev. H. L. Norton, Fernwood, Miss., 2; G. W. Holloway, Carson, Miss., 4; Rev. W. B. Jones, Crystal Springs, Miss., 2; Rev. E. H. Cunningham, Okolona, Miss., 9; Mrs. H. O. Adams, Locust Ridge, La., 2; Rev. W. M. Williams, Purvis, Miss., 3; Rev. W. N. Duncan, Drew, Miss., 3; T. C. Sledge, Sunflower, Miss., 2; Rev. J. A. Poe, Lexington, Miss., 3; Mrs. A. J. Stevens, West, Miss., 5; Rev. Olin Ray, Kosciusko, Miss., 2; Rev. Standifer Raper, Coldwater, Miss., 2.

NOTICE.

Rev. H. J. Moore has been moved from Ellisville to Forest and Morton to fill the vacancy caused by the transfer of Rev. John W. Chisholm to the West Texas Cinference. Rev. J. B. Cain has been moved from Oak Ridge to Ellisville. These appointments are all in the Mississippi Conference.

DeRIDDER-MERRYVILLE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONTEST.

The report for the DeRidder-Merryville Sunday school contest for last Sunday is as follows:

DeRidder had present 195, making a total gain of 176.

Merryville had present 306, making a total gain of 986.

Both schools are working hard for an attendance of 500 on Easter Sunday.

THE ORIGIN, PURPOSE, AND USES OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI RURAL PASTORS' ASSOCIATION.

By Rev. N. D. Guerry.

Last summer, in July, a number of pastors were at Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, attending the Rural Pastors' Training School, under the auspices of our Mission Board.

Here, under the instruction of the men who were masters of their subjects, a new field of service was opened up to us that heretofore we had but dimly perceived. All the needs of those who dwell in the country were revealed in their true relation to the spiritual growth and progress of our rural people, and to the prosperity of our church as a whole.

As our session drew to a close, there arose among the representatives from the North Mississippi Conference the feeling of a need for some means whereby what we had received might be passed along, and whereby further study in this field might be fostered and the results conserved The North Mississippi Rural Pastors' Association has been devised to fill this need. It is still in the making, and if adapted to the need, will grow and conform itself to conditions.

The formation of the Association is in no wise an attempt to erect a political party, or to array the country against the city. Its sole purpose is to advance the Kingdom of God, by setting as many minds as possible to grappling with those problems which confront us in the country, and to assist the thinking of these minds by pointing them to a source of facts, and by an interchange of ideas.

In this undertaking we solicit the active assistance of all whose work or interest lies in the country, and we desire the sympathy and co-operation of all who love the Lord.

One of the immediate uses of the Association will consist in supplying the great number of laymen and laywomen throughout our Conference, who have a desire to serve, with an idea as how to serve best in certain fields.

There are many such who are filled with a real desire to do something for their community. When the relation of the church to all the vital activities of the community is revealed to them, and they find that its ministry is no longer confined to some future existence, we will see more workers with their shoulders to the wheel.

So I suggest to those pastors who may be discouraged by a seeming lack of interest on the part of able laywomen and laymen, that they interest them in reading some of the books suggested by the Association. The amount of energy and enthusiasm that is released by some of them is surprising.

A complete list of such books will soon be published by the Superintendent of Study, and every one will be allowed to choose such as appeal most to him. To those who would like to read at once, I would suggest the following books as being most helpful in the beginning:

"The making of a Larger Parish," by Mills; "Solving the Rural Problem," by Bricker; "The Country Church Serving the Community." Those interested in the Sunday school side of it would do well to get "How to Run a Little Sunday School," and those in the Social Life, the "Philosophy of Play." All these books may be had from Smith & Lamar. Further comments will be published later.

Any one who desires to become a member may do so by sending in his name to me until the secretary's name is announced. There are no fees, nor is any one obliged to attend the meetings at Conference. At the same time, we hope to make it a privilege. By N. D. GUERRY, Shuford, Miss., For the Association.

Constitution of the North Mississippi Rural Pastors' Association.

ARTICLE I.

The name of this organization shall be the North Mississippi Rural Pastors' Association.

ARTICLE II.

The purpose of this Association is the advancement of the Kingdom of God in the rural sections, by studying those problems peculiar to our rural people with a view towards their solution.

ARTICLE III.

All pastors serving a rural charge, together with all presiding elders, and Conference connectional men, shall be eligible for membership.

ARTICLE IV.

Membership in this Association carries with it the requirement that each member read at least two books a year bearing upon the Rural Problem, selected from those suggested by superintendent of study, and also be prepared to give his personal observations on the subject when called upon.

ARTICLE V.

Laymen and laywomen on rural charges are eligible for membership as associate members, and the pastors should urge them to join.

ARTICLE VI.

Since the chief object of this Association is study, any member who fails to bring up said study two years in succession shall have his name dropped from the roll.

ARTICLE VII.

The officers shall be President, Vice Presidents (one in each district), Secretary, and Superintendent of Study.

ARTICLE VIII.

The officers shall be elected annually.

ARTICLE IX.

The President shall provide for meetings of the Association at Annual Conference, and the Vice Presidents shall provide for meetings at district conferences where possible.

ARTICLE X.

This Constitution may be amended at any Annual Meeting by a two-thirds vote of those present.

CHARTER MEMBERS.

JUST AS YOU MAKE IT.

Life is just a constant grind,
If you wish to make it so;
All the breezes are unkind,
If you grumble while they blow.
Every hill is bleak and drear,
Not a songbird that you hear
Ever sounds a note to cheer
If you wear the mask of Woe.

Life is triumph, life is joy,
If you wish to make it so;
Why let the little ills annoy?
Toss them off and let them go.
All the woods with glee may ring;
Every season may be spring,
If you have the heart to fling
Laughter in the teeth of Woe.

—S. E. Kaiser.

WILLIAM ALFRED SMITH was born in Lee County, Mississippi, March 28, 1865, and departed this life March 23, 1922. He was married on December 22, 1886, to Miss Sarah E. Blaylock, who, with five children, survives him. Brother Smith's death was the first death in the family since 1888, when he lost his first-born child. He was converted in 1879 in a meeting held at old Hebron church by Rev. H. C. Parrott, and joined the M. E. Church, South, being only 14 years old. He lived a consistent Christian life for 43 years. He was Sunday school superintendent of Hebron Sunday school for a number of years, until the condition of his health caused him to ask to be relieved from this responsibility. He lived a quiet, unassuming life and was a regular attendance at Sunday school and church until the end came. Brother Smith was always "ready to give a reason for the hope he had within him," and only two weeks before his death, in a conversation with the writer and speaking of the assurance he had, he said, "I would hate not to know that I was saved." He lived the victorious life and I am sure when the summons came it found him ready. The day of his death he went to his work at the usual hour after dinner, and not returning home at the usual time at night, his son went to see what was the matter and found him dead. He had been dead for some time and this was a great shock to the family. On March 24, 1922, in the presence of a great crowd of his friends and neighbors and after services by the writer, he was buried in Spring Hill cemetery. We shall miss him from his accustomed place in the church and Sunday school, but we expect to meet him again some day.

C. WESLEY BALEY, Pastor.
Guntown, Miss.

MRS. MARY ESTES RANEY was born in Warren County, Mississippi, April 24, 1841, and died Febrnary 23, 1922. She was happily married, August 31, 1854, to Mr. Samuel Raney, of Virginia, who had recently moved with his parents to Warren County, Mississippi. She was the mother of 10 children, all but two dying in early childhood. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Hinda Miller, of Phoenix, Miss., four grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren. Mrs. Mary Bradshaw was her granddaughter, with whom she spent the last years of her life, and from whom she received every attention that love and affection could bestow. She was afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism for many years, and could not walk. But she was optimistic and always looked on the bright side, and bore her afflictions with fortitude and resignation. She joined the church very early in life, and was a devout Christian and an enthusiastic member of Flower Hill Methodist Church. She spoke often of going Home to rest and be with her "babies." Her friends were those who knew her. She was very much loved by everybody.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

REV. GEORGE W. HIVELY.

REV. GEORGE W. HIVELEY was born in Drew County, Arkansas, April 11, 1870, and died at his farm home near Bon Aqua, Tenn., February 22, 1922, after an eleven-days' illness of typhoid pneumonia. He was the sixth child of a family of nine children born to Peter C. and Margaret C. Hiveley, whose family consisted of three sons and six daughters.

After the death of his father, which occurred in 1874, his mother moved back to her native State, near Crystal Springs, Miss., in the "Bethesda vicinity." It was here, in a neighborhood of God-serving people, and in a home where the family altar had been established and under the guiding hand of a devoted, praying mother that the foundation of a beautiful Christian life received its inception.

Before he was fifteen years of age, his two brothers had passed away, leaving the responsibilities of the farm upon him and the other members of the family.

Owing to the cares of the home and farm that naturally fell to his lot, it greatly hindered him in his school work; but with his energy and studious disposition, coupled with high aspirations, he improved every opportunity, receiving for his reward a liberal education.

In his early manhood he thought quite seriously of studying law; but the gentle call of the Master ringing constantly in his ears for workers in his vineyard prevailed, and he offered himself for God's work and became an ordainned Methodist minister. He served in the Mississippi, the Louisiana, and the Arkansas Conferences. He was also engaged in mission work in Mexico and Arizona. By causes beyond his control, and a throat affection, he was compelled to give up his ministerial work as an actlve member of the Conference.

After retiring from pastoral work, he spent a year in California. After returning from the Pacific Coast, he was employed by the Goodyear Rubber Company, remaining with them about two years. It was during his stay at Akron, Ohio, that the writer became intimately acquainted with him.

Brother Hiveley was a Christian gentleman of the highest type. His consecrated life, his gifts and his services to his church are enduring. He was ever ready to do his part towards its needs and activities. His society was inspiring, and as a friend he was painstaking, loyal and true; and in passing to the Bright Beyond he leaves behind him a legacy of a devoted and well spent life for his Master.

On January 4, 1922, he was united in marriage to Mrs. Malinda Bush, of Bon Aqua, Tenn., who, with four sisters, mourns the loss of an affectionate husband and a kind and loving brother.

RESOLUTIONS.

On Sunday, January 8, 1922, there passed from this life Mrs. JULIA A. ABNEY, one of our most faithful and devoted members. She had been a member of this society from its beginning, and, though not able to attend for the last few years, she gave to the work loving sympathy and material aid.

Resolved, first, That we cherish the memory of her devoted life and strive to emulate those traits of character which made her what she was to the church and her home.

Resolved, second, That herein we as a society express our most sincere sympathy to the family in their loss.

Resolved, third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this missionary society and a copy be given to the family.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Sunday, the 2d, was spent at Ocean Springs. They have a good school here. A Cradle Roll was started. They are arranging to rearrange their classes in order that they may be better graded. They are planning a good bit of forward work. They have fixed the parsonage and Brother Grice now has a very comfortable home. The church is to be repaired and I feel that when all the work planned is completed they will have an unusually good working plant. The work looks hopeful.

Monday was spent at Vancleave, with a public meeting Monday night. Vancleave is talking building and I trust that they will be enabled to build the kind of building they ought to have.

I visited the Consolidated School and they have indeed a good school and are making fine progress. They have the best library and the best lot of magazines I have found in any community so far. They have a good Domestic Science Department and they have a good start at equipment for Science. This will be a community center for a good big territory and the church ought to be in the lead here as well as the school. Pray for these good people that the Lord will give them the victory they ought to have for His cause.

Tuesday was spent in Mount Pleasant. This is a mighty good circuit Sunday school. They are forward-looking and have many good features. We visited in a number of the homes in the community and in spite of the bad looking weather we had a good meeting Tuesday night. This school, if it keeps the plans, will be 100 per cent.

Wednesday was spent in Biloxi. The Biloxi Standard Training School is arranged for and we will have a good one there. The towns and schools around should profit by this school and take part in it. We have a strong faculty.

Don't forget Sunday School Day. The Board has tried to get the programs to each school and if you have failed to receive yours, please let me know and I will get them for you. If you need more programs, let me know and they will be sent you.

Every school is expected to have a written report at the District Institute. No school can be 100 per cent that fails to have this written report. We would like to have a delegate from each school also, but at least let us have these reports. We wish these reports to be read. The Institute can thus be of more value to the Sunday schools.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS,
Field Secretary.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Children's Week will be observed April 23 to April 30, where the proper estimate is placed upon childhood and the home life of children. It has been said you can estimate the civilization of the State by what the State does for its children. You can likewise measure the Christianity of the church by what the church does for its children.

We have 551 Sunday schools in this Conference. So far, 176 superintendents have ordered programs for Sunday School Day services. It may be in some instances the letters sent from this office in regard to ordering programs may have been lost or misplaced. In such cases write me and I shall send your programs as soon as they can be had from the Publishing House. If we get half the schools of our Conference to give the instruction contained in these programs to the children and to the entire community, some one must take the lead. We desire to find out why the day is not observed, so we can help such places. The program not only furnishes instruction needed, but the opportunity is given to our people to help reach the ten thousand church members who do not attend the Sunday school.

The program for our Wesley Bible Class Federation is nearly complete.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

We have the promise of some excellent speakers. One object in asking for a report from the organized classes is that we may get a list of the teachers of these classes. When we get that list we can send information as to the value of the federation. We desire to help every class, but we must have the help of the class in getting these names.

The Greenville District Conference held at Tunica last week was genuinely religious from the first day to the last. The attendance was above the usual for such meetings. Rev. J. H. Felts, P. E., gave one afternoon to the consideration of the work of his Sunday schools. Miss Lynda Ramey, Conference Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. H. L. Talbert, District Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Conference Superintendent of W. B. Classes, and Rev. E. S. Lewis, Chairman of Sunday School Board, gave messages that elicited a splendid response on the part of those in the audience. Fifteen asked Mrs Wyatt to visit their charges and organize Wesley Bible classes The district is contemplating a District W. B. C. Federation at an early date. Rev. C. A. Parks asks that Tunica be made one of the demonstration stations of the Conference. To be explicit, that his church be brought up to the point where it can be of help to other churches. We need not less than a hundred such churches. People can learn better and quicker by seeing a thing than by hearing about it.

One fine high school boy at Tunica said he would like to attend the Training School at Grenada, provided other boys would attend. Let us have 25 boys at this school so we can begin training a new generation of superintendents of schools and departments. We must give the boys training in this business of leadership if we take front rank among the churches that amount to something. Line up the boys for this training in Leadership.

CHEMISTS PERFECT A DE-NAUSEATED CALOMEL TABLET

Retains All Medicinal Virtues But Purified from Dangerous and Unpleasant Effects—Sold Under the Name, "Calotabs."

Science has given us smokeless powder, wireless telegraphy, colorless iodine and tasteless quinine—now comes the good news for everybody that the pharmaceutical chemists have perfected nausealess calomel that does all the work of the old-style calomel without the danger, griping, nausea or sickening after-effects. After the most extensive and critical tests, all of which proved eminently successful, the new tablet known as "Calotabs" is on sale at all drug stores. It presents all of the system-purifying and liver-cleansing qualities of the old-style calomel, but is pleasant to take and entirely safe and delightful in its after-effects.

One tablet on the tongue at bedtime with a swallow of water, that's all; no taste, no nausea, no griping. The next morning you are feeling fine, liver clean, appetite splendid. Eat what you please—no danger nor unpleasantness.

Beware of imitations! Genuine Calotabs are sold only in "checker-board" (black and white) packages bearing the copyrighted trade-mark "Calotabs." The large, family size sells for thirty-five cents; vest-pocket size, ten cents. All dealers are authorized to refund the price if you are not delighted with Calotabs.—Adv.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Lynda Ramey,

Conference Elementary Supt.

In making your plans for Children's Week, do not let it be sacrificed on account of other meetings, but set aside a week that can be used and along with the little poem, "It Can Be Done," put it through. Sometimes there are meetings, very important and already planned for, coming at that time or during a part of that week. In that case put the observance up a week, or, if more convenient, the week following April 23-30, though postponement is not a good policy.

Use of Posters.

In order that the printed posters for use in connection with Children's Week may be used to the best advantage, some suggestions follow. For instance, both front and back of this poster may be used, reversing sides. Most people will use cut-outs from the magazines—attractive and artistic productions resulting, too. Others may use water colors or poster paints effectively. The cut-outs of children may illustrate even a Parents' Meeting effectively. Adults going to church with place, hour, and date, has been suggested for a Parents' Meeting. The COMMITTEE REPORTS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL MEETING.

Young People's Work.

We, your committee on Young People's Work, recommend:

1. That the aim for 1922 be a 25 per cent increase in finances, in auxiliaries, in number of honor roll societies, in volunteers, and in Mission and Bible Study Classes.

2. That we adopt as our specials for 1922, Sue Bennett, London, Ky., and Bennett College, Brazil, and fix our budget at $2,000.

3. That we co-operate in every possible way with the great educational movement of our church.

4. That, if possible, a separate meeting be held for young people in each district, that the young people in each district be urged to write original songs, stories, yells and poems and present them at the district meeting, to be judged there and then passed on to the conference at large and that honorable mention be made of the best in the next meeting. That a pennant be awarded in each district to the auxiliary making the highest record, provided that record reach the Standard of Excellence.

5. That the Superintendent visit once during the year each of the two girls' colleges within the conference bounds.

6. That in each local society the young people invite the co-operation of the pastor and adult society in observing Good Friday as a special day of prayer for volunteers.

7. Have Executive Committee meetings quarterly before sending in reports.

8. That the young people strive to secure pledges of daily Bible Study and prayer for every member.

MRS. J. BUSBY, Chairman.
MISS TOMMIE FOSTER, Sec'y.

Committee on Finance.

We, your committee, recommend that careful study of Standing Rules be made early in each Conference year with reference to finance.

2. That Council rule for the division of the $3 dues be followed. This rule is found in the back of the treasurer's book.

3. That office expenses of the Conference officers and district secretaries do not exceed $30 each per year, and when extra expense is necessary it shall be referred to a committee of the president, corresponding secretary and treasurer.

4. That article 5 of the minutes of 1921 be passed to the standing rules.

5. That since Stewardship is the only Christian basis for an adequate financial policy, auxiliary corresponding secretaries are urged to feel and to discharge their responsibility for the finance of their auxiliaries, by stressing the Christian stewardship of money by every method and means and that they co-operate in the Educational campaign.

6. That in view of the Council's recommendations and example, our auxiliaries are urged to adopt the Budget System at the earliest possible date. That in each auxiliary the President, Treasurer and Corresponding Secretary shall constitute a budget committee to promote the adoption of their financial system during the current conference year.

7. That we make $25,000 our Council Budget for 1922.

8. That we pledge an additional $1200 for the support of the Field Secretary, prorating this amount among the districts as follows: Aberdeen, $175; Columbus, $175; Corinth, $175; Greenville, $200; Greenwood, $175; Grenada, $175; Sardis, $175.

MRS. W. W. WILBURN,
Chairman.

Mission Study and Publicity.

We, your committee on Study and Publicity, recommend the following report be adopted:

1. That Standing Rules No. 2 and No. 8 be stricken out.

2. That a circulating library be urged. Any auxiliary having finished a set of books may advertise through the Bulletin name and number of books in set which may be exchanged for books from another auxiliary, or sold, as members prefer.

3. That the conference superintendent of study and publicity be sent to the standard training school in Grenada this year, expense of said trip to be borne by Conference.

4. That the following Standard of Efficiency adopted last year be printed in the Bulletin:

1. Bible Study—20 points.
2. Home mission study—20 points.
3. Foreign mission study—20 points.
4. Attendance at study classes to be 75 per cent of membership—10 points.
5. Book read by every member of class—10 points.
6. A report made to local paper at least once a month—10 points.
7. Report to conference superintendent quarterly—10 points.

MRS. C. A. NEAL, Chairman.
MRS. C. B. BAKER, Secretary.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Lake Charles Holds First District Meeting.

The district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Lake Charles District, was held in Crowley on March 15 and 16. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. J. W. Wynn, of Rayne, District Secretary. Devotions were led by Mrs. Freeman, of Crowley, after which registration of delegates took place. A committee on resolutions was appointed, consisting of Mrs. W. W. Holmes, Lake Charles; Mrs. C. C. Carver, Rayne, and Mrs. P. O. Lowrey, Indian Bayou.

A discussion was directed on "The Weakest Point in our Auxiliary." Facts brought out showed that Bible study and the small per cent of women enrolled in the auxiliaries in comparison to the number of women in the church, were the "weak points" in the Lake Charles District. Some good suggestions for remedying this were given. Mrs. Holmes gave a splendid address on Social Service, stressing the inter-racial work and telling something of the Memphis meeting. She also told some of the things accomplished in the Lake Charles District.

Mrs. White, of McDonell Wesley House, of Houma, was introduced, and special prayer was made for the work at Houma, Social Service Week, and for Mrs. A. P. Holt.

At the night session the Rayne Juniors, one of the three 100 per cent Junior auxiliaries of the State, gave a beautiful flower pageant, after a splendid Bible lesson by Mrs. Carver, State Treasurer.

The Juniors of Crowley sang prettily a solo and quartet. Mrs. White then spoke on "Life at the McDonell Wesley House.

Wednesday morning's session was opened with devotions by Mrs. Leon I. McCain, of Lafayette. This was followed by a discussion on Reports, and it was decided that the Lake Charles District would no longer be delinquent on this important point.

Mrs. P. L. Lawrence, of Crowley, gave a splendid talk on "Mission Study." She drew two pictures—the "Typical Mission Study Class," and the "Ideal Study Class." Mrs. J. H. Nuh, of Lake Arthur, then discussed "The Benefit of Bible Study," and we feel sure that the auxiliaries represented, at least, will form Bible Study Classes.

The committee on resolutions reported, and then the Lake Charles District meeting closed, determined to do better work this year and to have a much larger representation at our next district meeting. The Crowley ladies entertained the visitors at a delightful luncheon in the banquet hall of the church. As a result of this meeting, the Crowley missionary circles have taken a scholarship in the new industrial school at Houma.

FRECKLES

Now Is The Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

SPENT HALF HER TIME IN BED

Farmer's Wife Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman

Carter's Creek, Tenn.—"Three years ago I was almost an invalid. I spent half of my time in bed, being afflicted with a trouble which women of a certain age are apt to have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am a well woman now and have been for two years. I can work as well as any one who is younger and as I am a farmer's wife I have plenty to do for I cultivate my own garden, raise many chickens and do my own housework. You may publish this letter as I am ready to do anything to help other women as I have been so well and happy since my troubles are past."—Mrs. E. T. GALLOWAY, Carter's Creek, Tenn.

Most women find plenty to do. If they are upset with some female ailment and troubled with such symptoms as Mrs. Galloway had, the smallest duty seems a mountain.

If you find it hard to keep up, if you are nervous and irritable, without ambition and out of sorts generally, give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. We believe it will help you greatly, for it has helped others.

"WHY SEEK YE THE LIVING AMONG THE DEAD?"

By G. A. Kennedy.

Man's disobedience brought into this world sin and death, while "God so loved the world that He gave Christ" in death and then resurrected Him that we might have eternal life.

No historical event is more sure than that Jesus rose from the dead. All hopes of redeeming the world walled outside that sealed sepulcher.

As it began to dawn—yes, the dawning of another day; still more, the dawning of the day of eternal life—came the two Marys and other good women. Why? Because their love, faith, and zeal for Christ were greater than that of the disciples. No wonder Christ appeared to them first.

An angel of the Lord descended from Heaven. Angels feel honored in being the servants of the Lord and of His people. Jesus is their King as He is ours. Who knows but that He died and was resurrected on another planet for the redemption of those angels as He died and was resurrected for us? Some scientists predict that when our greatest telescopes are finished, we will probably be able to see living humanity on the other planets and will also probably be able to see Christ performing miracles among them.

While these women were coming, there was a great earthquake. When Christ died, the earth shook for sorrow and when He arose the earth leaped forward for joy.

These women were worrying about their inability to move the stone from the tomb. Our greatest troubles are like theirs—they never happen. An angel rolled the stone away, and they found it so—like the waters of the Red Sea parted for Moses and the Israelites; like the waters of the Jordan rolled back for the same people to cross.

The angel sat upon the stone and said to the women, "Fear ye not." I believe the angel would have said the same to the guards had they been Christians. "Ye seek Jesus? He is not here for He is risen." All the poison and all the corruption of this world could not have made His body decay. If all the mountains of the world were heaped at the mouth of the tomb, they would have been removed. "Come see the place where the Lord lay."

Then the good women saw the empty tomb—the empty tomb of Joseph of Arimathea. This reminds me of my boyhood days in North Louisiana. We organized a little string band for concerting, and at night we would go to the homes of our friends and play some music. One piece we played, I loved so well I shall never forget, is this: "Empty Is the Cradle, for Baby's Gone." The chorus goes this way:

"Little empty cradle, baby's gone.
O'er the silvery waters she has flown
Gone to join the angels; peace for evermore.
Little empty cradle, baby's gone."

We played and sang this little song at a home one night where the parents had lost a sweet little baby. When we had finished, the door swung wide open and the mother came out weeping bitterly and asked us to play it again, which we did. Now, some day, Jesus has made it possible for us to meet that little woman in the new Jerusalem, where I hope and expect to see that baby, then a robed little angel, fly into her mother's arms—see them caress and embrace. Then the mother shall weep again not from sorrow, but for joy in Heaven. Then I expect to hear her proclaim, "Now I understand the resurrection of Christ." So, empty is the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, for Jesus is not there, but has risen as He said. O'er the ethereal waters He has flown. Gone to join the angels, but not for evermore. He is coming to claim His own on that bright resurrection morn. Empty is the tomb, for Jesus is not there. I am so glad the tomb is empty; are you? We are worshiping today the living Christ instead of commemorating the sweet memories of a dead hero. Jesus is the same to-day, yesterday and forever.

A few proofs of the resurrection are these: first, the New Testament; second, every Jew that I have conversed with concerning Christ frankly admits we are serving the right Christ; third, Christ answers prayers—millions will testify to this. The dead sleep, the living perform miracles. The resurrection of Christ converted the grave of mortal man to an inn of a Christian traveller on his way to the new Jerusalem.

All of us that have children well remember when the little ones were going picnicking the next day, the night before as they started to bed they would kiss us good night and say, "Wake us up early in the morning;" and the next morning when the sun was shining bright and the birds were singing sweetly, we would go into their room, bid them arise then, what joy! So shall it be on that resurrection morning. God will have Gabriel to sound his horn at the appointed hour; then we shall awake to sleep no more. Jesus said to the good women at the tomb, "Go tell my brethren that they depart into Galilee."

Every Easter night the Christians gather in a darkened church in Jerusalem, each carrying an unlighted lamp. They crowd in there, then a priest enters the shrine of the tomb of Christ and lights his lamp from a lamp that never goes out, and then comes out and lights the lamp nearest him, and in turn each of these lights the others, and so on until the church is ablaze with glory. So I believe this Easter message will reach all nations and all people, and practically every soul will be ablaze with its gory of the resurrection. Then the devil will give up the battle he has been fighting for centuries—first, with Adam, which he won; the climax, with Christ, but lost. Then he will return to the regions below, never to bother us any more. Then the Lord's prayer will be answered, "Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven."

"Why seek ye the living among the dead? He has risen as He said."

When the Lord's supper was finished they sang, I believe, the 118th Psalm and departed. Had Edison been there with his graphophone, we would have the pleasure of hearing them sing the Messiah's part. I believe I could pick out Christ's voice, don't you? But the opportunity was lost, and we may never see Him performing miracles on another planet; but by the resurrection we shall see and hear Him on that resurrection morn. For he has risen and is coming, as He said.

Have You Stomach Trouble?

Start on the Road to Wellville By Following This Advice

Wickliffe, La.—For several years I suffered with attacks of indigestion. I was completely broken-down in health. I doctored a great deal with different physicians without permanent benefit. Finally I wrote to Doctor Pierce, describing my case, and he advised me to use the Golden Medical Discovery Tablets, which I did, and found great relief. I can say that I feel better in every way since. I cannot say enough in praise of the Discovery and never miss an opportunity to recommend it to a suffering friend."—Rogers Jeanpierre.

If you need a building-up tonic for stomach or blood, obtain Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery from your druggist, in tablets or liquid, or write Dr. Pierce, President Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice.

Bad Blood Bad Health

phase of Children's Week most needed in the local church may be carried out in theme in a series of posters. In that way they serve as educational and are not merely announcement of meetings. Stress may be put on the needs to be carried out in the forward steps. If the plan of the local church is to make a forward step in the way of providing better moving pictures or calling attention to the productions, a series of posters may be provided with appropriate picture and apt wording, as: "1 Hour in Sunday School vs. 6 Hours at Picture Shows;" "Do you know what kind of seed the picture show sows in the life of your child? Have you thought of the harvest?" These, and many others, are forward steps to be stressed. In this year's plan the Play Life and its educational value should be emphasized, the Sunday school equipment and physical conditions, and certainly, most certainly, Sunday in the modern American home. Positive suggestions are best in each case, though contrast may better stimulate thought and action as resultant forces.

Many posters may be made on varying kinds and colors of cardboard or heavy paper; these placed in your church, in the store windows, in public buildings, anywhere they may be seen and heeded.

The Parents' Meeting.

Children's Week centers around the Parents' Meeting in the local church. The main preparations lead to this hour, the forward steps will be initiated there, and upon the impetus given these adopted plans at this time will depend the lasting good of the entire observance. The time suggested for this meeting is Sunday afternoon, April 30, but any hour of any day in the week that best suits local conditions may be used. If the last day of the week is used, then the home visitation by the Elementary teachers can be made an effective means of publicity, as the teachers can explain the purpose of the meeting and extend the parents a personal invitation to be present.

Not only parents, but day school and Sunday school teachers, church officials and all other adults interested in the welfare of children should attend. It is preferable to have this meeting in charge of a parent, and the Forward Step Committee should be composed of parents wherever possible.

Success depends upon three things being well done. First, the program should be carefully prepared, and the speakers selected with discrimination and given specific instructions. Just saying "We want you to make us a nice little talk at our parents' meeting" is vague and the person receiving such an invitation would not attach much importance to it. Instead, the speakers should be provided with leaflet bearing on their topic, and in addition should be asked to study conditions and present local needs. Upon the clearness and fervor of these talks much depends.

Second, the meeting should be advertised. Use every available means of publicity.

Third, the Forward Step Committee should act with wisdom and discretion, in order that their report shall not fall flat but be received with enthusiasm and followed up accordingly.

The following is a suggestive program:

Opening Hymn: "A Charge to Keep I Have."
Scripture Reading.
Prayer: By Pastor.
Appointment of Forward Step Committee.
Brief Address: "The Place of Play in the Life of the Child."
Hymn: "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old."
Brief Address: "Physical Conditions in our Church."
Solo: "Up To Me Sweet Childhood Looketh."
Brief Address: "Sunday in the Modern American Home."
Hymn: "Lead On, O King Eternal."
Forward Step: Report of Forward Step Committee. Discussion and adoption of some plan to help benefit childhood of community.
Benediction.

MINERALIZED WATER ROUTS CHICKEN LICE

Tablets Dropped into Drinking Founts Banish Vermin, Make Fowls Grow Faster and Increase Egg Yield.

Any poultry raiser can easily rid his flock of lice and mites, make chickens grow faster and increase their egg yield by simply adding minerals to the fowls' drinking water. This does away with all bother, such as dusting, greasing, dipping and spraying. The necessary minerals can now be obtained in convenient tablets, known as Paratabs. Soon after the fowls drink the mineralized water, all lice and mites leave them. The tablets also act as a tonic conditioner. The health of the fowls quickly improves, they grow faster and the egg yield frequently is doubled. Little chicks that drink freely of the water never will be bothered by mites or lice.

The method is especially recommended for raisers of purebred stock, as there is no risk of soiling the plumage. The tablets are warranted to impart no flavor or odor to the eggs or meat. This remarkable conditioner, egg tonic and lice remedy costs only a trifle and is sold under an absolute guarantee. The tablets are scientifically prepared, perfectly safe, and dissolve readily in water.

Any reader of this paper may try them without risk. The laboratories producing Paratabs are so confident of good results that to introduce them to every poultry raiser they offer two big $1 packages for only $1. Send no money, just your name and address—a card will do—to the Paratab Laboratories, Dept. 944, 1100 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City Mo., and the two $1 packages, enough for 100 gallons of water, will be mailed. Pay the postman $1 and postage on delivery, and if you are not delighted with results in 10 days—if your chickens are not healthier, laying more eggs and entirely free from lice and mites—your money will be promptly refunded. Don't hesitate to accept this trial offer as you are fully protected by this guarantee.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

ULTIMATE VICTORY.

Are we fighting for the right? That is the only question that really ought to concern us greatly as we take part in the struggles of the times in which our lot has been cast. The man who will allow the demands of mere expediency to determine his course is not the kind of man upon whom great movements rest and through whom great victories are won. When principle is involved, the brave man stands by his guns even in the face of apparent defeat, and the good man fights on undismayed, because of the great Leader whose side he is on. It is inconceivable that the right should not ultimately triumph. In spite of seeming failure at times, the march of the race is always onward and upward. The mariner on the bosom of the deep may be tossed by the tempest, and around him he may see the debris of many wrecks—but when he takes his bearings, he finds that he is appreciably nearer his port of call, that he is headed toward his haven in spite of the storm. When we are sure we are fighting for the right, we can afford to fight on, for victory will come at last.

OUR SENTIMENTS EXACTLY.

It is positively exhilarating to note the development of sentiment throughout the country in opposition to objectionable moving pictures and moving picture actors. The recent acquittal of "Fatty" Arbuckle, after a third trial on the charge of manslaughter, has brought forth expressions that indicate that public opinion can no longer be brazenly outraged by those in the industry who seem to have no higher conception of their function as public servants than is held by the animal that, when left to himself, delights to root in filth and wallow in mire. The leading editorial in the Times-Picayune, of this city, on Friday of last week, so exactly expresses our own sentiments that we take the liberty of reproducing it in full. That vigorous and unequivocal expression is as follows: "So the Arbuckle case has ended in 'a splendid victory!' The gross comedian has escaped legal punishment for acts that, whatever their relation to existing statutes, ever have been and ever must be condemned utterly by the clear-minded. The judge in his charge talked of unavoidable homicide as distinguished from manslaughter, and we are to assume that the jury when returning its verdict of acquittal presumed that 'Fatty' Arbuckle's deed was 'unavoidable.' It doubtless was 'unavoidable' that the actor should have convoked his sweet outfit of malo and female cronies in his hotel rooms, there to violate primarily the laws of the United States by an alcoholic orgy. It doubtless then was further unavoidable that in a condition of satyriasis he should have accidentally destroyed his victim. Unavoidable homicide! So is the deed of the maniac, but the maniac is thereafter fended away from society lest other 'unavoidable' conditions develop. However, that is neither here nor there. The lecher has been acquitted! Public opinion is one of the most powerful influences in the world, but it is peculiarly short of breath. The first Arbuckle trial was followed with eagerness as the public, almost as a unit, hoped the law would find some means of punishing acts so obviously wrong. Two mistrials wore away that indefinite thing, public interest, and the forces for acquittal, ceaselessly at work, had little difficulty in beclouding the issue and rendering a moral wrong a legal right. All that, too, is over and done with, but almost before the 'splendid victory' had been announced 'by acclamation,' movie magnates who had profited greatly by Arbuckle's popularity were being called together to decide whether or not the comedian might again be flaunted before the public. We have no means of knowing what those men will decide, but if they should see fit to offer this man's grimaces to the American public, they will be justifying the worst criticisms that have been made upon the film stage. We doubt whether Arbuckle in the flesh would dare appear before a respectable audience on the stage, and we trust that the American public will show itself of a moral fibre to refuse utterly to accept the shadowgraphs of this person whose every laugh would be an insult to our sense of human propriety." We give a hearty Amen to this vigorous utterance of our confrere across the street.

A POOR RECOMMENDATION.

The Business Men's Racing Association of this city, which has repeatedly declared it to be its purpose to furnish "clean racing," has very little to recommend it in the way of achievement. The daily newspapers during the recent racing season made frequent references to scandals and rumors of scandals in connection with the races and the management of the Association, and the public was constantly regaled with news items that had very little in them even to suggest that racing was being conducted on the high moral plane that its promoters claimed for it. For two years in succession, as we understand it, the Business Men's Racing Association has declined to pay the installments due on a piece of property bought by it for the city—a deplorable transaction in itself—and the city itself has had to provide something like $80,000 to meet these obligations. It is evident from current reports that there is dissension within the ranks of the Association itself, and that even violence is being used by some of the officials to carry out their purposes. Under the direction of such interests, "clean racing" can be little more than a joke. The suggestion that a State Racing Commission be formed to clean up the situation has in it absolutely no promise of a better condition of affairs. The backbone of racing is gambling, and gambling is wrong, morally and economically. It ought to be unthinkable that any legal provision should be made in modern government for gambling of any kind, especially of a kind that has shown such pernicious results as race track gambling, and we believe the right-thinking citizens of Louisiana have just about come to the end of their patience in dealing with a "sport" that has not a single good thing to commend it. The next State legislature should be called upon to destroy gambling at the races as it destoyed gambling through the lottery. If it has not been unmistakably demonstrated that there is no such thing as "clean racing," we do not know what kind of proof it takes to appeal to fair-minded men, and when a thing has been proved to be evil and that continually, it ought to be got rid of without further ado. "Clean racing"—bah!

A WORSHIPFUL SERVICE.

Certainly one service a week in the house of God should be a worshipful service. There are many interests of the Kingdom that have to be presented, advocated, and provided for, and these things necessarily have to be brought to the attention of the people in the public congregation. But the hearts of most men are hungering for the Bread of Life, and they go to church on Sunday to hear a message that will bring them into contact with the spiritual forces of life. One of the most pitiful pictures in the world is that of "the hungry sheep that look up and are not fed," and one of the greatest tragedies is for men to ask for bread and be given a stone.

LITTLE PROFIT.

We read the other day that a Washington engraver, after devoting all his spare time to it for months, has succeeded in producing a perfect engraving of the Capitol Building upon the head of an ordinary pin. We have no criticism to offer of this man's achievement, for he used his spare time in what was probably to him a genuine recreation. But we have not much to say in favor of a man who spends the working hours of his lifetime upon tasks that are as trivial and profitless in the end as is that of the engraver. A beautiful jewel should be enclosed in a beautiful casket—but it would be foolish to spend years in making the casket and then fail to secure the jewel. First things should always come first.

BRING CHRIST THE BEST.

There is a lad—five loaves hath he,
And fishes twain; but what are they,
Where hungry thousands be?
Nay, Christ will find a way.

In order on the fresh green hill
The mighty Shepherd ranks his sheep
By tens and fifties, still
As clouds when breezes sleep.

O, who can tell the trembling joy,
Who paint the grave, endearing look,
When from that favored boy
The wondrous pledge he took?

Keep thou, dear lad, thine early word;
Bring him thy best. Who knows but he
For his eternal board
May take some gift of thee? —Selected.

TRAVEL LETTER FROM DR. AND MRS. I. W. COOPER.

To fully appreciate the glories of Roman art galleries, the departed grandeur of Grecian ruins and the past and present message of life in Palestine and Egypt, one must have some knowledge of art, history, literature and religion; but no such background is required for understanding of and delight in most of the worthwhile sights of Switzerland. Here the only equipment needed is a heart on fire with the love of holding communion with the "visible forms of nature," and an eye and ear responsive to the "varied language" which she speaks, here—more than anywhere else.

In a previous letter, we have told something of the pleasure we experienced as we passed through a portion of Switzerland, en route to Italy, but it was not until we had made a stay of several days —all too short!—in the heart of this country, that our enthusiasm reached its climax.

After the heat of an August day and the dust and smoke incident to the passage of many tunnels, we were so tired when we reached Montreaux, at eleven thirty at night, that we were not even "thrilled" over the thought of being in Switzerland. We were, however, thankful to find ourselves, very soon, in a beautiful and cleanly little hotel, one in which not only good taste but artistic taste showed itself in furnishings and hangings. Arrived at our room, we opened the window to look out. A cold wind struck us, and in the dim light of the stars we thought we discovered a very wet pavement just below us. We went to sleep thinking that a heavy rain had fallen and cooled the heated atmosphere we had breathed all day. Imagine our delight next morning when the early sunshine revealed not a wet pavement, but the glimmering waters of Lake Geneva, stretched out in glorious panorama below our window, and just beyond a lovely little "formal garden," which belonged to our hotel. But the greatest feast for the eye was across the lake, where rose a dozen or more majestic mountains, some darkly purple in the distance, some wreathed in smoke-like mist, some glittering white with snows and glaciers—all irridescent in the morning sun! Here and there on the lake little pleasure craft floated or steamed along, trailing gay banners and flags of many nations. Among them, we noted the passage of a tiny motor-boat, floating only one beautiful flag—Old Glory! The joyousness of the whole scene made the heart bound! How we wished for the pen of a poet or the brush of an artist to give this wonderful beauty a transcription which would enable us to share it with our friends. As for ourselves, its loveliness is indelibly stamped upon our minds and hearts, and when memory calls up the picture, it is with thanksgiving and holy joy that we repeat the words:

"Think you the artist who has spread
Such wealth of beauty where we tread
Hath naught of glory overhead?"

The enchantment of our casement was so great that we were late in getting ready for breakfast. Arrived in the dining-room, we were delighted to find that our table was next a window which opened—all the way to the floor—on the terraced garden we had seen from upstairs. Added to this, we found the room full of cut flowers and growing ferns, the linen spotless, the food palatable and abundant and the waiters pretty Swiss girls in white caps and aprons. Don't you wish you had been there?

The Swiss are, perhaps, the greatest linguists in Europe. Many of them speak as many as five languages, very fluently. So we were not surprised that our hotelkeeper could give us excellent instructions as to how to find our way around in the city; and, as our party was not scheduled to begin sight-seeing before nine o'clock, we had an hour and a half for an excursion all our own. This little exploration made us more in love with Switzerland than ever. We found the shops attractive and quite up-to-date in service and methods of display. There were several department stores and almost innumerable beautiful jewelry stores. We visited a bank and found it perfect in all its appointments. The streets, even where narrow and unpaved, were most cleanly and attractive. Scarcely a shop or a residence was to be seen without its tiny garden, window-box or some other form of floral decoration. Several of the tea-rooms, dotted here and there, looked like tiny club-houses fitted up with beautiful gardens, wide verandas, pretty green chairs and tables. At every turn we felt like exclaiming over the thrift, the industry and most of all the sense of beauty displayed by these people. But how could it be otherwise? Beauty must enter their souls when they live in the presence of Lake Geneva and its surrounding mountains!

Promptly at nine o'clock, our party took a trolley car which carried us for three miles or more along the shores of Lake Leman, until we came to the Castle of Chillon, long an historic bulwark of the Swiss borderland and for many years made famous by Byron's song and story of the martyr prisoner, Bonnivard. This was our first experience in entering a European stronghold of Mediaeval days, and, even aside from its romantic connection with the life of the Prisoner of Chillon, we found the castle itself wonderfully interesting. By means of a rustic bridge, rather than a drawbridge, we crossed the deep moat which fortified the castle on the landward side. Entering beneath the portcullis, we found ourselves in a small open courtyard, surrounded on all sides by frowning walls of heavy masonry. A bright-faced young Swiss matron was here appointed as our guide. Our first visit, under her direction, was to the prison dungeon. Here we realized the semi-darkness, the dampness, the hopelessness of this living-tomb. One of the half dozen huge stone columns had imbedded in it the iron ring to which Bonnivard was chained. We stood and listened to the lapping of the waves of Lake Leman on the rocky side of this gloomy passage. In imagination, we lived over with him the physical suffering and greater mental agony which he endured while watching the death of loved brothers to whom his chains forbade him to minister. No wonder that the horrors and gloom of this charnel-house so broke his fine spirit and comparatively young body that when, after only six years of imprisonment, he was liberated by the Bernese and Genevese, not even the gratitude of his countrymen or his own patriotism was sufficient to restore to him the love of life and liberty; but he came forth, as Byron pictured him—a man broken in mind and spirit, a living corpse who felt that his place was not in God's lovely out-of-doors, but with the rats and spiders of this terrible dungeon. We no longer wondered at the realistic way in which Byron has pictured Bonnivard's suffering when we were told that Byron himself spent a whole night in this dungeon, in order that he might the more vividly portray its horrors. We saw where Byron had carved his name in the rock below the ring which held the chains of Bonnivard.

Near by this terrible dungeon was a stone cell which was too small to allow a grown person either to stand or to lie at ease within it. Here many political prisoners were confined the night before they were cast into Lake Geneva, bound hand and foot and weighted down with stones. In this cell they passed the last night, listening to the waves which on the morrow would engulf them. Surely the cruelties of modern warfare can not exceed some of the tortures practiced on men and women who were here imprisoned for no greater faults than "political differences!"

Other underground apartments were unexplained as to former use. At present, they are used as a magazine for military stores, for Chillon is dangerously near the Austrian border, and the castle, for all its peaceful appearance from a distance, has, since the year of its construction—1238—been a fortress and state prison.

On the ground floor we found a council hall, which was evidently a judgment hall for prisoners. Into it opened a smaller room which was the "torture chamber." Most of the instruments of torture have long since been removed, but we were shown and told enough to make us visualize all its horrors.

The banquet hall and living-room, with their interesting remains of "period furniture" and wall frescoes were much more pleasant places in which to linger. Here were wonderful old carved chests of metal and of cedar, containing suits of armour and old weapons. And from the deep window easements of these rooms, we had glorious views of the lake and the surrounding mountains. Our guide dropped hints of "romantic love tragedies," as she called them, as she named one or two beautiful young brides who were brought here by the lords of the castle. In spite of the honor of their positions and the beauty of their natural surroundings, they sickened and died, because of the wild and dangerous lives of their lords and their indirect contact, in this castle, with "man's inhumanity to man."

Upstairs we found a chapel and quite a number of the private and state apartments. Here we had our first sight of secret doors—behind panels or pictures—and of secret passages leading from one apartment to another. All of this made us feel as if we were really back in the middle ages and this feeling was strengthened as we were shown around the fortifications of the castle walls and told of how one lady of the castle lost her mind while seated where she could overlook the army which was besieging the castle.

As we came out of the Castle of Chillon, we felt that not even the glorious sunshine of that beautiful day could chase away the gloom and tragedy which envelop the history and saturate the walls of this ancient fortress.

A more cheerful place was the little souvenir shop which we found near the end of our car line. Here some of our party invested in beautiful pictures of Chillon, Lake Geneva and the mountains. Others bought pretty pottery vases, made in the neighborhood, and beautiful little white pins made of ivory or of the ivory vegetable compound of the edelweiss, the Alpine flower. Some thought of the future and bought Alpine sticks.

Alpine sticks! Did we use them to climb the mountains? Not we! The brevity of our stay in Switzerland prohibited any such arduous undertaking. Moreover, the days of mountain climbing are at an end for most tourists, for modern engineering has conquered tho steeps of what were formerly impassable heights and now the trolley car makes possible a safe, sane and speedy ascent of the cliffs, and gives the traveler the glorious views which were, some years ago, the reward only of the brave and industrious mountain-climber. But there is something bracing, stimulating and enticing in the very atmosphere. The mountains seem to dare one to attempt their ascent; so we believe that one who lingered long in their presence would feel forced to climb upward. All of our climbing, however, was left to steam and electricity.

Time and vocabulary would fail us to tell of two wonderful experiences that we had—one, the sight of Lake Geneva illuminated by a full moon; tho other, a boat-ride on Lake Geneva, from Montreaux to Lousanne. Indeed, we stayed long enough in fair Switzerland to realize that it is an earthly paradise of beauty. Its enchanting loveliness of lake and flowers, its grandeur of mountain scenery, the cleanliness and cordiality of its people—all these make it the country of all countries to which we should like to return, some day—to dream, to rest and to be uplifted in spirit!

CORINTH DISTRICT FAR AHEAD.

When I went down with "flu" on March 20, and was twice found unconscious on the floor in one night in a hotel, I had sickness at heart over World Sunday in North Mississippi. I wanted to make it a success. I could only leave it to my brethren. I thank them all for their sympathy for me, and good work on collections. Had each presiding elder succeeded as well as J. B. Randolph, of the Corinth District; and each treasurer as well as Sam Fryar, of Ripley Station! The elder reports over six thousand dollars for his district and is not done, while Ripley went over seventeen hundred dollars. Hurrah for that long-headed, systematic worker, Rev. S. A. Brown, the pastor. No doubt I shall have good cause to praise many others when all have reported. And just here let me ask every presiding elder, pastor, and Centenary treasurer not only to report at once full amount raised to date, but that you send me exchange or cashier's check for all money on hand. Make these payable to John E. Edgerton, and send them by mail to Ben P. Jaco.

You will confer a personal favor on me, accommodate the Nashville office by enabling the workers there to complete the church-wide report before the General Conference meets. Therefore, please put into my hands at once all these matters. And, besides, the money can be sent on to the mission fields, where it is needed. I have been told that pastors on mission charges in our Conference have written to the president of our Board pleading for immediate help to enable them to provide the necessities of life. Unpaid Centenary Pledges in our Conference are due these suffering men now over twenty-five thousand dollars! Think of that!

This one need is sufficient to inspire all to pay up, to stir all pastors who have comfortable salaries paid up to date, to organize their forces and raise the money. And when the money has been raised and is in bank, how can we afford to not report and send it in at once? I am glad I am living and have the privilege of helping on the great cause of Missions, and am grateful for your co-operation.

Faithfully,

BEN P. JACO,
Secretary and Treasurer.

THROUGH EUROPE IN MIDWINTER.

By Mrs. J. L. Neill.

We had expected to feel very far from home and lonely when we landed at Antwerp, but found taxi drivers, hotel porters and clerks speaking English, so that feeling did not come. Although the hotel was small, our rooms were the most handsomely furnished we have ever occupied in a hotel—carpets that your feet sink into, and even the window draperies had much of the famous Belgian laces on them. We had been in our rooms only a few minutes when we heard the famous chimes of tho cathedral, and, going to the windows, we saw the tower only half a block away, and decided that we would climb it the next day. The chimes of those bells stirred within us the spirit of devotion. The next morning Nellie and I climbed the tower. The carillon consists of eighty-two bells, the largest weighing seven and three-quarters tons. The upper gallery is reached by six hundred and sixty-two steps, and the tower is only about four feet in diameter, so you can imagine how "wound up" we were by the time we reached the top; but the view from there of the city and harbor were worth the effort. While we were enjoying this pleasure, Mr. Neill was giving his time to passports, baggage, tickets, etc. Having to carry a lot of baggage on the trains of Europe will cause some member of the party to devote most, if not all, of his time to it. Of course, we had lots of baggage, so most of Mr. Neill's time was given to seeing after, having it transferred from one depot to the other, weighed and paying for it. Then you must watch to see that all of it is put on the train, and not only that, but we found it safe to get off at the stations to see that some of it was not put off before we reached our destination.

"First, second, or third-class tickets?" We took second class tickets and were quite comfortable. A ride of forty-five minutes brought us to Brussels, famed in song and story as Belgium's capital. We spent several days in Brussels at our headquarters building, which is in charge of Dr. Sloan. The first afternoon we were there we had a delightful "four o'clock tea." All of our workers in Brussels, three of our missionaries who were in Brussels taking the medical course required by the Belgium Government of missionaries to the Congo (Miss Hall from Walnut Grove, Miss., was one of them), and several workers in other denominations, two from Australia, were present at this tea; Miss Daisy Davies was also there. What an enjoyable hour we had! Our headquarters building in Brussels has made for itself quite a place in the hearts of missionaries of all denominations, not only to the workers in Europe, but those who pass to and from the Congo. At this building they find not only a courteous and efficient force, but this force is glad to render assistance to them in securing their tickets, looking after baggage, having passports vised, etc., and, best of all, they find a cordial welcome to an English service at eleven o'clock Sunday morning and a French service Sunday evening.

We were indeed glad to make a visit to the orphanage and girls' school owned and operated by our church and to see some of the splendid things they are doing. What a blessing these two institutions are to Belgium! Among other interesting things, at the girls' school we saw pear trees trained on a brick wall as if they were some kind of clinging vine, and were told that they bear delicious fruit. This is done to conserve space.

We have found many customs in Europe different from what they are in the States. One that is very interesting, is the requirements of the Belgium Government of couples who wish to marry. (It might be well if some other countries would imitate some parts of these requirements.) One requirement is a civil wedding. While Mr. Neill was looking after business matters, Nellie and I went to see one of these weddings. It lasted such a few minutes that we stayed to see several of them. The civil wedding is performed in Hotel de Ville (city hall) by the mayor. The handsome antique decorations of the room, the "civil attendants," who are dressed in velvet breeches with shining knee buckles, and bralded velvet jackets, white gloves, etc., give these weddings solemnity, but the service, which is in French, appeared to be a matter of form. We were told that if the parties wanted to change their minds, that they had plenty of time while they were getting all papers that were necessary before this service could be performed. The persons married and two witnesses are required to write their names in the marriage register. After the civil wedding, the parties may have a religious service, if they so desire. Should there be more couples to be married than time will allow before noon, some must wait until another day, as it is not lawful for a civil wedding to be performed after noon. Two of our missionaries had the experience of being married in Belgium. At the close of the civil wedding, the mayor rose and paid a beautiful tribute to America and expressed his appreciation of America's interest in Belgium, especially as was shown during the World War.

But one other thing about Hotel de Ville: in one of the small courtrooms the entire ceiling is covered with a beautiful painting. The figure directly over the judge's seat is a woman with a trumpet in her hand and another one in her mouth. It matters not from what position in the room this figure is viewed, the trumpet in her mouth seems to point directly toward you. Several people may view it at the same time from different angles, but it presents this appearance to each. No other figure in the picture causes the optical illusion that this one does.

We saw the monument that has been erected to the memory of Edith Cavil and the Countess who worked with her. It is erected on the spot where they were shot and bears the strange but striking inscription. "Tell your children that they killed us."

From Brussels to Paris, a ride of about six hours, we came through the edge of the battlefields of northern France. What destruction! The land is so torn that in its present condition it cannot be tilled; fruit trees cut about a foot and a half from the ground and left, dead; houses, factories, whole towns blown to pieces; railroad tracks and shops dismantled; and the heartbreaking sight of "crosses, row on row, that mark the place of those who sleep In Flanders Fields." Oh, may they not have died for naught!

There were only three trains a week from Paris to Prague, so we had a day and a half in Paris. A walk around the River Seine to Eiffel Tower proved interesting. What would Paris do without this river? One of the best modes of travel is on the neat little passenger boats that hurry up and down the river; and tons and tons of freight are carried on them. But how did the freight boats with those tall smokestacks go under the bridges? Easy enough! A rope is fastened to the top of the stack and hangs down to the deck; as they near a bridge, a man catches the rope and gently pulls the stack, which is evidently on hinges, to an angle that will allow the boat to pass under; then on the other side he gently releases the rope and the stack goes back to place. And those locked boxes on the top of the low concrete walls that are on each side of the river, what could be in them? They are books! A person rents as many boxes as he (many of them were old women) wants and "opens a bookstore." The tops are fastened on the back edge and propped up on the front edge, so, unless the rain comes from a certain direction, it is not necessary to "close the store." There were miles (shall I say?) of these book-stores and they were well patronized. We visited the interesting L'Eglise Notre-Dame, located on an island in the River Seine, and saw some of the robes worn by the nobles and some of the wonderful Cathedral jewels used during the medieval period. Womanlike, I wanted to spend a while in one of the large stores of Paris, so while Mr. Neill was seeing after our tickets, baggage, etc., Nellie and I spent the time in Au Bon Marche. A womans' wants certainly could not stretch to something that store did not have! And the aisles were as crowded as if it were nine thirty Christmas Eve night.

We left Paris at five o'clock in the afternoon and spent that night and the next day on a European Pullman (Wagon-Lits). They are quite different from the Pullmans in the States (the berths run cross-ways the car), but in some respects are more convenient, in others, not so much so. The conductor had occasion to use French, German,

English and Italian: he may have spoken other languages (he did not speak Czech), but this did not give him the "bighead." He did the work of a conductor and also a porter, but not for a minute did he forget to be courteous and helpful to the passengers. We were to cross the French-German frontier at two o'clock in the morning; before we retired he insisted that it would not be necessary for us to be up at that hour, that he would look after our baggage, etc., and he did.

That part of Germany that we came through was very pretty; the fields were beautifully terraced and the buildings in the towns were substantial looking. This was quite a contrast to what we had seen in northern France. But how beautiful were the mountains of western Bohemia! The trees on them looked like Christmas trees. They belong to the pine family, the needless are short and grow close together. Nature had spread a thick blanket of snow over all and much of it had been held by the branches of the trees. With the blue sky above and the sun shining on all that whiteness, the picture was lovely. We were sorry that we had to pass part of it after dark. Yes, it was very cold outside, but the train was comfortable.

We reached Prague at eight o'clock on the night of January 25, 1922, the eighteenth day after leaving New York.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Hon. C. L. Bates.

Fourteenth Paper.

I.

"Trust no Future, howe'er pleasant!
Let the dead Past bury its dead!
Act—act in the living Present,
Heart within, and God o'erhead!"

There is no "dead Past"; the poetic implication is a "chartered lie"—one that is being overworked.

Shall the Southern Church scrap its Constitution of 1845 upon the silly and unethical assumption that it is an effete ecclesiastical polity of a dead civilization?

Shall the church eliminate from its Constitutional name the distinctive word "South" upon the assumption that the word is a useless and obnoxious relic of a "dead Past"?

It appears from the church papers that these special issues are to be submitted to the General Conference at its approaching session.

II.

Southern Methodism has no "dead Past." Its Constitution is not effete, but neglected, disregarded, violated, overriden.

All that is vital in the present civilzation of the South had its genesis in the civilization of the Old South, and Southern Methodism is a product of that civilization—the South's contribution to the world's pure Christian doctrine, and to free, honorable ecclesiastical government.

Southern Methodism was, in its origin, the friend of Constitutional Government, and the antagonist of "covenant-breakers."

The organization of the Southern Church was a protest against lawless ecclesiastical despotism; and its Constitution cannot die until righteousness and honor are dead. Its organizers were the Constitutional party of Ameriean Methodism; and it cannot be that the church is now ready to repudiate its paternity. To recede from the principles of the Convention of 1845 would be a pitiful confession of decadence.

III.

The word "South" in the name of the church denotes and indicates an origin, history, prestige, power, and a body of high and honorable principles, of which the church should never be ashamed, and which should challenge the admiration of Wesleyan Methodism the world over.

The word "South" is a source of strength to the church in the land of its nativity, and a source of influence and respectability abroad; its signifieance, from the very first, rose far above the idea of locality and sectionalism, because of the universality and greatness of the principles which it represented.

The South has ever been the conservator of the highest type of Wesleyan Methodism, and saved it in a great crisis.

IV.

The blandishments of materialistic power, false ideas of progress from a "dead Past," and the dreams of ecclesiastical conquest and imperialism, have neutralized the truths and sentiments of Southern Methodist history, in the minds of a school of ecclesiastics who owe all they are to Southern Methodism, and who now seem determined to discredit it by stripping the church of the insignia of its historic honor and glory; and, in support of their position, they offer only the argumentum ad invidiam.

The entire population of the South, without regard to church affiliations, is interested in the glorious heritage of Southern Methodism, and will resent its surrender. The truth is, the demand for the elimination of the word "South" from the name of the church had its origin in a sectional fight against the South from without, which fight is unremitting and relentless. The preservation and development of Methodism in the South is one of the great glories of Southern civilization—one of its crown jewels—and both at home and abroad the name of the church proclaims to the world the achievements of the South in high thinking and noble living.

Our honered ecclesiastics should leave it to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and men of his "ilk and kidney" to assail the prestige of the South and her achievements in Christian civilization.

As the word "South" in the name of the church is historic and characteristic, rather than local and sectional, it should not be unacceptable to the Western Conferences; it indicates to them a pure Methodistic origin, free from political affiliations and ambitions schemes of a worldly nature; and it would seem that those Conferences would readily forego any whimsical notions, insistence upon which would tend to weaken the ties that bind them to their brethren of the South whose ancestry stood by Methodism in the hour of its extreme peril.

V.

One of the bishops has declared in the religious press (1) that the word "South" should be eliminated from the name of the church, and (2) that the General Conference has the constitutional power to make the change; that is to say, he has prejudged for himself and for the whole church these very important questions—not withholding judicial action until the questions were presented in due course of administration.

The name of the church is a part of the Constitution of the church; the ordinance of the Louisville Convention establishing the church declares that:

"And that said Annual Conferences shall be, and they hereby are constituted, a separate ecclesiastical connection, under the provisional plan of separation aforesaid, and based upon the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, comprehending the doctrines, and entire moral, ecclesiastical, and economic rules and regulations of said Discipline, except only in so far as verbal alterations may be necessary to a distinct organization, and to be known by the style and title of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

And in the "Pastoral Address" issued by the Convention, it is declared that they were appointed by the people to organize "on the basis of the Discipline * * * The Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

It is inconceivable that any sane man of even ordinary intelligence will deny that the name of the church is fixed in its Constitution and is a part of that instrument; and that the word "South" cannot be eliminated from the name, except by the same sovereign power which established the church.

The General Conference is not a sovereign body and cannot eliminate the word, because:

(1) The relinquishment by the Northern Church of sovereignty over Southern Methodism was to the Annual Conferences, and that sovereignty was formally ceded to them.

(2) The General Conference is a mere creature of the Annual Conferences, and had no existence until the Southern Church had been created, ordained and established by the Annual Conferences through their representatives in Convention assembled.

(3) The Convention did not vest in the General Conference any power to alter or amend the Constitution, or to make a new one.

(4) The Convention declared that the General Conference is a delegated body, receiving its appointment and authority from the whole constituency of Annual Conferences; and that declaration is binding on the consciences of the bishops and all the members of the General Conferences, and, unless they get their consent to become a band of "Covenant-breakers," as did the majority in 1844, they will permit the word "South" to remain a part of "the style and title" of the organization until eliminated by the sovereign power of the church.

VI.

In the Nasfhville Christian Advocate of February 3, 1922, under the title, "What Should The Constitution Be?" one of the bishops, discussing the divergence of opinions between the Constitutional Commissions of 1914 and 1922, says:

"The voluminous report of the 1914 commission makes the Constitution distressingly inclusive and alarmingly dominating, while the 1922 commission makes it embarrassingly restricted. The 1914 report leans heavily upon the interpretations and arguments of Bishop Bascom, formulated in the heat of the controversy of 1844. The 1922 report goes back to an earlier period and restores the conceptions of the 1808 document, which was accepted previous to 1840. We need a new viewpoint for the interpretation of our fundamental law.

"What is the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South? It does exist, but what is it? These two reports offer ground enough for a very great and long-drawn-out controversy and an unsatisfactory conclusion. Why not change the question and ask, What should the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, be? We are one hundred and fourteen years from 1808 and seventy-six from 1846. Has not the time come when we should formulate a documentary Constitution which will express what we conceive to be and should be our basic law? We should put in what we want and leave out what we do not want. The document could be prepared by a competent commission appointed by the General Conference. Provision could be made for its submission to the Annual Conferences not later than 1925. The General Conference of 1926 upon assembling could pass upon the document; and if the requisite favorable constitutional vote had been given by the Annual Conferences and the General Conference, the new Constitution could at once go into effect.

"I see no other way out of our present uncertainty as to what the Constitution is and out of the controversy which must necessarily ensue if efforts are made to approve the recommendations of either of the commissions. Not only so, but a commission of three bishops, nine ministers, and nine laymen, or even a larger or smaller number, chosen so as to represent all phases of opinion as to what the Constitution should contain, would give us a modern Constitution expressive of what the fundamental law of a modern Methodism should. These two reports might well be referred to this new commission, but the commission should be left free to formulate the documentary Constitution in accordance with its own judgment and knowledge. The reconstruction and restatement of Constitutions have been a necessity in the political life of our States and nation. Why may not a progressive, vigorous church like our own profit by the same intelligent and commendable process?"

The article just quoted, evidently based on broad information, carefully and cautiously thought out, contains internal evidence that it is designed as the plan of action of those who deem themselves the "forward-looking," progressive element of the church, and who are determined to break away from the past. As a contribution to constitutional discussion, it is novel and radical in the extreme.

(1) Admitting that the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, "does exist," it is a specious plea—a plausible argument to unceremoniously abandon and scrap that Constitution, and to create a new one, out and out, under the management of and subject to the final approval of the General Conference.

(2) It assails the sound, just, conservative, free and liberal constitutional views of Bascom, and declares in favor of "a new viewpoint for the interpretation of our fundamental law."

(3) It would have the new Constitution formulated by a General Conference Commission, "in accordance with its own judgment and knowledge," and would deny to the Annual Conference all initiative and give them no voice but to vote on what had been prepared by the commission and submitted to them.

(4) Its appeal to civil analogies is not justified by the political history of the country; Constitutions are made by delegated conventions, and not by commissions. The only Constitution the Southern Church has ever had was made, formulated and promulgated by the delegates of the several Annual Conferences, "in General Convention Assembled;" that is a fundamental rule of action in Southern Methodism; the question is foreclosed by precedent.

(5) Whatever else may be uncertain about the Constitution of the church, there is one thing that is certain, namely: The General Conference has no constitutional power to order a new one for it, nor to appoint a commission to draft it; and an attempt by it to do so would be a palpable, naked, inexcusable usurpation.

(6) It is respectfully and humbly submitted that there should be little or no difficulty in ascertaining, identifying and defining the Constitution of the Southern Church; it could not have had one before it came into existence, and but one effort has been made to make one for it since it came into existence, and it is a reproach to the learning and statesmanship of the church to say that its Constitution cannot be eliminated from the proceedings of the Louisville Convention.

If there be in the world any one field of learning which has been exhausted, it is that field which embraces the canons and rules of legal and constitutional construction, and the construction of deeds, contracts, treaty stipulation, the proceedings of parliaments, legislatures and constitutional conventions; and the results are accessible to any man of ordinary intelligence who can read the English language. There is absolutely no intricacy in the subject. The whole trouble in the instant case arises from the fact that there are in the Southern Church two schools of ecclesiastical statesmen; one of them desires to maintain the conservative and liberal views of the Louisville Convention, and the other desires to centralize all ecclesiastical power in the General Conference. It is the same old fight between Hamiltonism, and the constitutional views of the Southern delegates in 1844. No one should be deceived in respect to the real issue.

The Southern Church is scandalized by the implication that, although it has a Constitution, its elders and bishops and college and university presidents have not sufficient learning to ascertain its principles, provisions and guaranties, and its distribution of powers. This writer has too much respect for the learning and ability of the church to accept the implication. It presents a fictitious issue.

Protestant scholarship has wisely adopted the method of historical induction; by that method, it has routed the destructive critics of the New Testament narrative; that was the method of Chief Justices Marshall, Taney, Chase and Waite, and by that method they translated the Federal Constitution into an "Open Book" to all men, and made it the hope of humanity; and if our troubled ecclesiastics will apply that method to the Constitution of the Southern Church, beginning with the Declaration of the Southern Delegates on June 3, 1844, and concluding with the "Pastoral Address" of May 19, 1845, issued at Louisville, they will see a great light.

(7) The Convention at Louisville adopted the little Book of Discipline, but placed upon it a Southern construction, and gave it a Southern spirit; and, passing through the crucible or melting-pot of that body, it emerged a new book, with a new life—a new Constitution for the Southern Church. "The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life."

(8) Bascom's "interpretations and arguments" were not, it is respectfully submitted, "formulated in the heat of the controversy of 1844;" they had been in process of growth and development for 60 years, and they were supported by the consensus of opinion throughout Southern Methodism, and that opinion had been deliberately formed and entertained through a long series of years, and this must be conceded by all who are conversant with the history of American Methodism.

The Southern Church was not created and established rashly, hastily, in the heat of passion, in hot blood; it was reluctantly entered into, and after everything possible had been done to avert a separation; it was the most conservative, deliberate act known in ecclesiastical history.

Bascom was not a man of factional spirit; he was a natural leader of men who had a great and just cause to be championed, and who had already determined on decisive action; and Southern Methodism cannot now be discredited by the suggestion that its brilliant and trusted leader formulated and delivered the avowed principles of a great people "in the heat of controversy." Bascom was a statesman, not less talented, cultured, self-poised and magnetic, than the illustrious secular statesman of the same commonwealth; and to attack now the soundness of the constitutional principles of 1845 upon the ground of the supposed want of equilibrium in the leader is a confession of confusion, failure and defeat.

(9) The church, with its scholarly, gifted and accomplished bishops and general leadership, cannot repudiate its Constitution upon the ground that to maintain it would provoke extended discussion; had the founders of this Republic yielded to that consideration, the Federal Constitution would have fallen dead-born from the hands of its framers, the government provided for in it would never have come into being, and the world would have been left without an organized champion of human freedom.

Full and free discussion is a condition of civil and religious liberty, and no cause but a bad one will object to it; the American Colonies discussed those great human interests for more than a century before they were enabled to secure them by constitutional guaranties, and a church that inhibits or discourages free discussion of its doctrines and polity is un-American and has no place in the life of a free people.

The membership and ministry of the Southern Church are entitled to a full and open discussion of the constitutional issue which has been joined by the reports of the commissions of 1914, and 1922; the suggestion for "a modern constitution expressive" of "a modern Methodism" is not justified by existing conditions, but what is needed is respect for and observance of the Constitution which "does exist." Men may not shirk a duty because its performance is difficult; such a suggestion presents a "new viewpoint" in ethics; the Constitution cannot be disregarded because it is difficult to reconcile conflicting opinions respecting it, otherwise there would be an end of all government. To state the proposition is reductio ad absurdum.

VII.

It has been painful to the writer to discuss adversely the declarations of two of the bishops regarding the Constitution; he entertains for those officers of the church the highest respect and esteem, and disclaims any intentional discourtesy to them, but feels that their statements should not go unchallenged.

Were it a question of theology or "higher criticism," he would not presume to enter the discussion; it is conceived, however, that a layman may with propriety and without offense challenge the opinion even of a bishop in regard to the Constitution.

Holly Springs, Miss.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS OF LOUISIANA AND MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES.

The Divinity School, held annually at Seashore Camp Ground, will this year cover dates, June 13-23. As you know, this school is doing much for our preachers and laymen, young and old, and especially our undergraduates. I earnestly request you to be present yourself, and exhort all of your preachers to be present. If you can't come, please don't let any conference fall between the dates June 12-24, if avoidable. We are expecting your bishop to be there. Let the Divinity School be the time and place for a mid-year meeting of the presiding elders with the bishop. We will thank you.

HOW TO CIRCULATE THE ADVOCATE.

Homer, La., April 7, 1922.

My Dear Brother Carley: In response to your suggestion that I write you how I get so many subscribers to the Advocate, I will say that my plan is very simple and easy. First of all, I believe that the Advocate is a blessing in the home—it is a friend to Christ, to the church, to right living; and I feel that when I have put the Advocate in a home I have a friend there helping me to preach.

I set aside one to two weeks each year in which I say, "I am working for the Advocate." I make a visit to all the Methodist homes. They say "Come in," etc. I answer, "I hardly have time—I am giving this week to the Advocate." I never argue the question. I say in a few words how I feel about our Advocate, and then I say, "Let me renew your subscription, or enter you as a subscriber," and almost without exception they subscribe. Sometimes, indeed quite often, they say, "But I haven't the money just now." I say, "That is all right—I will advance the price for you, and you can hand me the $2.00 at your convenience." So far, I can't recall that any one has failed to hand me the $2.

I repeat, my plan is simple and easy. I just resolve to get them, and I get them. And, really, I do not lose any time, because I make it count as a pastoral call which I would make anyway.

I think the above will give you a clear enough idea of my way of doing it. I reckon the secret of my success is that I start out determined not to stop until each home has had the matter presented. I think I shall be able to send you a few more.

Cordially,

R. W. TUCKER.

A JOURNEY TO THE ORIENT—HIROSHIMA.

By Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker.

XII.

At Matsuyama I bade adieu to the Callahans and other dear friends in Shikoku and again crossed the Inland Sea to Hondo, the largest of the bodies of land upon which the Island Empire sits in mastery of the western Pacific. This time passage was upon a very small steamer. As I was about to enter the main salon I was requested to take off my shoes; but as the weather was cold and the boat poorly heated, I demurred. The polite "boy" then showed me to an up-stairs place, a cross between salon and dining room, in which I was permitted to sit upon a bench and still keep my shoes on. As the height of the ceiling here and everywhere else, also of the awning frames on deck, was not great enough to admit of standing erect or walking with comfort, I was content to sit and reflect upon the relative advantage of the Japanese and the American average of stature. As in this case, sometimes the advantage lies with the short people. I soon had other things to think about. My only fellow-passenger of the English-speaking habit was a young American who had learned a few phrases of current irreligious thought. I forgot the caution of the wise man, "Answer not a fool according to his folly," and undertook to reason with him; but as I was not wise enough to "Answer a fool according to his folly," the conversation was in vain.

My destination was Hiroshima, a city of 175,000 population, with growing industries, prefectural schools, normal college and military barracks, but better known as the seat of the Hiroshima Girls' School, more famous than anything else in the city and a greater factor in the uplift of Japan than any of the other institutions of which it boasts. Night had fallen when the little steamer turned from the sea and began the ascent of the river on which the city is situate; the peace of the high stars was in my heart, and as I walked forth upon the dock I was indeed glad to find Miss Gaines awaiting me. This distinguished woman was a co-laborer with the Lambuths in the early days of the Japan Mission, and herself perpetuates the ideals and methods of these God-sent ploneers in the kingdom and patience of Jesus. The Girls' School is one of the monuments of Bishop Lambuth's faith. Not long before his death he remarked to Mr. J. O. J Taylor, "Men lack courage because they lack faith." In his own character, courage was as conspicuous an element as some others of which more note has been taken. With no other resources than those of which his trust in God assured him, again and again he assumed financial burdens that would have crushed timorous men, but they did not dampen his ardor nor diminish his joy—they simply drove him to prayer. He was sensitive to money obligations; there was about him nothing of the "let the other fellow worry" spirit. He was scrupulous to the last penny, and even on long journeys could at any time tell within a few dollars how his expense account stood. It was out of one of his ventures of faith that the Hiroshima Girls' School arose; it has been under the direction of Miss Gaines, a soul of faith and courage like that of Bishop Lambuth, that it achieved its great record and growth. Miss Gaines has been succeeded by the Rev. S. A. Stewart as Principal, but continues with rare ability to teach English.

I believe it may be safely said that Hiroshima Girls' School has done more to commend the ideals of Christian education to the Japanese and to cause the government to take a favorable attitude toward missionary enterprise than any other institution, not excepting the celebrated Doshasha, fruit of the great life of Neesima; and it is probable that there is no other Christian educator in Japan in whom the government places more confidence than Miss Gaines. She has recently been commissioned by the government to study the schools in Manchuria and Korea and in travel receives the recognition due a government official.

Recently Hiroshima Girls' School has extended its grade to include the first two years of college, and, as the classes are advanced, the entire college course will be added. Well aware of the gravity of this advance step, involving, as it does, a considerable increase in the budget and a large investment for additional buildings, Mr. Stewart felt that the step was required. Graduates of the high school courses had no college in this part of Japan in which to finish their education, and the reasons that originally led to the founding of Hiroshima Girls' School required its extension to the grade of a college. A new dormitory for the college has been made possible by the liberal gift of Mr. J. W. Lantz, of Cedar Springs, Va., and is nearly complete. But there yet remains to be provided an adequate building and a faculty for a conservatory of music. A beautiful piece of land adjoining that on which Lantz Hall stands could be had for the conservatory, and I coveted it, not as Ahab coveted Naboth's vineyard, but for the glory of God and the uplift of the womanhood of Japan. Opportunities for thorough musical education are few in Japan, and the government educational authorities are earnestly desirous that our school should specialize in this important department of woman's education in order that teachers of music may be available for the government schools. How I wish that some lover of music whom God has endowed with wealth might see here an opportunity for the development and extension of his art as a means of glorifying God. It is possible for Christianity in this way to become a powerful factor in the government schools.

In Hiroshima I visited the government schools. The buildings are not impressive. They are constructed of soft pine lumber on a general plan of a series of classrooms succeeding each other connected by a long hall. On the south side the walls are almost entirely of glass, both in order that the light may be sufficient and that the heat of the sun may take the chill off the otherwise unheated rooms. The buildings are two stories in height, with ample stairways and vestibules, but devoid of architectural beauty and without paint or varnish anywhere. I believe that I could pay for the construction of the entire series of government schools in Hiroshima, including everything from the kindergarten to the normal college, with a sum smaller than the cost of the Hume-Fogg school in Nashville. But within an entirely different impression is made. Physical, chemical and biological laboratories of ample size and thorough equipment are installed in these plain rooms. As required by law, there are extensive collections of natural history specimens, minerals, plants and agricultural products. The geology of these volcanic isles is illustrated by maps and papier mache models of the strata, and there are contour maps that acquaint the young Japanese with the physical features of their country. In the classrooms the teaching seemed to be thorough. But for the ideographic writing, in which the Japanese persist despite the fact that they have an excellent phonetic system, the blackboard demonstrations and exercises might have been in American schools. English is taught in all the higher schools, though for the most part I should judge with results less than satisfactory. But what a multitude of pupils! There is no illiteracy in Japan, but the higher courses, while open to all who are prepared, are really available for only a fourth of the youth of the empire. It is an education without religious teaching of any kind, unless the reverence for the Emperor, that reminds one of the ancient Roman cultus of Caesar, be classed as religion. In the cities Japan is rapidly becoming materialistic. The leaven of Christian education is the only factor that can arrest this rapid descent upon the rocks that lie at the bottom of the downward course of atheism.

Through the gift of Mr. H. W. Frazer, of High Point, N. C., there has been founded and carried on a night school for boys and young men in Hiroshima that reminds one of Palmore Institute in Kobe, to which I have referred in a previous letter. This is one of the saving forces in a sea of materialistic education. The faith of Jesus Christ is never forgotten in Frazer, where Miss Bennett, night after night, assisted by competent Christian teachers, puts it within the power of these young men both to better their earthly estate and become citizens of Heaven. It is not by its mass, but its qualities of salt, leaven and light that the spiritual principle prevails.

A beautiful work is being done under the direction of Miss Miller among an outcast people living in a section of the city apart, like Indian pariahs. These Etas suffer a strange discrimination of caste that one would not have expected to find in Japan; they are usually diseased and show the evidences of an inheritance of vice. Blindness prevails to a great extent. They are not permitted to attend the city schools and there seems little hope that they will escape the exterminating effects of generations of vice and neglect. But the church has gone to them with her Christ-like pity and will save them. A piece of ground has been purchased with Centenary money and from the same source will come buildings in which their necessities of body and spirit will be ministered unto. Jesus put forth his hand and touched the leper. The hand of health was not infected by disease, but the disease was healed by the touch. So again the miracle will be wrought among these outcasts.

GET OUT OF DOORS.

Get out of doors! 'Tis there you'll find
The better things of heart and mind,
Get out beneath some stretch of sky
And watch the white clouds drifting by,
And all the petty thoughts will fade
Before the wonders God has made.

Go wade a trout stream in the spring
And brother with the birds a-wing;
Know what it means to wander far,
Your guide the sun or evening star.
Who sleeps beneath the open sky
Soon grows too big to tell a lie.

Get out of doors! The fields are clean,
The woods will teach you nothing mean.
Who toils beneath the summer sun
Sleeps soundest when his work is done.
If splendid manhood you would know,
Get out where you've a chance to grow.

Read deeply kindly Nature's books,
Familiarize yourself with brooks
And with the majesty of trees,
The constant industry of bees,
And all that shapes the Master's plan—
They'll teach you how to be a man.

THERE ARE—OTHERS.

By Kate S. Gates.

"O-oh!" sighed Joe at the supper table; "chocolate cake? Why cannot we have it every night, mother?"

"You're not the only pebble on the beach," said Phil before his mother had a chance to speak. "There are others, and said others do not happen to care for chocolate cake."

Father gave a queer little chuckle. "Really," he said, "that bit of slang seems quite popular; that is the fifth time I have run up against it today. Two high school boys were waiting at the corner for the car this morning. One of them was eating a banana, and carelessly dropped the skin on the walk. The other promptly picked it up and tossed it over the bank. 'You're not the only pebble on the beach, Tom,' he said. 'Somebody coming along here might slip on that and get hurt. I was laid up for two months once from slipping on one, and I don't forget it. Just remember there are others.'

"Going down on the car, I overheard a bit of conversation between two young girls. 'Stop off at Brown & White's,' said one. 'It is my mother's birthday to-morrow, and I guess I'll get her one of those cute Japanese tea sets—teapot, sugar-bowl, and creamer, with cups and saucers to match. They will come in handy when I want to serve tea to the girls.' 'You make me tired, Sue,' said the other sharply. 'You never seem to remember that you are not all there is, but there are others. And seeing it is your mother's birthday and not yours, I should say you'd better get something especially for her convenience—not yours.'

"Coming home tonight, a boy went through the car with pond lilies, and a gentleman in front of me took a big bunch. A working-man sat beside him, and I saw him looking at the lilies rather wistfully. Evidently the gentleman who had bought them observed it also, for presently he divided the bunch. 'Wouldn't you like these?' he asked. 'I've really more than I care to carry, and they are too pretty to throw away.' The expression on the man's face changed instantly. It had been not only wistful but a trifle bitter. 'I would, sir, very much. I have a little girl who is a cripple, and she has never seen a pond lily, I guess. She will be so pleased with them. I'd have bought some for her myself, but there's other things we need more. I was just thinking as most folks forget as there's others who wants pretty things and can't get 'em—but you remembered.'

"When I came home I found Phil in the big chair reading the paper, and helping himself quite lavishly to some very inviting fudge on the table beside him. In a moment or two I heard Marjorie come bounding in, exclaiming reproachfully as she took up the plate and what was left of the fudge: 'There are others, Philip Avery.'

"It looks as if we all needed continually to remember the 'others,' doesn't it?"—Zion's Herald.

PATTY'S GARDEN.

The last day of the house party Selma slipped into Aunt Catherine's room. Her small, vivid face was like a wind-beaten flower. Aunt Catherine, from her invalid chair, looked upon it tenderly.

"I never had such a beautiful time in my life!" Selma cried, passionately. "Every day I keep thinking, 'Only five meals more—only four—only three.' O, why do happy times have to end—ever, Aunt Catherine?"

"So that new happy times may come," Aunt Catherine's wise voice responded.

"But they can't be the same!" Selma protested, passionately.

"No more than two skies are ever the same, or two springtimes. You wouldn't want to miss any springtime, would you?"

"But that isn't the same," Selma repeated. "How do I know that there will be any more times as happy as this one?"

"Did I ever tell you," Aunt Catherine asked, "about Patty Pemberton's garden?"

Selma shook her head. She was not interested in Patty Pemberton's garden. But Aunt Catherine, smiling a little, went on as if she did not notice:

"We had gardens exactly alike one February—a great armful of pussy willows that a cousin of Patty's brought in from the country. Patty divided them with me. We were both wild over them, and watched the 'pussies' through all their lovely stages. I fairly grieved over each one that fell, and when, at the end of six weeks, I threw away the bare branches, I remember how broken hearted I was and what a very doleful note I wrote Patty about it.

"Patty was quarantined with tonsilitis at the time, and my mother wouldn't let me go to see her, because I always had a delicate throat. It was three weeks before I could see her, and almost the first thing I said, after I had satisfied myself that she wasn't fading away, was: 'O Patty, if only your willows had stayed while you were sick!' Patty laughed and caught my hand.

"'Come and see my private springtime,' she said, mysteriously.

"We ran up to her room. At the doorway I stopped short. Patty had not thrown away her willows when the pussies fell; there in her jar they stood, a little forest of eager green leaves, and perched among them—nobody but Patty would have thought of it!—a tiny yellow bird she had picked up at a toy shop for five cents. 'You dear goosey,' Patty cried, "there are always new things coming, if you watch! You shall have half of these—the bird half.'

"That," Aunt Catherine finished, "was Patty's garden. I never forgot its lesson. After that, when one joy went, instead of mourning for it, I kept on the watch for the next."

"Did it always come?" Selma asked.

Aunt Catherine smiled back at the half-doleful, half-hopeful face.

"It always comes—if you have eyes to see," she answered.—Youth's Companion.

THE MESSENGER AT THE DOOR.

"When I opened the door and saw one of those messenger boys with a yellow envelope in his hand, my heart was all a-flutter," said an old lady to her caller. "Actually, I was afraid to open it, for I was just sure it was bad news. Well, you can guess how I felt when I finally mustered courage to read it and found it was only from Maxwell, saying he was coming home for a nice, long visit." Often when God's messengers come to our doors, they see our pulses quicken and our faces blanch with fear. We are always so sure that we know what they mean. Is it illness that the Father sends? Is it poverty that hovers like an apparition in our path? How sure we are of their messages even before we have read them! Yet how often our fears are turnd into faith and our dismal forebodings into rejoicing in the presence of the unexpected blessings these messages contain!—Forward.

Few people ever get ahead, ever become financially independent, unless they save patiently, persistently and with a system.—U. S. Bulletin.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

HOW BROTHER TUCKER DOES IT.

We desire to call special attention to the letter from Rev. R. W. Tucker, which appears on page 6 of this issue, in which he tells how he succeeds so admirably in circulating the Advocate among his people. Even a casual reading of his communication will show that the solution of the problem of the circulation of the church paper lies in the hands of the preachers. There is nothing remarkable about the plan he follows—but the results are remarkable as compared with the results of those who have no plan at all.

It would not seem to be a specially hard thing for the pastors of the three patronizing Conferences of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, with a constituency of 173,207 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to bring the circulation of the paper, within so short a period as even one month, to a figure that would represent a creditable number of people who are keeping in touch with the affairs of their Church. We believe all that is needed is the determination to do so desirable a thing, a definite plan of work, and the devotion of a reasonable amount of time to the work. And, as is suggested by Brother Tucker, the time so spent can be made to count on the regular work of the pastorate.

If anybody has a better plan than that of Brother Tucker, we hope he will tell us what it is; if nobody has a better plan, we hope all will try the one that has proved so successful in operation.

STATED DAYS.

According to the Discipline, the last Sunday in April, or as near thereto as practicable, shall be observed by every Sunday school as Sunday School Day, and the second Sunday in May shall be observed as Epworth League Anniversary Day. As we read the law, the observance of these days is not merely suggestive—it is a fixed part of the program of every church throughout the connection, and it should be followed everywhere. Directions concerning these days are laid down in paragraphs 321 and 384 of the Discipline of 1918, and we respectfully call the attention of all pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and Epworth League officers to these paragraphs. It is greatly to be regretted that the provisions concerning these stated days are frequently overlooked.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Extensive repairs are being made on the parsonage at Hazlehurst, Miss., where Rev. W. H. Saunders is pastor.

Mobile, Ala., was selected as the place for the next meeting of the Woman's Council, which met this year in San Antonio, Texas.

The Seventh National Convention of the Young Women's Christian Association will convene in Hot Springs, Ark., on April 20, and will continue until April 27.

The Sunday school attendance at Lake Charles, La., on Easter Sunday was 504, and the offering for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage amounted to more than $175.

Press reports state that the revival meeting conducted at Grenada, Miss., by Rev. Burke Culpepper attracted large congregations, and that much interest was manifested.

Rev. A. W. Recs, presiding elder of the Cordele District, has been elected president of Emory Academy, an institution under the management of the trustees of Emory University.

At the Easter Sunday morning service of Rayne Memorial Methodist Church, this city, Rev. W. L. Duren, pastor, fifteen members were received into the church on profession of faith.

Rev. Guy Ray is serving his first year on the McCool charge, North Mississippi Conference. He has a splendid people to labor with, and the outlook for the year is encouraging.

The Epworth League Assembly will be held at Lake Junaluska, N. C., June 29-July 9. The general theme for consideration will be "Leaders." Prominent speakers will be on the program.

The Noel Memorial congregation and Sunday school, Shreveport, La., raised nearly $400 for the Orphanage on Easter Sunday. There was a fine attendance at all the services on that day.

The Annual Meeting of the Board of Church Extension will be held in Louisville, Ky., April 26-27. According to Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, the secretary, the financial exhibit of the Board indicates a healthful condition.

As a result of the meeting at Laurel, Miss., in which the pastor, Rev. O. S. Lewis, was assisted by his brother, Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, a large class was admitted to the membership of the church on Easter Sunday morning.

The Brookhaven District Epworth League Conference was held at Hazlehurst, Miss., on Monday and Tuesday of last week. According to a note from the pastor, Rev. W. H. Saunders, the occasion was a delightful and profitable one.

Rev. O. C. Seevers, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Maysville, Ky., requests us to say that Professor Grenfell, one of our song leaders, will be in Louisiana soon, and that he would be glad to assist the brethren in their meetings.

Rev. W. W. Murray, our pastor at Foxworth, Miss., had the misfortune recently seriously to injure his hand by the accidental discharge of a shotgun. Only the most skillful treatment at the sanitarium at Columbia saved him from serious consequences.

Rev. John Burns Horton, of Elizabeth, West Virginia, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Friday of last week. He was passing through the city en route to Orange, Texas, where he was going to assist Rev. W. H. Vance in a series of evangelistic meetings.

We have received a card announcing the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Iles and Mr. Louis Leroy Harris at Lubefu, Congo Belge, Africa, on December 23, 1921. These splendid Christian workers are at home at Wembo Niama, Africa. We pray Heaven's richest blessings upon them.

Rev. W. H. Giles, pastor of our church at Slidell, La., with whom the New Orleans District Conference will meet, May 8-10, requests that the names of all delegates be sent to him as soon as possible. The District Woman's Missionary Society will hold it annual meeting at Slidell on May 10.

A fine Easter program was given at the Methodist church of Franklinton, La., Rev. L. W. Cain, pastor, on Easter Sunday morning. The offering for the Orphanage amounted to $100 in cash. Extensive repairs are being made on the parsonage at Franklinton, including the addition of a 46-foot porch.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, assisted Rev. W. H. Giles in a meeting at Slidell, La., for ten days preceding Easter. The meeting was well attended, and much good was accomplished. Seven young men were received into the church on profession of faith on Easter Sunday as a result of the meeting.

The work of the Shuqualak charge, North Mississippi Conference, Rev. Seamon Rhea, pastor, is moving along nicely. A considerable amount of repairing has been done on the parsonage, consisting of new flooring in every room, and some new furniture has been added. The Sunday school attendance has almost doubled this year.

At the Methodist Preachers' Meeting in New Orleans on Monday morning of this week, reports were made showing that approximately one hundred members had been received into the church on Easter Sunday, and that approximately $1000 had been raised for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference at the recent meeting of the Greenville District Conference: A. J. Simmons, G. F. Maynard, Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, F. W. Bullock, J. H. Sherard, Sterling Owen, S. V. Wall, H. J. Allen; alternates: Percy Bell, Mrs. H. J. Talbert, Mrs. E. T. Clark.

The Austin American, of Austin, Texas, devoted a good deal of space to reports of the meeting recently conducted at the Ward Memorial Methodist Church, that city, by Rev. A. Inman Townsley. Under the caption, "Thunderbolts," it gave many of the striking statements made by the forceful and versatile preacher.

We acknowledge the receipt of a copy of "Theodora," a dramatic poem in twenty-six cantos, written by Duncan F. Young, editor of the Gulf States Farmer. The poem is an adaptation of a Spanish romance. Mr. Young is known to the literary public, having published several other works of interest.

During the week, April 9-16, Rev. F. B. Hill, our pastor at Ponchatoula, La., held services daily, preaching on subjects appropriate to the days preceding Easter. On Easter morning the service was attended by the Masonic Lodge and other fraternal organizations of the city. The service was a unique one in the history of Ponchatoula.

At the morning service of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, last Sunday, an offering was taken looking to securing a fund for the erection of a modern Sunday school building as soon as conditions are favorable for undertaking the work. Pledges amounting to about $1600 were made. Rev. Ellis Smith is the pastor of this church.

The Sunday school attendance at Trinity Methodist Church, Ruston, La., on Easter Sunday was 518. There were twenty accessions to the church on that day, and the total offering amounted to $800. Rev. N. E. Joyner is the pastor.

The Sunday school attendance of the Methodist churches in Shreveport, La., on Easter Sunday was as follows: First Methodist, 1566; Noel Memorial, 506; Mangum Memorial, 305; Texas Avenue, 211; Cedar Grove, 141; Bossier City, 85.

We understand that there was an interchange of pulpits last Sunday by which Rev. J. Loyd Decell, pastor of Central Church, Meridian, Miss., preached to the Knights Templars at Brookhaven. Rev. W. H. Lewis, the pastor at Brookhaven preached at Hazlehurst, and Rev. W. H. Saunders, the pastor at Hazlehurst, preached at Central, Meridian.

The great Sunday school at Gulfport, Miss., had 1123 present on Easter Sunday. The enrollment is 814, and every member was present. Every officer and teacher was in his place. The congregation at the morning preaching service was one of the largest in the history of the church. Rev. W. L. Linfield is pastor, and Col. J. C. Hardy is superintendent of the Sunday school.

Mrs. A. E. Price has been a teacher in the Methodist Sunday school in Lake Charles, La., for twenty-eight years. A recent issue of the Lake Charles American gives a front-page picture of Mrs. Price and a group of nearly two hundred of the more than one thousand who have been members of her classes during the years she had taught.

Rev. and Mrs. S. N. Young, of Lake, Miss., announce the marriage of their daughter, Ruth, to Mr. James Lester McKay, of Philadelphia, Miss., on April 6. The ceremony was performed at the parsonage home of the bride's parents, Rev. J. A. Moore, presiding elder of the Newton District, officiating. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to this fine young couple.

We thank Rev. A. T. McIlwain, presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, for a copy of the program of the Columbus District Conference, which will convene at Macon, Miss., on April 28. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. W. V. Shearer on the evening of April 27. The program is a most attractive one, and we wish we could accept the cordial invitation of the presiding elder to attend.

The editor had the pleasure of spending Wednesday of last week with Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, our faithful and aggressive pastor at Bogalusa, La. Under the tutelage of Brother Gunn, he spent a delightful day on the golf links—as a result of which his anatomy has been afflicted with various aches and pains ever since. Golf is a great game, but it needs to be played regularly to keep the muscles from developing the most excruciating kinks.

We have received the following sad news from Rev. W. R. Lott, our pastor at Holly Springs, Miss.: "We buried here on April 10 Sister J. W. Honnoll, widow of the late Rev. J. W. Honnoll, of the North Mississippi Conference. Sister Honnoll had reached the ripe age of eighty years. She spent a long life in the Methodist itinerancy with her husband, who preceded her to the better land some ten years or more ago. For a number of years she had been living in Memphis with her daughter, Mrs. Neal." The Advocate joins with all those who are in sorrow because of the passing of this noble woman.

We learn from the Port Gibson Reveille that Professor D. S. Hogg, of Greenville, S. C., has recently been elected president of Port Gibson Female College, to succeed Dr. Rolfe Hunt, who announced at the beginning of the present session that he would not retain his position after this year. Professor Hogg formerly taught in Chamberlain-Hunt Academy at Port Gibson, and he already has many friends and acquaintances in that city. He is a graduate of Emory and Henry College, and is highly recommended by leading educational authorities. We wish for him a most successful administration of this historic school

We learn from a recent issue of the Daily Corinthian that the congregation of the First Methodist Church, Corinth, Miss., voted to have the regular midweek prayer meeting on Monday evening during the week the pastor, Rev. E. R. Smoot, was attending the State Sunday School Convention, in order that they might not miss one of the series of lectures being given by Brother Smoot, his attendance upon the Convention necessitating his absence on Wednesday evening. The attendance at the Monday evening service was 160. Mrs. Smoot and Mr. R. M. Weaver were also delegates to the Convention from Corinth.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

We wish to observe May 21 to 28 as "Go to College" week. The need for such observance is apparent to all. We ought to see that all of the boys and girls of this generation have clearly brought before them the need for such a preparation for their life's work.

We will ask every pastor to preach on some phase of Christian Education that will lead up to the thought of "Go to College Week." Our high school graduates ought to hear something about Centenary and Mansfield College. Let our pastors visit the high schools, and, where they have an opportunity, give them a message on true Americanism.

We will ask our Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues and Woman's Missionary Societies to observe "Go to College Week" with appropriate services. In many cases, lists of names of those who ought to go to college can be secured and sent in to the heads of the colleges.

Let every collector do his best to bring his district out in full. Three scholarships are available at Centenary College for the districts making the best showing on collections.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Secretary of Education.

A GREAT SUNDAY-SCHOOL ATTENDANCE IN JACKSON, MISS.

The following telegram from Rev. M. L. Burton, presiding elder of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, gives the record of a great day for the Sunday schools in Jackson: "Two thousand, one hundred in Methodist Sunday schools here to-day. All past records in each school broken. Three hundred and fifty men in Bible classes." We congratulate the Methodist forces of Jackson upon this great showing.

DE RIDDER—MERRYVILLE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONTEST.

The report for the DeRidder-Merryville Sunday school contest for last Sunday is as follows:

DeRidder had present 220, making a total gain of 217.

Merryville had present 339, making a total gain of 1204.

Although the original agreement was to run the contest thirteen Sundays, it was decided to close it on Easter Sunday. Merryville won the contest, and that school will be entertained by the DeRidder school at a picnic in the near future, when a banner will be presented to the winner by the loser.

The Merryville Methodists believe they have the best Sunday school in the State, considering the size if the town and the membership of the churches—202. If there is a better one, they would like to hear of it. Mr. R. H. Nelson is the superintendent.

TO ALL UNDERGRADUATES OF THE MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

Doubtless you are beginning to make plans for your 1922 course of study. Before you go further, I want to call to your attention the advantages of the Seashore Divinity School, held at Biloxi, Miss., June 13 to 23.

At the Divinity School, you get more out of your text books, eliminate the probability of failure in your course, form new and valuable friendships, get an outing by the sea, have the benefit of the excellent bathing facilities, get a rest from the grind of the daily routine of the true pastor's life, besides the rare opportunity of hearing some of the best lecturers on the American platform.

It should be to you a sufficient commendation of the Divinity School when I tell you that of all the undergraduates who were continued in the same class at last Conference not one took his course at the Divinity School. Make your arrangements to attend the Divinity School this year, and just before the time write me, and I can give you rates, etc.

D. F. ELLISOR,
Chipley, Fla. Publicity Agent.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE POSTPONED.

Dear Brother Carley: The Vicksburg District Conference, which was to meet on April 18, has been postponed on account of high water.

Your friend,
J. R. JONES, P. E.

GOD GENTLY CALLS US.

God gently calls us every day:
Why should we then our bliss delay?
He calls to heaven and endless light;
Why should we love the dreary night?

Praise, Lord, to Thee for Matthew's call
At which he rose and left his all;
Thou, Lord, e'en now art calling me;
I will leave all, and follow Thee.

The subject of this sketch, THOMAS G. JOHNSON, was born October 18, 1852, and died January 17, 1922. He was converted when quite young and joined the church at Adams. During his last sickness, he talked to the writer much about the good old times at Adams, how souls were saved in the old-fashioned way. Death was not a surprise, as he had been sick for some time. During the last day or two of his life, he sang many songs, and praised the Lord. It was almost like being in a meeting where souls were being saved. Thank God for a life like that! He is greatly missed at Adams, but our loss is heaven's gain. May we all so live as to meet him in heaven. His pastor,

W. W. NELSON.

Brother S. S. SCALES was born February 2, 1852, in Crawford, Miss., was reared in this place, and spent his life here. He was a graduate of the University of Mississippi, making the highest grade of any student that ever attended that institution. He was a man of great intellectual power. He was married to Miss Lou C. Burney, of Oxford, Miss., November 23, 1876. To this union were born four children—two of these, a son and a daughter, with his companion, stood by his bedside while he passed away. As a business man, he was successful; he made a host of friends, as was shown by the beautiful floral offerings that were banked upon his grave. He was a friend to all who would show themselves friendly, a man who was ready to help the poor and unfortunate. As a churchman, he had a high regard for the church of Christ. He joined the Methodist Church several years ago under the ministry of Rev. N. G. Augustus. As a husband, he held his wife in the highest esteem, and provided well for her comfort; as a father, he set before his children the example of a gentleman, giving that advice needful and worth while, and caring for their wants and needs. The Lord honored him with the allotted time—three-score and ten years. The summons came at 8:45, o'clock, March 31, 1922, making him seventy years and twenty nine days old.

After funeral services at the home, on Saturday afternoon, his body was laid to rest in the Crawford Cemetery, by Rev. D. W. Babb, his former pastor. He had been a great sufferer for many years. He was confined to his room for nearly three months before he died. He never forgot his mother's religion. I talked with him some days before he died about his going away, and he told me there was no horror in death to him, that he was ready to drink the cup at any time; and he said: "I believe my mother was the best Christian, or as good as ever lived, and I believe that I will go home to my mother and live with her."

He leaves a wife, who tenderly and lovingly cared for him to the end; two children, a son, Burney, and a daughter, Miss Lucy; four brothers, two sisters, a stepmother, and a host of friends to mourn his going away. To the bereaved, while that vacant chair can never be filled, and the voice is hushed forever, you have my sympathy and prayers. May Jesus be your comfort in this dark hour. May you not weep as those who have no hope, but may we have that hope that your loss is his great gain.

R. G. A. CARLISLE,
His pastor.

We, the Board of Stewards of the First Methodist Church of Pontotoc, Miss., wishing to record some estimate of the life of Brother J. M. NISBET, who for many years was an officer of this Board, therefore be it resolved:

1. In the passing of Brother Nisbet, the world has lost one of its best, for he was a man of stainless honor, of the highest ideals, and of the finest and most delicate courtesy.

2. The community has lost one of its best citizens, one who was thoroughly interested in every progressive movement, and who was in every way worthy of the trust and confidence which his fellows so freely bestowed upon him.

3. In his death the church has lost a splendid witness to the beauty, charm, and value of real Christian living. This Board has lost an officer whose service always gave peculiar satisfaction, and whose life will continue to be an inspiration.

4. He was a generous and devoted brother, husband, and father, and his loved ones may recall with righteous pride his stainless life, and emulate with confidence his example.

5 We have all lost a friend, whom we shall sorely miss. Yet we have not lost a friend, for we believe that he still lives, and, living, loves. It is our faith that if we shall but follow on, some day "We shall see those angel faces smile, that we have loved long since and lost awhile."

6. Finally, we wish to assure his sister, his wife, his sons, and his daughters of our sympathy, our prayers, and our abiding interest.

W. A. BOONE, President.
R. H. FURR, Secretary.

LILLA LOUISE WERLEIN, baby child of Dr. P. E. Werlein and wife, was born January 31, 1921. Brother Sharbrough, the pastor, christened her the Easter Sunday following her birth, her parents thus early dedicating her to God. Few homes have ever been so graciously blessed of God as was this home in her birth. She was endowed with beautiful features, a perfect form, a bright mind, and a most winning and attractive disposition. Her fatal sickness lasted nine days. At its very beginning her father, a physician, secured aid, but all that physicians, nurses, relatives, and friends could do was unavailing. She went away without a struggle, like the gentle falling of a petal from the flower. Presley, her five-year-old brother, fondly loved her and, with the parents, shares this great loss. Little children and grown people alike loved her, and many outside of the family circle had tears in their eyes at her going, and a most impelling feeling that they wanted to go where she is. Her short life was not in vain. Heaven has become more real to us; though gone, the memory of her sweet little spirit will abide with us forever. Her going was in the early morning of March 29, 1922. Brother Sharbrough, assisted by the writer, late that afternoon conducted the funeral services from the home, being attended by many of the most cholce people of Biloxi. Her body was placed away in the Biloxi cemetery and the little mound was literally covered with beautiful flowers from loving hands, and there the body awaits the first resurrection in Jesus our Lord. My heartfelt sympathies are with the grief-stricken parents

WALDO W. MOORE.

I wish to write a few lines to advise our friends of the sad passing away of little WILEY EDWARD CULPEPPER, aged 2 years, 5 months, and 5 days. He was sick only a few days, but so severe was the case, it failed to yield to medical skill, and the kind nursing that was constantly at his bedside. Little Wiley was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Culpepper, who reside at Vinton. Mr. Culpepper has charge of the Vinton Grain Co. here, and Sister Culpepper is a prominent member of the Methodist Church. The little fellow was unusually bright for a child of his age, and I believe his brief and joyous life has made impressions in that home that only time can erase. When the writer looked down on that sweet little body prepared for burial, I thought of that expression of Jesus when he said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." The grief as a result of this death was very great. A large congregation assembled at the residence to pay this last tribute of respect, and judging from the sad faces, I believe I could safely say that Vinton was sharing this trouble with this heart-broken family. Our pastor was present, Brother Louis Hoffpauir, with words of comfort and cheer as usual. After the services was over, the beautiful little white casket was conveyed to Lake Charles, covered with beautiful flowers, placed there by loving hands, to await for the resurrection morn. God grant that this dear family may so live in this life that they will meet dear little Wiley in that sunbright clime, "Where the storms never blow, and the long summer is given."

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

We expect to get out the Sunday School Messenger about the first of May, giving information as to our training school and Wesley Bible Class Federation to be held at Grenada. The catalog of the school ought to be ready the first week in May.

I had the pleasure of spending a few days with Brother Gregory, pastor of Central Church at Columbus. He had a class of teachers studying the "Pupil" and I went over to review them and give the examination. Five took the examination and two others expect to send in their papers later. The people of Central are religious. Under the leadership of their pastor they are building a church that will afford a place to do some great work. This building is a monument to prayer, work, and faith. Too much cannot be said in praise of this brave band of people.

You notice we are to have five Sundays in this month. Numbers of Baptist people are going to hold their fifth Sunday meetings all over the State and will accomplish a vast amount of good. We have only a few such meetings. Brother Neblett expects to help the preacher of the Ebenezer circuit hold a profitable meeting for the Sunday school workers. We have a big opportunity to accomplish much good by getting all our teachers and workers together four times a year.

Reports from Bible classes are coming in every day. Let us have all of them. So are orders coming in for Sunday School Day programs. We ought to have half our schools in action this year. The less the program is changed, the better it will be. At any rate, go ahead and do something for the children. It is not a good policy for Methodists to break their rules, but it is better to keep them. I hear the courts criticised unfavorably. In places they are farcical. The same people who run the courts of the land run the churches. When we run the church according to God's law we may expect more of Caesar. The church has the whole matter in her hands. The people do about as well as they are taught to do.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

Last Sunday was spent at McComb. This was "Home Coming Sunday" for the Sunday school. There were 600 present. They had records that went back to the day of organization and showed the growth and advancement through the years. Many were present who were there the day the school was organized in 1885.

They had two teachers, Mrs. Neville and Mrs. Hibbert, who were in this organization, as well as Brother Hibbert, who has been the superintendent all these years. I understood that these three had been faithful in their attendance and had only missed where there was a lawful reason.

From 6 officers and teachers, 48 pupils, 60c collection, to 35 officers and teachers, 600 in attendance, and some $25 or more collection is a far step.

I wonder how many Sunday schools in the Conference can give a record so good, that could really have these interesting items to run back to the organization. They read the record for the anniversary for each five years.

Thomas Hales had not missed a Sunday in 14 years; Alice Hales had not missed a Sunday in 13 years; Helen Hales had not missed a Sunday in 12 years; Freeman Hales had not missed a Sunday in 10 years. These four live six miles from the church and this is their record.

Ella Louise Frith had not missed in 12 years; Daisy Lee Plantz, Frances McIntuff, Nell Sims, have a record of 9 years without missing; Lincoln Shuman, Carlton Shuman, Chas. Abright, have 8 years to their credit.

The following have attended 7 years without a break: Ridger Alford, Elizabeth Alford, Johannah Heidenrich, Dorothy Norton, Gordon Williams, Lloyd Williams, Elizabeth Jackson, Warren Sherman, and Herbert Smith. They read no records lower than 7 years.

At the close of a most interesting program, a beautiful silver service was presented to Brother Hibbert in testimony of love and appreciation by the school. I trust some one more gifted will write up this great occasion for the Advocate. It was indeed something to be proud of.

Wednesday and Thursday were spent in Meridian. Final plans for the Meridian Standard Training School were completed. This will mean much for Meridian and the surrounding country. I found them in the midst of the John Brown meeting. It is a great meeting. Brother Brown preaches good, sound preaching. Men and women are coming to God. People are praying. Folks are reaching out after the fullness of the Spirit. Great crowds are thronging the meeting place and the shouts of new-born souls are heard. The first thing I heard almost when I arrived was of a man who had never given himself to God, being convicted of his sins and saying what an impression the services had made upon him. I learned later this party was saved. Pray that Meridian may have the great meeting they ought to have.

Friday night I had the great pleasure of attending a get-together-meeting of the Men's Wesley Bible Class of Capitol Street. I did not count those present, but it was a large crowd for a week night. A most enjoyable program was given. The one thing that stood out to me was that every speaker emphasized the fact if the men who came were not helped to God and to live for God, the class had failed. God bless big, fine, noble men who are dedicating themselves and tackling a job of that kind. They drove a stake for an average attendance through the year of 150. They will do it, too, I really believe.

Please, praying people, pray for the Sunday school work—not part, but all of it. Make your praying tell.

Observe Sunday School Day as promptly as you can and send us the offering promptly. Send offering to Mr. G. M. Lester, P. O. Box 548, Jackson, Miss.

Have a written report from your Sunday school at the District Institute.

Conference Standard Training School, Jackson, Miss., June 8-14. Plan to come. Plan to have your choicest workers come. It will do you good and mean much to the advancement of the Kingdom of God.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

SOME WITNESSES OF ISRAEL FOR CHRIST.

By Henehel Cohn,
Missionary to the Jews, M. E. Church, South.

During the past century, 300,000 Israelites have accepted Christ as their Lord and Savior. A great change has come over Israel; where formerly the name of Christ was despised, today it is honored and revered; where formerly it was anathema for a Hebrew to enter a Christian church and listen to the Gospel being preached, today there is hardly a city church that does not have Hebrews attending the services, and a great many have been enrolled in their membership. The fires of Zion are being rekindled and a great awakening is taking place in the hearts of Israel.

Some of the witnesses of Israel during the past century for Christ have not been the dead leaves off from the branches, but the greatest and most powerful of Zion. In England there was Beaconfield, Ricardo, Ximenes, Brahmr, Cowen, Lopezes, and Herschel, the great astronomer. In the Church of England ten and two-fifths per cent of its rectors are of Hebrew extraction, and among the great Hebrew Christians you will find such names as Bishop Scherschewsky, Alexander, Hellmuth, Blythe, Cohn, Israels, and Ederscheimthe, the author of the most authentic and scholarly life of Christ. The great church historian Neander, of Germany, was also a Hebrew Christian, as was Mendellsohn, Rossini, Rubinstein, the trio of famous composers and musicians. And to-day the voice of righteousness speaking for truth and Christianity in Germany is none other than Maximillian Harden. In America there have been some golden-hearted Hebrew Christians, such as Joseph Pullitzer of the New York World; Louis Klopsch, of the Christian Herald; and Lilienthal, the famous missionary; and the late lamented Dr. Louis B. Meyer, of Chicago; and innumerable others too numerous to mention; while about five hundred and twenty-seven ministers of Hebrew extraction are to-day preaching in the pulpits of our country.

There is an undercurrent of life to-day all through the world among Jewry awakening to the heart-call of the Christ. In America the Hebrew is drifting into agnostic atheism, Christian Science, and many into spiritualism. It behooves the Christian church to awaken to her heaven-sent missionary call and begin to send back to the people of the book Christ of all the ages. To begin with Jerusalem does not mean the ancient call literally to go back to Jerusalem, for there are only fifty thousand there to-day. We have four million Jews within the borders of the United States, and the clarion rings for us to begin to send back their choice treasure which we received at the hands of the apostles and prophets two thousands years ago. Let's bring a message, a prayer, and the desire into the hearts of our people for the evangelization of our Hebrew people in our country, who are our next-door neighbors, our friends and our associates in the business world.

The Jew does not seek for a social or a political equality, for he has both in our country, but the desire for a spiritual brotherhood of man bringing us all together, recognizing the rights of both, but in the spirit of love, knowing no difference between the Jew and the Gentile, praying for the day when we will not be twain but one in Christ Jesus our Savior and our Lord.

The pleasures that we cannot ask God to bless are doubtful pleasures. The places where we cannot ask our Lord to go with us are better left unvisited.—Selected.

Sensation of the Medical World

Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablet Does Not Gripe, Nauseate Nor Salivate.

The horrors of Saturday night Calomel-taking are a thing of the past. According to druggists, Calotabs, the de-nauseated calomel tablet is a grand success, the triumph of modern pharmacy. Not the slightest danger or unpleasantness attends its use and yet it exhibits all of the liver-cleansing and system-purifying qualities of the old-style calomel.

There can be no doubt that calomel is the most valuable and universally useful of all medicines and now that its objectionable qualities have been removed its popularity will have no bounds. One Calotab on the tongue at bedtime, with a swallow of water—no taste, no nausea, or unpleasantness whatever. The next morning you are feeling fine, liver clean, splendid appetite. Eat what you please—no danger.

Beware of imitations! Genuine Calotabs are sold only in "checkerboard" (black and white) packages bearing the copyrighted trade-mark "Calotabs." The large, family size sells for thirty-five cents; vest-pocket size, ten cents. All dealers are authorized to refund the price if you are not delighted with Calotabs. —Adv.

Pain In Your Side?

Then This is of Vital Importance to You

Belton, Texas—"A few years ago I had a bad spell of feminine trouble, was in bed two months. My doctor did all he could for me, but I got only temporary relief and my side hurt me terribly, so I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After taking four bottles my pains were all gone and I have had no such trouble since. I have just taken two bottles of the 'Prescription' this season for irregularity and find it does all that is claimed for it. It's a fine medicine and all suffering women will find relief if they give it a trial. I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery as a tonic and blood purifier; it also is a good medicine."—Mrs. Ollie B. Roberts, Route 4

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

President Back from Council Meeting.

Mrs. Niebergall is back from the Council meeting, and brings some interesting news about the work. The Young People will be in care of Mrs. P. L. Cobb, Mrs. Perry having resigned the position because of unavoidable circumstances. From Mrs. Lipscomb's Home Base report, the Louisiana Conference Society stands as follows:

Number of Adult auxiliaries, 23d.

Number of members of Adult auxiliaries, 20th.

Total finances paid, including Adult, Young People and Junior, 18th.

Total donations to supplies, 3d.

The Council hymn for the year is "Speed on Thy Word." It will be found in the Church Hymnal, No. 206:

"Lord of all power and might,
Father of love and light,
O let the gospel sound
All the wide world around,
Wherever man is found!
God speed his word! Amen.

"Hail, blessed Jubilee!
Thine, Lord, the glory be;
Hallelujah!
Thine was the mighty plan;
From Thee the work began;
Away with praise of man!
Glory to God!

"Lo, what embattled foes,
Stern in their hate, oppose
God's holy word!
One for his truth we stand,
Strong in his own right hand,
Firm as a martyr-hand;
God shield his word!

"Onward shall be our course,
Despite of fraud or force;
God is before.
His words ere long shall run
Free as the noonday sun;
His purpose must be done:
God bless his word!"

SPRING DEBILITY

Loss of Appetite, That Tired Feeling and Sometimes Eruptions.

Thousands take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring medicine for that tired feeling, nervous weakness, impure blood and say it makes them feel better, eat and sleep better, and "makes food taste good."

Spring debility is a condition in which it is especially hard to combat disease germs, which invade the system here, there and everywhere. The white blood corpuseles, sometimes called "the little soldiers in the blood," because it is their duty to fight disease germs, are too weak to do good service.

Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens the "little soldiers" and enables them to repel germs of grip, influenza, fevers and other ailments; relieves catarrh and rheumatism. It has given satisfaction to three generations. Get it today, and for a laxative take Hood's Pills.

MONROE AUXILIARY ACTIVE.

The following was clipped from the Monroe daily paper:

"Mrs. Joyner Addresses W. M. S.

"On Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the church auditorium, the Woman's Missionary Society held its monthly program meeting with Mmes. Joyner and Dodson of Ruston as honor guests. For the occasion, the altar was arranged with the most fragrant of flowers.

"Mrs. J. H. Royce, chairman, presided over the meeting, with Mrs. Ruth Howell as secretary. After the call to order, the Scripture lesson, Mark 21, was read by Mrs. Dodson. Interesting subjects were presented and discussed by Mrs. O. H. Bynum and Miss Wossman. Mrs. Louise Endom Kelly contributed to the program a most beautiful solo.

"Mrs. Joyner, who was the speaker of the afternoon, was introduced by the President, Mrs. O. C. Dawkins. Mrs. Joyner in a most gracious manner, prefaeing her remarks with the statement that she really was not a public speaker, and somewhat surprised at the large audienee, nevertheless, with Mexico as her theme, had many interesting things to tell of the life, eustoms, religion and peculiarities of the Mexicans, gleaned and gathered from personal experience and observation during a resldence of thirteen years in Mexico when Rev. Mr. Joyner had charge of the mission work there. Mrs. Joyner, as illustrative of her remarks, had many souvenirs of the eountry, which she displayed.

"Mrs. Joyner, who is quite a fluent speaker, closed her address with noting rather a peculiar incident—stating that when Mr. Joyner was sent to Mexico, he had volunteered for work in China, and that her son, answering the call to Mexico, was sent to China instead, sailing September last.

"At the conclusion of Mrs. Joyner's remarks, Rev. E. N. Evans of New Orleans made a brief talk in behalf of the Memorial Home for Young Women. Rev. Mr. Evans gave the closing prayer, after which the ladies of the Society entertained in the Annex at an informal reception complimentary to Mesdames Joyner and Dodson. The most delicious sandwich luncheon was served. The guests numbered a hundred or more."

HELEN KELLER AND HER BIBLE.

By A. Wesley Mell.

"The Bible is the Book of all books I love," said Helen Keller, the world's most famous deaf and blind woman, in a recent interview which I had with her in behalf of the Amerlean Bible Society.

"I should like to have my picture taken with my Bible," she continued. But her Bible is not like yours, for she reads not with her eyes, but with her sensitive finger tips by a system of raised dots representing letters.

"What is your favorite chapter, Miss Keller?" I asked.

Miss Keller promptly opened the Gospel of St. John to the ninth chapter and swiftly and with tender and caressing touch, her trained fingers traced the raised dots until she reached the fourth verse: "'I must work the works of Him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." Her face grew serious and tense as she slowly repeated these words, but it lighted as she read on: "As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world."

Miss Keller then turned to the first chapter, and with radiant illumination of expression she read aloud: "In him was life; and the life was the light of men. * * * That was the true Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

And when I gave her one of the Army and Navy Testaments, with a word concerning Bible distribution during the war, Miss Keller clasped the little Testament and confidently and eagerly exclamed: "I am so glad that the Bible is being distributed everywhere. When Christianity has spread throughout the world, then brotherhood will come to the nations. I rejoice in the American Bible Society."

It was an hour never to be forgotten. As I left Miss Keller standing in the sunlight before the open window, and saw in her face "the light that never was on sea or land," I thought how true it is that "His life is the light of men."

FROM RICHTON, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a few words from Richton circuit. Richton circuit is composed of Richton, Ovett, and Blodgett, with Pine Ridge as an adjunct of Blodgett. This work is very compact, and is the best (?) circuit in the Mississippi Conference, paying a salary of $2400, an increase of $600 over last year. But that is not the only thing that makes it the best work in the State. They co-operate and know how to make the pastor see that he is appreciated. For instance: the pastor has been able to preach only three times since January 20, but during that time the work has been going on, the salary paid regularly, and while we were away for an operation March 24—the second since January—the good people of Ovett and Blodgett brought us about $75 worth of groceries, and in a few days the good ladies of Richton brought us a lot of things, in the way of sheets, towels, pillow-cases, quilts, etc. We are very grateful for all these remembrances, and pray God to bless every one that had a part in making us happy.

As stated above, I have been under the knife twice this year. I was operated on on January 25, but this did not prove a success and after suffering untold pain till March 24, I sought the service of a specialist, and immediately obtained relief. I am gaining strength rapidly now.

We are planning a great year. Rev. J. O. Hanes is to assist me in my meeting here at Richton, beginning May 14. We are expecting a great meeting. We are going to build two new churches, and pay the Centenary, Edueation, and Conference assessments, by the help of the Lord this year.

We are serving a great people. Come up and visit us and we will let you preach. A. W. O'BRYANT, Pastor.

FROM ACONA STATION.

Dear Mr. Editor: You can tell our readers that Acona station is not dead. We have a hundred per cent Epworth League, a hundred per cent Missionary Society, and are planning for a hundred per cent Sunday school. Our prayer meeting is good; our congregations are fine; our membership is splendid; our community life is superb; our preaching is par excellent, for it is the great Gospel of the mighty Redeemer.

We are planning to re-dress our parsonage both inside and out, and make it adorned as a bride for her groom. Then it will be a thing of beauty, situated on three hills, surrounded by oaks and elms, nestling among fruits and flowers: apples, peaches, plums, figs and pecans; roses, jasmines, cannas, daisies, "mums," glories—evening and morning—and others too numerous to mention; then, added to this, almost an endless variety of garden vegetables, enough to satisfy the most fastidious epicure. It seems a faint resemblance of getting back to Eden. But alas! There is the hiss of the serpent, and there is that insidious "wolf" intruding his obnoxious head continually. So, that beneath the stars, there is no blissful Eden, nor long-sought Elysium.

J. A. POE.

FROM TUNICA, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: It is not my purpose to write up the district conference, as we are expecting our very efficient secretary to do that; but we cannot forbear saying that, according to the fine reports and personal letters received since the conference, it certainly must have been an inspiring occasion.

We had our second quarterly conference in connection with the district conference and think we had an honest-to-goodness good report for the brethren. Here are some things we had to say: 12 received into the church, 7 of these on profession of faith and baptism, making a total of 23 for the year; three-fourths of church membership in Sunday school; three Wesley Bible Classes organized according to the standard; a thoroughly live and wide-awake Missionary Society always on the job; pastor's and elder's salaries up to the minute; $275 in cash and about $350 in subscriptions added to the Superannuate Endowment Fund; Centenary pledges more than 60 per cent paid; all other claims practically paid up to date; $175 expended in furnishing and equipping some departments of the Sunday school; plans being made to obtain the third rank standard in our Sunday school work. More than half of our teachers have one or more teaching units from the General Sunday School Board. The rest will have the opportunity to make their credits also. I really do not believe we are just marking time and we are looking forward to a better day in Tunica Methodism.

C. A. PARKS.

Tunica, Miss.

FROM HOLLANDALE, MISS.

I came here December 1, 1921. We received a royal welcome to a well-furnished parsonage, which had been prepared by a committee of spiritual ladies who do things. Needed furniture has been bought and improvements have been made. The three churches have purchased a Ford car for the charge.

There were two Sunday schools and two Woman's Missionary Societies doing creditable work for any charge. We have organized one Junior Missionary Society and one Woman's Missionary Society and have two new Sunday schools.

The salary of pastor has been raised, and the kindness and thoughtful of our people do not abate.

We have secured the services of Rev. Dan E. Kelly for our revival at Hollandale, beginning May 14, and of Rev. W. A. Wilson for Arcola, beginning April 30.

We are serving a delightful people. Our motto is, "Rival all past service for the Master." God bless the Advocate. His and yours,

E. M. SHAW.

FROM FOREST, MISS.

A two weeks' meeting has just been held in the Forest Methodist Church. Viewed from standpoint of additions of the church (four), it may not sound so great, but those that had the pleasure of witnessing the large congregations held spellbound under the inspiration of Rev. J. V. Bennet, Conference evangelist, from Brookhaven, supported by song services led by Rev. James M. Lewis, of Collins, know that in fact it was a time for renewing of covenants and rejoicing by Christian people regardless of church. All Protestant denominations cheerfully joined hands that God might be served.

Rev. J. W. Chisholm, of this church, had to give up the work here on account of the health of his little boy, John Wright, who has for some time been in the sanitarium at San Antonio, Texas. Recently he had a call to First Church at Seguin, Texas, which he accepted that he may be near his child.

Rev. C. H. Ellis, father-in-law of Brother Chisholm, a former presiding elder and pastor of rich experience, was relieved of active work by the last Conference and made his home here that he might be near and wait on the sick boy. Since Brother Chisholm left some months ago for the sanitarium, his place has been filled by Brother Ellis in a way very much appreciated by the people here and at Morton. We regret to see him go away, as he has found a warm place in our hearts.

Rev. H. J. Moore, of Ellisville, brother of Rev. John A. Moore, P. E., has just been appointed to succeed Brother Chisholm by Bishop W. F. McMurry. We understand that he is a good preacher and pastor, and bid him Godspeed.

REPORTER.

WE NEVER KNOW.

I spoke a word,
And no one heard;
I wrote a word,
And no one cared
Or seemed to heed;
But after half a score of years
It blossomed in a fragrant deed.
Preachers and teachers all are we—
Sowers of seeds unconscious.
Our hearers are beyond our ken.
Yet all we give may come again
With usury of joy or pain.
We never know
To what one little word may grow.
See to it then that all your seeds
Be such as bring forth noble deeds.

YOUNG GIRLS NEED CARE

Mothers, watch your Daughters' Health

Health Is Happiness

From the time a girl reaches the age of twelve until womanhood is established, she needs all the care a thoughtful mother can give.

The condition that the girl is then passing through is so critical, and may have such far-reaching effects upon her future happiness and health, that it is almost criminal for a mother or guardian to withhold counsel or advice.

Many a woman has suffered years of prolonged pain and misery through having been the victim of thoughtlessness or ignorance on the part of those who should have guided her through the dangers and difficulties that beset this period.

Mothers should teach their girls what danger comes from standing around with cold or wet feet, from lifting heavy articles, and from overworking. Do not let them over-study. If they complain of headache, pains in the back and lower limbs, they need a mother's thoughtful care and sympathy.

A Household Word in Mother's House writes Mrs. Lynd, about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"My mother gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was 14 years old for troubles girls often have and for loss of weight. Then after I married I took the Vegetable Compound before each child was born and always when I felt the least run down. Both my sister and sister-in-law take it and have only the highest praise for it. It has been a household word in my mother's house for years." — Mrs. KATHERYN LYND, 2131 Gladys Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A Little Book Helped Her to Decide

Milwaukee, Wis. — "My daughter took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she was so weak and did not feel like going to school. She was like that for a whole year before taking your Vegetable Compound. I found a little book of yours in our mail-box and decided to give her your medicine. She is now strong and well and attends school every day. We recommend your Vegetable Compound to all mothers with weak daughters. You may use this letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. E. KLUCZNY, 917 20th Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

"I was always feeling tired and sleepy, was losing in weight and would faint at times. I had other troubles too, that made me feel badly. I read your little books and heard friends talk about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done them, so I have taken it too. The results are most satisfactory, for I have gained in weight and my bad symptoms are gone. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to all my friends and you may make whatever use you like of this letter."—GLORIA RAMIREZ, 1116 9th Ave., Tampa, Florida.

IS YOUR CHURCH AND PARSONAGE PROPERTY ADEQUATELY INSURED.

This question should be asked very frequently of the Board of Trustees for it is almost criminal for any Board to neglect insuring the property of the churches given into their hands to carefully guard and protect.

Unquestionably a large number of churches and parsonages are still insured only for the amount that was regarded as sufficient in the days before the World War doubled, in round numbers, the expense of everything that enters into the construction and furnishing of a building and the fire waste steadily rises with the years in spite of all efforts that are being made by insurance and state officials to head it off. We are glad to say, however, that there is a growing appreciation of fire prevention education in our schools, for we are beginning to realize that if we teach our children concerning the ordinary fire hazards at home, at school and other public buildings, and how to prevent them, they will form habits of carefulness and in time eliminate all possible hazards.

Fire insurance companies estimate that about 80 per cent of all losses are unnecessary, being the result of carelessness or ignorance, more frequently the former. "Eternal Vigilance" this year will save a large sum that otherwise will be permanently lost to the world. Eliminate all possible hazards and then prepare for the diaster that may come anyhow, by insuring in a reliable company.

The National Mutual Church Insurance Company of Chicago is rendering a very important service. In addition to sound protection against fire, lightning and tornado, a service is rendered in the matter of fire prevention that has been of incalculable benefit to its members and the church at large. It presents a strong cooperative plan of insurance conducted along conservative insurance lines that effects a saving for churches. It is national in its scope, writing business from all sections, thus getting a large volume and extending over a wide territory, which is conducive to the best average results.

You will be glad to know that this organization is rendering a greater service than ever before in its history. Although it has sustained more than five thousand losses under its policies during its over twenty-three years of business and is now averaging approximately a loss for each day in the year, no policyholder has ever had to wait a single day for the payment of a dollar due for losses, although the losses long since passed one million five hundred thousand dollars.

Those entitled to the benefit of this system, church members and pastors, should get full particulars. We think churches not insured with them will desire to take part to reap the advantages that will accrue to them and support a plan of insurance that means so much to the less favored churches—a plan that puts insurance within the reach of all on a cost basis.

MINERALIZED WATER ROUTS CHICKEN LICE

Tablets Dropped into Drinking Founts Banish Vermin, Make Fowls Grow Faster and Increase Egg Yield.

Any poultry raiser can easily rid his flock of lice and mites, make chickens grow faster and increase their egg yield by simply adding minerals to the fowls' drinking water. This does away with all bother, such as dusting, greasing, dipping and spraying. The necessary minerals can now be obtained in convenient tablets, known as Paratabs. Soon after the fowls drink the mineralized water, all lice and mites leave them. The tablets also act as a tonic conditioner. The health of the fowls quickly improves, they grow faster and the egg yield frequently is doubled. Little chicks that drink freely of the water never will be bothered by mites or lice.

The method is especially recommended for raisers of purebred stock, as there is no risk of soiling the plumage. The tablets are warranted to impart no flavor or odor to the eggs or meat. This remarkable conditioner, egg tonic and lice remedy costs only a trifle and is sold under an absolute guarantee. The tablets are scientifically prepared, perfectly safe, and dissolve readily in water.

Any reader of this paper may try them without risk. The laboratories producing Paratabs are so confident of good results that to introduce them to every poultry raiser they offer two big $1 packages for only $1. Send no money, just your name and address—a card will do—to the Paratab Laboratories, Dept. 944, 1100 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City Mo., and the two $1 packages, enough for 100 gallons of water, will be mailed. Pay the postman $1 and postage on delivery, and if you are not delighted with results in 10 days—if your chickens are not healthier, laying more eggs and entirely free from lice and mites—your money will be promptly refunded. Don't hesitate to accept this trial offer as you are fully protected by this guarantee.

SELF-SUPPORT.

One if the most interesting and encouraging features of the missionary work in the foreign fields during the past quadrennium is the growth in self-support. Except for new equipment and the salaries of the missionaries, the school at Piracicaba meets its own expenses. This school has three missionaries and twenty native teachers. Other schools in Latin America do almost as well. The McTyeire School, Shanghai, China, also receives sufficient fees to meet all current expenses except the salary of the missionaries. If this can be maintained it will mean an enlargement of our work in the future.—Selected.

FROM CAMPTI, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We begin our revival meeting here at Campti, May 21. Brother J. B. Waggoner, one of our general evangelists, of Lebanon, Tenn., will do the preaching. We feel confident that we have a true prophet of the Lord to help us.

We want to say for Brother Waggoner that he will have an open date after the first Sunday in June, when he shall have closed our meeting here, and he states that if any of the Louisiana brethren would like to use him for that time, he will be glad to take the matter up with them. Brethren, take this good man for a meeting, including 2nd and 3rd Sundays in June. Take the matter up with him at once at Lebanon, Tenn.

Our work on the Campti charge is progressing very nicely. Our people are responding very beautifully to the appeals of their pastor and leader.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE SUPREME NEED.

The approaching session of the General Conference will have to deal with many problems that will tax to the utmost the wisdom of those who have been delegated to enact legislation for the welfare of the church. It will have to provide, too, for the development of the work of the church during the next quadrennium in such way as to continue and enlarge the success that has marked its history during the four years fast coming to a close. In a word, its task will be to conserve the work of the past and to plan wisely for the future. It may well be taken for granted that all those who are charged with the weighty responsibility of presenting and passing upon matters that will come before the General Conference have given serious consideration to all these things and that they will approach them in a way that will insure the application of all the powers of mind and heart they possess to the proper solution of these difficult problems. We feel that it is not amiss, however, once more to call attention to the supreme need of the church as it meets in its quadrennial legislative assembly—a devout trust in Almighty God, without which all its plans will come to naught, and an utter willingness to be led of the Divine Spirit in seeking and finding the right way in all its deliberations. Prayer is not a figure of speech with those who name the name of Christ and endeavor to follow his teachings, and it is through prayer that we come to know and are empowered to do the will of God. It is to prayer, therefore, we need to turn in increasing measure during these days preceding the meeting of the General Conference, as well as throughout its sessions. From the hearts of all our people—from the highest officials in the church to the humblest member in the most remote rural charge—should go a mighty volume of intercession for the guidance of God in all the actions of the General Conference of 1922. If God be not with us, to whom shall we look for aid?

NOT ALL IN THE HEADLINES.

It is well known that the man who depends upon the headlines of the daily newspapers for his knowledge of current events is often likely to find himself far afield from the truth, for these headlines sometimes state the exact opposite of what the body of the article over which they appear contains. A striking illustration of this fact has recently come to our attention. Not long ago the American Bible Society announced that it would discontinue its manufacturing plant at the Bible House because it was more economical to get its printing done elsewhere. This did not mean, of course, that the Society was giving up the publishing of the Scriptures, nor did it mean that it would diminish their circulation. Many daily newspapers, however, in making use of a condensed statement of the Society's decision, did so under such headlines as the following: "To Stop Making Bibles;" "Costs Too Much to Print Bibles;" "Old Bible House Closes;" "Society To Close Down Bible Plant;" "American Bible Society To Suspend Publication;" "Quits Making Bibles Because Of Expense." Even a fairly careful reading of the Society's statement would have shown that such headlines were entirely out of keeping with the facts. To offset the erroneous opinion caused by such misleading headlines, the Society has recently issued this statement: "The American Bible Society, contrary to certain reports, has not given up its publishing business, in which it has been engaged for more than 100 years, and has had no thought of so doing. It will continue as a publishing house, issuing the Scriptures in more than 150 languages and dialects, having its work done through various printing concerns. It will continue to control its own plates so as to preserve the accuracy of its versions for which it has received wide recognition and acknowledgment." This statement will set at rest any fear that this great evangelistic agency has been compelled to go out of business.

THE SUPREMACY OF THE PULPIT.

We are of the opinion that the approaching General Conference, in whatever plans it adopts for the conservation of the results growing out of the Centenary, the Christian Education Movement, and other activities during the past quadrennium, and in planning for other important and necessary enterprises, should make it unmistakably clear that the pulpit is to remain the place where the prophet shall be at liberty to proclaim the gospel message of salvation irrespective of any organizational—if we may be permitted to use such a word—program that may be under way at any given time. It is inevitable that the church undertake, from time to time, enterprises which involve the collection and expenditure of millions of dollars, all looking toward the establishment and maintenance of the Kingdom of God upon earth, and that in connection with these enterprises there should be developed a large secretarial force to manage the business details of such enterprises; but it should never be forgot that the one condition of success of all these programs is a tide of spiritual life in the church as a whole that will be sufficient to furnish ample power to operate all the machinery involved. The first aim, therefore, of the church should be to develop those resources of power that will make possible the accomplishment of these great enterprises. When the pulpit is held down week after week and month after month to the presentation of themes that have to do primarily not with the development of power, but with the manipulation of machinery, there is a serious risk that the power will fail and the machinery will cease to work. The finest locomotive in the world is useless without water in the boiler and fire in the furnace; if all the operatives be withdrawn from the powerhouse to run the cars, it will not be long before every car on the finest street car system in the world will come to a standstill for lack of the propelling current of electricity; it would be a very foolish man who would erect a mighty factory by the side of a trickling stream expecting to get the power to run the factory from so feeble a flow of water. The pulpit is the powerhouse of the church, and if it ceases to function continuously in its mission of bringing the finite into touch with the Infinite, of linking humanity with Divinity through the proclamation of the message that opens human hearts for the inpouring of new life from above, the most elaborate organization ever devised will ultimately fall of its own weight. The true preacher is essentially a prophet of God—not the business manager of an ecclesiastical organization, no matter how praiseworthy the aims of that organization may be; and this prophet must be free to receive and to give out the message that his people need at various times and under varying conditions. The pulpit behind programs is worth infinitely more than programs behind the pulpit.

THAT SAY AND DO NOT.

We read recently that a famous will expert died not long ago in Chicago—without having made a will himself! The making of wills had been his specialty in the practice of law, and he had served his clients faithfully; but he came to his own death without having done what he had always insisted every good business man ought to do. That is strange—and yet it is not strange. All about us are people who make profession the zenith and practice the nadir of their lives—the two are just as far apart as they can be. The world has not very much confidence in, even if it has respect for, those that say and do not. 'What you are speaks so loud I cannot hear what you say," is one of the keenest comments we have ever heard upon the necessity of consistency between saying and doing. Our neighbors watch us much more intently than they listen to us—and they are much more likely to do as we do than to do as we say. In this matter of consistency we have to be careful, too, for ourselves as well as for others. The great Apostle himself must have had this in mind when he said: "But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway."

A TRUE STORY OF A UNIQUE EXPERIENCE.

What One Week's Tithing Actually Did in One Church.

By H. H. Moore.

Last September the Rev. George S. Henninger, pastor of East Tenth Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Indianapolis, led his congregation in a unique plan to test the worth of tithing stewardship and the promises of God. He asked them, each and all, after due and careful preparation, to make a promise that on a given Sunday they would bring to the altars of the church the tenth part of their income for Kingdom service. It was a new method. Some doubted, some hesitated, all wondered; but 142 people, out of a membership of 785, agreed to make the trial for one week.

There were some handicaps. It was not all plain sailing. The church is far from wealthy. Skilled mechanics, bookkeepers, stenographers, and other working people, constitute the mass of the congregation. Many felt that the church was doing its full share, as all bills were paid, the Centenary quota for the year entirely provided for, and a surplus in the treasury. Why should they do more? A goodly number, too, knew that they were already paying "more than a tithe," although they "did not keep account."

Many pastors would have been attacked with the fatal disease of knocking knees, in the face of these obstacles.

One man did not dare promise to tithe, for he was out of a job, and would have no money to give away. But the pastor said, "All right! No income, no tithe; that's fair, isn't it? Are you willing to agree to tithe on condition that you have an income when the time comes?" The man said: "Yes, I'll agree to trust God and obey him, whatever the result." We shall hear from that man a little later.

A Deluge of Blessing.

Just as might have been expected, God fulfilled his promise and poured out his grace.

When the offerings of this sacred Sunday were all counted, it was found that, instead of the usual $175, a gift of almost $800 had been laid upon the altar. Deducting one large tithe, this offering represented an average of nearly $4.00 each, as the tithe for the week, and demonstrated that should only these 142 persons continue to tithe the receipts for the year could be expected to reach $40,000, while, if the whole church should adopt the plan, a local and benevolent budget of $200,000 could be supported! In a church of "working people!" And in a period of "great financial depression!"

But the money was the smallest part of the victory. The membership were awakened to a new sense of God's presence and partnership in all their personal affairs and their religious endeavors. Fifty of these one-week tithers immediately enrolled as permanent stewards. The remainder asked for another trial period of a full month. A friend of the pastor, not a Methodist, pledged him $5,000 to be used as he might see fit. The prayer meetings increased in power, and the undercurrent of spiritual life was deepened. The church and Sunday school overflowed.

And here was a strange occurrence and we put it in the list of spiritual, not financial, victories. The man who did not dare to tithe, because he had no income, and later did dare, because he trusted God without an income, unexpectedly found himself on Saturday night the proud occupant of a position paying four hundred dollars a year more than he had ever before received.

Are we, then, holding out to other men "unworthy and material motives for tithing?" We are not. We are simply saying, what God in His Word has said a hundred times, that the hard-pressed man who is strong enough to trust God, though the fig-tree does not even blossom, is strong enough for God to trust with any income He sees wise to send. Such men can always cast their burden on the Lord. No others need apply.

"Looking Backward."

After six months, has it "all died out?" Listen to what the pastor says: "We still have our problems, but they are not financial. It is a matter of leadership with us. So many have flocked to the Sunday school that our hands are overfull in caring for them." The average attendance—not total enrollment—for the year is 896; three years ago it was less than 300. The church numbers a thousand members, after a revision of records which set aside 185 as non-resident, making a net increase, in two years, of more than three hundred.

"We are hard hit by the business depression," says the pastor, "but not a bill remains unpaid." For five weeks the church has been engaged in a union tabernacle service, to which the church is giving heavy financial support, besides losing the usual Sunday evening offering, yet the first Sunday morning in February "as a free will offering $419 was laid on the church plates to help build a mountain church in Tennessee."

And better still, the Christmas Thank Offering of the church and Sunday school "for the children of the world" amounted to $1,105, the largest Christmas offering yet reported to the Centenary office in Chicago. This was contributed wholly as a voluntary offering, without pledges or contests or other competitive device, but, after five weeks of faithful announcement and explanation from the pulpit, was gathered in a thousand little red stockings from the families of the church.

On Sunday, January 29, the windows of heaven opened. As the pastor was preaching his morning sermon, the tongues of flame seemed suddenly to kindle all hearts. There was not a dry eye in the great congregation. Thirty-six adult seekers came pressing their way to the altar, and the service lasted until one o'clock in the afternoon.

The Reason Why.

To conclude that tithing stewardship alone brought all these things to pass would be to commit the fallacy of putting a part for the whole, and the sin of exalting a method above the full-rounded program of God. First, there was a faithful pastor, with mind ever kindling to new and better plans for the building of his church, and, with heart of self-forgetful devotion to the welfare of his people and the purpose of God, ready to be a burning as well as a shining light. Then, there was a receptive, teachable church, "willing in the day of God's power," and ready to follow a truly consecrated leadership. Then, there was a divinely-suggested, or, at the lowest estimate, a scripturally-encouraged method, than which this faithful pastor and this loyal people knew no better. Who can doubt that even the limited and fragmentary obedience thus far accorded to this scriptural plan is the key which has unlocked above this favored church the windows of God's immeasurable abundance?

Latest report from the pastor, under date of March 6, 1922:

"Salary was increased yesterday. Charge now has $527 more Centenary money that it had by March 21, last year. The pastor is aiming for a $500 Palm Sunday offering in the Sunday school so as not to interfere with the Tithing Week, which comes the week before Easter Sunday."—Exchange.

THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The fifty-third annual session of the Greenville District Conference of the North Mississippi Annual Conference met at Tunica on Thursday, March 30, and continued its deliberations until noon of the following Saturday. All the preachers and many of the laymen and laywomen of the district were in attendance.

The presiding elder, the Rev. J. H. Felts, had carefully prepared his plan of procedure, and without a "set" program everything was carried out so expeditiously that every bit of the business had been transacted without a hitch or halt and the conference was ready for adjournment at the time set.

A marked feature of the conference was the high order of preaching, all by pastors of the district. At the service preceding the conference, held on Wednesday evening, Dr. C. M. Chapman, of Shelby, preached on "Christian Education," using a new angle of approach. The Doctor is a new man among us, but his ability and personality have won for him a place in our ranks. Other sermons were preached as follows: W. R. Goudelock, of Benoit, on "Prayer"; W. L. Graves, of Glen Allen, on "Salvation"; W. M. Young, of Leland, on "Faith, the Condition of Salvation"; J. W. Robertson, of Rosedale, on "Power," and L. A. McKeown, of Merigold, on "Fire."

Among other outstanding features was an address on "My Bible," by G. F. Maynard, a layman, of Clarksdale, in which the speaker ably and logically defended the Book from the attacks of the higher critics.

Delegates to the Annual Conference were elected as follows: G. F. Maynard, Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, F. W. Bullock, J. H. Sherard, A. J. Simmons, Sterling Owens, S. V. Wall and H. J. Allen. Alternates: Percy Bell, Mrs. H. J. Talbert and Mrs. E. T. Clark.

Jonestown was selected as the place of holding the next Conference.

A memorial to the General Conefrence was presented by E. Nash Broyles, as follows:

"Resolved, That we, the preachers and laymen of the Greenville District, in district conference assembled, do memorialize the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to take such steps as shall be necessary to incorporate into the laws of the church the following proposed legislation, namely: Once in each quarter it shall be the duty of the College of Bishops to issue to the whole church, to be read from the pulpits of the several pastoral charges, an address which shall embody instruction as to doctrine, correction as to error, and any such matter as the bishops may deem proper to meet the immediate needs of the church and sufficiently impress its ministry and members with episcopal leadership and wisdom."

Various connectional interests, such as the Sunday school, Centenary and Education Movements, Orphans' Home, Millsaps College, etc. were presented.

The reports of the various pastors showed a very encouraging state of affairs in all the charges of the district. The outlook for a good year is very bright.

Homer Duane Suydam, of Shelby, was licensed to preach.

The committees in charge of various features of conference work made good reports, and the spirit of brotherliness and good feeling was marked throughout the session.

The Greenville District is fortunate in having the leadership of its present presiding elder, who is literally leading his forces as "the district that sounds no retreat." Instead of a retreat, there is an advance along all lines.

THE CONTENT OF "CHRISTIAN EDUCATION."

By T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

I.

An editorial in one of our great Southern newspapers on the subject, "Christian Education," contains the statement: "We have both looked and listened for a satisfactory definition of Christian education without thus far coming across it." We were not at all surprised therefore when recently a gentleman of very keen intellectual insight said in our hearings: 'There is no such thing.'" The editorial continues with some severe strictures on the latitudinarian spirit alleged to dominate both our theological schools and colleges to-day, and quotes from "The Voice of the People" in an earlier issue this sentence: "If the average modern preacher and college professor who comes from our Christian colleges and schools of theology is a type and sample of what we are to reproduce by this great movement, then may the God of the universe deliver and save us from any further Christian education," adding in comment: "This is not the wail of narrow prejudice. If we should publish a tithe of what is being said on the subject, it would create a sensation. When a professor in a theological seminary can say publicly that every question in theology and science is wide open, the situation becomes scandalous."

Certainly such words from a great secular daily deserve and should receive serious attention at the hands of the church, especially as it approaches the quadrennial session of its General Conference; and what Christian education means certainly should not be left so ambiguous that, for all that has been written upon it, neither editors, preachers, nor laymen can discover any definite content in the word as used.

Frankly, we have opportunity to know that many educated and devout ministers of the Southern Methodist Church were amazed, from the inauguration of the educational movement, at the vague, ambiguous sense in which the word "Christian" was used in all the literature sent forth. The question involuntarily came, "Is 'Christian education' only a phrase to conjure with?" as we saw it so indiscriminately applied. When the noble faces of John and Charles Wesley appeared on the stationery of the Commission, and on posters for display, with "Out of the Christian College," "Products of Oxford," underneath, in amazement again the question came, Is it possible that the Oxford of Wesley's day, which mocked and scoffed at Wesley and Methodism, ridiculed, persecuted, and closed its pulpit to the very founders of Methodism, is to be dubbed "Christian" by Methodism in the twentieth century, and even declared to be, in our Educational Survey, "THE FOUNTAINHEAD OF METHODISM?" Oxford University the fountainhead of Methodism! Where then is Jesus Christ, the Great Head of the church? Where is the Holy Spirit, through whose power alone dead souls are quickened to new life from God? Is it possible that Southern Methodism, in the hands of ultra-modern publicity experts, and to obtain funds, made an appeal which only ignorance of historic facts could validate? and exalted (that education might be emphasized) an ungodly university as "the Fountainhead of Methodism." Surely there is need that some one should cry in the ears of Methodism to-day, as the Wesleys cried in the very ears of the Oxford of their day, "Lord save, or we perish! Take us out of the mire that we sink not! Oh God, 'In the midst of wrath remember mercy! Be glorified in our reformation, not in our destruction. Turn us again, O Lord God of hosts!' Show us the light of thy countenance and we shall be whole!"

But it would be bad enough if this blanketing with the name of Christian were confined to the ancient opponent of Methodism, but such is not the case. The University of Chicago, the rankest breeder of every new and false theory affecting Christian doctrine, comes in for like though less conspicuous inclusion in the class of Christian colleges. And this (O consistency, thou art a jewel!) in an article in the Christian Education Monthly (March, 1921), in which an argument is presented for the endowment of Christian colleges because of their alleged "stabilizing influence" on civilization; and Mr. Rockefeller's decision to give millions to church colleges because he recognized this fact is the instance elaborately cited! Everybody knows that Chicago University is the great beneficiary; its revenues are "so fixed that no clamor of the multitude can embarrass the fearless pursuit and promulgation of the truth;" and the inference is that it is Christian and is exerting a "stabilizing influence on society!"

Yet it is perhaps the most radical institution in America, and tends to unsettle and upset every foundation, religious, social, or otherwise that has ever been established. Would that space permitted the quoting of even a little of the evidence. Here is a sample from an official publication, edited by Dean Mathews of the Divinity School, from the pen of Prof. Foster: "Inspiration of the Book is untrue historically and impossible psychologically." Again, in his "Guide to the Study of the Christian Religion," "Not supernatural regeneration, but natural growth; not divine sanctification, but human education; not supernatural grace, but natural morality; not the divine expiation of the cross, but the human heroism—or accident—of the cross;—not Christ the Lord, but the man Jesus who was a child of his time; not God in His providence, but evolution and its process without absolute goal—all this and such as this is the new turn in the affairs of religion at the tick of the clock;" and he calls this "the profoundest change of thought known to history."

But how argue, with such glaring illustrations to the contrary, that large endowments make institutions "stabilizing?" Surely the well trained intellects which set forth such arguments must be for the moment blinded by fond hopes of their institutions, also, becoming "rich and increased in goods, having need of nothing." It is our deliberate judgment that "thinking in millions" is not wholesome, especially for church leaders. It intoxicates the brain. The only argument indeed against endowments is that it makes the institutions endowed independent of their constituencies; and that independence, especially toward the church, has already been asserted by almost all the rich colleges in America, including Vanderbilt. We may add that the most unsettling forces in America have been and are our universities, following the lead of Germany; and now we are told, endow them, and they will be the bulwarks of our Christian civilization. Well, at one of our own universities, beginning with a theological discussion, in which I maintained that in theology as in all branches of knowledge, some things are established and certain, I was met with a flat denial; and it was even claimed, and later reaffirmed by a dean, that it is an open question whether two and two make four. I thought we could at least agree on the multiplication table, that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points, and that two and two make four are established and certain.

We have conscientiously refrained from calling attention to this looseness of use of the term Christian hitherto, lest it might cripple a movement the true purposes of which are vital to the welfare of both church and State, and in Christian education I am a firm believer. We have had the promise, too, all along that our schools and colleges shall be made and kept not nominally Christian (Methodism was a protest against mere nominal religion), but Christian in deed and in truth. But now that the campaign is over and the General Conference is at hand, it is necessary that a line should be drawn and the distinctively Christian note emphasized in our educational life. And certainly, if Oxford in Wesley's day, and Chicago University to-day are "Christian" institutions, there is crying need of definition and of mutual understanding as to the content of that much used term.

Another handicap we find in getting at the real content of "Christian Education" is that, in the voluminous literature on the subject, from the "Keynote Address," by Bishop Mouzon, to "the Methodist Message," by Elmer T. Clark, Christianity has been so socialized and terrestrialized that the really Christian, Pauline, Petrine, Johannine, Wesleyan Methodist conception has been reduced almost to the vanishing point, as its temporal benefits are held constantly before us. With perilous repudiation of not only the content but even the phrascology of New Testament teaching, Bishop Mouzon even affirms: "We are not seeking to gather out the 'elect' from all nations, and get them ready to meet the Lord in the air at his second coming when the world will be destroyed. Such a notion of the mission of the church can have no place in the religion of Christ, and none in the program of the church." He sees in such conception the work of the church as ending in failure only! The gathering together of "multitudes which no man can number," "out of every nation and people and kindred and tongue," redeemed from the curse and defilement of sin as they have responded to Christ's call, the great invisible church, the "Bride of Christ," being prepared and made ready for him, when "he shall come again to judge the quick and the dead" (Creed), is a mighty spiritual achievement in which he sees no triumph of righteousness, no consummation of the ultimate ends of Christ's coming. "The world itself," he insists (as all agree), "is the subject of redemption" He seems, however, to have forgotten that it is not the end of redemption; and we weary of having our eyes forever fixed on terrestrial ends any progress toward the attainment of which is possible only as the heavenly light shines clear upon the soul. We object that it is devitalizing to Christianity to focus attention on "an ideal social order" and assert that "the program of Methodism is to realize this. "The world will be saved," says Dr. Elmer Clark, "when in industry, commerce, art, education, law, religion, and elsewhere men order their actions by the Christian rule of conduct."

We make bold to affirm that the ultimate, transcendent Christian ideal (while including this) is something infinitely higher, holier, and more glorious; and that the kingdom of God on earth, should it come in its fullness, would be but a dim replica and small segment of the celestial kingdom of God "as it is in heaven." The trouble is that the brethren are leaving heaven out; that they are very short-sighted and narrow-visioned, while using great, swelling words about "world programs," "world problems," "world visions." What they need is to have restored the "heavenly vision." And we affirm further that never yet in human history has progress been made toward the earthly kingdom except through the instrumentality of those whose vision of the celestial kingdom has been their inspiration and power, as they have besought men in Christ's stead to be reconciled to God.

So it is clear that all attempts at definition or explanation of what is meant by Christian education must needs be nebulous and unsatisfactory so long as the answer is largely an explanation of what Christianity will do for the world. The trouble is that we have tried to "socialize" our conception of Christianity, and have run away from its direct message to the individual man as to his soul and its destiny until our words have become as nebulous and as illuminating and as dry as star dust. Nobody knows what we mean and we don't know ourselves. We become like men who have jumped into the ocean currents (of world thoughts) and are splashing around, crying, "Save everybody," "Save the world," when there is not even a plank beneath their own feet.

We agree with Bishop Mouzon that "It is perfectly evident that if something is not done, America is doomed," but we affirm that America can never be saved by any educational processes or preachments the chief end of which is to save America. We must look higher than any or all of these national, social, or economic reasons why Christianity should function effectively; else Christianity refuses to function. Nothing less than the salvation of the immortal soul from sin and hell to righteousness and heaven releases the divine power on earth through which transformations are wrought in men and nations.

So if we would get anywhere toward understanding what is meant by Christian education, we must become very concrete, think in terms of the individual, and face the question: "What will Christian education do for my boy?" The terse Christian answer must ever be: "It will make of him a child of God, and an heir of glory," if allowed properly to function. The question follows, How? and in the answer the content of "Christian education" becomes apparent. But this must be reserved for separate treatment.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Vivian, La., was the host of the Shreveport District Conference from April 19 to 21, and, under the direction of its pastor, Rev. I. T. Reames, and his wife, rendered every aid possible to make the session one of fine fellowship and perfect comfort. A total of 102 delegates was in attendance more or less from the beginning to the end. Under the leadership of Dr. R. H. Wynn, the presiding elder, every item of business was transacted and every interest claiming attention was heard.

The following items of business worthy of record were transacted: D. E. Dulaney was licensed to preach and recommended for admission on trial into the Louisiana Annual Conference; F. C. Cady was recommended for admission on trial; Charles F. Green was received as a local preacher from the Northern Methodist Church, and J. C. Albord from the Congregational Church. Both were recommended to the Annual Conference for the recognition of their orders as elders. Joe A. Randol was licensed to preach.

The following were elected as lay delegates to the Annual Conference: A. W. Calcote, R. T. Moore, R. E. Bobbitt, Dr. C. K. Ray, E. A. Hoffpauir, C. O. Beauchaump, Mrs. R. E. Smith and Mrs. C. L. Kay. U. S. Bartmuss and T. D. Connell were elected alternates. V. L. Fulton was elected district lay leader.

In ten minutes' time Dr. Sexton raised $600 to pay the expenses of the preachers' institute to be held in Centenary College from June 1 to 9. A resolution prevailed asking the College of Bishops to fix the date of the Annual Conference not earlier than November 15.

The following matters were voted on favorably as memorials to the General Conference: that a Commission write authoritatively what is the Constitution of the M. E. Church, South; that bishops be assigned a jurisdiction for four years and be required to live within its bounds; that authority be extended to the quarterly conference to license candidates to preach; that the Committee on Admissions be a quadrennial instead of an annual committee. Memorials to remove the time limit entirely, change the name of the church to The Methodist Church, and to create a new Board as one of arbitration to prevent duplications in the nature of work done, were all lost. A resolution, however, asking that legislation be enacted to prevent overlapping of activities by different General Boards was passed.

Visitors to the Conference included Rev. E. N. Evans, of New Orleans, S. S. Thomas and Rev. C. D. Atkinson, of Alexandria, Revs. A. S. Lutz and A. W. Turner, of Shreveport, all representing their respective interests. Reports showed that about 700 have been received into the church since Conference and almost all the pastors are preaching to good congregations. The preaching was done effectively by Rev. Briscoe Carter, Rev. R. W. Tucker and Dr. C. F. Brooks. Haynesville was selected as the place for the next conference, and on Friday morning the conference gave way to the Shreveport District Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society under the leadership of Mrs. J. F. Giles, of Spring Hill.

A NEGLECTED FOOTNOTE.

A footnote to Paragraph 240 of the Discipline reads as follows: "An invitation to come to Christ or to unite with the church, should be given when this hymn is announced."

Would it not be well if this footnote was put into the text and made mandatory?

Some 500,000 or more sermons are preached in our pulpits every year, besides our revival services. What would be the effect if it were understood that such an invitation was to be a part of every service held in our church?

What would be the effect upon the directness and earnestness of our preaching? What would be the effect upon our congregations?

What would be the effect upon the aggregate number of professions and accessions to the church?

I would like to see this faithfully tried.

CONSERVATION AND THE NEXT QUADRENNIUM.

By Dr. Stonewall Anderson, General Secretary, Board of Education.

It is of very great importance that conservation plans for the quadrennium be thoroughly matured. The situation is quite complicated—made so by the presence in the church of several important unfinished tasks.

It will be remembered that the General Conference of 1918 confronted a situation, in some respects, like that which confronts the church now. Several forward movements were proposed. Questions arose as to the character of the several campaigns, the powers of the several agencies conducting them, and the relations of the different campaigns to each other. To settle these questions a "Committee on Conference" was appointed to consider the possibility of correlating the eampaigns for missions, education and superannuate endowment fund. That part of the committee's report which is of special interest in this connection is as follows: "Your Committee would, therefore, recommend that all the great campaigns, prepared and projected, be carried forward with a clear vision of their supreme importance and a whole-hearted zeal, born of faith in the ability and intelligence of the church to meet its duty in this crucial hour of the world's history.

"Your Committee make this recommendation in the conviction that those to whom are committed the great interests we have in hand—the Centenary Movement for Missions, the strengthening of the schools and colleges of the church, the equipment and endowment of our two universities, and a general pension fund for our superannuates—will wisely work and plan in helpful harmony, knowing that the complete success of each depends at last upon the success of all.

"Your Committee find that there is no inherent conflict in interest between these respective calls; that it is not practicable to place the campaign under the direction of one Board or Committee.

"Your Committee further make the following definite recommendations:

"That in the interest of efficiency and in order that there may be carried out but one popular campaign in the church at the same time, and without prejudice to existing campaigns, the right of way be given to the Centenary Movement during the first two years and to the Educational Campaign during the second two years of the quadrennium, and that during these periods, as far as possible, the full power of the church be delivered in these respective campaigns.

That, as the campaigns for the two universities and for the superannuate endowment fund are, in a sense, general campaigns, they may be carried on throughout the quadrennium without embarrassing other campaigns, or being embarrassed by them."

The salient fact in the situation which confronts us now is that the campaigns launched by the last General Conference are all in an unfinished condition. I assume that it will be the purpose of the General Conference to complete these campaigns and to thoroughly conserve the results. This being the case, the same set of questions which arose four years ago confronts us now. What is to be the character of the conservation campaigns of the several causes? What agencies are to conduct the several conservation programs? With what power are these several agencies to be clothed? What is to be the relation between the several conservation agencies and programs? With these and like questions in mind, I offer for consideration several observations:

1. It seems to me that it would be very desirable to unify the several conservation programs. I do not know that this can be wisely and efficiently done. The tremendous values involved in conserving the interests under discussion should not be sacrificed to an impracticable plan of unity. Still, if a wise and satisfactory plan can be found by which the various programs may be unified and placed in the hands of a single agency, it should be done. The Methodist Episcopal Church found itself in a situation somewhat similar to ours in 1920. They have undertaken to solve the problem by unifying their various conservation programs and placing the whole in the hands of a "Council of Boards of Benevolences" working through a "Committee of Conservation and Advance."

We have precedents in plenty for the appointment of General Conference Commissions. Sometimes their powers are limited. If the conservation programs should be united and placed in the hands of a Commission, what should be the character of that Commission, how appointed, and what should be its powers? In answer to these questions, I make two suggestions:

1. Under the authorization of the General Conference the Commision might be appointed by the several Connectional Boards, and its operations carried forward under their direction and control. By this arrangement the Conservation Commission would be an organ of the several Boards for completing the forward movements now under way.

2. The second suggestion is that the General Conference appoint a Conservation Commission outright and clothe it with whatever powers thought necessary. If this method of dealing with the matter is adopted, there are several considerations of importance to be considered.

Usually, when a Commission is appointed with power, it is to do some specific task for which no other agency is provided. In this instance, however, such would not be the case. The task of the Commission, by its very nature, would be exceedingly complicated and closely and vitally related to the work of the several General Conference Boards. No matter how narrow or how broad the field of activities covered by the Commission in developing the united conservatiou program, the same field would also be covered by the activities and interests of one or moro of the Connectionai Boards. This arrangement would place two or more agencies in the field interested in the working at every part of the task. Immediately the question arises, "of the agencies at work in the same field, which shall bo the principal and which the subordinate?" If such a Commission is appointed, the General Conferenco should face squarely this question. The custom has been, in the appointment of commissions, to clothe them with such power that in their field of activities they have the right of way. In this case, however, other agencies are working in the same field. Therefore, the General Conferenco should define clearly the relation of such Commission to these other agencies and their activities.

It seems to me that it would be of doubtful wisdom to create a temporary Commission, clothe it with great power, and even for a quadrennium subordinate tho Generai Conferenco Boards to it. If the unified conservation program, therefore, is placed in the hands of a Commission, in my judgment, this Commission should bo tho creature of the several Boards and under their direction and control. This would insuro unity of operation and of purpose in carrying forward the united conservation program.

Another possible plan is to place the different conservation programs in the hands of the several Boards interested. There are many reasons why this should be done: Where it is not possible for a Board to take over the conservation program in addition to its other duties, a Commission might be appointed. By this arrangement there would be several programs and several agencies in the field at the same time.

It seems to me to be of highest importance that if it is found impracticable to unify the several conservation programs, provision should be made by the General Conference for very thoroughly correlating and harmonizing the activities of the several agencies in the field. No single agency during the quadrennium should havo authority to assemble the leaders of the church together in conference, to put on intensive organized collecting campaigns, to fix pay-up weeks, to take possession of the regular organization of the church, or to do anything which would absorb the interest of our people in one of the great causes to the exclusion of the rest. We have perhaps already gone, of course unconsciously, too far in the way of presenting a part as if it were the whole. Many of us easily fall into the habit of using language in representing one great interest of the church which can truthfully be used only in representing all the interests of the church.

If it be found necessary during tho coming quadrennium to call together the leaders of the church for the presentation of a program, and for conference, and for maturing plans, no single conservation agency should have authority to call such conference. It ought not to be possible to hold such a meeting without previously making provision to represent all the great forward movements on such programs and in such conferences. Certainly meetings of leaders should bo held. They are expensive, but they are valuable. I do not think that two or three days should be spent in such an assembly in the consideration of a single interest of the church when other interests just as vital and just as sacred are left out of the mind and out of account. To hold a series of such conferences during the year, each in the interest of a single cause, is too expensive both in time and money.

It is also a matter of importance that the relative expense accounts of the several conservation agencies be taken into account and brought under some sort of regulation. I do not think that any agency, or all of them combined for that matter, should be allowed an unlimited expense account, no matter how important its work.

If the plan adopted by the General Conference requires several conservation agencies in the field during the quadrennium, then certainly there should be some arrangement made by which cooperation on the part of these agencies shall be insured and their activities harmonized and correlated. These and similar matters might be placed in the hands of a committee composed of representatives of tho several Boards and conservatiou agencies.

MEETING OF CENTENARY COMMISSION.

By John S. Chadwick.

The annual meeting of the Centenary Commission was held April 11, at McKendree Church, Nashville. Of the full membership of the Commission, there were only two or three absentees. Perhaps there has been no more satisfactory meeting of this body than the 1922 session; while careful consideration was given to all matters demanding attention, the settlement of well-nigh every issue was by the vote of large majorities.

The report of Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, Director General, sounded a note of optimism concerning the Centenary and its contributions to all the work of the church. His recommendations that a Centenary Commission be continued for the coming quadrennium and that there be a unified program for the forward movements of the church were approved by the Commission in the adoption of memorials to the General Conference. As the Director General set forth, we will enter upon a new quadrennium with more than $20,000,000 of Centenary pledges to be collected. In the collection of this money is virtually the one hope of the church carrying on its home and foreign programs during the coming quadrennium. To effectively collect this money we must have a commission which has no other task before it except completing the Centenary enterprise. Of course authority for such action must be given by the General Conference.

Tho report of Col. John E. Edgerton, Treasurer, showed Centenary receipts to March 31, 1922, of $13,590,075.40. Receipts by years have been as follows: 1919, $4,660,911.19; 1920, $5,017,590.68; 1921, $3,127,153.23; three months of 1922, $717,331.17; miscellaneous items not included in the foregoing, $37,089.13. In this total no World Sunday receipts are included—none had reached the central office by March 31. Reports to date on World Sunday and follow-up week are incomplete, and no accurate estimate can be made as to amount secured. It is believed that the total will reach $1,000,000, but even with that showing the situation is a serious one for all the enterprises at home and in the foreign fields supported by the Centenary. More than $2,000,000 in addition to this sum must bo had to take care of appropriations already made and past due. But the church will not repudiate its pledge and its obligations. Out of these trying experiences of financial depression, the church will come with a new faith and to the doing of larger tasks.

LIFE LESSONS WORTH LEARNING.

By Bishop E. L. Waldorf.

Fewer Christians are overworked and underfed than are overfed and underworked.

A preacher, to succeed, must know God, the Bible and people.

Scolding seldom does any one good save to give temporary relief to the one who does the scolding.

A successful church leader is one who leads people to want to do and to be what they ought to do and to be.

As a rule, our kindest interpretations of the motives of others are the truest.

A persistent knocker is not often a consistent builder.

If we need "through" trains as well as "local" trains, some orders must be expected to come from headquarters.

Some pulpit committees erroneously use the word "young" when consulting about a preacher, when they really have in mind the word "efficient."

Some people labor so hard to get a place on Easy Street that when they have acquired it they are obliged to spend their time in a sanitarium, only to leave it for an early grave.

Old Man Gloom is an undesirable citizen. He is always hob-nobbing with pessimists and impeding progress. When he comes to church, he usually sits in the seat of the scornful.

Most Centenary offerings would be more satisfactory if pastors and people would begin to care for them the first week after Conference and keep at the task fifty-two weeks out of the year.

Our Heavenly Father, having created peoples of different color, must have a purpose and a love for each and all. If we are to live together throughout eternity, we will do well to be neighborly and brotherly now.

A thoroughly educated man is a more kindly critic and a man of assured position is more easily approached than a climber who wants to appear to be that to which he has not yet attained.

The man who does the work of twenty folk staggers under too heavy a load and renders a service less valuable to the cause and less helpful to his church associates than one who spends the necessary time and energy to inspire nineteen others to do their share.

A pastor's prophecy concerning the year's work made to the district superintendent at the second district conference is often quite different from the history of the year's work as recorded in tho Annual Conference Minutes some months later.

It is possible to say "Yes" so ungraciously as to make enemies and "No" so kindly and fairly as to make friends, and to defend a righteous cause so disagreeably and pugnaciously as to render its success unlikely, dishearten its friends and stiffen the opposition.

It is not necessary to scowl or shout or manifest heat in order to evidence earnestness and to assert an unalterable purpose.

When a man becomes over insistent upon having his degrees, positions and attainments formally recognized on all possible occasions, thoughtful people make a mental note that he is losing his grip and slipping.—The Christian Advocate (N. Y.)

MONROE-RUSTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: The Monroe-Ruston District Conference will convene at Rayville, on May 28, at 10 a.m. The opening sermon, at 11 a.m., will be preached by Rev. Robt. Randle. You are cordially invited to be with us and take part in the program. The committees will be announced at the opening hour, which will be on Friday morning at 10 o'clock. We are hoping to have a full attendance of preachers and delegates.

Cordially yours,

K. W. DODSON.

THE LIFT OF LOVE.

"Thou hast loved up my soul from the pit": so sang the Psalmist. (Marginal reading.) And so he phrased the truest and mightiest form of redemption. Ordinarily, redemption means a process of "loving up." Sometimes, indeed, a man may be pushed up by scorn or pride; sometimes he may be thrust up by remorse, but most times he must be loved up if he shall reach the heights of safety. Love at its best is the holiest lifter in the world. Whoso cannot be raised by an exalting and sanctifying love is sodden material. But the process takes time. It is never explosive nor catastrophic. It is like the pull of the tide: quiet, unobserved, irresistible almost. Did not the divinest Lifter of all say: "If I be lifted up I will draw all men?"—George Clarke Peck

THE GIFT OF TONGUES.

1 Cor. 12:7-11.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

In his second letter to Timothy, Paul says: "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." This prediction of the apostle is being fulfilled to-day. Certain would-be teachers, with itching ears, are turning the people away from the truth unto the fable of the so-called "unknown tongues," and since the apostles admonished every preacher of the gospel as well as Timothy to "make full proof of the ministry," I have set for myself the task of entering upon a thorough and exhaustive investigation of the pretentious claim of the "unknown tongue" people.

As a starting point for this discussion, I quote 1 Cor. 12:7-11: "But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. For to one is given, by the Spirit, the word of wisdom, to another the word of knowledge, by the same Spirit; to another faith, by the same Spirit; to another the gift of healing, by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues, to another the interpretation of tongues; but all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will."

I

The Classification of the Gifts of the Spirit.

The apostle, in the verses quoted above, catalogs and classifies the gifts of the Spirit, arranging them in the order of their importance, placing the most important first and, of course, the least important last. In the twenty-eighth verse of the same chapter, he follows the same order of arrangement: "And God hath set some in the church; first, apostles; secondarily, prophets; thirdly, teachers; after that miracles; then gifts of healing, helps, governments, diversities of tongues." It is of vital interest that you note very carefully that the apostle, in both these lists, places the gift of tongues last, as the least important of all the gifts of the Spirit. That we may have these gifts before us in the order in which the apostle arranges them, I write them here as follows:

1. The word of wisdom.
2. Faith.
3. Healing.
4. Working miracles.
5. Prophecy.
6. Discerning spirits.
7. Tongues and the interpretation of tongues.

Now, let us consider briefly these various gifts of the Spirit in the order in which the apostle gives them, noting again the order of arrangement:

1. The word of wisdom. This means the apprehension of divine truth in its totality, of the ends and purposes of God, of the plan and work of redemption, of the revelation of salvation through Jesus Christ.

2. Faith. All are agreed that this cannot be understood of the faith that saves, that is, justifying faith. It must be regarded as a firm persuasion that on fitting occasions divine power would be put forth to work miracles. In Matt. 21:21, our Lord said: "If ye have faith, and doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig tree, but also if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea, it shall be done."

3. Gifts of healing. All are agreed that this means the power of healing diseases. The plural is used to indicate the variety of the diseases and the various gifts of healing possessed by the early church. Now, I believe in praying for the sick, and that in answer to the prayer of faith God will heal the sick, if it be according to his will; but this does not mean that we are to drive the doctors from the sick-room and throw his medicines out of the window. God has given us both doctors and medicines as agencies for the recovery of the sick, and I thank God he has given some of us enough common sense to use them. Jesus himself used agencies. You will remember the blind man who came to him and Jesus spat on the ground, made clay, and putting it on his eyes, said, "Go wash in the pool of Siloam"; and the record is that he went and came seeing.

4. Working miracles. This is generally referred to the working of miracles of a higher kind than healing diseases—miracles which consist not in performing without means what means may effect, but in the performance of what no means can effect, such as raising the dead.

5. Prophecy. That the gift of predicting future events was possessed by the early church cannot be denied; but the prophecy of the New Testament does not generally relate to prediction. It usually has reference to doctrine given by revelation from God.

6. Discerning spirits. In John 4:1, the apostle says: "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world." In Matt. 24:24, our Lord says: "There shall arise false prophets who shall deceive the very elect;" and then in Matt. 7:16, he tells us how we may know the false prophets: "Ye shall know them by their fruits."

7. The gift of tongues.

II.

The History of the Gifts of Tongues.

For us to understand what is called the gift of tongues, we must know something of its history. The first direct allusion to the gift of tongues which we have in the Bible is found in Mark 16:17: "And these signs shall follow them which believe: In my name they shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them."

The second reference is in Acts 2:4: "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance."

The third recorded instance of the gift of tongues is in Acts 10:44, 46: "While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word. And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost; for they heard them speak with tongues and magnify God."

The fourth reference to the gift of tongues is in Acts 19:6: "'And when Paul had laid his hands upon them the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues and prophesied."

The fifth and last record which we have in the Bible of the gift of tongues is recorded in 1 Cor. 12,13,14.

After the days of the apostles there was an occasional manifestation of what was claimed to be the gift of tongues. Irenaeus, one of the early fathers of the church, speaks of some people who spoke with all kinds of tongues. There was a brief outbreak of it in the city of Constantinople in the fourth century, which manifested itself in wild, inarticulate cries, passionate words without meaning, and convulsive gestures. These demonstrations were met by Chrysostom, another one of the fathers of the early church, with the sternest reproof. At the beginning of the eighteenth century in France, and later in the west of Scotland, and afterward in the Caledonia church in Regent Square in the city of London, there were instances of what was called "unknown" tongues, and now, despite the blazing light of the civilization of the twentieth century, we again have a revival of it.

III

A Study of the Gift of Tongues on the Day of Pentecost.

That we may know exactly what happened on the Day of Pentecost, let me read again the record. The essence of the whole account of the happenings of that day is summed up in the brief words to be found in Acts 2:4: "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance;" but to understand this occurrence we should also read the two preceding verses: "And suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues, like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them." So we see that four things occurred on that day: First, there was a sound; second, there were cloven tongues; third, the baptism of the Holy Ghost; fourth, they spoke with other tongues. The sound and the cloven tongues preceded the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and speaking with other tongues followed. Now, I take the position that the sound, the cloven tongues, and other tongues were only incidents to the baptism of the Holy Ghost; otherwise, sound, cloven tongues of fire, and other tongues must invariably accompany the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Upon examination of the record, we find that there are four instances of the baptism of the Holy Ghost in the book of Acts. In three of these examples sound and cloven tongues are not mentioned, so we must conclude that these are not necessary to the baptism of the Holy Ghost. In one of these four instances, speaking with other tongues is not mentioned, and this one instance breaks the link in the chain, and is sufficient to establish the inevitable and logical conclusion that speaking with other tongues is not necessary to the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and further that speaking with other tongues is not an invariable consequent of the baptism of the Holy Ghost and is, therefore, not an evidence of the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

Another thing concerning the baptism of the Holy Ghost on the Day of Pentecost deserves our attention. The Pentecostal tongues were intelligible and they were so because the apostles spoke real languages, as is evident by what the assembled multitude said: "And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?" The Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference has now in its employ a Syrian, who, it is said, speaks seven different languages and is, therefore, able to go as a missionary not only to his own people, but also to other foreigners in South Mississippi. All this is quite different from the so-called "unknown" tongues of the present day which are altogether unintelligible and, hence, cannot serve any purpose whatever. A gentleman, writing to the Pentecostal Herald some time last year, put this matter to the test. He states that he attended a Holy Roller meeting. After listening to them as they spoke their "unknown tongues," he arose himself and addressed the audience in French, and when he sat down, an ignoramus, who could not speak his own mother tongue correctly, calling himself an "interpreter," pretended to interpret what the gentleman had spoken in French, the whole proceeding evidently being a fraud.

I have to say further that the power to speak the various languages on the Day of Pentecost was given for a specific purpose and to meet an emergency. On that notable day a multitude of people had gathered from many countries, and that they might hear the gospel in their own tongue, God gave the disciples the power to speak in other tongues; but when the specific purpose was accomplished and the emergency was met, the miraculous gift was withdrawn. However, the purpose and emergency both continued during the lifetime of the apostles, and, of course, the gift of tongues remained with them.

Furthermore, after the Day of Pentecost, the record shows that in most instances the imposition of the hands of the apostles was a necessary prerequisite to the gift of tongues. Acts 19:6: "And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues and prophesied."

In this connection, it must also be noted that all miraculous gifts, including tongues, seem to have been withdrawn after the death of the apostles. We read in Mark 16:17,18: "And these

The Home Circle

PUCK.

By Mrs. Geo. S. Brown.

Little Hewltt came trudging in the house, carrying in his chubby arms a cadaverous little puppy. "Oh Muvver, jes see what I've found out in the street—a cuto little puppy, an if I found him doesn't he belong to me?" Before Mrs. Henderson could reply, the two older boys were eagerly calling out: "Oh, Hewitt, let's see him; ain't he a beaut? Can't we keep him, mother?" "No, indeed," firmly replied Mrs. Henderson. "Haven't I told you boys never to bring another dog here? You know how much trouble they are. You feed them a few days and then leave them to me, and I have all I can do to take care of you little folks. They track up the house with muddy feet; they whine and bark at night and keep us awake, tear the clothes off the line and are into all manner of mischief."

"But, mother," spoke up Howard, "this isn't a common dog—he's a fine breed; look at his ears." "And mother, I'll build a dog house and shut him in every night," chimed in little George.

But mother had heard all these promises before and she was obdurate until she looked at little Hewitt's quivering lip and tear-filled eyes.

"Oh, Muvver, he ain't got no home and the dog wagon might catch him. How would you like to have somebody find me and put me in the street, 'cause I was little and troublesome?"

Mrs. Henderson was conquered and the dog was gleefully put in the yard and fed and petted and proved a plaything for the boys all day.

Old Nancy came rushing in the house as soon as she beheld the dog. "Lor', Miss Sally, sholy yo' aint gwine let dem chillen keep dat dog, is yo'? Yer know how de last one—him whine all night, and de one fo dat he done chawed up all de lace curtains—and anudder one root up all de flowers. Dey won't stay out de house, and time I turns my back dey done steal sumfin."

"Yes, Nancy, that's all true, but I simply could not refuse them, they begged so hard. I only hope Mr. Henderson isn't going to object, but I know he has no use for dogs." "And he sho' his good sense, too. You too soft, Miss Sally; you can't refuse dem chillen nuttin. But if yo kin stan' him, I guess I hat ter." And the old family servant went off, grumbling one minute and laughing the next. The children heard her talking about "dat low-life dog," and they began to prove to her that he was a very fine dog. What kind, they did not exactly know, but he showed he was no ordinary species. "He aint nuttin but a common kiyoodle what won't catch rats, robbers or nothin' else but a bone," Nancy chuckled. "Just give him time to grow and you will see," Howard asserted.

When Mr. Henderson came home, the first thing he heard was the dog's yelp and he stood, looking at his wife. "Is it possible, my dear, that you have let the boys bring another dog in this house? Have you forgotten the many nights the last one kept us awake, and don't you read every day where some child has been bitten by a pet dog and has to be treated for rabies? He will bite the baby sure, and then you will be sorry you were not more firm. I shall certainly manage to lose him some day on my way to the office."

"Very well, my dear," Mrs. Henderson replied. "I'm willing; but you could no more have resisted Hewitt's pleading than I did."

The children called their pet Puck, and for days they fed him, kept him out of doors, and saw that he was no trouble; so all the household relented and rejoiced to see him getting fat and playful.

About a week later, the boys went to spend the day with their grandmother, and when they came home they ran to greet Puck, but there was no puppy to be seen. They whistled and called and looked and finally heard an answering yelp under the house. Now, the house was too low to admit anything under it but a very small dog, so the boys could not get to him. They put tempting bones as far under as they could reach, got the cobweb broom and long poles, but in no way could they reach the little fellow, who was whining dismally. He seemed to go further back all the while, and there was no getting to him. Mrs. Henderson laid aside her sewing and joined the children in their efforts; and even Nancy was full of sympathy and suggestion.

The children were all in tears when their father came home. They thought he would laugh at them, but he was all concerned and kept saying, "poor little fellow." "Oh, he will starve—our dear little doggie," cried George. "It's cruel," said Hewitt, as he fell sobbing in his mother's arms; and even Howard, who thought it was not manly to cry, winked the tears back and asked his father if he did not think Puck would have sense to come out in the night.

It was late before Mrs. Henderson could persuade the children to go to bed; and when little Hewitt said his prayers, he looked up at his mother with swimming eyes and said: "Muvver, will God hear a prayer 'bout a poor little dog and get him out if I ask Him?" "No, you goosie," George answered. "God don't care nothing for dogs; they don't go to heaven." His mother interrupted, with, "Yes, dear; you can ask God to show us some way to get the poor little dog. He has said that he takes care of the flowers in the field and notes if one sheep is lost or one sparrow falls to the ground, so why should he not give thought to a poor little dog. We will all pray for Puck and in the meantime we will do all in our power to rescue him, for God gives us brains to think and act. He doesn't work miracles to answer our prayers, but wants us to work as well as pray."

Late that night Mrs. Henderson went in the parlor, to find her husband lying on the floor with his ear down listening intently to Puck's whining. Was it possible that this was the same man who had objected so violently to the dog and had vowed he would lose it? "I am just like you, dear; I can't think for thinking of that poor doggie. Just suppose it was one of our little children," Mrs. Henderson exclaimed.

Mr. Henderson said nothing, but began ripping up the carpet at one corner and then sawed a plank in two and pulled up a board. "Actually tearing up the house to get at a dog, but I see no other way to reach him," he laughed. "Now hold a candle down and see if he will come near enough for me to get him."

Alas, all in vain. The noise and light must have frightened him for the yelps sounded fainter and further away. Reluctantly, Mr. and Mrs. Henderson put back the plank and went to bed. All next day the children called and whistled, but no response. By night they concluded he was dead, and Mrs. Henderson had need to strengthen her own faith in order to reply to the query: "Why didn't God save our dog?"

"We can't tell those things, children; but don't give up. Have faith, and little Puck may yet be rescued."

Two nights and two days and still no Puck. The children had now given up all hope, but every little while their father and mother would go to the parlor floor, raise the plank and peer cautiously under. On the third day they heard a faint moan, and Mr. Henderson, lying flat on his stomach, put his arm as far as he could reach and felt something soft and warm. Gleefully he clasped it and pulled out poor little Puck, frightened and trembling, so starved his bones were protruding, and too weak to stand. What a glad shout the children raised! And they trooped off to bring him everything on the dinner table, but their father told them they would kill him with kindness, and he and his wife fed him with Ducro and a few spoons of milk at a time. How eagerly he lapped the water! In a few days he was as bright and playful as ever and soon regained all the flesh he had lost.

Puck never went under the house again. He turned out to be only a common cur, as Nancy had predicted, and not the fine breed Howard was so confident of, but no money could have bought him from the Henderson family; and while he never did anything great or wonderful, he was the household pet, and Mrs. Henderson declared he accomplished his mission in life when he taught them to take everything to God in prayer and to realize that God watches over all his creatures.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The attendance at the West Monroe Methodist church at the evening service last Sunday was 400.

The attendance at the evening service of our church at Lake Charles, La., last Sunday was 332.

Rev. O. W. Bradley is in fine favor with his people of First Church, Alexandria, La. A great work is being done in this church.

The Cole Lectures at Vanderbilt will be delivered this year by Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, on the general subject, "Christianity and Progress."

At the recent meeting of the Book Committee, Mr. J. B. Morgan was elected chairman, to succeed the late W. C. Dibrell, whose death occurred several months ago.

The Easter Sunday offering for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage reported by F. B. Hill, pastor at Ponchatoula, La., was $92, and the offering at Wesley Chapel was $24.

Rev. E. P. Dulaney and Rev. F. C. Cady were recommended for admission on trial into the Louisiana Annual Conference at the recent session of the Shreveport District Conference.

Rev. Geo. P. White, of Plaquemine, La., attended the meeting of the Knights Templars in New Orleans and paid an appreciated call at the office of the Advocate on last Tuesday.

Rev. L. H. Floyd, of Horn Lake, Miss., serves a fine people, and his work is prospering. He has three prayer meetings, four Sunday schools, and the spirit throughout the charge is good.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, Louisiana Conference Educational Secretary, attended the Conclave of the Knights Templars in New Orleans this week. He was accompanied by his wife and children.

The Sunday school at Collins, Miss., had 112 persons present on Easter Sunday—its largest attendance in several years. The offering for the Methodist Orphanage amounted to $31.79. Rev. J. M. Lewis is the pastor.

The editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate has been appointed by the College of Bishops as fraternal delegate to the General Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, which meets in St. Louis, Mo., May 3:

The attendance at the Methodist Sunday schools of Shreveport, La., for last Sunday was as follows: First Church, 1340; Noel Memorial, 485; Mangum Memorial, 275; Texas Avenue, 191; Cedar Grove, 139; Bossier City, 91.

The Knights Templars of Okolona, Miss., attended services at the Methodist church on Easter Sunday, the sermon being preached by Rev. Sir Knight E. H. Cunningham, pastor of the church. The auditorium was crowded with worshipers.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, La., attended the Knights Templars meeting in New Orleans this week. In company with Mr. A. H. Bowman, he paid an appreciated call at the Advocate office.

Many friends and members of the Methodist Church were in attendance upon the Triennial Conclave of the Knights Templars in New Orleans this week. We greatly enpoyed the opportunity of shaking hands with some of them.

A personal note from Rev. J. L. Neill, superintendent of our mission work in Czecho-Slovakia, with headquarters at Prague, states that it takes the New Orleans Christian Advocate just fourteen days to reach him after being mailed in New Orleans.

We take the following from the Arkansas Methodist: "Rev. R. H. Bamberg, of Mt. Pleasant circuit, has been transferred to the Pacific Conference and stationed at Healdsburg, Calif." Brother Bamberg was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor of First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., preached the commencement sermon for the Leakesville High School last Sunday. His pulpit was occupied by Rev. B. F. Lewis, superintendent of the Methodist Orphans' Home, Jackson, Miss.

Dr. S. A. Steel, the "Knight of the Pelican Pines," has recently been with Rev. T. M. Bradley in a series of meetings at Charleston, Miss. He will begin a series of revival meetings with Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, at First Church, Columbus, Miss., next Sunday.

Dr. W. G. Henry, formerly pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., one of the distingulshed minlsters of our church, is acting professor of the Department of Church History for the summer term of the Candler School of Theology, Emory Unlversity, June 20-August 29.

Rev. Paul H. Grice, of Johns, Miss., is happy in his service with the excellent people among whom he labors. The Sunday schools have taken on new life, congregations are good throughout the charge, and the prospects are bright for a good year. Extensive repairs have recently been made on the parsonage.

The Sunday school at Indlan Bayou, La., had 195 present on Easter Sunday. The pastor, Rev. P. O. Lowrey, baptized seven children, and received three persons into the membership of the church. This live Sunday school would consider entering an attendance contest with other schools with a membership ranging around 200.

Rev. J. M. Lewis, our pastor at Collins, Miss., will begin a meeting next Sunday in which the object will be twofold—to build up Methodism in that section, and to deepen the spirltual life of the community. The preaching will he done by the pastor, and he requests the prayers of the brethren for the success of the meeting.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, our pastor at Okolona, Miss., one of the most gifted newspaper men in the church, will be the special representative of the Memphis Commercial Appeal at the General Conference in Hot Springs. It will be remembered that Brother Cunningham served in a like capacity at the General Conference in Atlanta.

Rev. W. W. Perry is making a fine record on the Rochelle and Standard charge, Louisiana Conference. He recently closed a two weeks' meeting at Rochelle, in which he did the preaching, as a result of which he received twenty persons into the church—most of them on profession of faith. The finances of the charge are in fine shape.

The Daily Corinthian, of Corinth, Miss., gives a fine account of the Easter services in the various churches of that city on Easter Sunday. At the First Methodist Church, Rev. E. R. Smoot, pastor, sixteen infants were haptized at the morning service, and twenty-one persons received into the church. There were also three additions to the membership of the Epworth League.

Rev. Jno. F. Foster, the cultured and learned pastor of our church at Covington, La., delivered an address on the evening of April 18, before the Culture Club of Morgan City, La., his subject being, "Historic Spots in Louisiana." Brother Foster will represent the Louisiana Conference Board of Finance at the council meeting of the General Board at Hot Springs, Ark., May 11-18.

We are requested to publish the following notice of change of a quarterly conference date: "The second quarterly conference of the Oak Ridge charge will meet at Bovina on May 28, and not April 28 as the printed list in the Advocate states. May I presume to call the attention of the officials of the charge to the policy adopted by the first quarterly conference of bringing up half the entire assessments by that time?" The request for publication is made by Rev. J. B. Cain.

A Sunday school and church institute will be held at First Church, Laurel, Miss., beginning next Sunday. Classes in "Learning and Teaching," and in "Organization and Administration" will be conducted. The Kingston and the West End churches are also expected to join in the work. Rev. B. F. Lewis, Rev. E. L. Alford, and Rev. J. C. Chambers will have parts on the program. In addition to the study classes, there will be addresses at the evening hours on "The Fundamentals of Methodisms."

The General Conference is a gathering of great interest to all the ministers and members of the church, all of whom, doubtless, would enjoy attending its sessions. It is impracticable, of course, that all should do so; but it would easily be possible for many congregations to make it possible for their pastors to attend by presenting them with a purse and suggesting that they take a little vacation at Hot Springs while the Conference is in session. We have already heard of several congregations that are planning to do this gracious thing.

The meeting of the Triennial Grand Conclave of the Knights Templars in New Orleans this week was a notable event. Many thousands of visitors were present from all over the United States, and their various public appearances made a profound impression upon the city. One of the most impressive ceremonies of the Conclave was the religious service held at the First Presbyterian Church on Sunday afternoon, at which Rev. Sir Knight R. H. Harper, pastor of the First Methodist Church, preached the sermon. Brother Harper was appointed Grand Prelate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Bishop Troy Beatty, of Tennessee.

The Home Department of the Board of Missions held last year two schools for rural pastors. There has been such a clamor for more of these schools that it has been decided this year to have six of them. The one nearest our rural men in Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia is to be held at Birmingham-Southern College, Birmingham, Alabama, beginning the night of May 31 and closing at noon, June 14. A faculty of experts in rural church work has been secured for this school. No fees or tultion will be charged any minister or layman who desires to take advantage of it. The rate or board is $1.25 a day, each man furnishing his own bed linen. It is hoped there will be a large attendance from these three States.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. S. N. Young, Lake, Miss., 2; Rev. S. F. Harkey, Union, Miss., 2; Rev. J. A. Wells, McComb, Miss., 2; Rev. Leon I. McCain, Lafayette, La. 90 (six months); Rev. W. D. Barrett, Fannin, Miss., 3; Rev. Paul H. Grice, Johns, Miss., 2; L. H. Floyd, Horn Lake, Miss., 2

THE RISEN LORD AND THE RISEN LIFE.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God." (Colossians 3:1.)

So did Saint Paul exhort "the saints and faithful brethren in Christ at Colosse." The exhortation assumes that no Christian would doubt Christ had risen, and that in every redeemed soul is present a risen life issuing from and akin to the death-conquering life of the risen Lord.

Such a life there is among men of faith while tarrying on earth in the flesh—a "life hid with Christ in God" (Colossians 3:3). It is a supernatural life which began to appear in the world when the Christian church sprang into being after the resurrection and ascension of Jesus. No such life had ever been known among men theretofore, and since its beginning then it has never disappeared from the earth. Its flow has fluctuated, now running with a deep and wide current, and now in a stream less full and forceful; but it has been and is an unbroken river of life, which at no point in subsequent times has ever failed utterly, although it has passed through many parched and arid periods during which its waters were visibly diminished. It points over to its unearthly source, in the heavenly hills, and is a continuous and convincing proof that "the Lord of life is risen indeed."

Great consequences require great causes to produce them, and the results which followed the apostolic faith in "Jesus and the resurrection" are inexplicable if Jesus did not rise from the dead. Somewhere and somewhen between the crucifixion of Christ and the first preaching by His disciples in Jerusalem something entirely changed the life and character of that group of men. Some force wrought in them a moral revolution. As we compare the portraiture of them which appears in St. Luke's Gospel with that which he presents in his book of "The Acts" we feel that the men described in the two pictures are not the same persons. We are convinced that some mighty influence has fallen upon them with transfiguring power. They continue to possess their distinguishing personal traits, but they are transformed and ennobled. Their conceptions and feelings with regard to their Lord and Master have undergone a complete and mysterious change. He is no longer visible among them, but their affection for Him is more fervent and their attachment to Him more unfaltering than ever. They, who before His crucifixion had wavered at times in their love for Him, misinterpreted His spirit, misunderstood His purpose, forsook Him and fled in the hour of His sorest trial, after a brief interval of a few days' dare the utmost danger in the promotion of His cause, proclaim with fearless zeal a gospel never heard before by men, and proceed with the utmost confidence to build up a world-embracing society on faith in His name. We are unable to discern in their characters any natural qualities from which such ennobled lives and blessed labors could have issued. We are compelled to believe that the source of the new spirit which characterized them and the new impulse which moved them was not in themselves, but was from without and from above them. It is too clear for doubt that some exceedingly clear and cogent conviction constrained them, sufficiently powerful to remould their lives and to give to their efforts superhuman effectiveness. If their crucified Lord did rise again from the dead and to them show "Himself alive after His passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days" (Acts 1:3), we can explain the stupendous transformation which passed over them. If He rose not, but went to dust in "a lone Syrian sepulchre," their remarkable history and the more marvelous history of the spiritual organization which they set up is utterly unintelligible.

Something happened in the early part of the first century which not only transformed the character of these men and gave rise and perpetuating power to the movement which they set going, but which changed also the whole history of the world. What was it if it was not the resurrection of Jesus? If the crucified Lord did rise again, we can explain with confidence these great effects, and contemplate them with boundless joy; but if we deny His resurrection, how can we account for results for which nothing short of His resurrection is an adequate cause?

The living church is the visible and irrefutable proof that the Lord is risen from the dead. The unearthly type of life which appears wherever deep and genuine faith in Christ is found demonstrates and exemplifies the supernatural and vitalizing forces which are unceasingly issuing from Him for the salvation of men and the regeneration of the human race.

The world is not such a world as it would have been, or could have been, if Jesus had not risen and ascended to the right hand of God. On the sands of all modern times are the footprints of one with nail-pierced feet, who could not be holden of death. The Prince of Life, who was slain and hanged on a tree, God hath raised from the dead. "Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth" the powers of the new life which we see all along the course of all the Christian centuries, and which is the only hope for the renewal of a fallen race in righteousness and true holiness. (Acts 2:24-23.)

The supreme office of the Christian church is to possess and show forth this heavenly type of life. Abundant as may be her labors and valuable as may be her enterprises, her risen life must be her supreme concern and most effective element of her influence over men. If her efforts exceed her vitality, they soon become forceless. The source of her saving energies is in her supernatural existence, and her activities can not continue when that spring of power is exhausted.

There are those in our day who desire to eliminate the miraculous elements from the record of the life of Christ and to exclude the supernatural from the Christian life. They ask that this concession be made to the demand of an age obsessed with the spirit of naturalism in order to lift needless strain off "a distressed faith." But both reason and revelation forbid submission to this demand.

Without the acknowledgments of the resurrection history is inexplicable, and without the supernatural the Christian life is impossible. Yielding, therefore, to an imperious rationalism can not relieve "a distressed faith," but must inevitably lead to the destruction of all faith.

The church must hold fast her faith in her risen Lord and maintain through Him her risen life, or she must perish finally and beyond the hope of any resurrection.

A devout and learned scholar has said recently: "No error of the day is more subtle or pernicious in its effects than to suppose that our Lord may retain His value for humanity, and may constitute the Christian life in us, even when He has been divested of His divine and super-earthly character, or that the life of His followers may be led without the constant inhabitation of His divine as well as human spirit. The logical conclusion from such views can only be that the sooner we get rid of Revelation and all the anxieties connected with it, the better. If by dealing with the human alone the highest ends of humanity may be reached, then let us deal with the human alone. We shall know where we are. We shall dismiss with a fresh enthusiasm the whole history of the Christ even upon earth as the product of superstition or fanaticism, and shall cast ourselves upon the history of the race and the laws of nature. It is true that the mystery of life will thus remain unsolved, that the hope of the future will perish, and that we shall be compelled to write folly, delusion, falsehood, and deceit upon everything that we have thought noblest and brightest, upon everything that has taught us how to live or suffer for others. But what will it matter? With no divine around us, no heavenly life within us, and no eternity before us, there is but one other step to be taken; and then at last we shall be in the grave 'where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.'"

From such a dreary prospect of hopeless gloom, let us turn away to the cheering visions which spring from faith in our risen Lord, who "hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel" (Timothy 1:10).

The risen life within us now is the sure and assuring prophecy of the eternal life which awaits us "where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God." The heaven begun already makes the heaven to come credible.

Wherefore, as on this Easter morning we recall with glad thanksgiving the resurrection of our Lord, let us set our affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For we are dead, and our life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with Him in glory (Colossians 3:2-4). "So shall we ever be with the Lord."

"Wherefore comfort one another with these words. (1 Thessalonians 4:18.)

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Meridian District Conference will meet at Scooba, Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock, May 2. Those who go on Mobile and Ohio train No. 4 will reach Scooba in time for the opening session.

Pastors, do not fail to send names of delegates to Rev. T. H. King and myself. Do this at once.

THE GIFT OF TONGUES.

signs shall follow them that believe. In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they shall drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them." The Bible tells us that the apostles cast out devils. There is no recorded instance of any of them having drunk poison, but on one occasion, while shipwrecked on an island, Paul was bitten by a serpent and suffered no harm. All these miraculous gifts passed away with the death of the apostles, and the logical conclusion is that the gift of tongues was also withdrawn after the death of the apostles. In fact, in the thirteenth chapter of Paul's first letter to the Corinthians, Paul says: "Whether there be tongues they shall cease."

St. Augustine could not endure any at his table that should show malice against others in backbitings or detractings, and had therefore two verses written on his table, to be, as it were, monitors to such as eat thereat, that in such cases the table was not for them. * * * How much less will the Lord endure any at His table that come thither with malice and hatred against their brethren?—Jer. Dyke.

MISS PAULINE HOLDER—AN APPRECIATION.

Some fourteen years ago I began to enjoy the home association with the family of my then pastor. In his home and mine I would so often meet my little girl friend with a gentle smile on a frank, open, genial face. I can not recall a single time or place when she did not thus meet and greet me. The simple, all-trusting faith and friendly attention won me and held me. I prize my child friends and like the inspiration their confidence gives me. By various incidents of joy and sorrow, mutual sympathy, and bonding relations, our families became more and more drawn together until this child began to call me "Daddy Jaco," just as she called her father "Daddy," because she loved me in a way similar to her love for him. How I watched her in college and social life, desiring to see a beautiful character develop and a noble woman mature! My prayers followed her. And when she began to mature so many noble virtues, and so many Christly elements of womanhood I rejoiced, and now recall with delight my visits in her home where I observed with intense pleasure her attainments and lovely character. She wanted to live to bless others. When blighting disease faded my good friend, I suffered so much that I could hardly bear it, yet when weak, nervous, sick, and suffering she beamed with that same smile and genial face until death spread its pallor and the soul went away to mother, home, and God. The beauty, the fragrance, and the fruit of her life will bless many as the years go by. BEN P. JACO.

Winona, Miss.

On October 28, 1921, just as the sun was sinking into the west, our dear Lord said, "come," and MRS. ESTELLE RICH responded to his call, at the age of 54 years. She was a patient sufferer for more than twelve months. She was converted and joined the Methodist Church when only 16 years of age and was faithful to the end. It was always such a pleasure to her to visit the sick and help those in trouble. We have the sweet assurance of finding her in heaven, as she very often said. Her husband, H. W. Rich, and two sons, Henry and Robert, preceded her to the better land. She leaves five children—Lester, Warner, Mellie, Mrs. Johnnie Fewell, and Sallie; six grandchildren, and one sister, Mrs. Sam Presley, to mourn their loss. The large funeral procession and many flowers bore testimony to the esteem in which she was held.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

On November 30, 1921, God, in his infinite love and wisdom, saw fit to call from us MRS. ELLA HOWELL to her eternal home. Her maiden name was Ella McGinnis. She was reared in Tate County, Mississippi. She was a member of the Methodist Church at Hunter's Chapel, joining when only fourteen years of age. She lived a faithful member until the end, which came at the age of fifty-two years. She was sick only a short time, and said to her dear mother, who stood by her bed, not to grieve for her, as she was prepared to die. Oh, how she is missed from our midst! But our loss is her eternal gain, and in our imagination we can hear Jesus saying, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joys of the Lord."

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas our Heavenly Father has seen fit in his infinite wisdom to call to her reward Mrs. R. R. Nicholson, of Stonewall, La.; and whereas the patient and beautiful life lived among us by this good woman deserves commendation; therefore be it resolved,

1. That we, the members of this second quarterly conference of the Grand Cane charge, shall treasure in our hearts the memory of goodness and gentleness and the life she lived. These shall ever be an inspiration to us.

2. That we extend to the family our sympathy, and pray God's richest blessings upon them.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be given the family of our departed friend and sister, a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that they be spread upon the minutes of our quarterly conference.

HUMAN ORCHIDS.

By William C. Allen.

A friend recently presented my wife with a beautiful orchid. Its curious form was symmetrical, its texture was exquisite, its markings were chaste, its colors harmonious. It had no roots—no visible means of support—it had simply grown upon a tree. It was epiphytic rather than parasitic because, whilst clinging to the branch of a tree, it actually subsisted upon the air.

There are some persons like the orchid. They are compelled to cleave to others whether they want to or not. I do not refer to those who willingly or weakly stick to other people and who do not try to help themselves. I speak of the men, or women, or children, who because of lack of good physical or mental equipment, or because of hereditary feebleness over which they have no control, or because of cruel circumstances of business or social environment have been obliged to lean on others more favored than themselves. The invalid for long, weary years, the sufferer from malignant pain, the financially shattered man or woman, may, like the orchid, become an involuntary dependent on the superior strength of some one else.

These invalids, these "shut-ins," these folk with worn bodies and tired minds, these men and women of crushed ambitions and exhausted powers may—if you please—be considered parasites, but they are God's children. How undauntedly some of them accept their ungracious situations! How beautiful may become their apparently wasted careers, how symmetrical the pattern of their lives, how warmly they can color the thought of compassionate beholders! Some even live joyous lives within their narrow limitations. Some maintain a pure faith behind the walls that circumscribe, but shelter them. Some find their refuge and solace in the affection and solicitude of sympathetic relations and friends. Such can become the interpreters of the gladness of Jesus to the rest of us. Their abnormal existence may develop into a more exquisite fairness than that of any flower that glows in the bounty of the sun.

Our royal Christ makes use of you and me in upholding others. To some extent in some way in all our intricate relationships we are—whether we would have it so or not—exceedingly dependent upon one another. God sometimes asks us to become like the grand old tree or little bush and sustain the human orchids that He has placed within our care. The obligation rests upon us—we become orchid-bearers in His name. Our reward here and hereafter is assured us: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Orders are coming in for Sunday School Day programs; still some large schools have forgotten their children and the law of their church to that extent. A half dozen churches in the Louisiana Conference have pledged $100 for their offering. We have as many big churches in our territory that could do the same—if they wanted to do so.

If on account of pressure of other duties you have failed to observe Children's Week, April 23-30, use a later week. If you ever observe this week one time, you will never neglect it again. The way to learn how is to go at it and follow directions as printed.

The program for the Wesley Bible Class Federation to be held at Grenada, May 31-June 1, is complete. We have the promise of French, Owen, and Brabham of Nashville to take part in giving instruction in this great work of the church. Our Wesley Bible classes are going to help win that ten thousand for the Sunday school this year. When a class adds to its membership, it is adding to the ten thousand. That is just what we mean, add to your own class and help organize other classes for the same purpose.

I wish this notice could be printed in big black letters: Let every one who expects to attend the Training School at Grenada write to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss., to reserve a room and tell him which one of the courses you hope to take. How can we know what book to order for you if you do not tell us what course you are going to take? Don't you see?

You remember the Sunday School Board asked for the offering on the fifth Sunday in January to be used in holding District Standard Training Schools in the district where the money was contributed and to do other extra work? Twelve schools in the Aberdeen District have sent to the Treasurer $31.97; nine schools in the Columbus District sent $40.16; sixteen schools in the Corinth District sent $94.70; twenty schools in the Greenville District sent $121.91; twenty-six schools in the Greenwood District sent $169.18; sixteen schools in the Grenada District sent $85; twelve schools in the Sardis District sent $52.55. A District School with five teachers needs not less than $150. Don't you believe that when a school contributes money for a certain purpose, the money ought to go to that fund? If your schools contributed with the understanding that the offering was to go to district work, where ought that money be to-day?

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Easter Sunday, because of conflicts, was spent at home for the first time in some time. The Capitol Street Church had a very fine service indeed—977 were present at Sunday school. An unusually large crowd was present both morning and night at the preaching services. All the Methodist churches in Jackson broke every record they had ever made. This brought joy to the hearts of all. Galloway Memorial broke all her past records on this day—765 in all departments. Rankin Street had 128, which is high water mark with them. Of course the Orphans' Home can always be counted solid, as they have little chance for expansion. A little better than 2,100 was in all the schools. Flags Chapel and Millsaps Memorial and the Orphanage Farm schools have not turned into me accurate records.

Rexford Sunday school had 112 present Easter Sunday. This was an increase from 25 last fall. Only six were absent. They are now using the Graded Literature through the Intermediates, and report that they are well pleased with it.

The Gulfport Sunday school has the record so far as I know on several particulars: 1,123 present in Sunday school Easter Sunday; a perfect attendance of officers and teachers; 25 out of 43 classes were perfect in attendance; only 40 pupils out of the entire school were absent. If any school has a better record, I should be happy to learn it.

Brother Long, on the Barlow charge has organized two Sunday schools and is in high favor with his folks and starts the year well.

I had the pleasure of being with the Brookhaven District Conference one day. As always, the brethren were most kind and thoughtful and had a fine conference.

Conference Standard Training School, Jackson, Miss., June 8-14. Come and take it in. It will do you good.

The Brookhaven District Institute will meet at Wesson, Miss., May 30, at 3 p.m., and run through May 31. Every school should have a written report and a delegate there.

The Shubuta Sunday school sent in the first Sunday School Day offering. This was followed the next day by an offering from Mt. Pleasant. Good! Who will be next? The askings are the same this year as last. If you do not remember, write and we will tell you.

Children's Week. Try to do some good work here, and it will count forever.

Pray for the work and workers.

Brother Hull is doing great work. Pray for him. Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

BROTHERLY FRIENDSHIP AND CHRISTIAN CONDOLENCE APPRECIATED.

Having received from so many of you, brother ministers and former parishioners and friends who read the Advocate, expressions of sympathy and love upon the death of our dear boy, Lamar, we take this method of acknowledging these ministries of condolence. Both in letter and in word your expressed sympathy and thoughtfulness have helped no little in making bearable this awful tragedy that has come into our lives. You have all shown a genuine understanding of the parental heart, and especially those who have lost children at the same stage of their lives as was our son have let their broken hearts speak to broken hearts in such language as only those who have experienced the same sorrow can understand. Your sympathy has not assuaged our grief, but it has helped us to bear it, and we pray that God may bless you all.

Being only in his nineteenth year, it seems to us that our loved one was snatched from us at the period of his life when we could the least bear to give him up, having passed the innocency of childhood, but not having taken on the form and ways of manhood. Being of unusual physical vitality, and of just as much of the "team" social spirit, he was always enthused in athletics, having been the substitute quarter-back on the Centenary College winning football team when he was only sixteen years old, and was ever afterwards a leader in this line of student activity, being the team's full quarter-back when he had to quit. Except in some unusual circumstances, as a student he was likewise a leader. Once in High School he took two years' of Latin in one-half year—with a special teacher's help—and in the end led his class. And thus did he rank in college mathematics, and in the other harder studies. We looked forward with great joy to his being a full graduate just a few days after he would have been twenty-one years old, his birthday being May 12. And thus, dear friends, you can see, as perhaps some of you yourselves have experienced, how our parental hope and pride in our boy, our big boy, has been crushed.

Our son was such a hater of shams, and so destested any idea of any kind of an imputed righteousness from his family, and was so loyal to his social chums and classmates that it was not easy to know the type of his religious faith at this stage of his life, and as he had never made known to us what he proposed to do in his life's work, it was only through one of his friends after his death that we learned that he proposed to follow his father in the work of the ministry, and nothing has given us more comfort than this information as to his life's purpose.

Having never been sick, except for young children's contagious diseases and an occasional attack of malaria, it seems that death had to slip up on him to conquer him. After having been hurt twice in recent football games, the attending physician from blood tests pronounced malaria as the cause of his weakening condition, the decline having gone on for several weeks; then a soreness of the throat that was supposed to be only ordinary tonsilitis; and not until an abscessed tooth revealed it was the blood poison that took him away discovered. When then we went to prayer for his recovery, he seemed to have rallied for some days, and we had great hope that the Heavenly Father had granted us our petitions, but the improved condition proved to be only a respite that we might have this most blessed time in sweet communion with him, helping him to meet the change that was awaiting him.

Since this world, and as many millions more as the stars of the heavens, has sunken from us, weighing nothing as compared with the life of our precious boy, we have had our sorest experience of heartbrokenness. From before his birth we had given him to the Lord, and it was for his glory, that we might continue to train him for his service, that we asked for his life to be spared; but when it was evident that our petition was to be denied, we tried to say in the spirit of Christlike submission, 'Nevertheless not my will but thine, O Lord, be done," knowing that he understood the reservations of a parent's broken heart, for God had his own Son snatched, though willingly, from him; and "he remembereth our frame, he knoweth that we are dust." And now, while we know that "the God of all the earth will do right," we go limping along life's sorrowing road, thinking of our boy by day, and dreaming of him by night, praying for him when we pray, and thinking of sacrificing for him when we are making meagre provisions for the education and comfort of the other children. While we must leave him in the hands of his Heavenly Father for a season, and we know he will be good to him, he is still and I will be forever and ever our own precious boy!

You, dear friends, are dearer to us than before these heavy shadows gathered over our sky, and your willingness to lift a measure of this crushing burden will never be forgotten.

"Father, in thy gracious keeping Leave we now our dear one sleeping."

HUBBEL BELIEVES IN DANCING IN THE CHURCHES—SHAVER CAN'T BELIEVE IN THE "OLD-TIME BIBLE."

By Rev. J. A. Poe.

In looking over the Commercial Appeal of March 30, I was very greatly surprised when I read, "Rev. Hubbel was outspoken as an advocate of dancing in the churches by our young people." The occasion was a meeting of "The Religious Education Association," held in Chicago. His words are: "If we are to cure the moral laxity of the present day, it must be done in a sympathetic, not prohibitive manner. The evils of the cabarets and dance halls can be cured by providing music and dancing right in the churches, minus the objectionable element encountered on the average dance floor. Modern dancing is not bad and, properly supervised, can be danced very prettily." The reporter also stated that he was endorsed by a very large majority of the divines present, with only a very small minority dissenting. If this be true, what is our Protestant Christianity coming to? It will not be long before we are back to the "days before the Reformation"—a time when there was but little moral restraint, an age when vice was rampant.

The cure of any form of evil is not more of it. It can only be cured by restraint and vigorous suppression. You can't fight the devil with fire, for it is his own element. You can't compromise with sin, and escape. The "movie" was supposed to be a compromise for the theater, and of the two it is doing more harm. It is a reproach to our civilization, and menace to our government. The whole system is rotten to the core. The "stars" as a class are carrion-mongers, and where the carcass is, there will the buzzards be gathered together. Ninety per cent of all their productions reek with vice and sensuality; yet our people throng their halls all classes, from street walker to the minister, from the babe in arms to the octogenarian. There is too much evil for the little good that may be gotten from the screen to commend it to a clean class of people. In the name of common decency they should be censored or suppressed. The dance is only less evil because it is not so universely patronized. It is evil and only evil. It is the established cause of the fall of many a young innocent. It invades the home and breaks the marriage bonds. It is a source of jealousy and illicit loves. It is the devil's own game in the arena of life.

The thing that almost took my breath was that one Dr. Shaver, of Hendrix College, said: "Once upon a time I thought that William J. Bryan was a great man but however much he may deny that his ancestors were asses, the Darwinian theory has made a monkey of him to-day." This was said in joining a general ridicule of recent attacks made on the theory of evolution as set forth by Darwin. As I understand it, the learned gentleman condescends to accept the Bible as history and good literature, but not as a code of ethics, as interpreted by our fathers. Now, when you take the ethics from the Bible you have mutilated the book, and it is not worth the paper it is written on. It is preeminently a book of religion and only as such has it any great merit. As history, it is exceedingly fragmentary; as literature, it is conglomerate, without order or purpose; as a book of religion, it has no equal, for it is divine. God gave it and I am going to accept it as such and try to live by its teachings.

DANCING IN CHURCHES.

By George E. Bass.

According to a recent news item written from Chicago, Ill., on March 29 and published in the Commercial Appeal of March 30, a number of the members of the Religious Education Association, then in annual session in that city, as individuals expressed themselves in favor of modern dancing under proper supervision. One gentleman is quoted as having said: "The church must attract youth by providing what it wants," and, "If we are to cure the moral laxity of the present day, it must be done in a sympathetic, not a prohibitive manner. The evils of cabarets and dance halls can be cured by providing music and right dancing in the churches." Religious educators ought to be ashamed to endorse the modern dance under any condition. Even if properly supervised, it does not build up character or inculcate right principles of living. If it does not improve the moral character of those persons who participate in it—and we know that it does not—it is an idle waste of time. To advocate that "the church must attract youth by providing what it wants," and that "if we are to cure the moral laxity of the day it must be done in a sympathetic, not a prohibitive manner," is to seek to compromise with error. Such a course of procedure would gain neither laurels for the church nor souls for Christ. Those preachers and Christian educators who expect to accomplish anything worth while in their work of training the youth of this country must be men of strong, unyielding principles and firm convictions and must always stand fearlessly for what they know to be right, regardless of consequences. The reason why some preachers do not attract the unsaved youth of their community is because they have largely lost their own faith and have accepted in its place rationalistic beliefs. If preached by men of power, faith, and virtue, the gospel will draw men to-day as well as it ever did. It is a very fortunate fact that most of the ministers of the Southern Methodist Church are still loyal to the sound religious beliefs of their fathers.

It is sacreligious to talk of having dances in churches—about on a parity with King Belshazzar's profaning the Lord's holy vessels by drinking wine in them. Some of the members of the Religious Education Association did not favor holding dances in churches.

Prof. E. L. Shaver, of Hendrix College, Conway, Ark., who is a member of the Religions Education Association, is reported to have said: "Once upon a time I thought William J. Bryan a great man, but however much he may deny that his ancestors were apes, the Darwinian theory seems to have made a monkey out of him to-day. I believe in studying the Bible from literary and historical aspects, but I believe I am in accord with the most progressive religious leaders of the day when I refuse to take an old-fashioned literal interpretation of many things in it." As every one knows, Mr. Bryan is a gentleman of the highest type of Christian character. He is a worthy champion of the cause of orthodox Christianity. He boldly attacks heresy wherever he finds it. Prof. Shaver has fallen out with Mr. Bryan because the latter has seen fit to remain true to the old-fashioned faith.

A new book, entitled, "In His Image, A Challenge to Darwinism," by William Jennings Bryan, has recently come from the press. Concerning it the New York Herald says: "This book is an event of importance. The author is spokesman for a large segment of the people, for the most part unheard, and his work is a frank, vigorous, often eloquent, appeal to revelation—to the Bible literally accepted as the supreme teacher. Mr. Bryan has the courage of his convictions and realizes that world religion must rest squarely upon the validity of its revelation." The book can be ordered from the Christian Herald of New York. Although I have not had the pleasure of reading it, the comments of those who have lead me to believe that this book is calculated to do a great amount of good.

THE MARVEL.

There is nothing else just like it except, perhaps, the marvel of evening twilight. To watch day begin again! Being a poor sleeper, I have watched it more times than I might have chosen. I should have been perfectly willing to let God attend to that part of His business without my stir. But oh! the marvel of a brand-new day! One need not be surprised that primitive man deified the sun. Spite of stars, night is so dark and so utter—and sometimes so piteously long. People who fall asleep as soon as their heads strike the pillow, and stay asleep until the alarm-clock goes off, miss part of the glory of life. They do not have any "night-thoughts"—only nightmares. They do not watch for the morning, even poetically. They merely take it for granted and go down to breakfast. But to watch day come again; to be challenged with its unpurchasable opportunities; to see a hundred chances to repair the waste and mend the broken hearts of yesterday—this is wonderful, and it happens every twenty-four hours.—George Clarke Peck.

FROM VANCLEAVE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a few lines to-day to let you know how things are moving along on the Vancleave charge. We came here on the 13th of December and were kindly received by our people. We think we have one of the best charges in the Mississippi Conference. Our people brought in good things to eat and money to spend.

Our congregations are good. Our Sunday schools are growing. We are in need of more room at Vancleave and Mount Pleasant, so that we may be able to accommodate our Sunday schools. We have one real good prayer meeting on the charge.

We had our second quarterly conference yesterday, and it was a good conference. Our very much loved P. E. came to us Saturday and preached three great sermons for us. We had our Sunday School Day at Mount Pleasant, and it was one of the best I ever attended. The collection was good—$21.

We have made our plans to have a revival at every appointment on the charge. We are going to work to get every subscriber to our paper. Our assessment for the Memorial Home has been collected, and we are sending it to that Home to-day.

We are glad we are here at Vancleave among this good people.

Come to see us and we will let you preach for us again.

We are praying that this may be the best year of our short ministry.

THROUGH DEATH TO LIFE.

By Hester Alway.

"Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone, but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit."

"And die?" "And die?"
Be buried, planted, sown,
In the fearsome dark alone?
Ah, Lord, it is a bitter word
My soul hath heard!
"Much fruit" I fain would bear
But this canst thou not spare—
The cross, the grave, the night?
O leave me light!
Is there no other way?—
I love the day.

Hush, my beloved,
Come closer to my heart,
That love may strength impart.
'Tis an eternal word
Thy soul hath heard.
It is a royal way—
God's way, Life's way, Love's way.
I could not spare it me
Nor can I thee.
Wilt bide for aye "alone"
Or for Love's sake be sown?

* * *

It is enough!
Thy way my way henceforth must be.

PAINS ACROSS SMALL OF BACK

Husband Helped in Housework.—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Strong

Foster, Oregon.—"I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for pains across the small of my back. They bothered me so badly that I could do my work only with the help of my husband. One day he saw the 'ad.' in our paper telling what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is doing for women, so I began to take it. It has helped me wonderfully. I am feeling fine, do all my housework and washing for seven in the family. I have been irregular too, and now am all right. I am telling my friends what it has done for me and am sure it will do good for others. You can use this letter as a testimonial. I will stand up for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound any time."—Mrs. WM. JUHNKE, Foster, Oregon.

INFLUENCE OF CHRISTIAN SONGS

By L. A. French.

No one can limit the power of Christian songs. Their influence has been felt from generation to generation, and each day gains new strength.

Over nineteen hundred years ago the words, "Peace on earth, good will to men," bore the shepherds the joyful news of a Savior's birth.

Since then Christian songs have been increasing in number, until now every joy which we feel, or prayer which we utter can be found expressed in some hymn.

Let us remember that our emotions play an important part in our thoughts and actions, and that music stands as the most powerful factor in training the emotions; therefore, the melodies for the poems written by others never express the sentiment of the song unless it is sung in the spirit in which it was written.

In all church services, music has appropriately a prominent place. It arouses, and expresses the devotional feeling of the worshiper.

Singing in the church is for the sake of praising God. Music should be planned for all services and not get there spontaneously or by good luck. The hymn book should be studied.

Hymns should never be used in a service as excelsior is used in packing crockery, to fill in crevices. To rush a hymn in by the coat collar just to fill in a pause, is dishonoring and discriminating on the inspired writer. Better have an impressive pause than hymn padding.

There is no limit to the power of a Christian song when sung in the true spirit. But let us remember that no words or tunes in singing can be worship unless there be devout internal attention to the meaning and sentiments uttered.

SHORT CUTS.

Sometimes they are good and sometimes they are bad. We like to get there in a hurry, but the best and quickest way may be the main highway around and not the short cut through. Short cuts in the road of life are dangerous. There are more wrecks on the short cuts than on the King's highway. The short cuts to wealth, fame and happiness are fraught with great peril and many who travel these short cuts are either thrown in tho ditch or lose the Pearl of Great Price in the race.—Exchange.

HUBEL BELIEVES IN DANCING IN THE CHURCHES—SHAVER CAN'T BELIEVE IN THE "OLD-TIME BIBLE."

utterances were given publicity by one of the largest papers in the South, and no notice has been taken of them so far as I have been able to learn. Is it possible that we think that such statements should be passed by unnoticed? I freely concede that if our social and moral life were as it should be, it would not be necessary to challenge these things; but with society surcharged with sensuality, and growing unbelief in the Bible as an orthodox code of ethics, it is dangerous to let such assertions pass without notice.

If Mr. Shaver occupies a position in Hendrix College, he should be asked to resign; and if he does not, he should be dismissed. We are in the midst of an educational campaign to raise funds to strengthen our church schools that our young people may be educated where sound doctrine is taught. Can we face our people and tell them that we stand for the faith of our fathers if we allow such heresy disseminated in them? We don't want a man who claims an ape for his ancestor to teach in our schools. Mr. Shaver may be a nice man, and an educated gentleman, but he is not qualified to be a safe leader and moulder of character for young people. It is all right to be an iconoclast if you have something better to give for that which you take; but when you take the last and best that humanity has, and can give nothing in return, you have robbed man of every hope, turned the heavens above to brass and the earth beneath to iron, and whither shall he go? Or, you have set him on the sea of time as a mariner without chart or compass and no haven to go to.

Prof. Shaver in his study of archaeology must have discovered that man is wholly zoogenetic. And beginning with proptoplasm he must have traced him, up, up, up, till he finds the bipedal-dolicke cephalic stage, and that is his great ancestor—it must have been Sir Gorilla Savagel; and then further on up the line he finds the bipedal-mesocephalic, and that is the antiquated William J. Bryan; and he comes on up the line and he finds the bipedal-brachycephalic, and that is the discovered man—well, one like the good doctor. Now if much learning, and a little ANTHROPOMETRY, lead to such discoveries, I think it is time to quit the field of higher education.

Since writing the above, I see from the Commercial that Dr. Shaver has seen fit to resign, and Dr. Reynolds, President of Hendrix College, in making the announcement of his resignation, commends him very highly and says he does not think Dr. Shaver holds any heterodox views. It seems to me that Dr. Reynolds is purblind—I am almost sure he is astigmatic. I would advise that the authorities appoint a committee to have his eyes examined.

MINERALIZED WATER ROUTS CHICKEN LICE

Tablets Dropped into Drinking Founts Banish Vermin, Make Fowls Grow Faster and Increase Egg Yield.

Any poultry raiser can easily rid his flock of lice and mites, make chickens grow faster and increase their egg yield by simply adding minerals to the fowls' drinking water. This does away with all bother, such as dusting, greasing, dipping and spraying. The necessary minerals can now be obtained in convenient tablets, known as Paratabs. Soon after the fowls drink the mineralized water, all lice and mites leave them. The tablets also act as a tonic conditioner. The health of the fowls quickly improves, they grow faster and the egg yield frequently is doubled. Little chicks that drink freely of the water never will be bothered by mites or lice.

The method is especially recommended for raisers of pure-bred stock, as there is no risk of soiling the plumage. The tablets are warranted to impart no flavor or odor to the eggs or meat. This remarkable conditioner, egg tonic and lice remedy costs only a trifle and is sold under an absolute guarantee. The tablets are scientifically prepared, perfectly safe, and dissolve readily in water.

Any reader of this paper may try them without risk. The laboratories producing Paratabs are so confident of good results that to introduce them to every poultry raiser they offer two big $1 packages for only $1. Send no money, just your name and address—a card will do—to the Paratab Laboratories, Dept. 944, 1100 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City Mo., and the two $1 packages, enough for 100 gallons of water, will be mailed. Pay the postman $1 and postage on delivery, and if you are not delighted with results in 10 days—if your chickens are not healthier, laying more eggs and entirely free from lice and mites—your money will be promptly refunded. Don't hesitate to accept this trial offer as you are fully protected by this guarantee.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE IN SESSION.

When this issue of the Advocate reaches its readers, the General Conference will be in session in Hot Springs, Ark. The body will not have made much progress in the way of legislation by the time the next issue of the paper has to go to press, but we shall do our best to keep our readers informed of the progress of events. From week to week during the sessions of the Conference we shall try to report its significant actions, basing such reports either upon personal observation or official communications. This General Conference will be one of the most important in the history of the church, and its proceedings will be of great interest to our entire membership. Certainly no subscriptions should be allowed to lapse during this period—and many new ones should be sent in.

BETTER AT HEART.

An ever-recurring question is, "Is the world growing better or worse?" While we know that many good men will take issue with us, we unhesitatingly answer that it is growing better. We are not unmindful, of course, of the fact that many serious evils are threatening the welfare of society, and that many dangers are lurking on all sides, ready to draw us down to destruction. But there has never been a time in recorded history when mankind was not threatened by such evils, or when such dangers were not to be watched for and overcome. The world has not become so good that we can afford to relax our efforts to make it better; but it seems to us an incontrovertible fact that progress has been made throughout the ages; and we see no reason to believe that the steady march toward the goal of a better society has been brought to a halt. If we look only upon the surface, the prospect may be discouraging. There are those who contend that society, especially the younger part of it, is undergoing a revolution in manners and morals that portends speedy ruin, and they base their contention upon certain extreme views and social excesses that are given much prominence in current literature. That their contention is wrong, we are persuaded for two reasons: In the first place, these extreme views are held by only a small part of the people at large, and these excesses are practiced by comparatively few of the young people, so that the publicity given them is out of all proportion to their significance; and, in the second place, the forces that make for righteousness were never better organized or more efficient in their labors than they are today. We cannot believe that the efforts of good men and women for centuries are about to come to naught, or that humanity has fallen to a lower plane of ethical teaching or moral conduct. Our invincible optimism is based upon the belief that there is still a God of love, power, and activity that humanity can trust, and that there is still a humanity responsive to the call of duty, inspired by noble ideals, and heart-hungry for the best things of life, that God can trust. With such a God and such a humanity, it is impossible to believe that the prayer for the coming of the Kingdom of God is merely a form of words and that a steady decadence of civilization will mock the faith of the multitudes who reverently utter that petition day by day. Let no Christian—if a Christian can—lose faith in the coming of the Kingdom of God, when the will of God will be done upon earth as it is in heaven.

HIGH PRAISE.

Any city is honored in having with it for even a short time a company of visitors such as composed the Conclave of the Knights Templars, held in New Orleans last week. It would be expected that the representatives of this distinctively Christian order would exemplify in their conduct the principles of their Leader, in whose behalf and for whose sake they stand ready to draw their swords—and reports indicate that they were blameless in their conduct while in this city. We quote from one of our local daily newspapers: "The high type of men that compose the Knights Templars is being commented upon by the police force, who say that despite the large number in the city for the Conclave, not a single arrest of one of them had been made. Superintendent Molony said the visitors indulged in little night life, and no disturbance were caused during their stay. Many of the oldest members of the police department say they cannot remember a convention, especially the size of the Knights Templars, where some arrests were not made. The police report that most of the visitors were off the streets at midnight." From another article we quote the following significant statement: "They do say that when the local purveyors of the sin-water, which Mr. Volstead so despises, learned that so many Knights Templars were coming to town, they 'loaded up' heavily. Reports are that since prohibition New Orleans has never had such of 'good old stuff' as it has right now. Rare wines and liquors there are, cordials, and Swiss absinthe. There is, in sooth, almost anything one calls for—if the reports around the town are to be believed. But reports also are that the bootleggors, who, a couple of weeks ago, were looking at specifications of new sport models and limousines in anticipation of a big business, are now trying to find a way to pay next month's rent. * * * 'They're not buying,' declared one who admitted to be a 'whisky broker' serving a select clientele. 'Every broker in town stocked up heavily for the Conclave. But they fooled us—there's no market for the stuff. These Sir Knights aren't buying liquor.'" All of which is high praise for an organization which for three days was represented in New Orleans by thousands of visitors from all over the United States.

MARCHING ON.

For the comfort of those who clamorously claim that the prohibition movement is a form of hysteria, that the United States was tricked into the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, and that sentiment is rapidly undergoing a change that will make inevitable a modification of the prohibition laws, we call attention to the followings news item from Tokio which appeared in the press last week: "The closing hours of the forty-fifth session of the Japanese Diet brought the enactment of the first prohibition law in the 'land of cherry blossoms,' where heretofore there has been no restraint in selling and drinking intoxicating liquors. The law prohibits the sale of liquor to minors—persons under twenty-one years, or twenty, according to the Western method of reckoning. A fine approximating $5 is to be assessed on those convicted of violating the law. Passage of the bill by the House of Peers marks the first success of prohibition elements in Japan and ends the fight in the Diet for nearly a quarter of a century. Mr. Sho Nemoto, a W. C. T. U. worker, who was educated in the United States, has introduced this bill in the Upper House at every session since 1899. A few years ago it obtained a favorable vote in the House of Representatives and continued to do so at every session since, but prior to this year the House of Peers held aloof from interfering in such a matter." Prohibition is marching on—and the time will come when all nations will outlaw a traffic which has been a curse without a single redeeming feature.

PROBABLY FROM NEW ORLEANS.

One of the famous bands that added cheer to the recent Conclave of the Knights Templars in this city, boasts that its bass drum is made of the hide of a steer that cost $6000. We have not fully investigated the facts of the case, but we are inclined to believe that that steer was bought in the New Orleans market. We base our conjecture upon the price of beef charged by the enterprising butchers of the Crescent City.

A SOFT SNAP.

An acute observer has remarked that some men will work eighteen hours a day to hang on to a soft snap. For a real man, it is easier to work hard than to do nothing.

THE CATHOLIC SPIRIT OF METHODISM.

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon

"I believe in the holy catholic church"—a church bearing witness to a gospel that satisfies the spiritual needs of all men and which shuts out no one who comes to God through Christ.

I believe in the Methodist Church, among other reasons, because of its broad, catholic spirit. It shuts out none; it welcomes all who came to God believing in our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. It preaches a gospel which has been tested and which has been found to satisfy the soul—to meet all the needs of all men. Moreover, Methodism is tolerant of those who hold theological opinions at variance with Methodist doctrine, so long as those opinions do not strike at the foundations of Christian experience and life. For experience and life are of first importance in Methodism.

The tolerant spirit of Methodism grows out of the Methodist experience of religion. When one has found out in his own experience the things that are real and vital, one knows how to evaluate the things that are not of such great importance. When the fires of religious experience burn low, then faith begins to harden into creeds which must be accepted upon pain of eternal damnation.

So long as a man had the witness of the Spirit, proving itself in works of faith and labors of love, Wesley throughout all his life was comparatively indifferent as to whether or not the church would consider him altogether orthodox. The following paragraphs, from Wesley's remarkable tract on "The Character of a Methodist," will make plain what we believe to be essential to being a Methodist:

"The distinguishing marks of a Methodist are not his opinions of any sort. His assenting to this or that theme of religion, his embracing any particular set of notions, his espousing the judgment of one man or of another are all quite wide of the point. Whosoever, therefore, imagines that a Methodist is a man of such or such an opinion is grossly ignorant of the whole affair; he mistakes the truth totally. We believe, indeed, that 'all Scripture is given by inspiration of God,' and herein we are distinguished from Jews, Turks, and infidels. We believe the written Word of God to be the only and sufficient rule both of Christian faith and practice, and herein we are fundamentally distinguished from those of the Romish Church. We believe Christ to be the eternal, supreme God, and herein we are distinguished from the Socinians and Arians. But as to all opinions which do not strike at the root of Christianity we think and let think. So that whatsoever they are, whether right or wrong, they are no distinguishing marks of a Methodist.

"'What, then, is the mark? Who is a Methodist according to your own account?' I answer: A Methodist is one who has 'the love of God shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost given unto him,' one who 'loves the Lord his God with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his mind, and with all his strength.' God is the joy of his heart and the desire of his soul, which is constantly crying out: 'Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire beside me! My God and my all! Thou art the strength of my heart and my portion forever!'"

In his sermon on "The Catholic Spirit," he says:

"Every wise man will allow others the same liberty of thinking which he desires they should allow him and will no more insist on their embracing his opinions than he would have them insist on embracing theirs. He bears with those who differ with him and only asks him with whom he desires to unite in love that single question: 'Is thy heart right as my heart is with thy heart?'"

In a letter Wesley writes:

"Is a man a believer in Jesus Christ, and is his life suitable to his profession? are not the main but the sole inquiries I make in order to his admission into our society."

Discussing the matter of beliefs before his Conference, he once said:

"I have no more right to object to a man for holding a different opinion from mine than I have to differ with a man because he wears a wig and I wear my own hair; but if he takes the wig off and shakes the powder in my eyes, I shall consider it my duty to get quit of him as soon as possible."

Toward the very end of his life he reaffirms the same position in the most explicit language:

"One circumstance is quite peculiar to the people called Methodists—that is, the terms upon which any person may be admitted to their society. They do not impose, in order to their admission, any opinion whatsoever. They think and let think. One condition, and one only, is required: a real desire to save their soul. Where this is, it is enough; they desire no more; they lay stress upon nothing else; they ask only, 'Is thy heart herein as my heart? If it be give me thy hand.' Is there any other society in Great Britain or Ireland that is so remote from bigotry. That is so truly of a catholic spirit? So ready to admit all serious persons without distinction? Where, then, is there such another society in Europe? In the habitable world? I know none. Let any man show it me that can."

To quote now from Professor Winchester's "The Life of John Wesley":

"He printed for Methodism a life of that good Unitarian, Thomas Firmin, a very pious man, he said. The archheretics of history—Montanus of the second century, Pelagius of the fifth century, Servetus of the sixteenth century—he declared that, in his opinion, they were all holy men, who at the last, with all the good men of the heathen world—Socrates and Plato and Trajan and Marcus Aurelius—would come from the east and the west to sit down in the kingdom of heaven. Religious history from the dawn of Christianity to the present day may be searched in vain to find another leader of equal prominence and equal positiveness of personal opinion who showed such genuine liberality as the great founder of Methodism." (Page 212.)

It is to be observed that this broad, catholic spirit of Wesley and of Methodism does not arise from any want of definite and assured theological convictions but from the ability to distinguish the things that differ. Liberality is one thing, and laxness is another and different thing. The one grows out of appreciation of what is eternally real; the other is evidence of superficiality of thought and shallowness of life. The one springs out of a deep and satisfying Christian experience; the other indicates the absence of an experience which puts one in touch with the great realities of life. This is clearly set forth in the sermon on "The Catholic Spirit," quoted above. I give an additional quotation, which is necessary in order to set the whole matter in the proper light and to avoid the possibility of misunderstanding:

"A man of a truly catholic spirit has not now his religion to seek. He is fixed as the sun in his judgment concerning the main branches of Christian doctrine. He does not halt between two opinions nor vainly endeavor to blend them into one. Observe this: You know not what a spirit you are of; who call yourselves men of a catholic spirit, only because you are of a muddy understanding; because your mind is all in a mist; because you have no settled, constant principles, but are for jumbling all opinion together. Be convinced that you have quite missed your way; you know not where you are. You think you are got into the very spirit of Christ, when, in truth, you are nearer the spirit of anti-Christ. Go first and learn the elements of the gospel of Christ, and then shall you learn to be of a truly catholic spirit."

It will be seen that what is here written is largely historical. I have sought to make plain what the attitude of Wesley, the founder of Methodism, was and to show the catholic spirit of the first Methodists in England before the Methodist "Societies" were organized into a church. It will be asked, however: "'What is the attitude of the Methodist Church in America to-day?" It may be said that "societies" composed of communicants of the Church of England and of dissenters might very well afford to show so catholic a spirit and, indeed, that they would be under the necessity of doing so. But can a great church be as tolerant as Wesley and his "societies" were? Must not a church, if it is to be a church and not a disorderly aggregation of well-intentioned people—must not a church be more exacting in its requirements touching all the things which its members must believe? Must not the Methodist Church in America, if it is to hold together and to withstand the flood of error which is sweeping over the country—must not the Methodist Church, above all other churches, indicate precisely what the articles of the faith are which was "once for all delivered unto the saints?" Can Methodism hope to stem the tide of modern doubt and infidelity unless she sets her house in order and indicates to all men exactly what the fundamentals are which are essential to the perpetuity of the Christian religion?

Ought not Methodism to deliver herself fully and finally touching the critical and scientific questions which are now creating so much doubt and anxiety in the minds of many? Ought she not to settle these questions once and for all and be done with the matter? Well, if our church should ever attempt to do anything of this kind, then the angels would weep. For that would be to turn traitor to our glorious past. That would be to substitute the iron rule of external authority for the authority of the Spirit of the living God. Then history would repeat itself, and the melancholy story of the gradual corruption of primitive Christianity until it passed little by little into Roman Catholicism would find itself told again in the final apostasy of Methodism.

Let us see, then, if Methodism is prepared to meet the needs of this twentieth century in such matters. What does Methodism to-day consider to be essential? What are the conditions which must be met if one is to be admitted into the Methodist Church and if he is to continue therein as an acceptable member?

Methodism rejoices to face the modern world, with all its critical doubts and scientific theories, breathing the same catholic spirit which characterized her in the days of John Wesley. And Methodism will overcome the unbelief of the twentieth century only as she holds fast to the spirit of her founder. When Methodism comes down to the business of drawing out long definitions of the things which must be believed and insists that "this is the catholic faith: which except a man believe faithfully and firmly he cannot be saved," then will Methodism disown her spiritual heritage and prove false to the trust which she has received from God and our fathers. "Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." "The people that do know their God shall be strong and do exploits." "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost has come upon you." These are the principles which have made us mighty under God. Here lies the secret of our power.

What, then, are the conditions which must be met in order to become a member of the Methodist Church?

Wesley wrote: "There is only one condition previously required—a 'desire to flee from the wrath to come and to be saved from their sins.'" And this one condition stands in the organic law of the church to-day. This is the true catholic spirit. It shuts out no man who believes the fundamental facts of the gospel. It welcomes all who would come to God through Christ. It adds no condition that Christ did not lay down.

But does not Methodism require assent to some creed? Yes. From the very beginning of American Methodism it has required assent to what is known as the "Apostles' Creed." Every adult candidate for baptism is asked if he believes this historic Creed—a Creed in its origin dating back to the earliest centuries and put into the mouth of the candidate as his baptismal confession of faith. But let it be noted that the Apostles' Creed is not in any sense a theological statement, it is rather the setting forth in briefest possible form of the historic facts upon which the Christian church is founded. To make this clear, I give the Creed as it appears in our Methodist Discipline:

"I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth; and in Jesus Christ his only son our Lord; who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead, and buried; the third day he rose again from the dead, he ascended into heaven, and sitteth at the right hand of God the Father Almighty; from thence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead.

"I believe in the Holy Ghost; the holy catholic Church; the communion of saints; the forgiveness of sins; the resurrection of the body; and the life everlasting."

This is the one and only Creed that is required of those who seek membership in the Methodist Church. It is the ancient baptismal confession of the Christian church. It is the Creed of Christendom. All Christians unite in giving assent to this symbol of the faith of the church universal. Methodism, therefore, is no mere sect, but an integral part of the one holy catholic church.

If it be asked, If assent to the Apostles' Creed is a prerequisite to membership in the Methodist Church, what becomes of Wesley's "one condition previously required—a 'desire to flee from the wrath to come and to be saved from their sins.' "? The answer, as a matter of course, is that Wesley's "societies" presupposed the Christian religion, just as a "desire to flee from wrath to come and be saved from sins" presupposes "wrath to come" from which one should flee and belief in a Saviour who alone can "save from sins." Methodism lays down no theological test for membership and allows large liberty of thinking. But faith in the great facts of Christianity is, of course, essential to the being of the church of Jesus Christ.

Another question may be asked: What about the Twenty-five Articles of Religion? Must not every applicant for membership give assent to the Articles of Religion? The answer is: Our Methodism has never made any such requirement. Such requirement would be out of harmony with the spirit and history of Methodism. It would be a long step in the direction of Roman Catholicism. The Articles of Religion are among the "standards of doctrine" of our church and are under the protection of the constitution of the church. They show our historic connection with the great Protestant Reformation. They set forth in theological language the mighty doctrines for the sake of which men were burned at the stake. In harmony with these Articles every preacher and teacher in Methodism is under solemn obligation to speak and teach. But they are not laid down in our Discipline as a creed to be assented to before one can become a member of our church. For men are not first theologians. To require children coming into the church to profess belief in theological and metaphysical statements of doctrine would be a manifest absurdity and an unchristian procedure. And to require busy men and women who have had no opportunity to study theology to affirm that they give full assent to statements of doctrine drawn up by professional theologians would be to retrace our steps and undo the work of the great Methodist revival. It would be to go back to the spirit of the scribes and Pharisees and to leave the simplicity of the gospel of Christ.

Nothing that is said here is intended in any way to discount the value and importance of theology. The writer believes with all his soul in the necessity of theology. If Christianity is to continue a conquering force in the world, it must be able to give an account of its faith. It must be able to present to thoughtful and inquiring minds a reasoned and reasonable statement of the meaning and implications of the fundamental facts of the faith. Only superficial thinkers and men who have never thought at all deery and discount theology. What is said here has only one thing in view: to make it perfectly plain that Methodism lays down no theological tests which must be submitted to before one can become a member of the church.

Many questions settle themselves when once a man has given himself to Christ. This is what Robert Browning had in mind when he wrote:

> I say, the acknowledgment of God in Christ
> Accepted by thy reason solves for thee
> All questions in the earth and out of it
> And hath so far advanced thee to be wise.

Does a man, then, come to Christ in the spirit of John Campbell Sharp?

> I have a life in Christ to live;
> But till I live it must I wait
> Till learning can clear answer give
> To this and that book's date?
> I have a life in Christ to live,
> I have a death in Christ to die;
> But must I wait till science give
> All doubts a full reply?
> Nay! Rather while a sea of doubt
> Is raging wildly round about,
> Questioning of life and death and sin,
> Let me but creep within
> Thy fold, O Christ, and at thy feet
> Take but the lowest seat
> And hear thine awful voice repeat
> In gentlest accent, heavenly sweet:
> "Come unto me and rest:
> Believe me and be blest."

Then Methodism requires nothing more. We welcome him into our fellowship. Such is the catholic spirit of the Methodist Church. And may God save us from the modern creed makers who would have us turn traitor to the spirit and genius of our Methodism!

THE GIFT OF TONGUES.

I Cor. 12:7-11.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

IV.

Study of the "Unknown" Tongues in the Church at Corinth.

This study will embrace a consideration of the fourteenth chapter of Paul's first letter to the Corinthians. However, properly to understand what Paul is saying in the fourteenth chapter, we shall have to study in connection with it the twelfth and thirteenth chapters also. In fact, we shall have to start with the third chapter; because, to interpret rightly any passage of Scripture we should study it in the connection in which it is found.

Beginning, then, with the third chapter, we discover that almost from the day of its organization, the church at Corinth began giving Paul trouble, and he was having to write to them continually to correct their abuses of the privileges and blessings of the gospel. They were extremists—continually running off after some new thing, and were constantly disputing and quarreling among themselves. You will note the following abuses and Paul's correction of them:

1. Divisions and strife. I Cor. 3:1-4: "And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ. For, whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men?"

2. The difference among them concerning the eating of meat offered to idols. To correct this difference among them Paul wrote I Cor. 8.

3. They even abused and perverted the Lord's Supper, which may be seen by reading, I Cor 21-29. They were eating the bread to gluttony and drinking the wine to drunkenness, and Paul reminded them that they had houses in which to eat and drink without having to pervert the Lord's Supper. In closing his rebuke he says: "He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body."

4. They perverted the gift of tongues. Now, just as these extremists in the church at Corinth abused the blessings and privileges of the gospel, likewise they perverted the gift of tongues, and to correct this perversion Paul wrote the twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth chapters of his first letter to the Corinthians. Let us notice some of their abuses of the gift of tongues:

(1) They were glorying in "unknown" tongues. To shame them for this abuse, Paul wrote: "I thank my God, I speak in more tongues than ye all. Yet in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue." (I Cor. 14:18-19.)

(2) Their speaking in "unknown" tongues was hindering the conversion of sinners. Calling their attention to this fact, Paul said: "If therefore the whole church be come together in one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unbelievers, will they not say that ye are mad? But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, he is convinced of all, and thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so, falling down on his face, he will worship God, and report that God is in you." (I Cor. 14:23-25.)

(3). The so-called "unknown" tongues at Corinth had degenerated into an unintelligible gibberish. The proof of this statement may be seen in the fact that this is the first and only time in the New Testament that the gift is called the "unknown" tongues. In every other instance where the gift of tongues is spoken of it is always called "other tongues," or "new tongues." Another proof of its degeneracy at Corinth is to be found in the fact that for the first time an interpreter is needed. Furthermore, I have to say that there was, excepting their unintelligible gibberish, no such thing as the "unknown" tongue. If you will now look in your Bible, reading the fourteenth chapter of Corinthians, verses 2, 4, 13, 14, 19, and 27, you will see that the word "unknown" occurs six times in the whole chapter and that, in every instance, it is written in italics, which means that the word is not in the Greek from which the Bible was translated, but was put there by the translators.

Besides all this, the apostle himself says that with the Corinthians the gift of tongues had become an unintelligible gibberish: "Even things without life, giving sound, whether pipe or harp, except they give a distinction in sounds, how shall it be known what is piped or harped? So likewise ye, except ye utter by the tongue words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall speak into the air. There are, it may be, so many kinds of voices in the world, and none of them is without signification. Therefore, if I know not the meaning of the voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian; and he that speaketh a barbarian unto me. Even so ye, forasmuch as ye are zealous of spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church." (I Cor. 14:7-12.)

(4). Moreover, too many of the Corinthians were speaking at the same time, thereby creating confusion in the church. To correct this disorderly conduct, Paul wrote: "How is it, then, brethren, when ye come together every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation. Let all things be done unto edifying." (I Cor. 14:26.) "For," said he, "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace" (I Cor 15:33).

(5) You will note further that babbling women were mainly the cause of all the confusion in the church at Corinth; so Paul said: "Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak." (1 Cor. 14:34.) The Greek word here translated "speak" means prattle, chatter, jabber; therefore, the apostle was saying, let your prattling, chattering, jabbering women keep silence.

Toward the close of the chapter (1 Cor. 14:40), Paul says, "Let all things be done decently and in order." He closes the twelfth chapter by saying, "Covet the best gifts," and then begins the thirteenth chapter by telling them what the best gift is: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not love, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal." In 1 Cor. 13:8, he says: "Love never faileth; but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away." Then, he closes the chapter by saying, "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love." The significance of this climax of the apostle's argument is that in comparison with love all other gifts are as nothing.

Now, the conclusion of the whole matter is that, in the classification of the gifts of the Spirit, love is the first and best of all, while the gift of tongues is the last and least of all. I close this investigation of the gift of tongues with the following brief summary:

1. The gift of tongues on the day of Pentecost was only an incident to the baptism of the Holy Ghost and, therefore, not necessary to it.

2. The Pentecostal tongues were intelligible, and they were so because the apostles spoke real languages.

3. The power to speak the languages was given for a specific purpose and when that purpose was accomplished, the power was withdrawn.

4. All miraculous gifts, including the gift of tongues, seem to have been withdrawn after the death of the apostles.

5. The Corinthians abused the privileges and blessings of the gospel and perverted the gift of tongues.

6. The Corinthians gloried in the "unknown" tongues.

7. Their speaking in "unknown" tongues hindered the conversion of sinners.

8. The tongues at Corinth had degenerated into an unintelligible gibberish.

9. There is no such thing as the "unknown" tongue; the word "unknown" is not in the Greek from which the Bible was translated, but was inserted by the translators.

10. All the Corinthians were speaking at the same time, thereby creating confusion, which the apostle wrote to correct.

11. Babbling, prattling, chattering women were mainly the cause of all the confusion in the church at Corinth.

12. The best of all the gifts of the Spirit and the one that we should covet above all other gifts is the gift of love. If we have all other gifts and have not love, they will avail us nothing. Hence, the apostle said: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not love, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal."

ANNUAL MEETING OF GENERAL BOARD OF MISSIONS.

By Rev. John S. Chadwick.

The 1922 meeting of the Board of Missions of our church was held April 18-21, in Nashville, Mr. John R. Pepper, of Memphis, presiding. There was practically a full attendance of the membership of the Board, and the session was one of the most interesting and profitable of all of the annual meetings of this Board.

The report of Dr. W. W. Pinson, General Secretary, was a review of achievements worthy of a great church. And, as he said, the story of this advance of a quadrennium "is largely the story of the Missionary Centenary." The total income of the Board for the quadrennium was $13,649,009; for the two Centenary years the average per year was $4,987,054, as against $1,702,803 for 1918. And this does not include all of the Centenary payments—the share of the Church Extension Board, the amounts returned to the Annual Conference Boards of Missions and some other items. Centenary collections to March 31 were approximately $13,500,000, and it is probable that the reports to May 1 will show a total of nearly $14,500,000. This is far short of the amount due January 1—$22,000,000—but it is a record so far in advance of any made previous to 1919 that it is almost unbelievable. Certainly, none would have believed it possible four years ago. We have not done all that we ought to have done, that we could have done; but let us keep in mind the big things that have been done; and let us boost rather than knock.

Appropriations for 1923.

Appropriations made at the 1922 meeting were in amount practically the same as in 1921. And even more so than in 1920 was it evident that the provision of the Centenary program guaranteeing the regular incomes of the Boards was a wise provision. Regular collections for missions during 1921 fell short of the 1920 figures, but the Centenary was there to save the situation. For instance: To hold the regular appropriations for China to the "Standard year" basis, Centenary funds supplied $45,520.30 of the total of $131,527.59; for Japan the Centenary furnished $75,503.82 of the $193,147.10; for Korea, $76,213.51 of the $153,176.95; for Brazil, $38,521.25 of the $102,158.93; for Cuba, $26,577.76 of the $81,871.76; for Mexico, $56,161.69 of the $116,005.19; for Africa, $16,148.44 of the $34,655.00. These deficits are due, in part, to the transfer of a number of regular specials to Centenary Specials, not altogether to shortage in payments on assessments.

The totals to the various foreign fields on regular appropriations appear in the foregoing statement. Centenary appropriations to the various fields for 1923, these figures including the "deficit" amounts, already mentioned, are: China, $228,860.30; Japan, $246,273.59; Korea, $192,789.93; Brazil, 323,389.56; Cuba, $84,578.81; Mexico, $103,723.87; Africa, $27,363.73; Europe, $505,365; Siberia and Manchuria, $78,150. The grand total of regular and Centenary appropriations to the foreign fields, not including Woman's Work, is $2,630,188.

Woman's Work.

In the work of the women there was no "deficit" problem—this a tribute to the loyalty and liberality of the women of Southern Methodism. To the foreign fields the appropriations were as follows—the first-named figures in each case being regular, the second Centenary appropriations: Africa, $2,900 and $14,120; Brazil, $34,527 and $153,100; China, $91,534 and $96,513; Cuba, $12,606 and $36,759; Japan, $20,066 and $66,598; Korea, $63,193 and $91,839; Mexico, $52,938 and $86,374. The totals, including Scarritt Bible and Training School, administrative, contingent fund, and other miscellaneous items, are: Regular, $355,434; Centenary, $559,424. The grand total is $914,858 for foreign work.

The Home Field.

Regular appropriations to the home field, on assessments, total $165,136.00. Out of Centenary funds the home field receives $608,855—the grand total, $783,991, and this does not include the ten per cent of all Centenary payments that are returned to Annual Conference Boards of Missions, a reasonable estimate on this $400,000. Nor does it include payments on regular assessments by Annual Conferences to Conference missions. Including all of these items, the total is at least $1,500,000—and more than $1,000,000 of this is from the Centenary. The appropriations for Woman's Work in the same field are: Regular, $259,252.39; Centenary, $197,149.42—total, $456,401.81. If we add to these the amount of Centenary funds to the Church Extension Board, the grand total for home work goes well beyond $2,000,000. Because of the Centenary, we are carrying through a bigger program for the home field than ever before. And a larger percentage of our contributions for missions goes to home missions than under the plan of the "before-Centenary" days.

DEATH OF REV. J. H. BROWN.

Dear Brother Carley: Our beloved brother, Rev. J. H. Brown, passed away last Sunday afternoon at 5:15, and was quietly laid to rest in the Jonesboro cemetery Monday evening, with almost the whole town present. His casket was literally covered with flowers by his friends. The services were held in the Methodist church, with the pastors in the town assisting. Rev. A. J. Patton, Protestant Methodist pastor, and Rev. A. M. Murry, Baptist pastor, offered beautiful tributes to his life. Rev. W. A. Hart, a superannuate of the Texas Conference, offered an effective prayer. Brother Brown leaves a sainted wife, three sons, and two sweet daughters to mourn their loss. He was a remarkable character.

A suitable memoir will be furnished the Advocate later.

I went down last night to wire you, but the office was closed, and I feared it wouldn't reach you in time for this week's issue to wire you later.

Yours fraternally,

Jonesboro, La., April 25. J. C. PRICE.

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The session of the District Conference of the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which met at Opelousas on April 26 and 27, will be long carried in the memory of those who were present as a very delightful and profitable conference.

Rev. J. B. Williams, presiding elder, was at his best and made a happy and acceptable presiding officer.

Twenty-two preachers of the district were present; two were absent—one was ill, and the other away in another part of the State holding a meeting for a brother preacher.

There were forty-one laymen present, representatives from nearly every charge.

The reports made by the pastors of their respective works all had the note of joy and optimism. Many had held revivals resulting in numbers of conversions and accessions.

The departments of church activities, such as Sunday school, Epworth League, and Woman's Missionary Society, all received attention and showed marked progress and improvement.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, of Minden, represented the Christian Education movement.

Rev. E. N. Evans, of New Orleans, represented the Rescue Home in New Orleans, and told some of the splendid work being accomplished by that institution.

Mr. S. S. Thomas, Secretary of the Missionary Centenary Movement, presented some facts and features concerning the work in Louisiana that were next to startling and very heartening to all who were privileged to hear it, and it is a great regret that there were not more Methodists present to get such information.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, General Field Secretary, and Miss Caroline Hess, Elementary Superintendent of the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board, and Rev. J. W. Pearson, of Manfield, represented the Sunday school interests in fine shape. Such features as Children's Week, Elementary Department, the Program of Work, Standard Training School, were emphasized. A Standard Training School is under way for this district to be held some time this fall at Lake Charles.

The preaching, morning and evening, was of a high spiritual order. There is no church where the record of the church activities is provided for any more thoroughly or systematically than the Methodist church, and the Report of the Committee on Quarterly Conference Records said, "Those records submitted were in good condition."

The lay delegates elected to the Annual Conference were: F. S. Hale, New Iberia; Mrs. B. M. Lambert, Maxie; R. J. O'Neal and J. H. Cain, DeRidder; R. C. Holt, Rayne; S. H. Porter, Zwolie; J. W. Fontenot, Crowley; Mrs. S. L. Riggs, Opelousas. Alternates: Mrs. F. C. Shute, Opelousas, and A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles.

Percy Owen Lee, of Lake Charles, was licensed to preach.

J. L. Ballard, of Opelousas, was elected as District Lay Leader.

New Iberia was selected as the place of meeting in 1923.

Ad Interim Licensing Committee: Rev. W. W. Holmes, H. W. Rickey, Louis Hoffpauir and F. M. Freeman.

The District Sunday school officers elected for the ensuing year were: A. M. Mayo, Secretary; Mrs. J. W. Wynn, Rayne, Elementary Dept.; Mrs. J. H. Cain, DeRidder, Int.-Sr Dept.; Mrs. B. M. Lambert, Maxie, Young People's Dept.; J. L. Ballard, Opelousas, Adult Dept.; Rev. S. A. Seegers. Patterson, Teacher Training Dept.; Mrs. F. M. Freeman, Crowley, Missionary Dept. The pastor, Rev. S. L. Riggs, and his wife, made excellent hosts to the great joy and comfort of all the delegates. In his welcome he reminded the delegates that it was in Opelousas more than seventy-six years ago that the Louisiana Conference was organized, making that church old and historic.

A. M. MAYO, Secretary.

INVESTMENT IN LIFE.

There are several boys and girls who should attend the Epworth League Assembly, but, for financial reasons, will not be able to go unless some one pays their way. Their going may mean a life of efficient service to the church. It is worth while.

Fifteen dollars will pay all the expense, including railroad fare, board, and lodging.

Would you not like to invest fifteen dollars in one of these boys and girls? Then, write me. The Assembly meets June 5 to 11, Whitworth College. Will try to see that none but the worthy are selected. Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS, President,
Miss. Conference Epworth League Assembly.
Meridian, Miss.

REPORT, CENTENARY CAMPAIGN, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Up to April 26, there has been reported to my office a little more than $20,000 collected during the campaign for collecting the 60 per cent due. A great many churches have not reported yet; some are still working. Where the plan was carried out and every subscriber seen, some money was collected, and others promised to pay later.

There were six churches that reported more money collected during the campaign than they collected during the years 1920 and 1921; and twenty-eight collected more than in 1921, and twenty-seven nearly as much as for 1921. Thirty-nine churches paid 60 per cent and over; and, if all had reported, there might have been others.

Please keep up your collecting in a systematic way until all the pledges are collected.

Yours for service,
W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Centenary Treasurer,
Conference Missionary Secret'y.

TO PASTORS OF JACKSON DISTRICT.

Dear Brethren: The District Conference will meet in Harrisville, Miss., Tuesday, June 27, at 9 o'clock a. m. Please have your church conference to elect delegates during the month of May, sending a list to me and one to Rev. I. H. Sells, Harrisville, Miss.

If the assessment for District work has not been taken on your charge, kindly take an offering before District Conference. We would like to be able to report cost of all repairs and improvements paid at that time.

Hoping we may have a gracious and helpful meeting, I am, Yours fraternally,

M. L. BURTON, P. E.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

It has been found expedient to change the opening of the Baton Rouge District Conference from the afternoon of May 30 to Wednesday, May 31, at nine a.m. The opening sermon will be preached Tuesday evening at eight o'clock by Rev. L. W. Cain, of Franklinton. Let all members be present for opening sermon.

The following committees are appointed:

For License and Recommendation—C. C. Miller, C. W. Crisler, L. C. Wilson.

For Recommendation for Orders—J. W. Booth, F. B. Hill, A. J. Coburn.

Other committees will be announced at the opening session of the conference.

Let the pastors elect their delegates as soon as possible and send a list to Rev. H. W. Ledbetter at Hammond, and also a list to me.

For instruction as to number of delegates each charge is entitled to, consult page 73 of the Minutes and paragraph 57 of the Discipline.

DIGGING FOR GOLD IN JAPAN.

By R. S. Stewart, Jr.

Second Letter.

Gotoji is a town of 20,000 population in one of the coal mining centers of Japan. We have a church of about 25 members here, and I was invited by the presiding elder to conduct a revival for them.

After the first service I walked through the main street with my helper and saw advertisements of three protracted meetings that week in as many Buddhist temples of the town. The meetings were conducted by well-known priests from other places, and were of from three to five days' duration. The Buddhist religion is fighting to maintain its place of influence, which is undoubtedly large in Japan, but there is much religious unrest and new religions spring up frequently and make astonishing progress among the people. The times are good for Christian evangelism. The unrest which drives the people to these other religions, new and old, induces a number of them to listen to Him who said, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

There is no mass movement in Japan. A congregation of from 75 to 150 is considered good for almost any of our churches. There is no present indication of a nation being born in a day. Soul-saving involves the hardest kind of labor and persistent effort, but yet in every place there are those whose hearts God has opened, and we are seeing manifestations of the power of grace, and we are having revivals, though small in their scope, yet as genuine in character as you ever saw anywhere.

Incidental to the meetings at Gotoji were invitations from the two prefectural high schools to speak to the students. At the first I spoke for an hour on "Ideals Turned Into Flesh and Blood Through Jesus Christ." There is a regulation against "teaching religion" in the public schools, but to my own mind there is a difference in "teaching religion" and "preaching the Gospel of salvation." At any rate, 700 young men, most of whom had never heard the Christian message before, listened attentively and afterwards in his classroom the dean commended it to his students.

The Girls' High School also listened to my message very courteously. I have never seen more attentive audiences than these student groups. There are 400 students in this school, and at the beginning of the meeting there was one Christian among the teachers. There are now three, and possibly four, but more about that later. The girls seem to be greatly interested in music. I heard an organ in a neighboring room laboriously plodding its way to a tune, and the principal told me they had a music teacher. "How many pupils take music?" I asked. "All of them," was his reply.

Pastoral visiting was a delight in this meeting. Such kindliness as is shown by the Christians of Japan to the missionary and pastor has never been excelled. A profusion of tea, chocolate, cakes and fruit meets us continually, until we are embarrassed by their hospitality. The pastoral worker needs not only a pure heart and a clear head, but he must have an asbestos stomach also, or fall a victim to the kindness of the people. For six days we preached in the little chapel, and God was present in blessing from the first. Backsliders were reclaimed and the church strengthened. A member confessed that he was estranged from his brother and violating the laws of his country. He sincerely repented, and was happily restored.

There were other similar experiences, but one that I remember with much gratitude was a visit we received at our hotel from three women teachers in the Girls' High School. One of them was a teacher of English and a college graduate. Another had a diploma of equal value from a higher Normal School. They were all three young women of exceptional ability and personality. The first mentioned was a Christian who had heard about sanctification and had come to inquire about the way of holiness. She brought her two non-Christian friends with her. For two hours that Sunday afternoon we preached and prayed, and afterwards gave thanks to God, for He had blessed the hearts of us all. The first mentioned of these girls said, with a shining face, that she had just realized that it was through the power of God that we are made clean, and she rejoiced for the purity that had been wrought by faith in her heart. The other two clearly testified to forgiveness and faith in Christ.

That night at the last service we asked those whom God had called into the ministry to come to the altar. Three young women responded and offered themselves as Bible women. Two young men also offered themselves for the ministry. About twelve converts were baptized, including teachers, trained nurses, students and others. Not a mass movement, nor anything extraordinary for God to do, but only the "cloud no larger than a man's hand" that encourages us to expect quickly the spiritual downpour which is needed by a thirsty land.

THE CONTENT OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

By T. H. Lipscomb, B. D.

II.

The Christian religion deals primarily with man and his destiny. Its emphasis is primarily not upon things temporal, but upon things eternal, and it would purify and transform the earthly by the vision of the heavenly. So Christian education must concern itself with the whole life of man—on both this side and the other side the grave; and its distinctive character and glory is that it recognizes man as an immortal spirit, having concerns and interests infinitely other than, and infinitely higher than, anything seen and temporal.

The fundamental question underlying all education and determining its direction is this: What is man? and what should he become?

Secular education answers: A denizen of earth, to be fitted for useful, successful and happy living and good citizenship, by information and training on all subjects and relationships that concern him here. It knows of and concerns itself with nothing other or beyond. As Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, former United States Commissioner of Education, admitted in the Commencement Address at Vanderbilt University in 1909: "It has nothing to do with religious sanctions and motives, and that unseen world with which religion is concerned."

Christian education answers: Man is an immortal spirit, akin to God yet estranged from him through sin, to be fitted not merely for worthy terrestrial life, but supremely and inclusively, for immortality and celestial fellowship; through an apprehension of what he is, first of all, and aspiration after what he may become, through the revelation of life and immortality in Christ Jesus.

Christian education is, then, infinitely nobler and broader than any other in its conception of man and his destiny. It lights up the very heavens with glory, and with more than telescopic vision sees and speaks to man of glorious things, "which eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive," except as given him by divine revelation. Secular education is pitifully narrow and circumscribed; and, worse, lacks the potency of great sanctions and motives, such as religion offers, and which, as Dr. Brown admits, "are essential to the formation of worthy character."

But the pity of it and the peril of it to-day is that professedly Christian education is thinking almost exclusively in secular terms pertaining almost exclusively to terrestrial interests; and "the unseen world with which religion has to do" is scouted as "otherworldliness" by men who are supposed to recognize that the lost balance of the world can be restored only by the vision of eternity bringing the sense of personal responsibility to God. The "whole life of man," a phrase many delight in, is limited in all their thought and expression to his economic, social, physical, intellectual, moral concerns in this world. It all focuses on the eighty years at most of earthly existence; and the "whole life of man" is rarely used as indicating his eternal existence—as well as temporal—which is its noblest and distinctively Christian sense. I pointed out in my first article how generally the campaign literature of our educational movement concerned itself with saving America, making investments safe, withstanding Bolshevism, making our boys "leaders of men," and establishing an "ideal social order;" and I repeat now what I said then, that Christianity refuses to function when its celestial ends are thus subordinated to temporal advantages. The temporal ends are wrought only as the heavenly vision shines clear upon the individual and national soul.

So the distinctive task of Christian education is to keep steadily in view the nature and the destiny of man—"to glorify God and enjoy him forever"—and to bring such instruction and sanctions to bear upon his mind and conscience as will enable him to attain the mark of the prize of his high calling, together with all other useful knowledge the impartation of which it shares with secular schools.

But if Christianity has anything distinctive and certain to offer, it must have received it by revelation and have it in authoritative form from the God who alone knows of a surety concerning these matters transcending all things seen and temporal, and undiscoverable by mortals dwelling only on this side the great gulf. So a Book of Revelation, divine in origin and authoritative, is the sine qua non of Christian education as distinct from philosophic speculation and poetic dreams and hopes. Such a Book the Christian religion has as its most priceless treasure, and the conflict to-day between light and darkness is over, whether that Book is what it claims to be and what the church has ever believed it to be, of God, or whether it is of men.

So, as the teacher takes the Book in hand the first question to be asked and answered by himself and all is: What is this Book? Is it God's authoritative and revealed Word, wherein "holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," inspired of God? or is it "The best religious thought of the race," the best that "the religious geniuses of the race" have been able to discover about God, as I heard our Educational Director General put it, or is it "an expression of communal or group religious consciousness," to use another prominent Methodist's phrase; and is Christian education only the imparting to mankind "the best thought of the race" along all lines? Is this Bible a piece of literature originating with man, ancient literature, and very full of errors and imperfections at that, which it shall be the pleasure of the teacher and students to criticize and revise? Or is it the revealed Word of God, which though heaven and earth may pass away shall endure forever, which they accept as such, and to which they go with earnest and prayerful desire to comprehend in some measure at least its exceeding depth and fullness?

To the great body of ministers and laymen in the church the answer taken for granted is that the Bible is the revealed and authoritative Word of God, which we study in reverence and humility, using our intellects primarily, as in all study, to comprehend and understand it; but it is a lamentable fact that in many professedly Christian colleges and universities such is not the attitude assumed or the spirit in which instruction is given. And I do not speak without definite knowledge. On my accepting the Chair of English Bible in one of our universities, a Doctor of Philosophy asked me, "Are you going to teach the Bible as literature or as religion?" and I was frequently advised by the Dean, the Acting Chancellor concurring, against making the religious emphasis strong, "as the courses were required." A theological professor even told me that the "experts" who are advising our Sunday School Board warn the writers of our Sunday school literature against making the moral emphasis too strong, especially for boys between the ages of twelve and fifteen! An eminent educator in Southern Methodism, in pleading for "liberty" for our professors to express and promulgate views at variance with accepted teachings, when answer was made that truth is not an unknown thing to the Christian church cynically inquired, in Pilate's phrase, "Will the gentleman please tell us what is truth?" indicating an agnostic, rationalistic attitude toward divine truth as ever sought and never found. Such an attitude I affirm is not Christian. At one of our Southern Methodist universities a scholarly professor of theology, after an address before the Faculty Club, maintained that neither in theology nor in any other branch of knowledge is anything established, certain, sure, beyond question. On being asked whether, after tearing down the whole structure of Christian theology, he did not rebuild it in harmony with the Pauline system and the Apostles' Creed, he cried out, "God forbid that I should rebuild the Pauline theology. His cosmogony (account of creation) has been entirely superseded;" and the Creed he then attacked, saying the Virgin Birth is "one of the weakest attested things in the New Testament."

In reading an article recently on German rationalism in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries and its destructive effect, the parallel seen in our educational circles to-day was appalling. It said:

"German rationalism sprang from theologians eminent in the church, and it professedly honored the Scriptures as a valuable summary of the highest religious truths." "Its distinguishing trait consisted in erecting the human understanding into a supreme judge over the Word of God, and thus by implication denying the importance and even necessity of any miraculous revelation whatever." The fundamental maxim of rationalism in the Netherlands, it went on to say, was De omnibus dubitandem—"concerning everything there is room for doubt"—precisely the avowed and proud attitude of professedly Christian scholars and educators in the world to-day, as I had found to my surprise in a Methodist school. But we read further: "The name rationalism was as yet wholly unknown, and in outward form the authority of the Scriptures was still almost universally admitted." How true to-day also! Then sound doctrine began to be discounted, "asserting that, after all, piety and love were the only things essential," "forgetting the danger from assaults of false teachers." "By Semler the whole circle of orthodox landmarks was thrown into confusion." "The inner conviction of one's own truth-loving heart was held to be the sole test of the inspiration of a book." (What a pretty phrase, and how modern it sounds!) But note the conclusion. "From the lawless subjectivism of Semler the descent was easy to the most absurd and degrading consequences." "Criticism, when left unguided by any fixed principle of objective truth, was found to be fruitless and to lead only to destruction." And so it is to-day also; and our modern scholars who are but revamping old heresies under the plea of keeping abreast of the age, are but leading us in their "lawless subjectivism" to spiritual destruction.

So we affirm that our attitude toward the Bible is fundamental in Christian education, and the issue as between unbelief and faith, Christian and anti-Christian, centers in the Bible, (1) what it is; and (2) consequently, how we shall teach it.

Let go the supernatural origin and authority of the Bible, assume toward it the rationalistic attitude just pointed out, and the lie has been given to the Book itself, as to its claims and contents, and no Christian study of it, or teaching of it, is possible; for the spirit of Christian humility, reverence, and docility has been supplanted by intellectual pride, born of unbelief, and reveling henceforth in the gradual repudiation of everything which has been most surely believed by devout students of the Word of God in all ages. To call such instilling of doubts, denial of doctrines, and repudiations of history and miracles as folk-lore, myths, fables, romances, etc., Christian education, is a profanation which must cause glee in hell, as devils see their own work so effectively done by Doctors of Divinity and at the expense of the church.

The very existence of a personal, holy God of love, who cares for us, is unthinkable apart from a divine revelation as to man's origin, duty, and destiny; questions on which man has such need of certain light, and questions the answer to which, as all history and philosophy show, he has never been able to discover for himself. Either there is no God (the ultimate rationalistic conclusion), or he has revealed himself in some clear, authoritative form such as we have in the holy Scriptures.

Granting the existence of such revelation, what is the reasonable attitude of man, the finite creature, toward that revelation from God, the Infinite Creator? There are two uses of the human intellect. The primary and most general use is to comprehend and understand; a secondary, to judge, criticise and revise. To assume a critical superior attitude toward even a work on chemistry, much less the Bible, before attempting to understand it is irrational folly, making progress in knowledge and qualification for criticism impossible. To assume to revise the Constitution by a supreme court judge is some-

THE SMALL THINGS.

By Honoria Traill.

A sunbeam slipped through prison bars,
So silently, so swift;
Yet from a soul all wrapt in gloom
A burden seemed to lift.

A flower in a city bloomed,
So pure, so frail, so fair;
Yet strong enough to bear a heart
To heaven's gate in prayer.

A little bird snug in the dark,
So brave, so brown, so small;
Yet fears were calmed, for God, we read,
Still marks the sparrow's fall.

A candle in a casement gleamed,
So dull, so dim the light;
Yet to the prodigal returned,
The stars were not so bright.

A sheep upon the mountain strayed,
So weak, so wild a thing;
Yet, when the shepherd brought it home
It made the angels sing.

God crumbles kingdoms into dust,
So lost, so low they lie;
Yet He'll not quench the smoking flax
Nor pass the bruised reed by.

IN FICHY'S FASTNESS.

"Keep away from the river! And keep away from Dan Tolben!"

It was Mayor Ingram speaking to his son Clyde. Dan was Clyde's best friend, and the river had been their best playmate—a dangerous one, for it was really an arm of the sea, rising and falling with the changing tide.

Perhaps it was because Dan had recently come to town that he was suspected by the mayor of being at the bottom of several acts of wrong-doing, including the theft of some nuts, several valuable trinkets, and last and most unforgivable, the disappearance of Fichy, the mayor's pet monkey.

"Why, dad!" protested Clyde, "Dan's the smartest boy in town. He knows how to make a boat sail with the wind or against it, and he can dive and float, and"—

"Remember what I say," said his father, finally.

So, instead of making shingle boats and casting them adrift on the estuary, as he and Dan had been doing every evening, Clyde joined other neighborhood boys in a big game of "Yard's Off." It was his turn to throw the stick, and he had to race from a hiding-place. He found a solid-looking barrel standing just outside the retaining wall that bordered the edge of the high cliff near where the game was in progress. Into it he jumped with such force that the ground beneath was loosened and he fell. The barrel struck the water side on. Unfortunately, there was no one near to give the alarm.

Recovering from the shock, Clyde rolled about to bring a portion of the heading that had not been knocked in, beneath him, as he felt himself being carried seaward on the outgoing tide.

Here was adventure! Suppose he floated out into the open ocean before the tide turned? Though he called as loudly as he could, his voice was not heard by people passing along the high river banks. He drifted swiftly. He was not very uncomfortable in his curled-up position, and, in spite of his realization of the danger he was in, he fell asleep. It was dark when he awoke and found that he was close inshore, under a wall of rock. Putting out his hand, he felt for a landing place. There was none. He managed to climb out of the barrel and sit astride it, pushing it free of the perpendicular rocks as he was borne along.

"If Dan had been caught like this," Clyde thought, "he would have turned this old barrel into a boat and made it take him wherever he wanted to go."

He was at the mercy of the swift water, and he was in danger of striking so forcibly against the cliff that the barrel would be broken to pieces. Indeed, that is just what happened as he swept suddenly around a bend and was sent sprawling on a small level place. He lay resting there for a few moments until he felt the water rising about him.

"Why, I've been drifting up the river! And I thought I was almost at the mouth!" he ejaculated, springing up. He pulled loose a barrel stave and began to climb the precipitous cliff, but he had hard work of it, having to dig away earth and pry out small rocks, in order to make foot and hand-holds as he went up. He labored anxiously, for he knew the tide came in rapidly, and he must be quick if he saved himself from being washed away. Soon he came to a small cave over a shelving rock and saw a pair of bright eyes fixed upon him in the darkness.

"Who is it?" he demanded, and then held his breath with astonishment, for no answer, no response of any kind, came to his question. He sat quietly, keeping his barrel stave in readiness for any attack that might be made upon him by the strange man or beast just inside. The moments passed in tense, silent staring.

"I've got to keep awake till morning," he was repeating to himself, though he was so tired that he could scarcely keep his eyelids from closing. After a long time, he put out his left hand in order to shift his position slightly. His fingers closed on something made of leather.

"Dad's pocketbook!" his first thought was. "I've found the thief's hiding-place!" was the next. With the third thought he challenged the other occupant of the cave.

"Dan Tolben, is it you there?" Still no answer. Clyde had one satisfaction in that horrible silence. If he came safely out of his present situation, he could prove to his father and all the suspecting neighborhood that at least Dan was innocent of stealing the purse.

Weariness had almost overcome him when he heard some one calling his name. Forgetful for the moment of the terrifying presence so close at hand, he shouted with all his might, "Here I am, dad!"

Down came a rope past the cave entrance, but before he could grasp it he was pushed to the very edge of the rock and knew by the dangling rope end that the unknown being had rushed out to be first to save himself.

"Fichy!" he heard his father say. It had been the monkey there all the time! Fichy was the thief, and that was why there had been no answer to his challenging words.

"Are you all right down there, Clyde?" asked the mayor.

"Yes. Have you got a lantern or flashlight, dad?" asked Clyde in turn.

"Here!" the rope was pulled up and a flashlight came down on the end of it. Clyde went carefully over the floor of Fichy's stronghold. There, among nutshells and other rubbish, were his mother's spoons, his sister's bracelet, and his own fob! He gathered them into his pockets and came out, fastened the rope around his waist and cried—

"Pull away, dad!"

And when he had told the searching party of his night's experiences the first thing his father said was:

"You get Dan Tolben to show you how to manage a raft, and you practice swimming with him. It's time you learned." Yetta Kay Stoddard in The Congregationalist.

All business and all work should lift up, and not hold down; it should make free, and not enslave; it should ennoble and not degrade. It is as honorable to make shoes or anchors as to paint pictures or write books. The shoemaker should learn the secret through his work of finding the sandals of manhood for his own feet. The blacksmith should learn, through the making of anchors for his great ships, to find the anchor that is to hold his own soul to the truth amid the storms of life.—Rev. J. W. Lee.

PERSEVERANCE.

Toil on, faint not, keep watch and pray:
Be wise the erring soul to win;
Go forth into the world's highway,
Compel the wanderer to come in.
Toil on, and in thy toil rejoice;
For toil comes rest, for exile home,
Soon shalt thou hear the Bridegroom's voice—
The midnight peal—Behold, I come.

THE DEATH OR REV. J. H. BROWN.

The Louisiana Conference is called upon to mourn the passing of another of its veterans—Rev. J. H. Brown, whose death occurred at Jonesboro, La., on Sunday, April 23. He was a good and true man, who served his church faithfully throughout the years of his active life, and then, the days of activity over, quietly and confidently awaited the summons that called him to his reward on high. The Advocate joins with those who mourn because of the death of this servant of God, but it rejoices because he has entered into a "land that is fairer than day." We have the promise of a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

A BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS.

We are glad to learn that the Board of Missions, in line with the suggestion contained in a recent editorial in this paper, has memorialized the General Conference to make adequate provision for the rapidly developing home mission work of the church by providing for the organization of a separate Board of Home Missions. That the General Conference will give due consideration to this important matter, we have not the least doubt; and we trust that the evident reasons for the establishment of such a Board will result in action that will insure for the future a constructive program that will enable the church to meet its obligations in this most important field.

THE EDITOR ABSENT FROM THE OFFICE.

The Editor of the Advocate expects to leave New Orleans on the evening of May 8 for St. Louis, where he will go to perform his mission as fraternal delegate from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the General Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, and, in company with Dr. W. W. Alexander, of Atlanta, Ga., to consult with the educational leaders of that church concerning the future administration of Paine College, this mission being undertaken at the request of Dr. O. E. Goddard.

Returning from St. Louis, the Editor expects to stop at Hot Springs, Ark., to make a report of his mission to St. Louis and to observe the proceedings of the General Conference there in session. The length of his stay at Hot Springs is not yet determined, though it will probably not be long—his personal exchequer not being equal to the requirements of a protracted visit.

During the editor's absence from the office, Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of the First Methodist Church of this city, has kindly consented to look after the editorial affairs of the Advocate. Brother Harper is too well known to the readers of the Advocate to need an introduction—both his pulpit and his editorial ability are matters of record.

The correspondents of the editor will, of course, understand that any delay in answering their communications will be due to his absence from the office.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

A note from Rev. B. F. Bullard, of Calhoun City, Miss., says that all goes well on his charge.

"All goes well," writes Rev. J. B. Randolph, of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. A. L. McQueen, of Mt. Hermon, La., writes that the work of the Franklinton circuit is progressing nicely.

The editor regrets being out of the office when Rev. H. B. Hines, of Donaldsonville, La., called on Wednesday of last week.

Several members of the Greenville team of the Cotton States Baseball League have identified themselves with the Big Brothers Sunday school class at Greenville, Miss.

Work has been begun upon needed repairs to the parsonage at Coahoma, Miss., where Rev. Del Longgrear is pastor. Among other improvements, a new roof will be put on.

According to the figures of Dr. E. P. Allredge, official statistician, the Southern Baptist Convention reports 240,974 members received by baptism during the associational year of 1921.

The New Orleans District Conference will convene in Slidell, La., on Monday evening, May 8, and continue through Wednesday, May 10. Rev. W. H. Giles is the host of the conference.

Mrs. E. C. Durel, of Biloxi, Miss., underwent an operation for appendicitis at a hospital in this city on Tuesday of this week. She is a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Turner, of Shreveport, La.

Rev. J. W. York, of New Albany, Miss., reports splendid progress in his work. Congregations are increasing, and the people are growing in grace. The gospel still attracts the people.

Rev. Frank C. Collins has arrived from Emory University to take up the work of the pastorate at McDonoghville, La., to which work he was appointed to succeed the late Rev. J. D. Harper. The Advocate office enjoyed a call from him one day last week.

Rev. Martin Hebert, presiding elder of the French Mission District, Louisiana Conference, requests us to say that the French Mission District Conference has been postponed on account of threatening high water.

The Sunday school attendance in the Methodist churches of Shreveport, La., last Sunday was as follows: First Church, 1503; Noel Memorial, 535; Mangum Memorial, 281; Texas Avenue, 248; Cedar Grove, 149; Bossier City, 103.

Rev. J. W. Dorman, our pastor at Louisville, Miss., recently underwent an operation at the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn. He stood the operation well. His many friends will pray that he may soon be restored to perfect health.

Col. J. C. Hardy, superintendent of the great Sunday school at Gulfport, Miss., was in the city on Wednesday of last week and paid an appreciated call at the Advocate office. He gave a fine account of Methodist activities in the city of Gulfport.

A revival meeting will begin at Booneville, Miss., on May 28. The pastor, Rev. H. P. Lewis, will be assisted by Rev. J. O. Hanes, one of our general evangelists, and his choir leader, Mr. Waltermire. Plans are being made for a great meeting.

Rev. R. O. Wier, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, but now serving the Batson and Saratoga charge in Texas, passed through New Orleans this week en route to Atlanta, Ga. He favored the Advocate office with a call on Tuesday morning.

Mr. Homer E. Turner, one of the prohibition inspectors for Louisiana, whose headquarters have been in New Orleans, will have headquarters at Shreveport after May 15. He is a son of Rev. A. W. Turner, superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League.

President and Mrs. Harding are now life members of the American Bible Society. The certificates of membership were presented at the White House by a small committee from the Society, headed by Mr. Hughes, Secretary of State, who is a vice president of the Society.

Bishop W. P. Thirkield, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, whose episcopal area embraces Mexico and a part of South America, and who was formerly in charge of the New Orleans area, passed through the city this week, being en route to New York on official business. He honored the Advocate office with a call on Tuesday morning.

The April number of the Methodist Quarterly Review has reached our desk. We have not yet had time to read it, but the table of contents is an appealing one. An article on "The Racial Integrity of the American Negro" is contributed by Professor A. H. Shannon, a graduate of Millsaps College and well known in the educational world.

Mrs. N. J. Eubanks, widow of Francis Asbury Eubanks, and daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. M. Merrit, died at the family residence in Durant on Easter Sunday morning, and was buried next day. Her daughter, Mrs. Mary Weatherby, is Lady Supervisor at the Methodist Orphans' Home in Jackson. The Advocate extends sympathy to the bereaved.

The situation caused by high water in the Mississippi and the Yazoo deltas is serious in the extreme. Thousands of acres of fertile land are already overflowed and there is danger that the water will not recede in time to make a crop this year. We are profoundly grateful that no loss of life has yet been reported from the overflowed districts.

We are indebted to the Calendar, issued by Chaplain Randolph, of Fort McPherson, Ga., for a new word—tetramethyldiaminodiphenylmethane, which is said to be the name of a new coal tar product. As Chaplain Randolph says, a few more words like that will increase the doctor's course of study another year and his bill at least fifty cents a mile.

We learn from the Daily Leader, of Ruston, La., that Miss Mabel Vaughan, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. R. W. Vaughan, was married to Mr. William Manning, on Tuesday evening, April 25, at the residence of the bride's parents, the ceremony being performed by Rev. K. W. Dodson and Rev. N. E. Joyner. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy young couple. They will make their home in Dallas, Texas.

The Advocate is indebted to the American Red Cross for a copy of the Handbook of Social Resources of the United States, which, in convenient form, gives an exhaustive summary of the agen-cles at work in the United States for the promotion of social welfare. It is sold at $1 per copy.

Rev. H. B. Cottrell, father of Rev. T. B. Cottrell, our pastor at Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss., celebrated his ninety-first birthday recently. A number of the members of Gibson Memorial "stormed" him at the residence of his son on the happy occasion, and presented him with flowers, fruit and other valuable gifts. "Grandpa," as he is affectionately known, entertained his visitors with story and song, and preached them a little sermon. He is in good health, and is looking forward to many more happy days with his loved ones and friends. The Advocate joins with them in praying the richest blessings of heaven upon him.

A number of new missionary leaflets have just been published by the General Board of Missions, and may be had free of charge upon application to the Board, Box 510, Nashville, Tenn. Among these leaflets are: "Did You Know," which gives the salient facts about the remarkable progress made in our mission work within the last two years; "Japan in The Crucible," which tells the story of Japan's remarkable development within recent years; "Pushing Toward the Pole," the romantic story of the establishment of the Siberia-Manchuria Mission. The Quadrennial Report of the General Secretary of the Board of Missions, surveying the progress of the last four years, may also be had upon request.

At the meeting of the Commission on Unification, held in Nashville, Tenn., on April 17, a majority report was adopted recommending a continuance of the negotiations with the Methodist Episcopal Church looking toward unification, and that, under certain conditions, authority be given the Commission to call a joint convention to consider a plan for unification and report to the succeeding General Conferences of the two churches. A minority report was filed, the concluding sentence of which is: "To transmit without recommendation the action of the last General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, an action to which your Commission has had no opportunity to give discussion or even consideration and to leave to your godly judgment to determine your own action thereupon, seems to us to be all that we can do with propriety." The minority report is signed by Bishop Collins Denny, Dr. J. E. Dickey, Judge T. D. Samford, Judge J. G. McGowen, Judge H. H. White, and Dr. H. N. Snyder.

We take the following from the Mississippi Sun, published in Charleston, Miss., of the date of April 27: "With a farewell sermon delivered last night, there was brought to an end the most notable series of addresses ever given in this city; a series which began two weeks ago, and which throughout the period has crowded the Methodist church twice a day with congregations absorbed in the teachings of one who is a master of pulpit eloquence, who is imbued with broadest sympathies and understanding, who is tolerant of the faults of this sad world, who has no frown for innocent diversion, whose power of reasoning is strong, and who has a happy faculty of accompanying his logic with anecdote and sparkling epigram, which both adorn and elucidate his reasoning. Charleston was particularly fortunate in having the rare privilege of listening to the Rev. Dr. S. A. Steel."

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. J. J. Garner, Baldwyn, Miss., 2; Rev. R. G. Lord, Ahbeville, Miss., 2; Rev. S. S. Holladay, Pelican, La., 5; Rev. J. H. French, Evergreen, La., 3; Rev. A. S. J. Neill, Belcher, La., 3; Rev. Robt. Selby, Vicksburg, Miss., 11; Rev. H. J. Moore, Forest, Miss., 2; Rev. J. W. York, New Albany, Miss., 2; Rev. B. F. Bullard, Calhoun City, Miss., 3; Rev. H. P. Lewis, Booneville, Miss., 6.

A GOOD TURN ELECTED HIM.

James Davis, for years Congressman from Missouri, told at a Washington Scout celebration the story of how a typical Scout good turn had elected him.

"One morning," he said, "when I was about 20 I was riding my horse into town when I met a boy who had been riding a mule loaded with a sack of corn. The sack had fallen off, and the boy was not able to put it back on single-handed.

"I dismounted, took off my coat, and put the boy and the corn back on the mule. Then I went on and forgot all about it.

"Nearly twenty years later I was a candidate for Congress in the primaries. I didn't have much chance in the 'enemy's country,' but learned that some one there was very busy getting votes for me. I had no idea who he could be. In the end I was nominated by forty-seven votes.

"At the county mass meeting which followed to celebrate the victory a big, sturdy young man elbowed his way through the crowd to the speakers' stand and held out his hand. 'I don't suppose you know me,' he said. And I admitted that I did not.

"'Well,' he continued, 'you may remember a boy and a mule and a sack of corn in the road twenty years ago. Three men passed him before you came along, the fourth stopped to help the boy and the corn get back on the mule. I'm the boy, and I made up my mind that day that if I ever had a chance to pay you back for the good turn you did for me I would. My chance came, and I've made good on it. We gave you a majority of sixty-eight votes in our township.'

"That one little good turn," said Congressman Davis, "elected me."—Exchange.

SUCCESS.

Much is said nowadays, especially for the benefit of the young, about "success" in life and the way to achieve it. Any one who thinks that to Americans it must mean something material, something bound up with rewards of money or of place, should read all he can find about Richard Gilder. Surely his was a successful life—rich in interest, rich in influence, rich in private affection and public honor. It grew to be what it was by reason partly of his acute intelligence, partly of his personal charm, partly of his indefatigable industry, but before all and most of all by reason of the moral rectitude, the disinterested conscientiousness, which, indeed, gave his other qualities their value. And all that he won he won for himself, not merely without external help, but in spite of many other handicaps besides ill health. He came to New York unknown, poor, and without influential family connections or that membership in some highly esteemed profession which may quickly bring friends and influence; and, without any ambition save to do his best for mankind, he made himself one of the chief citizens of the big and busy city. He won from it everything that it had to give excepting wealth and office. For these he did not care and did not strive, nor did New York ever for a moment show that it would have thought more of him had he possessed them.

It is a clear proof of the strength of his personality that, although his name never appeared in his magazine as that of its editor, every one in America knew that he was its editor and that it was his voice. When he died, the whole country spoke in his honor, and his city—the city so often miscalled cold-hearted and indifferent—mourned not only for a man whom it admired, but for a son and, in the best sense, a servant whom it loved.—Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer, in The Outlook.

thing of a task, but for a law student who has hardly read it, it is colossal egotism and folly. Yet, as a bewildered theological student complained to me, the critical problems—courses of study even—are the first set before theological students, who have hardly read the Bible through, much less begun to comprehend it. No wonder our schools of theology are almost empty, and we are spiritually destitute!

Methodism arose out of a passionate devotion to the Bible, and humble, reverent, prayerful study thereof for spiritual enlightenment. Read the following profoundly Christian paragraph from Wesley's Preface to his sermons and we will know whence came his faith and power with God and men. Let our bishops, educators, editors, secretaries and pastors think on such themes and approach the Word of God in such spirit, and Methodism will yet continue to fulfill her exalted mission of preaching and teaching the Word of God and the way of salvation to the world as its parish:

"I have thought, I am a creature of a day, passing through life as an arrow through the air. I am a spirit come from God and returning to God: just hovering over the great gulf. A few moments hence I am no more seen! I drop into an unchangeable eternity! I want to know one thing, the way to heaven: how to land safe on that happy shore. God himself has condescended to teach the way; for this very cause he came down from heaven. He has written it down in a book! O give me that book! At any price give me the Book of God! I have it: here is knowledge enough for me. Let me be homo unius libri. Here I am then, far from the busy ways of men. I sit down alone: only God is here. In His presence I open this book; for this end, to find the way to heaven. Is there a doubt concerning the meaning of what I read? Does anything appear dark or intricate? I lift up my heart to the Father of Lights—Lord, is it not in thy Word, 'If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God.' Thou 'givest liberally and upbraidest not.' Thou hast said, 'If any man be willing to do thy will, he shall know.' I am willing to do, let me know. I then search after and compare parallel passages of Scripture, 'comparing spiritual things with spiritual.' I meditate thereon with all the attention and earnestness of which my mind is capable. If any doubt still remains, I consult those who are experienced in the things of God; and then the writings whereby, being dead, they yet speak. And what I thus learn that I teach."

Columbus, Miss., April 19, 1922.

WHAT I ASK.

I ask not that my course be calm and still;
No, here too, Lord, be done Thy holy will:
I ask but for a quiet, childlike heart;
Though thronging cares and restless toil be mine,
Yet may my heart remain forever Thine;
Draw it from earth, and fix it where Thou art.

Within the past twelve months the Good Shepherd has sent a messenger for two of our loved ones. First he came and claimed Alma, our oldest sister. She was born April 10, 1879, and was married to Charlie Wilkes, Dec. 23, 1897. To this union were born two girls and four boys, of whom three of the boys were called to precede their mother to their heavenly home. Alma was of a loving disposition, and was loved by all who knew her. For her to know some one was in trouble or sick was a summons for her to go and do all she could to relieve their suffering. She had been almost an invalid for several years, but never complained of the loss of her health. We thought she was so much better she would soon be well. On March 8, 1921, a storm came and blew away her home. She never recovered from the shock, and on the 11th, at the close of day, her sweet spirit was gathered in the arms of the dear Father.

Again, on March 2, 1922, the messenger came for Lester, our dear brother. He was sick for ten days, and all that skilled physicians trained nurses, friends and loved ones could do was done. But the good Shepherd said: "I hath need of him; he has served long enough." So he called him home. Lester was born May 3, 1887; was married to Miss Kate Bennett in August, 1911. To them were given three little girls. His wife and baby were called home in February, 1920. He was again married to Miss Berniee Bouchille, on Nov. 17, 1921. Alma and Lester both joined the Methodist church at Mt. Pleasant early in life, and both lived good Christiani lives. They had many warm friends as was proved by the number who mourned their going. We mourn not as they who have no hope, for we feel they have only gone on before and are waiting for us at the Golden Gate.

Their sister, SALLIE CLARK.

MRS. MARY LOUISE GREER was the mother of a large family and a worthy one. She was a Christian mother and was always ready for any task that came to her. She was greatly cared for through her illness. We mourn for one who was our pride and joy because of her lovely character. Her ever readiness and willingness to do whatever was required of her made her one of God's sweetest mothers. Mourn for her? Yes, can we do otherwise for one so precious? But we do not mourn without hope, for we know God doeth all things for the best. So dear, crushed hearts, think of your darling mother in her home in heaven, free from pain, with her loved one gone before, where we hope to meet her when done with troubles here below. Never was sorrow more deep than on the night of April 2, 1922, when the death angel came. There was nothing left undone that could be done for her comfort, but no physical aid or gentle care could prolong her life. But what a sweet consolation to know, "She is not dead, but sleepeth!"

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our sister, friend and coworker, Mrs. Cordelia Smith, has been called from our midst by the grim hand of death, after an illness of seven months, which illness she bore with Christian fortitude, never once breaking faith, and cheerful until the end; and

Whereas, This dear sister has been an active member in the Methodist Church since early childhood, and has affiliated with all church activities, never shirking her religious duties, interested in the workings of church services, Sunday school, prayer meetings, and Missionary Society, and retained this attentive spirit until death; and

Whereas, The Woman's Missionary Society sustains a great loss in the death of this Christian worker,

Be it therefore resolved, That the Woman's Missionary Society, Columbia, La., extends its sincere and heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family and friends.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Ray, Columbia, La., and son, Mr. Dalco Smith, Olla, La.; also a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and Caldwell Watchman, Columbia, La.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

"No man careth for my soul," is the wail of the lost. What impression does it make upon your heart when you think of the 68 per cent of young people in Mississippi who are not receiving any kind of religious instruction? Coming closer home, what do you think of the more than ten thousand members of the Methodist Church who are receiving little or no religious instruction? Is it not enough to make us fall upon our faces and cry aloud unto the Lord for help? In the face of this unspeakable condition, what do you think of the leader who will not fall into line with his church and do his best through the machinery of the church to reach the last man, woman, and child? One reason why we have Wesley Bible Class Federations, Standard Training Schools, Children's Week, Sunday School Day, and the like is to reach and teach the people. Brother, fall into line and use every means at your command to reach your share of the outsiders. Would that I could burn ten thousand souls into your soul as it is burned into mine.

The Grenada District Conference gave the Federation and Training schools its heartiest endorsements. We had all the time needed to present our Sunday school work. The same can be said of the Columbus District Conference in session at Macon. The work of the church prospers. The quality of the preaching heard in all the conferences this year has been of a high order. It is the best preaching I have heard in twenty years. The tide is turning in the right direction.

Send your Sunday school money to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss. If you forgot to send your offering made the fifth Sunday in January for district work, send it on now.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Standard Training School, June 8-14, Millsaps College. Cost: Board, lodging and book, $10. A fine program awaits you. Every Sunday school should have at least one representative at this meeting.

May 30-31, Brookhaven District Institute, Wesson, Miss. Each school should have a representative and a written report. Please send names of those who are going to Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson. A fine program and a great time are expected.

So far four schools have sent in Sunday School Day offerings—Shuhuta, Mt. Pleasant on Vaneleave charge; Brandon, and Fernwood. If the schools will respond, we will bo glad and thankful.

Through the influence and promotion of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, 10 Sunday schools have been organized this year. From reports received, 1,250 people have gone to Methodist Sunday schools more than last year. These two items alone should recommend our work; $40 has been given to needy schools.

The District Institute at Forest was a great success; 18 out of 23 charges were represented with 65 delegates, and 22 schools had written reports read at the meeting. Rev. B. F. Lewis represented the Orphans' Home, and Rev. J. M. Morse the Educational Movement before the Institute.

The District Institute at Hattiesburg was a good one. We had about two hours, but they were crammed full; 22 out of 24 charges responded to roll call with 57 delegates; 11 schools had written reports read. Two of these reports were very startling in their revelation of good work.

What do you think of a Sunday school with an average attendance of 85 per cent? Of a Sunday school with more people present than they have on roll? All this came out in the reports.

Newton district officers for the ensuing year: Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Ashmore, Harperville; Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. J. E. Okey, Forest; Intermediate-Senior, D. J. Robinson, Laurel; Young People-Adult W. B. C., Mrs. J. F. McCauley, Philadelphia; Missionary Education, Mrs. W. W. Hopper, Montrose; Teacher-training, J. M. Kennedy, Bay Springs.

Hattiesburg District officers for ensuing year: Secretary, J. R. Baines, Lucedale; Elementary, Miss Bernice Whatley, Collins; Y. P.-Adult W. B. C., E. L. Calhoun, Mount Olive; Missions, D. R. Campbell, Sumrall; Teacher-training, J. H. Jolly, Heidelberg; Intermediate-Senior, W. F. Herrington, Hattiesburg.

The Seashore District officers are the same as last year.

Brother Hull is doing fine work. Pray for him and help him.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE STANDARD TRAINING SCHOOL.

Dr. C. A. Bowen, the head of the Department of Religious Education of Millsaps College, is the Dean of the Conference Training School for Sunday School and Church Workers, which holds its second session at Millsaps College, June 8 to 14.

Dr. Bowen has gathered around him the finest talent procurable. The courses offered give a wide range of selection and will he of lasting benefit to all who will take them.

The three elementary courses, one each for Beginners, Primary, and Junior, are different from last year. So those who were with us last year may continue their course in these departments looking toward the Departmental Certificate.

Mrs. W. F. Cann is to teach Junior Organization. She is the wife of the associate pastor of St. Francis Street M. E. Church, South, Mobile, Ala. She is a specialist in this line, having been prepared by special courses in this subject and much experience. She has been a lecturer and organizer in the work of the Sunday school for about twelve years, and has been an approved instructor in this particular subject for three or four years. I have taught with Mrs. Cann in a number of schools, and she makes a magnificent impression and does thorough work.

Miss Lynda Ramey is to teach Primary Lesson Materials. She is the Elementary Superintendent of the North Mississippi Conference, and lives at Oxford. Her work in that Conference is giving full satisfaction, and she comes highly recommended as a teacher.

Miss Hazel Covington is to teach Beginner Organization. She is the Elementary Superintendent of the Alabama Conference, and lives at Montgomery. I have been associated with her for three years in the work of that Conference. She has made good. Her classes are enthusiastic over her work. She has had wide experience in this work.

Dr. J. Q. Schisler is to teach "The Sunday School." He is now Assistant Superintendent of Teacher-training of the M. E. Church, South. Up to a few years ago he was Field Secretary for the North Arkansas Conference. The fact that he has been thus used by our church is sufficient recommendation.

Mrs. C. A. Bowen is to teach "Methods of Teaching." For several years she has been a specialist in conducting training classes in local churches and in college Sunday schools. At present she is the Superintendent of the Young People's Department of Galloway Memorial Church.

Prof. C. A. Bowen is to teach Pupil Study.

Board and lodging will cost $10 for the full time. This is mighty cheap, and should attract many. A summer vacation of this kind will mean much more for the kingdom of God than most any way you could use the time.

We are planning school hours, and other items of interest to break the monotony of school. But it is a school, first of all.

We ask for your co-operation and help. Send us lists of names of those who ought to be interested in the school. Help us to advertise.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE SEASHORE SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

Whereas the Sunday school lessons are more widely read by the children of our church than any other portion of the Scriptures; and whereas, the King James Version is the most familiar of all the versions of the Holy Scriptures; and whereas the injection in brackets of revised version into the Scripture text of our Sunday school lessons is more or less confusing to the ordinary reader; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Seashore District Sunday School Institute of the Mississippi Conference, in session at Poplarville, Miss., this, the 19th day of April, 1922, That we respectfully ask the Lesson Committee of the Sunday School Board at Nashville to eliminate said injection of revised version, and give us the plain King James Version.

Resolved, second, That we ask, in order to meet the demand of those who wish the revised version, that the same be given in parallel columns.

Respectfully submitted,
L. L. ROBERTS,
J. M. CORLEY.

FROM GREENVILLE, MISS.

Our Easter service was exceptionally fine. We had 425 at Sunday school, 115 of these being in the Big Brothers Class. At the 11 o'clock service, 17 were received into the church on profession and 9 by letter. Fifty-two have been received since the Annual Conference. Since the beginning of my pastorate here, 507 have been received into the church.

We are spending $1200 or $1500 on repairs, painting the woodwork inside and out and the walls of the church, repairing the roof, etc. New lights have been installed and the house is greatly improved in appearance.

Dr. S. A. Steel recently visited us and gave us his great addresses on "Old Testament Characters." We have been under a great strain for some weeks because of the high river, but so far our levees have held and people are going on about their business. We had planned to have our revival services at this time and Drs. Walker and Boyd, of Sanford, Fla., were to be with us, but because of our anxiety over water conditions the meeting was postponed. This is a wonderful country and these are a great people. E. S. LEWIS.

THE HUNGER FOR HAPPINESS.

Jesus appealed to something deep and universal in men when He uttered the Beatitudes. Every man is eager for the beatific vision, for that understanding glance into life that sees happiness at its heart. Every person is seeking that thrill of inner joy. I do not wonder that our evangelist remembered even the detail of how "he opened his mouth" as He said the word "happy." Upon prophetic lips it was a kind of new and wonderful word and went home to the troubled heart like an arrow to its mark. But its greatness was not its newness but its truth. The Christian life is a "creed of gigantic joy." Life at its best is Christian, and Christian life in its truth and reality is happiness. When people really see that the Jesus way of living is the one way to happiness they will become travelers of the "Way." There is no finer witness to the power of Christ unto salvation than a life saved in the midst of great burdens and hard problems, yet all the time happy as a bird and inwardly at peace.—Selected.

"HIGH HOPES AND A GREY ENDING."

The quoted phrase is from H. G. Wells. In one of his books he writes of the problem of the teacher—and his tragedy—"that sower of unseen harvests, that serf of custom, that feeble, persistent antagonist of the triumphant things that rule him." But behind the tragedy of the teacher is seen "something more universally tragic, an incessantly recurring story of high hopes and a grey ending; the story of boys and girls, clean and sweet-minded, growing up into life, and of the victory of world inertia, of custom drift and the tarnishing years." The gifted author has painted a wonderful—and woeful—picture in a few words. What is it that so often wins the victory over promising young lives? "World inertia, custom drift, tarnishing years!" Alas, it is true. Hence, high hopes have a grey ending. Youth needs ever before it this divine exhortation: "Be not conformed but transformed."—The Presbyterian Advance.

As life draws toward its close God dulls our eyes and ears and all our senses, that, being thus shut out from the outer world, our minds may the more retire from the world, withdraw into their own sanctuary, and there be occupied with him, and prepare to meet him. Be this method of His providence a guide to us! Keep the rein over your own minds; control them; master them; check them, for the very sake of keeping them in check; so shall you the better have them in your power, in your prayers, too.—Dr. Pusey.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rankin Street Auxiliary, Jackson, Miss.

A report from our auxiliary will show that we are growing and doing things. We now have twenty-eight members, which is an increase of ten members this year. We have two meetings monthly, and the average attendance is very gratifying. One of these meetings we devote to business and study of the voice, the other to devotional and social purposes.

Mrs. W. E. Avera, our president, has very thoroughly organized the society. All the committees are appointed and at work. Every member serves on some committee and is kept busy in some definite service.

The Social Service Committee, under the leadership of Mrs. F. L. Applewhite, our pastor's wife, besides doing the usual visiting of the sick and strangers, are holding prayer meetings in a very needy section of the city. Our society is indeed proud of such a consecrated Christian woman.

The Superintendent of Supplies, Mrs. W. G. Dorroh will, in a short while, send a very substantial box to one of our Wesley Homes.

The Study Circle, which meets monthly, is well attended. The majority of the members are greatly interested in this work.

The Junior Society has been reorganized and we now have an enrollment of fifteen children. During our first quarter we gave our pastor a pounding valued at fifty dollars. Some very substantial improvements have been made to the parsonage furnishings.

Through the untiring efforts of our pastor and our society, another lot was purchased adjoining the lot our church already owned on Winter street. We hope to have a new church on this lot some day. For all purposes we have raised $670 during the first quarter.

A delightful feature of our work is the cordial co-operation of the Societies of Galloway and Capitol Street churches. Mesdames Brame and Elliot, pastors' assistants of these churches, are constant in their attendance and assistance. We very much appreciate this.

That each member of our society continue to be willing workers in God's vineyard, is the prayer of Rankin Street Auxiliary.

Shreveport District Conference at Vivian.

The new district secretary, Mrs. J. F. Giles, of Spring Hill, La., was greeted with a large delegation at her first district conference in Vivian. She presided with ease and had a splendid grasp of the work. The brethren held their session April 19-21, at the close of which the women conducted their meeting. Mrs. Giles addressed the preachers before their adjournment, laying before them her plans for expansion and development.

The devotional exercises were led by Mrs. S. A. Alexander, of Greenwood. Twenty churches were represented, some by several auxiliaries.

The presence of three Conference superintendents, Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, Mrs. B. F. Key, and Mrs. J. W. Peyton, strengthened the program.

Mrs. J. B. Stephens, superintendent of Study and Publicity of the Adult Auxiliary of First Church, Shreveport, spoke of the enlarging work of the ten circles under her charge. Mrs. J. C. Allen, president of this auxiliary, conducted an institute on the Minutes and gave a very comprehensive and inspiring account of her experiences at the Council.

Mrs. R. H. Wynn spoke on Social Service, with special reference to Interracial Relations.

Mrs. R. E. Smith presented very graphically the vital need of the foundation work of the Juniors and Young People, through a series of beautifully executed charts. She delighted the audience again with a well-rendered solo.

Mrs. J. W. Peyton delivered a feeling message on the Children's Work. Mrs. Key was most helpful in her address relative to Young People's work. Mrs. Cunningham elaborated the plans of work so clearly as to enable every one to carry home a definite method of fulfilling every condition.

Mrs. Giles' beautiful voice was heard in the song we need to hear, "Reports" and also in a "real" song.

The ladies of the Vivian Auxiliary were tireless in their countesies, serving dinner to the unusually large crowd with perfect ease.

MRS. R. H. WYNN, Secretary.

LEAGUE ANNIVERSARY DAY.

I have been requested to send in a "write-up" for an Epworth League Anniversary Day program, May 14th.

This date is set aside to celebrate the League anniversary, and a special program has been prepared by our central office and may be had upon request from Smith & Lamar, 810 Broadway, Nashvile, Tenn.

It is the desire of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League officers to have this Conference lead the list this year, both in the number of young people reached by this program and in collections. We hope that the pastors will give the young people an opportunity to have a public program in every charge, whether they have a League in that charge on not. Let the young people put on this program. A free-will offering should be taken and the proceeds sent to our Conference treasurer, Rev. L. F. Alford, Laurel, Miss., stating that it is the anniversary offering.

The time is very short now and it behooves all League presidents where there are Epworth Leagues, and pastors where there is not a League, to get in behind this at once. Order programs direct from Smith & Lamar, and start the young people to work immediately. It would be fine to start advertising this meeting today—talk it up and let the people know that this is going to be a very interesting as well as instructive program and all that attend will enjoy it.

FROM OAKLAND, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Please announce through the Advocate that Rev. Andrew Johnson, of Wilmore, Ky., one of our general evangelists, will begin a series of meetings in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Oakland, Miss., on May 7, and that Prof. J. E. Williams, of Paris, Miss., will have charge of the song services. We earnestly covet the prayers of all Christians that this may be a time of great awakening, that many sinners may be converted to God and that backsliders may be reclaimed, and believers built up in faith. Pray much for us.

FROM AN OLD-TIME METHODIST LAYMAN.

Dear Mr. Editor: Please allow a layman to thank you for the editorial pages of the Advocate. I find excellent food for thought each week, and in the issue of the 20th, you mention a most important thing. Will you allow me to make a suggestion? The blessed Master preached instructive sermons, and St. Paul stated that "by the foolishness of preaching we persuade men." We laymen do not wish to be critical, for we appreciate the position of the pastor of a city charge. Neither do we care to pose as fault-finders. The majority go to church to hear the preached word, and reading of the word. All else is a bore, manfully endured as becomes a good Methodist who loves his church and is praying for her peace and prosperity. Let us consider just a few little things which could be easily corrected, with no hurt feelings, and to the great improvement of the spiritual life of the church.

1. Let the hymnal be used at all services. There are more than 400 very choice selections in it, which would enable the choir to use eight each Sabbath, and not repeat in a year. As it is, we use about 45 or 50, usually the least musical.

2. Let nothing interfere with the Sunday morning worship. Make that an hour of sacred worship of our Lord—not an opportunity to hear a hired singer render a Roman Catholic anthem. (There is no objection to other churches worshiping as they wish, but it is rather poor taste to see Methodists imitating any other church; let those who are dissatisfied with our form of worship go elsewhere.)

3. All the church papers seem to deplore a lack of spirituality in the church; why not return to the "old paths," and have a singing, praying, Sabbath-observing people? When a student of Tulane University, it was my pleasure to attend the old Carondelet Methodist Church, which was then said to be the most "old-timey" church in town. The great congregations which gathered there then, showed that the people loved the old ways best. I attended three other churches once each and found a pitiful little handful gathered—even paid singers could not attract the multitudes, though the "foolishness of preaching" did.

Recently there was a glowing example of the attractiveness of the old ways. Gipsy Smith made no attempt to be a theologian, nor did he manifest any amount of scholarship in any talk that he made. But he did hold up Jesus and him crucified, and the multitudes "heard him gladly." Without intending any offense or comparison, let me say that the pastor of every church in town which I have visited, is able to preach and pray better than anything I heard at the tabernacle. But unfortunately the effect of the sermon is lost when preached to a tired audience.

What opportunities are open to the preacher now, only God knows. O that they will meet them in the spirit of the Master, and continue to hold up the cross, and lift up the name of him who came to give life to a dead world.

SCHOOLS FOR PASTORS AND LAY WORKERS.

By Rev. John S. Chadwick.

The Missionary Centenary has made possible advances in every field in wbich our church has missionary enterprises. In our thinking, we perhaps relate the Centenary mainly to the work in foreign fields, this because the foreign work has had emphasis in all our missionary propaganda. It is true that a large part of tbe Centenary fund in being used in foreign lands, and this is as it should be.

Whatever would be tbe situation in the foreign field today had the Centenary not come, it is true that without the help of this movement we would be, today, a church without a real home mission program. The Centenary has given us resources that, in some measure, make possible an aggressive program of work in the home field. First of all, ten per cent of our Centenary money gose back to the Annual Conference to supplement the salaries of underpaid pastors. The Home Department of the Board of Missions has had available Centenary money for various enterprises—mission schools, work among foreigners, and other neglected peoples, city mission enterprises, rural work, and service to tbe people of cotton mill towns and other industrial communities.

The Home Department is doing no better piece of work than its emphasis on the rural church and the rural field. It is supporting a number of rural demonstration charges and giving help to many circuit pastors. The schools for town and country pastors, with the emphasis on the rural work, reached last year some three hundred of our pastors and lay workers. During the summer of 1921 two such schools were held and the program for 1922 calls for six of these schools.

The places and dates are: Logan College, Russelivile, Kentucky, May 29-June 8; Birmingham-Southern College, Birmingham, Alabama, May 31-June 14; Hendrix College, Conway, Arkansas, June 9-20; Trinity College, Durham North Carolina, June 7-16; Randolph-Macon College, Ashland, Virginia, June 15-23; Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, July 4-14.

The members of the faculties of these schools include experts in country church work of other churches as well as of our own. Eighteen courses will be offered, giving special training in all departments of country and town church work—Epworth League, Sunday school, Bible study, evangelism, social service, missions, community organization, etc.

Tbere will be no expenses attached to attendance on these schools except the railroad fare and board and lodging. Our pastors and lay workers, especialy those from the circuits and small towns, should take advantage of this opportunity offered by the Department of Home Missions of our church. Presiding elders and leading laymen of the church should see to it that funds are provided for the men who are on small salaries. An investment such as this will bring large returns in the better equipment of the men who serve in the rural districts. Let our pastors and lay workers begin now to plan to attend one of these schools.

On application to the Department of Home Missions, Box 510, Nashville, Tennessee, announcements of these schools, and other literature, will be sent to any applicant.

MINERALIZED WATER ROUTS CHICKEN LICE

Tablets Dropped into Drinking Founts Banish Vermin, Make Fowls Grow Faster and Increase Egg Yield.

Any poultry raiser can easily rid his flock of lice and mites, make chickens grow faster and increase their egg yield by simply adding minerals to the fowls' drinking water. This does away with all bother, such as dusting, greasing, dipping and spraying. The necessary minerals can now be obtained in convenient tablets, known as Paratabs. Soon after tbe fowls drink the mineralized water, all lice and mites leave them. The tablets also act as a tonic conditioner. The health of the fowls quickly improves, they grow faster and the egg yield frequently is doubled. Little cbicks that drink freely of the water never will be bothered by mites or lice.

Tbe method is especially recommended for raisers of purebred stock, as there is no risk of soiling the plumage. Tbe tablets are warranted to impart no flavor or odor to tbe eggs or meat. This remarkable conditioner, egg tonic and lice remedy costs only a trifle and is sold under an absolute guarantee. The tablets are scientifically prepared, perfectly safe, and dissolve readily in water.

Any reader of this paper may try them without risk. The laboratories producing Paratabs are so confident of good results that to introduce them to every poultry raiser they offer two big $1 packages for only $1. Send no money, just your name and address—a card will do—to tbe Paratab Laboratories, Dept. 944, 1100 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City Mo., and the two $1 packages, enough for 100 gallons of water, will be mailed. Pay tbe postman $1 and postage on delivery, and if you are not delighted with results in 10 days—if your cbickens are not healthier, laying more eggs and entirely free from lice and mites—your money will be promptly refunded. Don't besitate to accept tbis trial offer as you are fully protected by this guarantee.

EASTER SUNDAY IN GULFPORT, MISS.

Easter Sunday was an inspiring day for Gulfport Sunday schools. Tbe Methodists had 1136 present—886 Sunday school people, and 250 visitors. The Baptists had nearly 900 present. It was the closing day of their revival. They had something like 186 accessions to their church. The Methodists raised a nice contribution for the orphans.

Col. McGhee, who has charge of the Baraca Class, had 206 present and a good collection—something like $50. Col. Hardy is a live, active superintendent, and keeps everything moving and the Sunday school growing and full of interest.

The pastor is a live, active man, and has had a goodly number of accessions. Our great need is a revival that will bring convictions that are deep and pungent and will result in new hearts and lives devoted to God; that our young people may be devout, consecrated Christians, loving church service above all things else, truly devout workers, hearts freely inspired and souls loving their church, so as to be active workers at every service.

W. D. DOMINICK.

FROM PETAL, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The Petal Methodist Church has just closed one of the best meetings in several years. Rev. Jim Smith, one of our Conference evangelists, did the preaching, and Mr. Kay Peterson, from New Orleans, led the singing. Brother Smith, although a young man, is a preacher of power, and he does not compromise with sin. I believe in a few years he will be one of our leading evangelists. As a result of the meeting thirteen members were added to the Methodist church and two to the Baptist church, and the membership of the church revived.

Brother Smith hasn't any dates for meetings in September and October, and any one desiring his help, write him at Meridian, Poplar Spring Drive. You will not wake a mistake in getting him. S. C. MOODY.

A FULL-FLEDGED ACCESSION.

Not long after landing at McComb, a member of our church asked me to try to get her husband to join the church. I told her I would not press joining the church very much, but I would work and pray for her husband to be converted, and then he would naturally join the church. So it was not so very long after this conversation (as he later told me) that he incidentally picked up the Bible and began to read it, and he said it was the most interesting Book he ever read. Not so long after, he became a changed man. About a month ago he had an attack of influenza, and I visited him, read the Bible and prayed. My visits were rather frequent. After he was convalescing, he told me of his reading the Bible, what an effect it had upon him, and of his becoming a changed man; and he told me just as soon as he got able he was coming to church and intended to join, saying, "So, when you see me coming, you'll know what I'm coming for." The next Sunday he was there. I opened the door of tbe church and he, witb two others, came. He was unusually moved as he took the vows, and when the time for the right hand of fellowship came, he was visibly weeping, while otbers felt an unseen Power. I fcel sure there was "joy in the presence of the angels of God." He was back the next Sunday with three children (for the first time), bringing them to Sunday school. After getting them classified, he joined tho Men's Bible Class. He frequently comes to the parsonage to give an account of his experience among his wicked associates—how he is working to get them to God—and for advice. His relatives, neighbors, and friends tell me he is a changed man. He says he can hardly stand to hear his associates cursing and swearing—"old things have passed away!" His influence is being felt. He is "a brand snatched from the burning." Pray that we may have, at least, 100 more like him this year!

Brother W. W. Nelson comes to Pearl River Avenue May 7 for a meeting. We want to prepare for the great Dunaway meeting here, June 25-July 16, for the three Methodist churches. We just need a revival, anyway. So pray for Nelson and me, and for the meeting. And come if you can. It wouldn't be a shock to me if the Lord should send us a full-fledged revival! It might shock others, but I honestly believe I would enjoy it. Amen.

On expectation corner,
J. A. WELLS.

EASTER FLOWERS.

They open their beautiful petals
To the light of the Easter morn,
They scatter their exquisite perfume,
On the wings of the zephyrs borne.

Out of the dust and darkness
They rise to the light of day,
Out of the wintry silence
To the songs of April and May.

Tbey preach the most wonderful lesson,
The most comforting message bring,
From the hand of the great Creator
Who ordains the winter and spring.

NOW DO MY WORK WITH EASE

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored My Health

Hornell, N. Y.—"I was in bad health but there didn't seem to be any one thing the matter with me. I was tired out all over and it was an effort for me to move. I was irritable and could not sleep nights and had trouble with my bowels and at my periods. It seemed that nearly everyone around me knew of your medicine and wanted me to try it, so at last I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine and improved every day. I do all my own work now except the washing and do it with ease. I can accomplish as much in a day now as it would have taken me a week to do last winter and I try to get every one I know to take your medicine to build them up. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial if you like."—Mrs. Chas. Baker, 21 Spencer Ave., Hornell, N.Y.

In almost every neighborhood there are women who know of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They know because they have taken it and have been helped. Why don't you give it a trial?

NEW ORLEANS

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 69—No. 19. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3457

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, MAY 11, 1922. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The nineteenth session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in the Auditorium at Hot Springs, Ark., at 9 o'clock a.m., Wednesday, May 3. In the absence of Bishop E. R. Hendrix, senior bishop, who was unable to be present on account of illness, Bishop Warren A. Candler, the next in line of seniority, presided at the opening session. The opening exercises were participated in by Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, Bishop W. F. McMurry, Bishop H. M. Dubose, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., and Dr. B. F. Lipscomb, of the Virginia Conference.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, of the Mississippi Conferen, secretary of the last General Conference, called the roll, after which nominations were made for secretary of this session. Dr. Watkins requested that his name be withdrawn from nomination, but the request was not granted, and he was elected. The election of Dr. Watkins established a precedent in that he is not a delegate to the present Conference.

Dr. Watkins nominated the following assistants, who were elected: F. S. Parker and J. A. Burrow, as Journal secretaries; L. H. Estes, of the Memphis Conference, and I. C. Jenkins, of the Florida Conference, as reading secretaries; J. H. Eakes, of the North Georgia Conference, fraternal correspondence, letters and telegrams secretary; M. T. Haw, of the St. Louis Conference, secretary of the yea and nay votes, standing votes, supervision of tellers and ballot sheets; R. S. Satterfield, of the West Oklahoma Conference, secretary for the Daily Advocate and the press; R. G. Mood, of the North Texas Conference, secretary for the reference of papers; W. E. Morris, of the North Alabama Conference, secretary, revision of the discipline; W. A. Christian, calendar secretary.

On motion, the rules of procedure of the last General Conference were adopted for the temporary government of the present session, and a permanent Committee on Rules, composed of seven members, to be appointed by the chair, was authorized. It was also ordered that twelve Standing Committees, composed of one clerical and one lay representative from each Annual Conference, elected by the respective delegations, be appointed as follows: Episcopacy, Itinerancy, Revisals, Publishing Interests, Education, Church Extension, Boundaries and Finance, Temperance and Social Service, Sunday Schools, Epworth Leagues, Church Relations. The following special committees were also ordered: Laymen's Missionary Movement, Superannuate Endowment, Fraternal Reception and Correspondence.

It was also ordered that the standing committees to which shall be referred matters relating to the several quadrennial boards, commissions, General Conference officers, etc., be requested to inquire into the cost of administration, traveling expenses, publication and distribution of literature, and all other matters of overhead expense, and make special report in each case to the General Conference.

The secretary then read the following letter from Bishop E. R. Hendrix:

"My Beloved Brethren, Greetings:

"While absent in body, I crave to be with and among you in the fellowship of the Spirit, by whose leadings and guidance you have met and will resolve and act together. Only the constraining authority of a trusted doctor and those of my own household restrains me from attempting the journey I must needs make to meet and fellowship with you. Some of you know the fervency of my hope to have done so.

"Again, Greetings: And this for the last time; for I have heard the command, 'Unarm, the long day's work is done, and we must sleep.' God speaks in no uncertain voice. But I rejoice that His work does not quit nor slacken. And while my heartbeats weaken, I know there are younger and stronger men and women, all alive under the inspiration of God's spirit, to love, companion and pasture His flocks.

"To my companions of the Episcopacy: May our Heavenly Father endow you daily with holiness and wisdom and mercy and strength.

"And to the faithful pastors: May they come also to the end rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them.

"And to the men, women and children with whom we labor and whom we love, of every race, clime and condition, our brethren, for whom the riches of the infinite loving kindness of our Heavenly Father have been abundantly poured out: To them what may I say? Bid them, my brethren, that they love one another, and share together the joys of the life that now is and of that which is to come, in a wholesome security of a living faith that they are God's children and the subjects of His constant love and care. They shall not want, for He is the Almighty One, who holds the infinities in His hand.

"Kindly relieve me, my brethren, as my God has done already, of the further labors of my episcopal office. With joy have I lived, and I lay myself down with a will. I have your several faces and characters in affectionate and joyous remembrance. All good words and works be yours! Let me in my daily prayers remember you and each one of you in the face of our Heavenly Father. Take from my outstretched hands and a full heart my faithful benedictions.

"May God's richest blessings be and abide with each and every one of you now and forevermore. Amen.

"Fraternally and affectionately, your retiring bishop, EUGENE R. HENDRIX."

On motion, the presiding officer was requested to send to Bishop Hendrix the greetings and sympathy of the Conference.

A resolution, offered by J. E. Harrison, of the Los Angeles Conference, was adopted, providing for the appointment of a committee to take under immediate consideration the special needs and claims of our Western work and to make suggestions concerning expansion advancement, and financial support.

The Episcopal Address was then read by Bishop James Atkins. The Address is a lengthy document, and space forbids our giving it in full. We print some of the salient sections.

THE EPISCOPAL ADDRESS.

Dear Brethren: By the grace of our Lord we are assembled in circumstances which call for the deepest gratitude to Almighty God for the mercies which have distinguished his dealings with us through the closing quadrennium. The Lord of the harvest has, it seems to us, set the seal of his approval upon our apostleship and upon our doctrines and our polity in a more marked degree than in any former period of our history, although from the first we have not been without unmistakable signs of the divine blessings upon the work of our hands.

We have prayed, and now pray again, that all our counsels may be under the blessed guidance of the Holy Spirit; that the love of God and of one another may dominate all our sentiments and motives; that in all our dealings we may seek not our own wills, but the will of him who has called us to these high responsibilities; that even in the midst of the arduous toils which the occasion implies we may grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. Even a General Conference should not forget that there is a Methodist doctrine known as backsliding and so be on guard against a further verification of a doctrine which we all know to be true.

While we give devout thanks to Almighty God for sparing our lives and yours, for giving us health and strength for our work, and for crowning all his gifts with spiritual mercies, we are saddened by the fact that within the quadrennium death has invaded our ranks and taken from our working force and fellowship five of our most beloved and honored colleagues. We call over their names reverently and with loving appreciation of the distinguished service which they have rendered the church:

Elijah Embree Hoss, James Henry McCoy, Joseph Staunton Key, Walter Russell Lambuth, Henry Clay Morrison.

Bishop Hoss, worn out with years of unremitting toil and of valuable service in many spheres, fell on sleep in his home in Muskogee, Okla., April 23, 1919; Bishop Key died at a ripe old age April 6, 1920, after a very happy, devoted and useful life; Bishops McCoy (March 22, 1919) and Lambuth (September 26, 1921) were taken in the very prime of their strength and usefulness; Bishop Morrison, after twenty years in the active service and four years of retirement, passed peacefully away in his home at Leesburg, Fla., December 21, 1921.

We recommend that a memorial service be ordered, at which suitable memoirs of our deceased brethren shall be read.

A Glance at Our Times.

* * * A permanent peace based on justice cannot come till the sword is taken out of the heart of mankind. Then only will it fall from their hands. Diplomats and statesmen, if divinely moved, may do much in the way of leadership, but the real task belongs to the followers of the meek and lowly Son of Man, who, being reviled, reviled not again. The League of Nations, peace treaties, and disarmament conferences have done much, and shall yet do much, toward preparing the thought of the world for this larger day, but the working out of the real revolution that shall turn men from the despotic to the democratic and from the pagan conception of life to the truly Christian is still left to the church of Christ. The situation which confronts us is both appalling and appealing. The world lies heart-broken at the feet of God. Its appeal to him is not to the "God of battles," as in the olden times, but to the Father of all, whose property is always to have mercy. God knows, and has taught us to know, that the only hope of the race ruined now by sin as at the beginning is in the crucified and risen Christ, and to his church he has committed such a ministry of healing and redemption as was never before known. He has suffered the world to be melted in the fires of war and famine and pestilence, and it waits to be recast in molds which the gospel furnishes, provided Christianity is wise enough to throw itself without reserve into the mighty but glorious task.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Hon. C. L. Bates.

Fifteenth Paper.

I.

"The power that made, is the power to unmake. * * * The only real sovereignty is that which makes, and unmakes, constitutions and governments. Or, if any one is pleased to call any government, whether State or Federal, sovereign, he should not forget that it is merely a delegated sovereignty. It is not original; it is derived. It is not inherent; it comes from without; and, instead of being supreme, it depends on a power greater than itself. It is divisible, and may be divided among different governments, or agents of the supreme power. On the contrary, the sovereign power of a State, or, in other words, the power of the people of a State, is inherent, original, supreme, indivisible, and inalienable. This, at least, is the American doctrine. * * * I have nothing to say, then, about the delegated power of this or that government. They have nothing to do with the question. Others may wrangle about those powers, if they please, and beat their brains over them; all I want to know is, where resides the one power from which all such delegated powers proceed. The difference between this one power and the powers of the government it creates, is the difference between the sun and its rays, or the creator and its manifold creations. Where, then, does this one sovereign power reside?"

The above are the words of that eminent scholar, theologian, jurist and statesman, Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe, who was taken from the Southern Church,

"Like a summer-dried fountain!
When our need was the sorest," and the principle stated by him is axiomatic in political philosophy and in ecclesiastical polity; and it is commended by its high source to the careful consideration of the Episcopacy of the Southern Church, who are the special guardians of its Constitution.

If that instrument is to be altered, or amended, or abolished, the achievement must be effectuated by the sovereign power which ordained, created and established it. This principle has been recognized and constantly acted upon by the General Conference of the Southern Church from its inception down to the present time, by referring Constitutional amendments to the Annual Conferences; and it would be a most radical and revolutionary departure for that body—the General Conference—to take even the initiative to abolish and destroy the Constitution of the church and annihilate the ecclesiastical jurisdiction therein and thereby created and established. Such a proceeding would be in contravention and defiance of all principles of law and government, State or ecclesiastical, recognized in America or in England. Were such a thing advised, aided or abetted by a judicial or executive officer of the United States, he would be impeached for high crimes and misdemeanors in office; were it attempted by the Congress of the United States, the members participating would be regarded as red-handed revolutionists, and dealt with accordingly.

All the officers of the church are under a moral oath of allegiance to support its Constitution, which is binding on them at least in foro conscienciae.

II.

It is not the present purpose to discuss Unification—neither its desirability nor its feasibility—but, in view of the published report of "the Executive Committee of the Commission on Unification," to be presented to the General Conference for its action, it would seem that the Constitutional power of that body in the premises is open for discussion. There is a clear distinction between unification and the constitutional power to accede to and consummate it. The present discussion is in respect to the power only.

The majority Report is in part as follows:

"In view of the action taken by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in consideration of their desire that negotiations be continued, we make the following recommendations:

"1. That, in harmony with our entire history touching our relations with our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church, we continue our negotiations looking toward the unification of American Methodism.

"2. That a commission of twenty-five members be elected, upon the nomination of the Committee on Church Relations, to be composed of five bishops, ten elders, and ten laymen.

"3. That the commission herein provided for be instructed to continue negotiations in harmony with the basis already agreed upon as feasible and desirable, or upon such other basis as may be determined by our General Conference.

"4. That when the joint commission, by a two-thirds vote of each Conference, shall have agreed upon a plan to be recommended to the two churches, authority be given our commission, whenever two-thirds of its members deem it advisable, to unite with the authorities of the Methodist Episcopal Church in calling a joint convention, constituted in accordance with such plan as may be adopted by our General Conference, to which said plan shall be submitted, and, if the convention shall, by a two-thirds vote of each delegation, approve a plan, it shall then be submitted to the General Conference for consideration and action."

The fourth recommendation of the Report is very adroitly constructed; but, upon analysis, two things clearly appear, namely:

If adopted by the General Conference. (1) it vests in the unification commission, upon the happening of certain contingencies, plenary power to unite with the Northern Church in calling a joint unification convention to consider and pass upon a plan of unification, prepared beforehand, and submitted to the convention by a joint unification commission; and (2) the joint convention is to be constituted in accordance with such plan as may be adopted by our General Conference.

The Report of the majority is, in its last analysis, a recommendation that the General Conference do accede to and appoint delegates to a joint unification constitutional convention, with power to abolish the Constitution of the Southern Church and dissolve the church itself, and frame a Constitution, subject to the approval of said Conference, for the Northern Church, modified by the absorption of Southern Methodism.

The Northern Church, at its last General Conference, tacitly and effectually rejected unification proper, and has clearly shown that it will agree to absorption only; and its "desire that negotiations be continued," and its call for a joint convention, are manifestly to compass, if possible, the dissolution of the Southern Church, and the assimilation of the elements of the disintegrated body.

And thereupon the question arises: In whom is vested the power to abolish the Constitution and dissolve the Southern Church?

Recurring to the governmental axiom stated by Dr. Bledsoe, a conclusive answer is at once found. "The power that made, is the power to unmake."

III.

It conclusively appears from a simple reading of the "Plan of Separation," the call for the Louisville Convention of 1845, and the proceedings of that body, that (1) the jurisdiction of the Northern Church over the Southern and Southwestern Annual Conferences was dissolved by the sovereign power of said Annual Conferences; (2) that by the same sovereign power the Southern Church and its Constitution and government were created, ordained and established; (3) that by Annual Conferences is meant not the preachers only, but the private membership—the Methodist people residing within their respective bounds, and (4) that the General Conference is a body of delegated, limited, specified and enumerated powers, and that it was never granted the power to alter, amend or abolish the Constitution, or dissolve the church and subject its people to the jurisdiction of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

These are the indisputable facts of our Constitutional history; and it is useless to reason about the Constitution with men who deny them.

The Northern Church ceded its jurisdiction over Southern Methodism to the Annual Conferences, and they alone have the power to "unmake" what they "made," and that only by a vote of the people, by a delegated convention of their own selection.

The General Conference has not the power to take the initial step in such a proceeding. That body was granted the power only "to make rules for our church"—a living, militant church—and not the shadow of a power to abolish the Constitution and dissolve the church; and the adoption of the majority Report of the Commission by the General Conference will classify it as a revolutionary body, more radical than the General Conference of 1844—Hamlinism run mad.

THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The session for 1922 was held in Centenary Church, McComb, on Thursday and Friday, April 20 and 21. It was an occasion of great interest. The work was done rapidly and thoroughly. The attendance was quite good. From providential causes three of the pastors were absent—Brother W. W. Murry was not able to attend because of a painful accident; one of his hands was so badly torn to pieces by a gunshot wound that he had to remain at home for medical attention; Brother Baggett was kept at home by sickness in his family; and Brother J. W. Sells couldn't leave his work at Millsaps College because of the nearness of examinations.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, the presiding elder of the district, held the reins while the conference pulled its way smoothly through the two days of very busy work. I, for one, am glad that we had no bishop present to interfere with our work. The presidency of a district conference is the presiding elder's job. It is no place for a bishop—his presidency is ponderous and puts the brethren in a straight jacket. I know, for I have seen it work that way more than once.

Brother Ellis is a good presiding officer—nothing escapes his attention; he is always wide-awake, and never gets rattled. Under his skillful leadership there is never any lost motion in the movement of the conference. At times there is some pungent spice discernible when Brother Ellis is in dead earnest to have something done when there appears some obstacle in the way of doing it. That happens sometimes to every presiding elder who leads his district to success. Some of Brother Ellis's passages at arms reminded me of the long ago when I was a presiding elder. I sympathized with him—"A fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind."

I have been under twenty-one presiding elders in my day. Excepting one, Brother Ellis is the best of them all. He is alive and does something. I don't like a "dead" presiding elder—everything under him dies.

Rev. W. B. Jones served the Conference as Secretary and did his work well. For conciseness and exactness in secretarial work, Brother Jones has not a peer anywhere. No matter how many curves and twists there may be in the movements of the conference, he jots them down in correct form.

Several visitors attended the conference. They came to represent the various interests committed to them. All of them made good speeches, were in fine humor, added to the cheer of the occasion, and appeared to enjoy their stay with us. We want them to come again.

Rev. J. M. Morse came representing the interests of the Board of Education. His speech was brief, pointed and effective. He pleased us all by reporting that the Mississippi Conference stood high in the work done in the Educational Endowment Movement. We were not surprised, however, for we well knew that Morse has a well-fixed habit of succeeding in every matter he takes in hand. Morse is a born leader. Rev. M. M. Black was present and represented Millsaps College.

Rev. W. C. Childress, superintendent of the Memorial Home, located in New Orleans, La., was present. He addressed the conference in the advocacy of that interest. He gave great praise to the Brookhaven District for the sympathy shown and liberal support given to the Home. He stated that our district was the only one in Mississippi that had set aside a special Sunday to be devoted to that cause. He stated, also, that our district led all other districts in moneys collected and paid to support it. Good for the Brookhaven District! Come again, Brother Childress!

Brother W. D. Hawkins came representing the Centenary cause and Euworth Leagues. He addressed the conference Friday morning. On Thursday night he very pleasantly entertained a good congregation at the close of the preaching services by giving a first-class stereopticon exhibition. These pictures were new, and gave very striking views of the educational plants in several of our missionary fields that have received help from the Centenary Fund.

Rev. B. F. Lewis, superintendent of our Orphans' Home, spent a day and a half with us, and did fine work in presenting the interests of that sacred cause. His address Thursday night was enjoyed by everybody and aroused in us increased sympathy for the helpless orphans, and purpose to do what may be needed to take care of them. It is a heart that is hard indeed that does not respond to such a call. Not one of us is doing a nobler work than Ben Lewis. May his work prosper!

Rev. Jno. C. Chambers attended the conference; of course, he did. You may expect him to be on hand wherever duty calls him. The Sunday school cause is on his heart, and he never fails to look after the interests of that cause. He is a fine Sunday school secretary. His presence and work at the conference were appreciated by the brethren.

Nearly forty delegates, men and women, were in attendance upon the session of the conference. The women were very much in evidence. It looks and sounds strange to an old-timer, like me, to hear women making and seconding motions. But they were certainly on the job at our conference. On the woman's suffrage question in church and State, I have been a consistent and determined anti. I heartily accept St. Paul's teachings on the woman question. I have never had any question as to her divinely fixed sphere. Since the church and State have repudiated St. Paul, I have decided to take my place with him in innocuous desuetude. I am waiting for the women to show that St. Paul didn't know what he was writing about.

But in all earnestness, our women at the conference acquitted themselves well. They were on the committees, and attended the committee meetings, and did their share of the work. At the election of delegates to the Annual Conference they won a complete victory—of the eight delegates, three are women. If the pastors had given them a fair chance in the quarterly conference elections of delegates to the district conference, I am sure that they would have swept everything. I think the quarterly conferences ought to "vote fair" with the women. I am in hopes that they didn't play politics in the election. If they did not, they certainly did better than the men do.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Dr. Henry Flowers, W. D. Davis, J. S. Deeell, J. E. Carruth, Mrs. W. H. Lewis, John H. Greer, Mrs. H. M. Ellis, Mrs. R. E. Bennett. Alternates: W. T. Denman, H. H. Goza. This is a fine delegation. They will reflect credit upon the district if they will be at the opening of the Annual Conference and stay to its close. One very unusual feature of this case is that not a member of the church that so graciously entertained the conference was elected a delegate. It is true that Centenary has some very fine characters in its membership who would have made most excellent representatives of the district.

The Licensing Committee is composed of the following: W. H. Lewis, Dr. I. W. Cooper, Geo. H. Thompson, W. H. Saunders. It is a significant and portentous fact that not a man applied for license to preach, and not one asked for recommendation for admission on trial. No one was recommended for orders. If we go on at this rate, it will not be long till we will have to fill our pulpits with women.

Magnolia and Tylertown were nominated as the place to entertain the conference in 1923. The "old man," being entirely unwilling to show partiality, voted for both places. Magnolia was chosen.

Several resolutions of sympathy were passed, and prayers were offered by the conference for injured and sick people. The world's woes call mightily to God's people for sympathy and comfort.

Prof. J. E. Carruth was elected District Lay Leader.

The pastor and people of Centenary Church, and of McComb generally, were deeply solicitous for the comfort and enjoyment of their guests. Dr. Cooper and the writer were delightfully entertained in the handsome home of Brother and Sister T. R. Ratliff.

The preaching of the occasion was done, and well done, by Rev. W. B. Jones, Rev. W. H. Lewis, and Rev. J. T. Weems.

Report of Committee on Spiritual State of the Church.

We note with pleasure that interest in the mid-week prayer meetings seems to be on the increase, and that several pastors have laymen who have taken these services in charge; this is a good indication.

According to the reports of the pastors, not more than twenty-five have been received into the church by vows since the Annual Conference. These figures speak for themselves.

We are convinced that the time has come when it is imperative that our people be instructed in the deeper spiritual truths of the gospel; that we speak out clearly against the spirit of compromise with the world, and that we insist with renewed emphasis on the necessity of a conscious experience of saving grace, and the witness of the Holy Spirit.

We stress the importance of family devotion in the home each day, taking time to wait upon god; and systematic attendance of the entire family upon regular church services.

Report of the Committee on Christian Literature.

We do not hesitate to claim that the literature of our great church is equal to that of any other church.

Our Sunday school literature, in every grade of it, fully meets the needs of our people; we most heartily commend it.

In point of literary merit our Quarterly Review is altogether above criticism. We make free to say that some statements made in a late issue of the magazine by the editor, Dr. Rowe, anent the new and independent though and teaching in theology give us considerable disquietude and anxiety. We deplore the issuance of anything from our church press that is at variance with the traditional teaching of the M. E. Church, South. We need to be prayerfully watchful in order to protect our church against the invasion of German rationalism.

We feel quite sure that our great connectional organ, the Christian Advocate, published at Nashville, Tenn., is a peer in all the Advocate family of Methodism. It is worthy of our full support.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate is our Conference organ, and is worthy of all praise. It is ably edited, and has a voluntary staff of writers whose names are well and favorably known. It should be in all our homes. The interests of the Kingdom would be greatly promoted and the lives and religious interests of our homes would be helped, if we could persuade our people to subscribe for and read the Advocate.

One thousand new subscriptions to this paper was fixed by the Preachers' Institute as the goal for the present year. We are very sorry to report that only about 100 new subscriptions have been reported to date. We very much fear that we will fall very short of the number fixed as the goal. Unless our pastors and leaders increase their zeal in this important matter, we will certainly fall painfully short of it.

We would most earnestly exhort that the presiding elder make this matter a special subject of inquiry in all the quarterly conferences for the remaining months of the year.

We unqualifiedly endorse our district paper, The Megaphone. We most earnestly advise that the issuance of the paper be continued. It is our judgment that it gives promise of large helpfulness in our district work. It would be wise for us to put a copy of it in every Methodist home in the district. We would advise against advertisements in its columns. To obviate this need to pay for printing of the paper, we suggest that a small sum be pledged from each pastoral charge in the district to create a fund sufficient to provide for the cost of printing and mailing it to the subscribers.

THE OLD CITY OF PRAGUE.

By Mrs. J. L. Neill

We reached the old city of Prague on the night of January 25, 1922. It was bitterly cold and has not thawed out any to date (March 30). We had the worst snow storm of the winter last week when it snowed without any let-up for four days and nights, and it has snowed a little every day this week.

We were accorded a warm welcome, however, by Rev. C. T. Collyer and Mr. J. C. Wilkinson, of our Mission, and escorted to the Imperial Hotel, where, after our pedigree for a generation or so had been given (this information was for the police office), we were assigned to a nice room. We are still in the hotel, as it will be May 1 before we can get our apartment.

Mr. Neill has more than had his hands full and has been working night and day, but Nellie and I have taken advantage of such time as we had to see some of the interesting sights of Prague. I am writing about some of these things in this article, because we felt our friends would be interested.

What is the history of the founding of Prague? Tradition says that a princess who lived in the Castle Vysehrad, on the right bank of the river Vltava, founded another castle, Prague, on a hill situated on the opposite bank. In a dream she saw it grow and become a celebrated city. When the Slavic tribes were peaceably united, this castle became the seat of a central government under the rule of a Bohemian prince, and the surrounding settlement soon became the most important town in the land. Because of this importance, the first monuments of Christianity were founded here, and in 973 Prince Boleslav II established an episcopal seat, as well as the first monasteries. Attracted by these, the population grew constantly on both banks of the river. In 1235 the settlement on the right bank was fortified by walls and became the first regular town, known as the Old town of Prague. In 1257 a charter was granted to the settlement on the left bank of the river, and at that time it was called New Town.

Charles IV established his residence in Prague and made it a great city. In 1348 he established a university and scholars and students from all parts of Europe hastened to it. (To-day they claim an enrollment of 30,000 students.) In the same year, he established New Town on the right bank of the river. This settlement soon became a flourishing part of the city, so the New Town on the left bank of the river changed its name to Minor Town, or Mala Strana. Settlements sprang up on each side of the river until there were eight, and it was not until 1922 that these eight towns and four small towns adjacent were united into the present city of Prague.

From the dates given in the preceding paragraphs it can be well understood why one hears so much of "tradition" and "legend" connected with the early history of Prague. These stories are interesting, if not historically correct.

Because of its situation on seven hills and also because of its historical importance, Prague has been called the Rome of the North. The city, which is situated on both sides of the river Vltava, is connected by half a dozen bridges, most of which have historical incidents connected with them. The Charles Bridge is particularly interesting. It is five hundred fifty yards long and rests upon sixteen arches. The old bridge was founded by Queen Judith in 1167 to replace a wooden structure, but was destroyed by a great flood in 1342. The present stone bridge was begun in 1357 and was completed just before the outbreak of the Hussite wars. It has been damaged several times, and in 1890 two pillars and three arches were destroyed by floods. In the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries about thirty statues were placed on the bridge, which add much to its picturesqueness. Two of these statues were thrown into the river by the flood of 1890, but one of them has been replaced by a copy of the original. All of these statues have some historical significance; two of them are very striking. One represents Christ on the cross; this is cast in metal and gilt and bears an inscription in Hebrew which states that it was erected at the expense of a Jew as a punishment for mocking the cross. The other is a small bronze tablet on which is represented St. John of Nepomuk, the patron saint of Prague, lying bound, and around his head are five stars. A bronze cross is in the parapet just below the tablet. Legend has it that the king used every means he knew to find out a sin that the queen had confessed to John of Nepomuk, but without result. He was so enraged at the priest that he had him bound and thrown into the river Vltava. For many evenings just at dark could be seen five lights in the water where he was thrown, and it was said that these lights were angels hovering over the water.

The oldest existing Jewish synagogue in Europe is in Prague, and near it is the world-famous old Jewish Cemetery, which is one of the principal sights of the city. It has not been used since 1787. Historians do not seem to agree on the wording or dates of the inscriptions on some of the tombstones. Some say there are monuments from the 7th century, but all agree that burials took place there in the middle of the 14th century. One fact that seems certain is that some of the tombstones antedate the naming of the Jews, because on many of them are the signs of the tribes to which the deceased belonged: two hands representing the tribe of Aaron; a bunch a grapes, the tribe of Israel; a water pitcher, the tribe of Levi, etc. An interesting bit of history is the fact that the Hebrews of Europe were first given surnames in Bohemia, Austria and Hungary.

In the corner tower of the Town Hall, which dates from 1338, is the famous astronomical clock, which was built in 1490 and until the 18th century was considered one of the wonders of the world. It must still be considered a marvel by many people, because I have seen it morning, noon and late afternoon as it struck the hour and each time more than a hundred people were standing watching it. It shows and strikes the hours as in the middle ages, counting twenty-four hours from sunset to sunset. (In Prague the sun sets at 4 p. m. on the shortest day in December and at 8 p. m. on the longest day in June. When the clock strikes the solar hour, two small windows above the dial open and there "pass in review" figures representing Christ and his twelve apostles. On each side of the dial are two movable statues; one represents Death, which rings a bell; another, a Turk who shakes his head; another, a miser shaking a purse; and the other, a vain fool holding a looking glass. After the last stroke of the clock, a cock placed above the dial crows.

The clock also points out the position of the sun, the phases of the moon, the zodiac, and perhaps a few other things. Beneath the dial is a movable calendar representing the months by allegorical figures. Now, do you blame people for watching it?

There is a legend that says that one time this clock refused to run. Many noted clock-makers from all over the known world came to Prague to try to repair it, but all failed. At last a German clock-maker came and spent many weeks trying to make it run, but in desperation gave it up. One morning the people were surprised to find that the clock was running and upon investigation found that the clock-maker had hanged himself in the works.

A MOTHER'S LOVE.

By Chas. S. Jeffers.

A mother's love, a mother's prayer,
A mother's affection, a mother's care,
A mother's troubles, a mother's woes—
What the extent, God only knows.

A mother's love, O how sincere!
A mother's thoughts, O how dear!
A mother's teaching, a mother's voice!
Why not, children, make her rejoice?

Why not return what she has done,
Ye loving daughters, ye precious sons;
Why not all undertake
To make her happier for her dear sake?

How can you children ever repay
Your dear, sweet mother in every way,
For the troubles and cares she's been through
From year to year for the sake of you?

Boys, do you ever have the thought
Of how attentively she has brought
You from the cradle to where you stand
By her instructions and untiring hands?

Perhaps your dear mother may be old,
And lingering near the grave so cold;
So treat her well, cause no distress,
For of all your friends she is the best.

Don't speak to mother in angry tone,
But happier try and make her home.
Do nothing whatever to give her pain,
For to you it will surely come back again.

Give mother pleasures all you can;
Place yourself sweetly at her command;
Ask her consent in what you do,
Remembering what she has done for you.

To the girls I wish to say—
Be sweet to your mother in every way.
From your duties at home do not shirk,
Allowing your mother to do your work.

Be kind and sweet every day,
From her at night do not stay;
Ask her permission when you go,
And kiss her sweetly your love to show.

Do your best always to please,
And help mother's mind to be at ease.
Worship with her, and show you care
For your mother's love and your mother's prayer.

And when dear mother is dead and gone,
Has crossed the river to the great beyond,
And we'll see her dear sweet face no more,
Till we meet again on the other shore,

How sweet it will be that we can say,
"I've treated mother right in every way—
I tried my best to do my part
In love, in deed and with cheerful heart."

So let's not forget that we can pay
Sweet mother a tribute on Mother's Day—
The little flower that we can wear
In token of love for mother dear.

If mother is dead, a flower white;
If mother is living, a color bright.
Wear it, children, and proudly say—
"It's mother's flower; it's Mother's Day."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE PREACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Dear Brother Carley: A bit about the latest move on the foot of the Louisiana Conference "for the good of the order." You recall that a Preachers' Institute was authorized for the Conference, to be held at Centenary College. Well, it is going to be held. The time is June 1-8.

The College is doing what it can to make it a success. The Committee on Program is doing the same. Now, we want the co-operation of the preachers and laymen to the same end. No matter how much room we have or how good a program is rendered, if there is not somebody to occupy the room and hear the Instruction it will not be a success.

What is the College doing? It is placing the dormitories at the disposal of the preachers free of charge; they will have to furnish their sheets, pillow-cases and towels. It is furnishing board at actual cost, placing all its rooms, dining room and kitchen at our disposal.

What is the Program Committee doing? It has arranged for daily lectures on the following subjects: "The Doctrines of Methodism," "The Holy Spirit," "The Problem of the Rural Church." The afternoon will be given to recreation under the guidance of a director.

Each night there will be an inspirational address by one of the best leaders in our church. This will be an exceptional opportunity for an outing and schooling for a very nominal sum—ticket for travel and board for 8 days.

We hope that every official board in the State will give its pastor the means and tell him to go and come back for better service by having had the influence of these teachers and the fellowship of their brethren. Let all come and make the first session such a success that we will all look forward to the next with great expectations.

"RELIGION AND BUSINESS."

By Rev. Elmer C. Gunn.

It is a very significant thing that the world's greatest statistician is a profound believer in the "Eternal Verities." After hearing Mr. Roger Babson, in one of the lectures that have helped to make him famous, explain his reasons for preaching the necessity for the use of the Golden Rule in organizing and conducting the business of the world, one feels that the reason more attention has not been paid to the teachings of the Son of Man by business people is largely because they are ignorant of the tremendous advantages to be had in following these teachings.

Mr. Babson speaks from the standpoint of one who knows. His business is the gathering of statistics, and his field the world. He talks in terms of figures and bases all his statements on facts compiled by his workers, who are in touch with every phase of our country's business. When such a person speaks on business conditions, the world listens; when he speaks along religious lines and says business conditions are vitally affected by religious attitudes, it is well for the church to do the same. After more than twenty years of research work, Mr. Babson has come to the conclusion that in the long run success or failure in the business world may be charged up to faith or the lack of it. He said that some time ago he had occasion to investigate the cause for success and failure of some institutions, so he selected one hundred institutions founded a century or more ago whose founders took into consideration when they began to build the fundamentals of the Christian religion. Then he selected one hundred institutions founded about the same time whose builders paid no attention to such fundamentals. Of the former, only five have failed—ninety-five still stand; of the latter, only five still stand, while ninety-five have failed. Personally, I do not feel that such statistics as that should be passed unnoticed by the church.

In a recent editorial, one of our great church papers said that Mr. Babson proves that business conditions vary like the tides—that the advancing and receding waves of prosperity and adversity follow each other in cycles. The paper failed to state that Mr. Bason also holds that these cycles are controlled by the spiritual attitude of the people. In times of prosperity, he says, it is generally the case that people forget God. They become lax in spiritual effort, their minds more and more revert to matters pertaining to money. When this condition gets too bad, the Master calls a halt. Adversity comes, prosperity goes; then, in the midst of adversity, people once more turn their faces heavenward in prayer to God. Immediately following this turning of their faces, adversity begins to recede, prosperity advances; all is well. Now, such talk from a crank or a fanatic would have no weight with us; but when a man of Mr. Babson's ability and record makes such statements and backs them up with his charts, it is time for preachers to investigate it for themselves.

Shall the church not lead in a great movement to mix more thoroughly religion and business? Would it not be well for us to undertake to establish once and for all the Golden Rule as the base of the world's business? So mote it be.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLY.

The Nineteenth Annual Session of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League, and the first assembly will be held at Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., June 5 to 11.

The program is rapidly being gotten into shape, and will soon be in the hands of the printer. We might say in advance of the program, that we will have Mission Study classes on both Home and Foreign Missions, also classes in Methods covering the lives of Methodist heroes, classes in study of "The Methodist Armor," by Hudson, and classes in "Recreation and the Church," by Gates.

So far, we will have several out-of-Conference workers, as follows:

E. O. Harbin, Central Office, will have charge of the classes in "Recreation and Culture," also classes on Methods in the Third Department, and will direct the play-periods.

Dr. C. G. Hounshell will have charge of the Life Service Department, and teach the class in the Missionary Department.

Miss Sadie Donnan, of Georgia, will have charge of the Junior-Intermediate League work.

Do not forget the rate is $1 per day for six days, including board and lodging. Bring pillows and sheets with you.

We would like to have every presiding elder and pastor to attend, and we are urging every League to be represented and every charge or church where there is no League to send one or more of its young people. We are sure this is an opportunity for getting trained young people in the church.

We covet your prayers and interest that this may be the greatest meeting of all our meetings.

Yours sincerely,

W. D. HAWKINS.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

The great work of the preacher is preaching. I hold that real preaching, the kind that is far-reaching and lasting, includes teaching, admonition, and exhortation. The pulpit is the preacher's throne, the study his workshop, the home his class room. The Sunday school and other subsidiary organized societies are, or should be, expression of the zeal and active life of the church. As some vast, overflowing river is filled and fed by its tributaries, so are all of these related to the church, all tending to one great end, the maintaining and extension of Christ's Kingdom. From a lofty tower the man at the switchboard directs and controls the trains passing in and out of the central station. His hand is on the levers, his eye on the dial of watching the signals. Much depends on him. So with the man in the pulpit, only much more depends on him. He is Zion's watchman, and must direct with authority, tempered with wisdom and patience. All things to all men, is a task that will tax his ingenuity and at times try his faith.

St. Paul evidently did not think much of special days. Feast days, new moons, and even the rigid, unbending Jewish idea of the Sabbath appealed but little to him. Every day to him was a day for loyal devotion and faithful service to the Master and owner of all days. Now the special day idea, and even the special week, is with us. As a pastor, I enter protest, in plain, unmistakable language. I am just simply tired of so many interests demanding, or requesting, or claiming, special days for their claims. They get in the way, and the pastor must have some time some special days to preach on the spiritual things and talk about the things that lie near his heart and the hearts of his people. Oh, yes; I know all about the beautiful argument that these "specials" belong to the Kingdom, but somehow it doesn't strike me just right when I have to "carry on" for so many of them. About the next thing you know, some self-constituted commission will be sending circular letters to our churches to collect funds with which to build a monument to commemorate Methusaleh, or build a school in honor of Peter the Hermit. Just let one rise somewhat above the ordinary, and the churches must raise money, or else posterity will suffer dire calamity. But I am not keeping all the days, nor collecting all the money called for—I am too busy with the King's business.

BE GENEROUS.

Be generous with all things which you are sure are your own. Safeguard the things of others.

Be generous towards the failings of others, but reckon severely with your own.

Be generous in your forgiveness of those who have wronged you. Those need it most who ask it the least while your heart cannot rest with bitterness within.

Be generous in your praise of another's merit or success. That both pleases him and puts you farther on the road of attainment.

Be generous with your hopes, for the stock will never run out as long as they are drawn from the promises of God.

Be generous in your allowance of time for the cultivation of the soul. The day is never tedious with those who know how to do business with God.

Be generous with the wages that you pay. Not what you can get the work done for should be the guide, but what it is worth to you to have it done.

ON BEING A BISHOP.

By Bishop W. F. McMurry.

It is now four years since my election and consecration to the office of bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—four years of 365 days each, making 1460 days in this office. I have been at home with my family and at my desk 317 days, and absent from home in the discharge of the duties of my office 1143 days. So far as time spent upon the field is concerned, I have a conscience void of offense.

Following the General Conference of 1918, on the first day of June, I turned over to my successor, under the direction of a certified accountant, the office of the Board of Church Extension and began active preparation for my trip to the Orient, having been assigned by the College of Bishops to that field. I proposed to take my family with me to the Orient, but was advised by the Missionary Secretary in charge of that field that no provision had been made for the travel of the families of the bishops, nor for the residence of bishops in the foreign fields. I was further advised by the same Secretary that it was not the desire of the Board of Missions that I move my family to the Orient at that time, as it was regarded as very important that I go to the field at once and give special attention to the study of the needs as represented in the Centenary Askings and return home at as early a date as possible so as to be available for service in the Centenary Campaign. I encountered difficulty on account of the crowded conditions of Louisville, occasioned by the proximity of large army camps, in finding accommodations for my family, and moved into temporary quarters in St. Louis as the best arrangement it seemed possible to make for them during my absence, and hastened to take up my duties in the field assigned to me.

While in the Orient I visited Japan twice, Korea twice, and China once, and went pretty thoroughly over our work, visiting most of the stations in each of these fields. The cordial welcome, the hearty co-operation, the manifest devotion to their task on the part of the missionaries, men and women, I found to be of high order. I came away from the field with a very high appreciation of the noble men and women who constitute our working forces in those distant lands. And I shall not forget the welcome, the sympathy, the willingness to be guided and directed, the fine fellowship, and the gracious hospitality, of the native Christians.

On Sunday, February 16, 1919, I reached home. After a rest of one week, I began work in the interest of the Centenary, speaking continuously throughout the church until the campaign was over.

At the meeting of the bishops in May, 1919, Bishop W. R. Lambuth, who had been in charge of War Work, advised that the American soldiers were rapidly returning home and that in the future the full time of a bishop would not be required in this work. He was assigned by the bishops to the Orient and I was placed in charge of the Alabama Conference and the Cuba Mission Conference, taking the place of Bishop J. H. McCoy, who had been called to his reward. I was also given the New Mexico and Northwest Texas Conferences. I gave myself to the work of this new assignment as fully as possible and to the limit of my time and strength.

At the spring meeting of the bishops in 1920, Bishop J. C. Kilgo's health was so precarious that he found it necessary to request release from his episcopal district and I was assigned to the Mississippi, North Mississippi, Louisiana, and Northwest Texas Conferences.

The Board of Church Extension at its Annual Meeting, April 29-30, 1920, thought it wise to reorganize and enlarge its Executive Committee, and in the reorganization I was elected President of the Board. At the called meeting of the Board, June 23, 1920, by unanimous vote I was requested to change my residence from St. Louis, Mo., to Louisville, Ky., the Board declaring "that the best interests of the Board and the church will be served by the removal of the residence of Bishop McMurry to Louisville, the headquarters of the Board, where he will be more accessible to the members of the Board, and especially the Secretary and other members of the Executive Committee." I did not feel that I could treat lightly this expressed judgment of the Board, and especially as Louisville is one of "the important cities of our territory," and consequently moved my residence to Louisville on September 19, 1920, and have rendered such service as has been possible without interfering with my duties and responsibilities as a bishop.

The following spring, 1921, I was assigned to the same district and also associated with Bishop E. R. Hendrix, in charge of the Virginia Conference. Bishop Hendrix was not able to attend the session of the Virginia Conference, and I have had the responsibility of that Conference since my assignment as associate with Bishop Hendrix. Bishop J. C. Kilgo at the same meeting was associated with me in the superintending of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, but his continued ill health has made it impossible for him to do more than advise with me.

At the October meetings of the bishops in the fall of 1921, Bishop Lambuth having fallen at his post in Japan, I was again placed in charge of the Oriental fields, which I have done my best to serve up to this time.

It will appear from the above that I have had charge of the following Conferences during the quadrennium and for the length of time named in connection with each:

China Mission Conference	1 year,	7	months
Korean Conference	1 "	7	"
Japan Mission	1 "	7	"
Cuba Mission Conference	1 "
Alabama Conference	1 "
Northwest Texas Conference	3 "
Louisiana Conference	2 "
Mississippi Conference	2 "
North Mississippi Conference	2 "
Virginia Conference	1 "
New Mexico Conference	1 "

I have presided over a total of 16 Annual Conferences, at which 91,613 additions to the church were reported. There have been admitted on trial at these Conferences 93 preachers. I have ordained 73 deacons and 77 elders. I have dedicated many churches, helped raise church debts, preached at Commencements and assemblies, and given myself fully to the Centenary and the Educational Campaigns and have traveled throughout the territory assigned to me, superintending the temporal and spiritual interests of the church to the best of my ability.

Membership in the Board of Missions, the Board of Church Extension, the Centenary Commission, the War Work Commission, College Boards, director of the China Publishing House, and a special responsibility for the location, organization and permanent establishment of the new Board of Finance, have occupied my time and thought to some degree. I have also found time to give attention to providing a chaplain for the Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, and with others to set in motion forces looking to the proper housing of our people at the seats of the Universities of Missouri, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Virginia, etc.

Within the bounds of the Northwest Texas Conference, located at Abilene, Texas, there has been enterprised a new college. The contract for the Administration Building was let on March 21, 1922. This institution is in response to the demand for a church school to care for the Methodist youth in that vast section stretching from Fort Worth to El Paso and from the Southern Pacific Railroad on the south to the Rock Island on the north. This tremendous and growing section—an empire in itself—has been without church educational advantages, except for one efficient Junior College.

The old Centenary College, located at Shreveport, La., has been placed permanently upon its feet, I believe. This is the result of the Educational Campaign and the generosity of its friends. The Millsaps College, the Mansfield College, the Whitworth College, and other institutions of learning within the territory served, have also prospered. Revival meetings of great power and in large numbers have been held. The net increase in membership is encouraging—in fact, quite large. New building enterprises are numerous and of substantial character, and the work of God goes forward. The Annual Conference sessions have been occasions of peace and profit, and sometimes of power, where all the interests of the church have received careful attention.

I have had great joy in the service of the church in the fields assigned to me, and in my personal religious experience have had some gracious seasons. The preachers and laymen have been cordial and responsive. The church is in a healthful condition and growing. There has been vouchsafed to me a reasonable degree of health and strength, and I hereby record my gratitude to Almighty God for mercies without number.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Christian Education Movement is essentially a spiritual movement. The Christian education of our young people cannot be accomplished simply by building great schools. It takes more than that. The very roots of Christian education are in the home and the church. Hence, the Christian Education Movement has been made effective by emphasizing the need of a deep spiritual life in the family and in the church. It makes its appeal to the young men and women to listen to the voice of God, who is constantly calling them to life service for the Kingdom. Unto this end, we wish to observe "Go to College Week," from May 21 to 28, in order that we may build up a conviction in the hearts of our people regarding Christian education and that a constant stream of boys and girls with the love of Christ and the church already in their hearts may fill to overflowing both our schools—Centenary and Mansfield.

Here in Louisiana, we want to have a vigorous, independent, liberal, intellectual and spiritual life of our own that will make us a God-fearing people. This will only be possible as we have great Christian institutions of learning. We propose to equip our colleges so that they will send out a rapidly growing stream of trained Christian leaders to give sanity and stability to our commonwealth.

We propose that during May, June and July, a strong effort be made to improve the prayer meetings and that prayer meetings be established in many of the rural churches. A good start has been made in this direction by the Monroe-Ruston District, which entered into a contest for the best attendance at prayer meeting during these three months. Why not have the other districts do the same? Send me a post-card report concerning your prayer meeting. Our aim is a real live prayer meeting in every church and a family altar in every home.

Remember our Louisiana Preachers' Institute at Centenary College, Shreveport, La., from June 1 to 8. A good program has been provided. Inspirational addresses will be given. We expect to be mightily revived and to go forth into our summer evangelistic campaign for the greatest victory Louisiana Methodism has ever achieved.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conf. Secty. of Education.

There is a legendary tale which describes how the wood of the true cross was of old rejected because it would not fit into the building of the ancient temple. It was too long for one corner, it was too short for another, it was too narrow for a third, it was too broad for another: and so it was laid aside till it came forth at last to be the means and symbol of the world's redemption.—Dean Stanley.

The Home Circle

TO-DAY. I'VE BEEN THE BESTEST BOY!

To-day I've been the bestest boy,
And working was a truly joy!
I ran five errands to the store,
And felt like running many more.
And gave the chickens water. Shucks!
That's nothing for a boy to do—
I weeded in the garden, too!
I hunted in the barn and hay,
And gathered every egg to-day.
I minded baby for a spell,
For mamma wasn't feeling well.
I fetched in heaps and heaps of wood.
I wonder why I was so good?
For most the time I want to play,
And not do any work all day.

HOW RUTH LOVED HER NEIGHBOR.

By J. L. Glover.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," read Ruth in a puzzled voice. "I don't see how I can do that, mamma. Miss Martha is my neighbor," glancing across to the next porch, where a lady sat reading, "and I don't love her at all."

Mamma smiled, and explained that the word neighbor had a wider meaning than the literal one. Still, it might apply literally, too, on the principle that charity begins at home, but does not end there.

"But I still don't understand," persisted Ruthie. "What does 'as thyself' mean?"

"Why, how do you like people to treat you?" asked mamma.

Ruth thought a minute. "I like them to be kind, and thoughtful and—"

"Exactly," said mamma. "You love your little self, and want it treated kindly and considerately. Now, you are to love your neighbor 'as yourself.' The Golden Rule comes in there, do you see?"

Ruth's blue eyes opened wide.

"Oh, I see!" she said thoughtfully. "I must treat Miss Martha—and everybody else—as I would like them to treat me. I can love Miss Martha that way!"

The very next day she had an opportunity to put the rule into practice. Miss Martha stopped in on her way home, very hot and tired, after a morning of shopping.

"Dear me," she said, dropping into a porch chair, "I am just too worn out to go even those few steps further to get home. Please let me rest here a few minutes, Mrs. Woodleigh."

Mamma smiled and welcomed her cordially, and Ruth, suddenly remembering her text, thought, "What would I like Miss Martha to do to me, if I were hot and tired?" She brought a big palmetto fan, which Miss Martha took with a grateful, "Thank you, my dear!" and went on talking to mamma of her shopping.

Ruth slipped away, and presently returned with a tray containing a tall glass of iced tea, a saucer of delicious berries and a little plate of delicate crackers—just the lunch for a hot day.

Miss Martha seemed very glad of it, and as she finished, she said with a smile:

"That has done me a world of good! I felt too tired to go home and get myself a cup of tea; and now I feel quite refreshed and cool. You are a thoughtful little girl. Thank you, dear!"

Ruth smiled as she carried away the tray.

"'As thyself,' she murmured, "I understand, now; and I like Miss Martha a lot better, too!"—Exchange.

GETTING EVEN.

"I'll get even with him. You see if I don't."

Uncle John looked up from the article he was writing. "Who is that you are going to get even with?" He smiled into Fred's frowning face.

"It's Frank Lane. He's always playing some low-down trick on us because we won't let him play on our nine. We were playing with my ball to-day—it was a dollar ball, too—and Harry batted it clear over the fence. Frank got it and threw it out into the lake." Fred's eyes were flashing.

"And you want to get even with such a low-down trick as you rightly called it," Uncle John said slowly.

"I will too. I know what I can do."

Uncle John's pencil had been moving swiftly over the paper as they talked. Now he motioned Fred to step nearer. A few lines had marked out a high road and near it a low, marshy ground. "If a fellow does a low-down trick, he lowers himself. He must be down here," Uncle John explained, making a mark for a figure down on the marshy ground. "Now, if you are up here, what will you have to do to get even with him?"

Fred's face grew thoughtful as he studied the sketch. "I suppose I'd have to get down as low as he is," he said slowly.

"Exactly. Now tell me, wasn't that just what you intended to do—to do something just as mean to him as he had done to you; in other words, to lower yourself to his level?"

"Yes, it was," Fred admitted.

Uncle John said no more. He had a way of leaving a fellow to think things out for himself.

Two days later Fred came in, his eyes dancing. "Well, Uncle John, I got even with Frank," he announced.

Uncle John looked surprised. He turned sharp eyes on the laughing face.

"It was just this way, you see: I got to thinking how I'd feel if the boys wouldn't let me play on the nine, and I made up my mind I'd feel just as Frank did. And, likely as not, I'd throw their old ball away too. So day before yesterday I told Frank he could play in my place. He wasn't going to do it at first; he seemed to think it was some kind of a trick. Then he went into it, and, say, but he can play ball! He made more home runs than anybody else. Frank came and brought me a new ball to-night. He went out to Mr. Nelson's field and pulled mustard in the hot sun to get the money to pay for it with. So, it seems to me, he is up on the level again and we're even up there. And I tell you, it feels better than getting even the other way."—Selected.

FOLLOWING THE TRAIL.

"But the mystery of the open highway road pales into insignificance when contrasted with the wonder and the enchantment of a new world created overnight!" says Dan Lear last winter in an article, "Paths in the Snow," in Boys' Life. "A fairy world of crystal white with a sparkling cover which conceals all the rough edges of the fields, rounds off all the sharp edges of the banks, and everywhere smooths out the irregularities of the earth's surface. Think of the joy of donning boots and leggins or moccasins, fastening on skis or snowshoes and making paths in the snow where no foot of man or beast before has left a track, to be the very first to step into the land of enchantment! Even we grown-ups still feel a hint of these vivid pleasures which have drifted down from glorious boyhood.

It is difficult to tell whether the lure of the trackless snow or the white expanse dotted with hieroglyphics, made by the feet of birds and beast, is most attractive. One feels the delight of an explorer in a land of virgin snow, but one also feels the intoxication of the primal hunter at the sight of game, when one follows the tracks in the snow made by the wild creatures of the woods and fields.

"A road or even a trail, be it ever so rough and casual, must be bound by certain limitations in order that it may properly call itself a road or trail. It cannot go where it pleases; it must wind its way around obstructions, it must follow the natural grades or valleys. But the tracks in the snow, on the contrary, are delightfully irresponsible; they go under the fallen logs, or leap over them, sometimes running on top of one to its full extent, or they will recklessly cross the traveled road at right angles, go over a stone wall or up a hill or down; apparently they are incorrigible and governed by no rules or purpose; they either have no destination or they have their own idea of where they are going, and their own manner of getting there; they fascinate both man and boy, for each of us is curious to know to what unexpected adventure the tracks may lead."—Exchange.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

(Coutinued from First Page.)

About Ourselves and Others.

While within the College of Bishops there is a realm of the most absolute candor, and while bishops are much given to having opinions of their own, we are glad to say that we have had a quadrennium of great harmony among ourselves. We can truly say, in the language of the ritual, that we "are in love and charity with our neighbors. * * *

First of all, we desire to report that the recommendation of the General Conference, that each bishop should, in as far as practicable, remain in charge of a given district for a period of four years, has been carefully regarded. The variations from this order have been only such as were demanded by conditions which we could not control. The death of two active bishops and the partial disablement of two others made several changes necessary. But the will of the General Conference has been carried out.

While the rule of a four years' presidency has some features to commend it, there are some objections to it which are worthy of regard when the rule is to be applied to a general superintendency such as is ours. We have no doubt that the sole object of that recommendation was to make more effective the administration of the bishops; but as the bishops were made a sort of second party to tho recommendation, we deem it our duty to report to the General Conference our estimate of its working.

In the first place, the tendency of this order is toward a diocesan episcopacy in so far as the territorial and time elements are concerned without involving other limitations. If it be replied that the bishops are left with discretion to make changes when deemed necessary, a full use of this discretion would be a return to the former rule of appointments without limitation, and would lay the bishops liable to the imputation of disregarding the expressed wish of the General Conference. Nothing, we are sure, is farther from the disposition of the College as at present constituted.

Our general superintendency grows out of our general itinerancy, and the very genius of it calls for an administration that is wholly impartial and therefore, to a large extent, impersonal. This feature is, so long as human nature remains the same, constantly liable to be negatived by this order. It is easy to believe that a bishop may know too little; it is barely possible that he may know too much. Furthermore, the average active administration of a bishop is only twelve years. It will follow, therefore, that under this rule a bishop will at the end of that period have had knowledge of only twelve Conferences out of a total of more than two score. This prevents his being a general superintendent in the fullest sense and is liable to result in such a limitation of his knowledge of the church as a whole as may militate against his efficiency even in his own field. Moreover, there is a legitimate, even a most honorable, curiosity on the part of our people which is worthy of regard. They desire to see, hear, and otherwise measure the men under whose supervision the church is placed. But under a strict observance of this rule the vast majority of our leaders among both preachers and laymen could never know the majority of our bishops.

Bishop Asbury has truly said: "Local men have local views."

We recognize that the suggestion made by the last General Conference grew out of a desire on the part of the church that the bishops give close supervision to all the affairs of the Annual Conferences. We are your brethren and the servants of the church, and we wish as General Superintendents to render the most efficient service possible. We would, therefore, suggest that you make careful inquiry as to whether the plan followed during the past quadrennium is, after all, the best method of episcopal supervision.

It has happened more than once that questions of law have arisen in the Book Committee and boards, and your College of Bishops has been asked to pass officially on these questions. By the law of our church your bishops have no authority to decide questions of this nature, nor has any other body in the church been clothed with this authority. Embarrassment and even damage to our work may result unless the General Conference commits questions of this kind to some body of the church with authority to act. We commend the matter to your consideration.

Additional Bishops.

We recommend the election of three additional bishops.

The Continued Pastorate.

We assume that the General Conference would like to have a report concerning an item of legislation passed at the session of 1918 which affects in some measure our administration—namely, the act which authorizes the bishops under certain conditions to continue a preacher in a pastoral charge for a period longer than four years. We have given this provision a fair trial, and feel constrained to report that in the main it works embarrassment to congregations, pastors, presiding elders, and bishops.

Christian Education.

* * * Christian education is fortunate in having won to its view several of the leading psychologists of our day, who are now teaching that the chief end in education is not knowledge but character; that the vital question at the end of each period is not, What has the pupil learned? but, What has he become? and that no man is to be regarded as an educated man whose religious nature is undeveloped. Those views harmonize fully with the theory of the church—namely, that the chief objective in education is the production of a well-rounded Christian character. This does not overlook or discount scholarship of even the largest kind or disregard the modern passion for industrial preparedness, but it crowns both with a purpose which is needed in order to the greatest efficieney in the service of men.

Proper education, being a process of character-building, finds its first and chief sphere in the Christian home. This is the divine order. God gave the law to one generation of adults, and in it bound the parents to teach it to their children. The thunders of Sinai were succeeded by the quieter and more effective influences of the family school of religion. Christian education is thus bound to the home by the scheme of nature and by the command of God. It is scarcely needful to say that most that has been accomplished in the Christianizing of the race has been done by the use of this divine provision. But we are pained to believe that the Christian homes of our day are falling lamentably short of using this holy recourse to its full capacity for the salvation of our young people. The religious atmospheres of our homes are not what they should be and are capable of being made in the production of Christian character. * * * In short, the chief need of the hour is a larger and better use of the home as a school of religion. Herein alone will be found the solution of problems which are destroying the peace of households and retarding the growth of the kingdom. Fundamental to this order is the family altar where prayer is daily offered and the Word of God is read and competently taught. All our pastors and laymen are therefore affectionately urged to see to it that this supreme privilege is more widely and adequately used in all our homes.

The Sunday School.

Next to the home in the scheme of religious education stands the Sunday school. This great institution, which as a religious movement was first adopted and used by the Methodists, was never intended to take the place of home training, but rather to enlarge the scope of Biblical instruction and to train the children of the church in the duties of the Christian life as they emerge from the home relations into the broader relations of the church and of society. It has now come to be used as the training camp for all the work which the church proposes to do and is, therefore, an interest of supreme importanee which it is the height of unwisdom to overlook or neglect in any community. * * * There can be no question that many menaces lie along the pathway of young people in this day. They live socially in the "region of the variable winds" and are beaten upon by blasts of every kind from every quarter. This is true not only in the lower realm of worldly amusements but in the higher sphere of literary contacts. Rationalism, antichristian socialism, and other dangerous isms are making their attacks upon religion and civilization itself through books, magazines and newspapers in an effort to capture the thought of the young people and thus intrench themselves for all the future. We are pleased to believe that the church is becoming more aroused to these dangers and is adopting better plans to meet them. Hitherto we have been too well content to practice the mere prohibition of the things which make against the spiritual life of the young. We have sought the destruction of these things without anything sufficiently constructive to fill the place. The only dependable plan is that of elimination by substitution. The finest study of the home and the church now is how to use the provisions which have been made for youthful activities within the church as will preoccupy the thought and energies of our young people against the seductive influences of the world about them. There is no antidote for bad reading that is as effective as good reading and no cure for the sins which are born of youthful idleness which is so sure and effective as the preoccupation of the faculties with the things which are truly worth while.

The Epworth League.

The work of the Epworth League, coming as it does between the regular work of the Sunday school and the ordinary work of the congregation, has accomplished such results as have vindicated its claim to the heartiest support of the church. * * * It is gratifying to note that in the last year of the quadrennium the Epworth Era was self-sustaining, despite the fact that the salaries of the General Secretary and his assistant were paid from its incomes.

Other Educational Institutions.

Next after the home, the Sunday school, and the League in our scheme of Christian education come our colleges and universities * * * We are glad to believe that the sense of religious obligation is stronger and more active in our institutions of higher learning than it was even a few years ago. They seem to hold, and we think correctly so, that, after the formation of Christian character the chief objective in the conduct of church colleges and universities is the preparation of leaders, both preachers and laymen, for the direction of the larger work which the church has to do in this and succeeding generations.

About the Church Itself.

There is in these perturbed and restless times much talk about making the church more democratic. We are constrained to believe that this talk does not come primarily from our own people, but that it is of alien origin. It nevertheless leads to public suggestions touching certain modifications in our system which we believe tend to make the impression that we ourselves are not wholly pleased with our organization. There is abundant proof to the contrary of this in the persistent refusal of the General Conference as our only law-making body to heed such suggestions and proposals as tend to any serious interference with our system. We dare to believe that our people are overwhelmingly satisfied with a system which has from the start given us primacy among modern denominations in the spread of the gospel and in the establishment of permanent institutions of service.

Our Missionary Work.

Every church which is alive to the demands of the great commission holds its missionary interest as of supreme importance. We believe that no communion is more awake to this great cause than is ours. The closing quadrennium has witnessed the largest achievements in all our history within this field. The most notable of these achievements was the Centenary Campaign * * * The three great tasks which still lie before Protestant Christianity are the conversion of the heathen world, the subjugation of the Mohammedan world by the holier methods of conquest, and the regeneration of the Romish world. That our part in these world-wide movements will tax to the uttermost both our spiriual and material resources, there can be no question. But this is true: that as a church we have never been in so hopeful a situation for meeting these demands of the kingdom of God.

Of Lay Activities.

It is plainly true that no quadrennium in our history has witnessed such deep and intelligent devotion to the interests of the church on the part of our laymen as has marked the last four years. * * * But commendable as have been the activities and efficiency of our laymen in the past wo cannot but consider them a mere earnest, not even a tithe, of the resources which reside in our membership. The laymen have discovered that to pay the bills is not the only or even the largest part which a layman can take in tho ongoing of the kingdom. The spiritual resources which belong to our membership are incalculable, and the release of these forces is coming to pass in a way which is full of hope for tho future of the church.

Anything which the General Conference can do to still further mobilize the laymen of our communion for doing fully the work which has been so fairly begun is worthy of your most sincoro and prayerful thought.

A Home Mission Board.

The last General Conference, upon the recommendation of the committees on Church Extension and Missions, provided for the appointment of a commission to consider the advisability of uniting the work of the Home Missions with that of the Church Extension and thereby creating a great board to handle all home missionary interests, including Church Extension; and creating a Board of Foreign Missions, to give its entire attention to the foreign field. The report of that Commission will be before this General Conference. We may he permitted to say, however, that in our opinion the time has come when the interests of our enlarged and enlarging foreign fields and activities really require all the attention of a great board. * * * In view of these facts, we believe that the time has come when our Board of Missions should he divided and a Board of Home Missions established, separate from a Board of Foreign Missions. Whether Home Missions should now he joined with Church Extension, and thus follow out a natural affinity, or this union be delayed until the policies of tho Home Missions are clearly defined and established by the experience of one or more quadrenniums, we leavo entirely to tho judgment of the General Conference, without any suggestions from us.

Interracial Relations.

* * * We especially urge that everything possible be done to prevent lynchings, which aro no less a disgrace to those who engago in them than they are an outrage upon the helpless victim. This crime of crimes, which is not only a complete subversion of law hut a stroke at the very life of the law itself, has discredited our nation in the eyes of other civilized nations and brought undying obloquy upon many of the States of the Union. It is hoped that the States will continue to legislate against this shameful crime and that the public conscienco will be speedily so aroused that it will be utterly abolished.

Of Temperance and Social Service.

The Methodists have always been a temperance people, both in doctrino and in practice. They in the beginning fought the battle very much alone. When the period of temperance societies came on the Methodists did good work, both by proclaiming the gospel of temperance and by fostering all organizations looking to tho same end. Later, when local option was the order, they were everywhere forward in ridding local sections of tho saloon, and when State-wido prohibition became possible they were found to be a great and dependable host in its behalf. We have reason, therefore, to rejoice that we have lived to see the day in which nation-wide prohibition of the manufacture and sale of ardent spirits has entered into the constitution of our nation, where it will doubtless abide through all time. * * * The cry that prohibition does not prohibit is false, and the friends of temperance should not be discouraged by giving heed to it. It is never true that the saneness and justico of any law aro to he judged by the violations of it.

We cannot but return sincero thanks to every member of tho United States Congress who has befriended this measuro for general relief, and it is prayed that their watchfulness may continuo in order that no subsidiary legislation shall again open the floodgates of this incomparable evil.

The Superannuate Endowment.

* * * The Board of Finance will present to you in its quadrennial report the outline of a plan for securing the ten-million-dollar endowment so much needed, which has been thoroughly matured and unanimously adopted by said Board. This plan was presented to us at our fall meeting of 1921, and we published our appreciation and indorsement of it, "and cordially recommended that this cause be given, according to those plans, right of way before the whole church." Since that time we have had no occasion to change our mind and strongly commend to you the plan presented by the Board of Finance as worthy of your careful consideration, and recommend that this cause he given right of way during the next quadrennium.

Divorce.

* * * We recommend that our law be amended so that a person divorced for any other cause than infidelity, which infidelity shall be established by the court records or other satisfactory evidence, and then marrying another, shall not become or remain a member of our church; that any minister who shall solemnize the rite of matrimony where either person has been divorced for any other than the scriptural cause, and that fact determined by the court records or other satisfactory evidence, shall be dealt with as in case of immorality.

Relations with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

As is generally known, during the past two quadrenniums negotiations have been pending looking toward the unification of Episcopal Methodism by reorganization. Our Commissioners appointed by the General Conference have conscientiously labored through many months to develop a plan in harmony with the instructions given them. Finally a plan was agreed upon by a majority of each Commission to be submitted to the General Conferences of the two the approval of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church which met in Des Moines in May, 1920. A full report touching this whole matter will be submitted to you by the Commission itself. It will appear from this report that the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church desires that these negotiations be not broken off, but that provision be made for their continuance. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has always been desirous of tho most fraternal relations with all evangelical churches, and especially with the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which we are bound by the close ties of doctrine and history. We express the fervent wish that in the years to come these ties may be strengthened and these relations may become more and more fraternal.

We therefore respectfully recommend that, in harmony with our entire history, this General Conference accede to the request of the Methodist Episcopal Church and make provision by the appointment of a Commission for the continuance of negotiations looking toward unification in harmony with the basic principles already agreed upon by both churches as feasible and desirable, or upon some other basis acceptable to the membership of both churches.

An Interboard Committee.

There seems to be need of a committee of the General Conference, to be called by some such name as tho Interboard Committee, which shall have advisory powers in assisting the various boards in working out such plans of operation as will prevent the duplication of work, the cost of work, and other losses of power.

Hospitals.

There is still another field of need and of obligation to which we would respectfully call your attention. We refer to the need of hospitals. It is to our sore discredit that with more than two millions of members distributed over one of the most prosperous sections of the world we have but few hospitals worthy of the name in this day of advancement in the healing and surgical arts.

Memorials will be presented to you, and we recommend that careful attention be given to this important matter.

Revivals and Evangelism.

The revival power of Protestant Christianity is one of its greatest resources. It is due to this strangely divine power that the prophecy is being fulfilled that a nation shall be born to God in a day. * * *

The very existence of Methodism in America meant an organized evangelism such as would abide through the ages. From that time our ministry and membership have been faithful to these traditions, and our church by the double plan of education and evangelism has enjoyed the greatest growth within a similar period known in the history of the Christian church. We deem ourselves fortunate in the present arrangement for the continuance and enlargement of this great work. In addition to more than six thousand settled or pastoral evangelists, we now have in the field about two score of general evangelists who are devoting themselves exclusively to evangelistic meetings. These men are under the supervision of a committee of the General Conference, which passes upon tho suitability of men for this work and gives full attention to the doctrines, methods, and results of these meetings.

Our Work In The West.

By every token of the history and prophecy of its connectional life, our Methodism has come to the parting of the ways as regards its field of operations. Under what has appeared to be the clear leadings of Providence, we have chosen, since the days of Andrew and Soule, to confine our labors chiefly to a geographically restricted section of the American republic. Our policy has been modified by various considerations of sentiment, expediency, and, during much of the past, lack of material resources. But the years have brought to the front issues of change, necessity, and providential opportunity which clamor for an amended policy and an enlargement of our sphere of operations. As to the new fields which are inviting us with their providential opportunities, we consider our right to enter them to be limited only by considerations of expediency and the general rule of Christian reciprocity in such matters.

Conclusion.

While rejoicing in the abounding prosperity with which God of all grace has so enriched our beloved church, we are not blind or indifferent to perils which easily beset us in common with all other evangelical bodies in tho land we love and for whose welfare we cherish a jealous care.

The world has but lately emerged from a terrible war, which is now generally agreed was the outcome of decayed faith, with its consequent demoralization of life. This fearful conflagration was kindled not by the fanaticism of ignorance, but by an incendiary rationalism. This lesson of the war should not be overlooked. What wrought evil overseas cannot fail to be equally pernicious in America. Mankind cannot enjoy the fruits of faith after cutting its roots. If men depart from the truth as it is in Jesus, wasting in riotous rationalism their rich inheritance of divine revelation, they must expect spiritual destitution and moral disorder extending through all the ranges of individual, national, and international life and relations.

Heretofore, our church has been remarkably exempt from these destructive influences and revolutionary tendencies. Our preachers (with few, if any exceptions) have been characterized by purity of doctrine and elevation of life, and the spirit of our people has been marked by the most admirable conservatism of evangelical Christianity.

We do not disparage devout scholarship, nor discourage efforts to reach sound learning in all departments of thought and promote investigation along all lines of useful research. From the first Methodism has fostered education and walked unafraid along the paths of intellectual culture.

TRIBUTE TO LAMAR LOWREY.

For the first time this year we are called upon to mourn the loss of one of our schoolmates. We pause to chronicle the death on Feb. 23rd of Lamar Lowrey, class of '23.

At no time since Christmas had Lamar been wholly well and about three weeks ago he left Centenary to go to Mansfield to be with his uncle, J. W. Lowrey, a prosperous merchant of our sister city.

While at his uncle's home he was under treatment and was apparently recovering, when, after a slight dental operation and the removal of tonsils, there developed a virulent attack of septicemia which proved fatal.

Wo shall greatly miss Lamar as he was prominent in many college activities and had a host of friends at Centenary. He was quarterback of the varsity football team, and had also become a letter man in baseball and basketball. He was also a charter member of the Sigma Phi fraternity.

Lamar had a very bright, keen intellect and could easily master his subjects. He was quick-witted and incisive in thought; so brilliant indeed that he did not have to dig and drudge as so many of us do.

He sprang from one of the best families in the state. His father, Rev. P. O. Lowrey, of Indian Bayou, is one of the honored members of the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Ho leaves besides his father and mother several brothers and sisters to mourn his loss.

President Geo. S. Sexton, assisted by Dean Smith, officiated at the funeral which was at the Mansfield Methodist Church, Feb 24th. A large number of Centenary students attended. The active pallbearers were members of his fraternity, while the honorary ones were fellow members of the football team of '22. The floral offerings were profuse and most appropriate. His fraternity sent a beautiful design emblematic of their order; the football squad offered a lovely cushioned football; the faculty and students presented an exquisite letter "C." The Centenary students furnished special music for the occasion.

The remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Mansfield, there to await the resurrection of the dead.

He is gone but we shall miss him.
There will be one vacant chair;
We shall linger to caress him
When we say our evening prayer.

—Maroon and White, Centenary College.

CHILDREN'S WEEK OBSERVED AT DURANT, MISS.

During the last seven days of April, from the 23d to the 30th, "Children's Week" was observed by the Sunday school workers of the Methodist church in Durant. Starting with the cradle roll, ten babies were baptized at the close of the Sunday school session, April-23, and, following the plans outlined, the teachers visited the homes of the pupils in the elementary department during the first days of the week. These teachers and the committees met with one of the departments each afternoon, for a "story hour," and they report 100 per cent attendance.

Wednesday evening, at the regular prayer meeting hour, a meeting for the parents and patrons of the school was held and a splendid program carried out. The "Forward Step" Committee presented some resolutions regarding several matters of equipment which was much needed; this was adopted and the council has been asked to furnish this equipment for better work.

On Friday afternoon, April 28, and evening, a "silver tea" was given by the ladies, and instructive programs regarding China were carried out. Many of the mothers are giving their testimony to the great value received by the children, upon whom lasting impressions have been made. The observance of the week was profitable from every standpoint, and our workers are wondering how we got along without it. Much interest was quickened in all the departments of the school, especially in the elementary grades.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

You can get a program for Mother and Daughter Week by writing Rev. W. Fred Long, Jackson, Miss.

Some things Wesley Bible classes are doing in the Conference this year:

Adding to their membership.

Helping to win ten thousand who are not in Sunday school.

Supporting orphans.

Supporting a missionary.

Cleaning up the church yard.

Making and maintaining a park and wading pool.

Looking after strangers.

Furnishing the church with proper equipment.

Cultivating the spirit of brotherhood.

Winning souls.

Do you want to learn how to do some things? Do you want to meet with the finest class of men and women you ever saw? Do you want to receive an uplift that will help you all the year? If you do, get ready to attend the W. B. C. Federation to be held at Grenada College, May 31 to June 1.

Here is an outline of the program that will be carried out for your help and encouragement:

The general theme of the program is Evangelism. You know we must win the 10,000 not in Sunday school. You know we must look after the 68 per cent who are under 25 years of age that are receiving no attention worth counting by the church. These facts are enough to make a man crawl to this meeting to see what can be done about reaching these people.

The main features of the program: After the devotional services led by J. M. Wyatt, J. R. Brinson, President, will give a stirring address; then Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Conference Superintendent of Bible Classes, will give an address; Melville Johnson will give a method of finding where the men are and what they are doing—that is, a Bible class survey; an open forum, where all can have an opportunity to give expression to what they feel and know. The big item, and perhaps the best, is reports from all classes—tell what you are doing and how you are doing it. This will be a great hour for everybody.

At night an address will be given by W. C. Owen, of Nashville, Tenn. You know, he is superintendent of Adult Class Work for the entire church.

Monday morning, June 1, "Evangelism" will be discussed by E. Nash Broyles; "Our Evangelistic Aim," by E. E. French, Superintendent of McKendree Sunday school (Mr. French is one of our great superintendents. He has one of the best Intermediate Departments in the entire country. You want to hear him); "Evangelism Through Men's Classes," by Waddy West, of Greenville (Mr. West is the live wire that helps make that great class go and grow); Miss Elie Willingham has been leading a class of men for several years, but she knows what women can do; Mr. Brabham, of Nashville, will discuss different agencies used in evangelizing; Mrs. Bankston is to show the program of service Bible classes are following; the round table will be led by Mr. Snider. If you could visualize the 10,000 members of our church indifferent to the study of the Bible, you would attend this federation.

If you desire a copy of The Sunday School Messenger or a copy of the catalogue of the Conference Training School, write me. If you want to help build up our church, advertise these meetings in your town paper.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Sunday, the 30th, was spent at Lake In the Lake circuit four-times-a-year circuit-wide institute. Three schools and delegations were present with written reports. These reports showed the schools in good shape. They set four goals for the next quarter—to hold Sunday School Day, to have Cradle Rolls, to have Home Departments, to do something for the Orphans' Home.

Harperville circuit-wide institute reports a fine session; four written reports were sent in and the work shows progress. A very large crowd was in attendance.

Harperville institute reports the best yet. All but one on the program appeared, and they all seem to be much encouraged and determined for better things.

Other institutes were to be held, but we have not heard officially from them.

Sunday night I had the very happy privilege of being with the folks at Newton. I tried to present the cause of training, and several signed up to take the course. I trust they will put on a course and give a week to it.

Rev. B. F. Lewis, Rev. E. L. Alford and myself gathered at Laurel, First Church, Brother Lewis preceding us by one day, and he had everything in readiness to go to work when we arrived. Brother Lewis taught "Organization and Administration," Brother Alford taught "Learning and Teaching," and I had the privilege of giving a series of sermons on Methodism. We met at 5 o'clock for the first class; at 6 we had lunch; at 7 the second class, and at 8 the sermon. The attendance was very fine, indeed, and I feel that much good was accomplished. There are many churches in the Conference that can have a school of this type that would mean much for the school and the Kingdom of God.

I do not know just how many of the numbers who came and attended classes will get credit, but that will be known in due time. Brother Lewis gave his lectures on the Bible Thursday and Friday nights. These lectures are most worthy and worth while, and if the school had brought nothing else to the church, it would have paid for itself over and over.

Brother Alford proved himself to be a most attractive teacher and delighted his class. There was much discussion as to who did the best work, but so far as I was able to find out they did not come to a conclusion.

I was delighted with the work done and the attitude of the church toward the work. It was a most delightful visit for me, and the folks were so kind and thoughtful of us.

The Laurel Beginners' Department goes to First Rank; I am so glad—I trust that they will maintain it and improve on it. They need more room; I trust the Lord will open the way for it.

The Conference Standard Training School? Have you ever heard of it? Write to Rev. C. A. Bowen, 4 Park Place, Jackson, Miss., or to the Sunday School Board.

Shubuta, Vancleave, Brandon, Fernwood, Madison, Capitol Street, West End (Laurel) have observed Sunday School Day and sent in offerings. How about YOU?

Pray for the work and workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM AVERA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Everything is moving along nicely with us. We closed our revival here at Avera on the night of the 23d. Brother James V. Bennett, one of our Conference evangelists, did the preaching. We began on the night of the 12th, and from the beginning the interest grew; so did the crowds. While we did not have any accessions to the church, we feel that our meeting by no means was a failure. Brother Bennett is not a preacher who believes in dragging folks into the church without there first being a work of regeneration, a change of life. He says, when this takes place, the matter of joining the church will take care of itself. The first thing he begins to do in a meeting is to get those right in the church, and when that is done, then those outside will come in, for they see something to come to. The meeting was a great blessing to our church and community. Those who took no stand for the better have been put to thinking, and when you can get a man to thinking about his spiritual condition, you stand some chance to help him. I know of no preacher I had rather have in a meeting than James V. Bennett.

Yours sincerely,

M. W. PORTER.

PRAYER MEETING ATTENDANCE CONTEST.

Dear Dr. Carley: The pastors of Monroe-Ruston District have accepted my invitation to enter a contest to build up the attendance at our mid-week prayer services. The contest begins at once, and will continue through the summer, ending the last of August.

I wonder if many of the pastors of the Conference would not like to take part with us in this effort to give the prayer meeting the place it ought to have in our church life? The only condition is that each preacher report his attendance to the Advocate by postal card every Thursday.

What life it would put into our churches if we could have large numbers gathering at our prayer meetings! Come on, Brother Preacher; we can do it!

My report for Wednesday, May 3, is 26! Just watch for my next report.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLY.

Dear Leaguers and Friends: At a recent meeting of the officers of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League, arrangements were made for the Assembly at Brookhaven, June 5 to 11.

If you are an Epworthian, a young person, a pastor, or any other person interested in young people, you cannot afford to miss this—our first annual Assembly and twentieth annual conference. Plan your summer vacation for the Assembly at Whitworth College. Nothing could be more appropriate, as the central theme of the Assembly is "Recreation and Culture." With Mr. O. E. Harbin of the Central Office in charge of this feature of the work, and with the swimming pool, gymnasium, tennis courts and other athletic equipment, why shouldn't we have a most delightful vacation?

Aside from this feature (which is by no means small) we have scheduled some very excellent speakers and teachers in methods. Among the latter is Dr. C. G. Hounshell, whom many of us know and love.

Study courses will be offered in home and foreign missions and in methods of conducting work of the different departments of the League. One of the important classes of methods will be that on Junior and Intermediate work, conducted by Miss Cogan, of Georgia. To those who pursue these courses in methods and missions, certificates will be issued which will be credited toward the Christian Development diplomas for which many are working.

Each delegate will be required to furnish his own sheets, pillows, pillowslips, towels and soap. Don't forget these things, for probably your friends will not have an extra supply.

The entire expense of the Assembly will be your railroad fare plus $1.00 per day for board, lodging, etc. The Assembly covers six days and you will miss a great deal if you are not there for the opening and closing.

Has your League measured up to the Standard of Efficiency? One way to make it do so is to pay the Chapter Membership fee of $2.50 for Senior Chapters and $1.00 for Junior and Intermediate Chapters. Send this at once to Rev. L. E. Alford, Laurel, Mississippi, so that your Chapter can have credit. Another thing to remember is to remit your Africa Special pledge to the treasurer.

Trusting that every charge in the Conference will have at least one representative at this Assembly, I am

Sincerely "All for Christ",
ERMA M. KILE,
Conference Secretary.

DISCOVERY THAT REVOLUTIONIZES HOME MEDICATION

Pharmaceutical Chemists Rob Calomel of Nauseating and Dangerous Qualities. New Tablets Named "Calotabs."

Calomel, the most popular and by far the most useful of all home medicines, has at last been purified of its objectionable qualities. The new calomel tablets bearing the name "Calotabs" are available at drug stores, and according to druggists are rapidly taking the place of the old-style calomel tablets. For biliousness, constipation and indigestion and for all other conditions where calomel is essential Calotabs is considered a practically perfect remedy.

One Calotab on the tongue at bedtime, with a swallow of water, that's all—no taste, no griping, no nausea, no danger. Next morning you are feeling fine, your liver is clean, your appetite splendid. Eat what you please.

Beware of Imitations! Genuine Calotabs are sold only in "checkerboard" (black and white) packages bearing the copyrighted trade-mark "Calotabs." The large, family size sells for thirty-five cents; vest-pocket size, ten cents. All dealers are authorized to refund the price if you are not delighted with Calotabs. —Adv.

FROM LA. BRANCH STREET, McCOMB, MISS.

We got to our new work just a few days after Annual Conference. My wife has been in bed since Jan. 12, until about three weeks ago. She has been able to be up part of the time since then. She left yesterday for Rush's Sanitarium, Meridian, Miss. She had good physicians here, but they advised a change and complete rest. Her trained nurse that was with her here eight weeks went with her.

The writer had the "flu" and was in bed three weeks, also two others in the family. We have had many hindrances, but our congregations are large. The Sunday school attendance last Sunday was 125. We had a prayer meeting last Wednesday night with 71 present. We have had one young man to answer the call to preach. Our church has adopted the weekly envelope system budget plan.

Mr. Editor, we have had three poundings, the last one led by the Baptist pastor, Rev. R. R. Jones, who lives across the street from us, followed by seventy-six other Baptists and Methodists; and others that couldn't come sent in things to the amount of $40 or $50.

We had prayer around the dining table and sang "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow," and the crowd left as abruptly as they came. The best of all, God's presence was here with the crowd.

In the midst of what we have gone through, God has been with us, and we are made to say with David, "What shall we render unto Him for all his benefits?"

The three Methodist churches of McComb City are to hold union revival services under a tabernacle beginning June 25, running through four Sundays. C. M. Dunaway, one of our general evangelists, of Dalton, Georgia, is to do the preaching. We are looking to the Lord for souls. Pray for us!

ALGIE S. OLIVER.

THE ECHO BOY.

All his life of five years Ronald had lived in a big town. Then all at once his father and mother moved to the country. Ronald ran about all over the new house to see what every room was like, and then he went out into the garden. At the end of the garden was a gate which led into a meadow, and beyond this again was a wood.

After Ronald had examined the garden he walked into the meadow, his little dog, Spot, following. He felt that he should like to go through the gap in the hedge, but the wood looked rather dark. He thought he would like to have spot quite close to him, so he called out: "Spot! Spot!"

To his surprise some one in the wood began to call Spot, too.

"Hello!" cried Ronald. "Who's there?"

"Hello!" cried the other. "Who's there?"

"You're not very polite!" cried Ronald, thinking that the other boy might have answered his question.

"You're not very polite!" came back the answer.

Then Ronald was quite sure that the other boy was mocking him, and he grew quite angry. "You're a rude boy," he said.

"You're a rude boy," returned the other.

"I'll send my dog at you!" cried Ronald, now thoroughly angry.

"I'll send my dog at you," came back the answer.

Now Ronald was very much afraid of all dogs except his little spot, so he turned and ran back to the house in a great fright.

He found his mother and burst into tears. "There's a horrid, rude, wicked boy in the wood," he gasped between his sobs, and then he told mother all the story.

"O Ronald," she said, "do you know if you had called out nice, kind things you would have had nice, kind things called back to you? It is only the Echo Boy in the wood."

Then she told him as well as she could what an echo was, and when she had finished she said: "All the way through life, Donald, you will always be meeting echo boys and girls. Give kindness and courtesy, and you will receive kindness and courtesy; but if you give unkindness and rudeness, you will almost certainly get it back." —Exchange.

THE HUNGER FOR HAPPINESS.

Jesus appealed to something deep and universal in men when He uttered the Beatitudes. Every man is eager for the beatific vision, for that understanding glance into life that sees happiness at its heart. Every person is seeking that thrill of inner joy. I do not wonder that our evangelist remembered even the detail of how "he opened his mouth" as He said the word "happy." Upon prophetic lips it was a kind of new and wonderful word and went home to the troubled heart like an arrow to its mark. But its greatness was not its newness but its truth. The Christian life is a "creed of gigantic joy." Life at its best is Christian, and Christian life in its truth and reality is happiness. When people really see that the Jesus way of living is the one way to happiness they will become travelers of the "Way." There is no finer witness to the power of Christ unto salvation than a life saved in the midst of great burdens and hard problems, yet all the time happy as a bird and inwardly at peace. Selected.

PAINS SO BAD WOULD GO TO BED

Two Women Tell How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Stopped Their Suffering

Iron Mountain, Mich.—"I had terrible pains every month and at times had to go to bed on account of them. I saw your advertisement and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with very good results. I can work all day long now at my sick time. You may use these facts as a testimonial and I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to my friends."—Mrs. A. H. Garland, 218 E. Brown St., Iron Mountain, Michigan.

Xenia, Ohio.—"Every month I had such pains in my back and lower part of my abdomen that I could not lie quietly in bed. I suffered for about five years that way and I was not regular either. I read an advertisement of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other women, so I decided to try it. It surely has helped me a lot, as I have no pains now and am regular and feeling fine."—Mrs. Mary Dale, Route 7, Xenia, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine for women's ailments. It is especially adapted to relieve women. If you suffer as did Mrs. Garland or Mrs. Dale, you should give this well-known medicine a thorough trial.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

President's Message, Delivered at the Recent Annual Meeting at De Ridder.

"Thou wilt rejoice at even if the day has been well spent." Again we rejoice over the privilege that has been ours for still another year—the privilege of having been colaborers with the Master. Throughout the year we have labored—not only with the Master, but labored together. During the year most of us are separated by many miles, and most of us, whether we live in the city, the village, or the "house by the side of the road" have had many, many calls on time and means; yet we have worked together, and to-day we come to rejoice together. There are, in our hearts, regrets for opportunities neglected; sorrow for failure where we should have attained success; yet, because His hand has been in all of it, we have cause for rejoicing.

It would seem that no special or outstanding feature marks the work of the past year; it has apparently been one of the quiet years that come in the history of organizations, as well as in the lives of individuals. Our Lord had quiet years; but they were years of growth, years of strength gathering and preparation for the three years of ceaseless toil and heartache of His ministry. So we believe that the year past has been a year of strengthening and preparation for greater tasks, and our belief is based upon the reports showing the greatest increase of the year are along the lines of work that require a greater consecration of time and self. Mission Study and Bible study and Social Service (could same be measured by reports) will undoubtedly lead all other departments of the work. This means an increase in the giving of that which is called "service;" it includes time spent in ministering to unfortunate folk; to folk in prison, to shanty folk along the river, and to the Negro; it indicates also a greater dedication of time spent in study which leads to a deepening of the spiritual life. Who then shall measure the value of such a year to our organization?

With this splendid foundation, we turn our faces with confidence to the tasks which the new year brings. As church women, our duty is first to the church. It may seem unnecessary and even presumptuous to urge every member of the Missionary Society to do her share in bringing to a successful conclusion those two great tasks undertaken by our church—the Centenary and Educational movements. I feel confident, however, there is no exaggeration in the statement that fully nine-tenths of the pledges made to these two enterprises came from homes where dwells at least one member of the Missionary Society. If, therefore, every Missionary woman would see that pledges made from her household were paid, if possible, it is certain that in Louisiana, at least, there would be no further need of either pulpit or press spending time and money in urging payment of these funds. Let us take our share of this responsibility.

Our next task, but in its importance, the first task of every auxiliary woman, should be the organization of the children into Junior organizations. As auxiliaries, you are sending to your Conference officers list after list of Auxiliary officers for the new year, with the space after "Superintendent of Junior work" left blank. To almost as great an extent this is true of the Young People. Outside of the hour on Sunday morning, the majority of our children are receiving very little religious training, to say nothing of missionary training. And even though other agencies are engaged in the children's work, I ask you where the responsibility for missionary and religious training of the child belongs, if not upon the motherhood of the church. The responsibility is ours—and the neglect has been ours, and is due to our not recognizing the importance of this office, and of electing to the leadership of the children the women best fitted to the work, regardless of her value to the adult work.

With regard to the Young People's work, I cannot but feel that the lack of leadership is largely responsible for our lack of Young People's organizations. This lack of organization accounts also to a great extent for our lack of volunteers for life service. We were told at the Council meeting last year that our sister church of the North has 2000 deaconesses as against 55 in our own church; yet, surely the conditions must be much the same with regard to the overlapping Young People's organizations in both churches; and while I have no information as to numbers, the proportion is surely too large to account for this great difference.

The next task in the year's work is scarcely a task—an opportunity, rather, because it concerns work with children also, and this is ever an opportunity—how great we may never know. The Council, as you will hear in detail during the course of this meeting, is making possible this year the establishment of a school in the French part of our State we call the "sugar bowl;" a school that shall meet particularly the needs of that section. We are asking that from your abundance you will give the necessary scholarships which will enable these children to take advantage of this school. A school of any kind is, perhaps, one of the most expensive enterprises undertaken, requiring as it does a constant expenditure of money. Surely with the erection of the building by the Council, we shall count it a privilege to do our share in providing the necessary scholarships for its support.

In this wonderful year ahead, we look also for the realization of another dream—the completion of the greater St. Mark's Hall. Here,again, had it not been for the consecrated lives of our workers and of some of our women, who through trials, discouragements and disappointments, have worked and held on, we should not have seen the completion of this work. I would remind you also that here, too, in this increased size of the building will come increased opportunities for helping.

It would seem these were tasks enough for the year; but there still remains untouched the important task of laying plans for securing as members of the Missionary Society every woman in the church. As a Conference, it would seem we would be most negligent should we not at this meeting lay plans for carrying on this work during the year.

Our near neighbor, the Alabama Conference, has done much to build up not only the membership of the Conference, but strengthened their work by including an effort to have every new member promising a duplication of the prayer life and study life as well. Membership alone is, after all, but the beginning of our task. It is my earnest hope we shall have a double-up campaign of this kind in Louisiana this year.

These may seem rather heavy tasks for the year. May I remind you that if we meet these tasks a day at a time we may regard them as not impossible of accomplishment. It is but necessary—

"To love some one more dearly every day;
To help a wandering child to find its way;
To ponder o'er a noble thought and pray;
This is my task.

To do my best from dawn of day till night;
To keep my heart fit for His holy sight;
To answer when He calls;
This is my task."

MRS. C. F. NIEBERGALL,
President.

DISTRICT MEETINGS.

The Grenada District meeting will be held in Coffeeville May 4-5. Miss Corinne Rogers will be with us and give a message from the Council on the evening of the 4th. Send names of all delegates to Mrs. J. F. Provine, Coffeeville. Each Society is urged to send a delegate.

Mrs. A. W. STOKES, Secretary.

The Corinth District conference will convene at Myrtle on May 25 and 26, beginning at 3 p.m., on the afternoon of the 25th. Council message at night and business of conference continuing through Friday, the 26th. There will also be a pageant that night and a good program throughout the day. For the benefit of those attending, will give the schedule of trains arriving at Myrtle.

Accommodation going west arrives at 7:07 a. m. and 3:00 p. m.

Accommodation going east arrives at 9:21 a. m. and 9:49 p. m.

I am expecting a full attendance of delegates from the district.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

From its founders and fathers, who came forth from the halls of famous seats of learning, we have inherited courage in pursuit of truth and confidence in following its light. We have received also from them the disposition to maintain the faith once for all delivered to the saints. They were not, and we must not be, unstable children, tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine. Modish rationalism must not be permitted to affect our devotion to the established tenets of ancient and abiding Christianity.

In these times of doubt and distress the message of the enduring gospel of the Son of God, with apostolic accent and authority, must speak tranquility and order to a perturbed and distressed world. The demands of the hour exclude the propagation of novelties and notions. * * * It is our deep conviction that the one evil out of which spring all the uncertainty and distress of the present time is sin, which lies so deep in the human heart. We believe, therefore, that throughout all our borders, in our schools as well as in our churches, the evangelical note should sound out loud and clear, excludiug all doubtful disputations. The one sure way to keep our faith sound is to keep our Christian experience fresh and vital and growing. And the best defense against all the forms of incendiary rationalism on the one hand, and of the fanaticism of ignorance on the other, is a great offensive movement against all the forces of iniquity. Therefore, do we "speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." We call for an advance along all the lines of evangelistic activity.

At the conclusion of the reading of the Episcopal Address, the presiding bishop announced the following as the Committee on Rules: J. U. Holder, F. P. Culver, J. E. Cockrell, A. C. Millar, H. H. White, B. F. Lipscomb, F. A. Carter.

In next week's issue of the Advocate we will give as much of the proceedings of the General Conference as possible.

FRECKLES

Now Is The Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

for the meetings in Aberdeen and Columbus districts. Mrs. Busby has arranged with Calhoun City to entertain the Aberdeen District meeting, while Mrs. Williams will have the Columbus District Meeting at Ackerman. Both dates will be near so the Conference officers can attend both meetings.

The Greenwood District meeting will be at Ruleville in June, and the other secretaries from other districts have not arranged definite dates yet. However, the dates will be announced in the Woman's page of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Watch for them.

Remember, these district meetings are where the auxiliaries report all work they have accomplished since the last district meeting, by some one selected for the purpose. Make your report short, leaving out the long list of figures and supplement it with the things you have done best during the year. It is expected that every auxiliary will have an elected representative, some one to make the report, yet the meetings are for all members of the auxillaries of the district, especially urging the nearby towns to be well represented. Of course each auxiliary will try to let the hostess auxliliary know as near as possible how many expect to attend the meeting, for that is mere courtesy to your hostess always. I know the district secretaries are telling you all this in every message to you, but it can't be said too often.

SOCIAL SERVICE.

The wonderful increase in Social Service interest and activity adds a greater responsibility to those of us engaged in it. And if this spirit of Christ is to permeate and pervade all our work; if our work is to be of highest value and abiding influence, we recommend:

First—That we co-operate more earnestly with all welfare organizations for local and national betterment as successful means for Americanization and Christianization.

Second—That not only clean, but attractive recreation be furnished our Young People; making ourselves a part of it by opening our homes, churches and other avenues that appeal to young life.

Third—That our women everywhere continue to give courageous support to the enforcement of the federal prohibition laws.

Fourth—As women we urge those who are charged with the administration of our laws to prevent lynching, pledging ourselves to uphold officials in the execution of justice.

Fifth—That we commend to your interest and strongest efforts any rural work which our Conference may promulgate this year.

Sixth—That all Council plans for a more sympathetic understanding in inter-racial relationship be given a place in our plans and programs.

Seventh—That we present ourselves before the Lord for complete service for Him, that the Father may be glorified in and through us.

Signed: Mrs. W. V. Pittman, chairman, and Mrs. Alice Steinbeck, secretary.

FROM THE FRENCH MISSION FIELD.

Dear Brother Carley: The Lord called me into this French field since January 1, to preach his gospel. I just want to write you this letter to put in the Advocate, to let the people of Louisiana and Mississippi know about this French field.

When I first entered this field, Brother Martin Hebert, presiding elder of the French Mission District, gave me three appointments to serve; now I have opened six other places, and all around they call for the gospel. Surely the laborers are few and the field is ripe for the harvest. This field needs French workers.

I am working in the Bayou Blue circuit. I have nine places to fill, and I am on foot. If only I had the means of transportation, I am sure I could do the work, if the Lord gives me health. Brother R. E. Martin is a great help to me in this field. He preached at Labadieville Sunday before last. He was appreciated there by the people. He loves the Lord so much, he offered himself for Labadieville if only we will pay his expenses coming and going.

Brother F. K. Martin also preached two sermons last Sunday. He is a kind and loving man. Brother Bergeron is working at the Wesley House, and he also helps me in the field.

Brethren, if you know some kind and loving Christian who feels able to furnish a means of transportation for preaching the gospel in this field, please let me hear from you.

Yours fraternally,

Houma, La. G. A. LAGRANGE.

FROM POPLAR SPRINGS, MERIDIAN, MISS.

Great plans are being put into operation for the building of God's Kingdom in the Poplar Springs Church of Meridian by this active and progressive congregation of Methodists. Work has already begun on the church grounds, which are being graded and sodded and a concrete curb builded around the entire church property. A wide concrete walk is to be laid from the church building to the main driveway which it faces. The church building is to be painted inside and out, the entire church furniture treated to several coats of varnish and polish, the tion of our laws to prevent lynching, and provision made for new Sunday school classes. With landscape gardening for the grounds, this will be one of the most attractive places in or around all Meridian. The young people have a most enthusiastic Epworth League, which ranks among the first in the Conference, with all departments doing a most efficient work. The Woman's Missionary Society is active in all its departments and plays an important part in the spiritual life of the church. These people are alive to the calls of the Gospel and stand ready to do still greater things, knowing they can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth all who place their trust in Him. This great forward step that is being taken by this congregation of people is due to leadership of the pastor, Rev. W. A. Hays, and his splendid family, who are much loved by all his people. This is his third year of service among them and they say they are going to make it the best of all.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

LEGISLATION ENACTED THROUGH FRIDAY, MAY 12.

1. The president of the Woman's Missionary Society becomes a member ex officio of tho quarterly conference.

2. A Joint Commission, consisting of five members each from the Centenary, the Christian Education Movement, and the Superannuate Endowment Campaign, has been authorized, to which shall be referred all conservation and promotional programs, in order that there may be unity of action.

3. The Calvin bequest, amounting now to $9500, for the benefit of widows and orphans of preachers who die in active service, has been transferred from Smith & Lamar, Agents, to tho Board of Finance.

4. The Los Angeles Conference has been abolished, and the Arizona Conference set up, embracing the State of Arizona and the town of Needles, Calif. The Pacific Conference will hereafter embrace all of California, except the town of Needles.

5. Each Conference delegation may submit nominations—one clerical and one lay—from the membership of the Annual Conference for membership on General Boards, Commissions, and committees shall be selected in so far as consistent with their charters and the securing of efficient executive committees.

6. Report No. 1 of the Committee on Epworth Leagues, providing for a Joint Commission from the Epworth League, the Sunday School Board, the Board of Education, and the Board of Missions, to correlate their educational work, was adopted.

7. The Cuba Mission Conference has been erected into the Cuba Annual Conference, embracing tho Republic of Cuba.

8. The constitution of the Sunday School Board has been rewritten. A Sunday School Editor and a General Sunday School Secretary are provided for, both to be elected by the General Conference.

9. The movement for a limited tenure of office on the part of the bishops was decisively defeated.

10. The characters and official administration of the bishops were passed, and Bishops Hendrix and Kilgo were placed on the retired list. Bishop Waterhouse was continued on the retired list.

11. Five new bishops are to be elected, balloting to begin at 10 o'clock next Tuesday morning, May 16.

12. Board of Lay Activities created, the Secretary to be elected by the General Conference.

Proceedings.

SECOND DAY—THURSDAY, MAY 4.

The second day of the nineteenth session of the General Conference opened at 9 a.m., Bishop Candler in the chair. The devotional service was conducted by the Bishop, who announced hymn No. 506, "I need the every hour," which was sung, read a part of the twelfth chapter of the Acts, and made a fine talk thereon.

The journals of the preceding sessions were read and approved.

Bishop Candler reported that he had sent the following telegram to Bishop Hendrix: "The General Conference directs me to acknowledge on its behalf your touching communication, to congratulate you on your noble career, and to assure you of its abiding esteem and tender affection."

Bishop Atkins took the chair.

The report of the Commission on the Unification of American Methodism was presented by Bishop Mouzon and referred without reading to the proper committee. Bishop Candler explained that his name was not signed either to the majority report of the Commission because he had not been present at the meetings, being absent from the first meeting, which was held in Cleveland, Ohio, in July, 1919, on account of the critical illness of his eldest grandson, and remaining away from subsequent meetings of the Commission because he felt that the alternate, Bishop Ainsworth, who had attended the first meeting, would be better qualified to continue on with the work. Bishop Candler stated that he did not wish, however, to evade the duties of his membership on the Commission, and that, if the Conference so desired, he would be glad to give his views on the subject of Unification. Later in the session it was moved by I. J. Jenkins that Bishop Candler give his views to the Conference and that his statement be referred to the Committee on Church Relations.

Bishop Candler then furnished tho following:

Statement Concerning the Report of the Commission on Unification.

My Dear Brethren: In response to your action taken to-day, I record my views concerning the reports of the majority and the minority of the Commission on Unification.

In my judgment the Joint Commission, having agreed to report the plan of Unification without recommendation, and the Commissioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church having so reported it to their General Conference held at Des Moines, May, 1920, the Commissioners from our church should go no more. It seems to me that any other course would be unwise, and perhaps improper.

If, however, the action of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church upon the plan of Unification, submitted to it without recommendations, it to be reported to you with recommendations concerning it, I am constrained to say I can not agree with the majority report in recommending a joint convention to consider a plan of Unification. Such a convention would be in itself a form of Unification, in advance of Unification, and could not fail, whatever might be its conclusions, to give rise to damaging dissatisfaction in both churches and engender most harmful strife and injurious divisions. If further negotiations concerning Unification are to be undertaken, they can not, in my judgment, be properly and wisely conducted otherwise than by Commissions, acting, as heretofore, under the specific instructions of the General Conferences of their respective churches. The nature of such negotiations excludes the scheme of a convention as wholly inapplicable to such a matter. In my judgment, Unification can not be accomplished by the method of a convention; and if the attempt were made, the result would make more for disunion than for union throughout both branches of Episcopal Methodism in the United States.

The remainder of the session of the second day was largely devoted to the presenting of reports and their reference to the proper committees, to resolutions designed to expedite the work of the Conference and to the ordering of special committees to consider certain special interests. The text or the substance of these resolutions is given below.

T. D. Ellis offered a resolution which was adopted as follows:

Resolved, That when memorials or resolutions are referred to the several committees by the General Conference it shall be understood that the whole question with which the memorials or resolutions have to do is referred to the committees, and the committees may consider, nonconcur, or, recasting all the papers referred to them, recommend such action as they deem wise in the premises.

Signed by a large number of delegates.

R. G. Mood presented a resolution, signed by himself, J. E. Harrison and F. P. Culver, requesting the Bishop to appoint a committee of twenty-five, to which all resolutions, memorials and other papers touching the authenticity of the Scripture, our faith in the same, and similar questions be referred. G. W. Parcus moved as a substitute that committee be composed of one delegate from each Annual Conference, and that each delegation select a member. A motion by Dr. Brandon to refer the resolution and the amendment to the Committee on Rules was laid on the table, vote was taken upon the original motion, and the motion of Mr. Mood, as amended by Mr. Parcus, prevailed.

A resolution designed to harmonize the work of the Centenary, Education and Superannuate Endowment Fund Commissions was presented by A. J. Lamar. It read as follows:

Resolution Concerning Centenary, Education and Superannuate Endowment.

Whereas, the conservation of the spiritual and financial results of the Centenary and Christian Education Movement is of vital importance, and whereas the projection of the third Movement to provide adequate Superannuate Endowment is contemplated for the ensuing quadrennium, while the Centenary and the Christian Education Movements are still in process, thus presenting to our constituency three Church-wide Movements through the same period; therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee on Missions, the Committee on Education, and Special Committee on Superannuate Endowment be instructed to appoint a Joint Committee of fifteen members, an equal number from each of the three causes represented, to which Joint Committee shall be referred the conservation and promotional programs referred to it, before they are presented to the General Conference for adoption, in order that they may be carried out harmoniously and effectively.

Resolved, That this Joint Committee shall report its findings to the General Conference for adoption.

The resolutions were signed by a large number of delegates, and after some discussion, and the offering of a substitute which failed to carry, was adopted.

Special Committee on Superannuate Endowment.

The Special Committee on Superannuate Endowment, consisting of 25 members to be appointed by the Bishop, was read by the Secretary, as follows: P. H. Linn, A. J. Lamar, E. L. Woolf, G. W. Parcus, J. L. Mitchell, T. S. Hamilton, W. L. Clark, James Thomas, Mrs. R. P. Howell, R. H. Wynn,

A JOURNEY TO THE ORIENT—MISSION WORK IN GREAT CITIES OF JAPAN.

By Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker.

XIV.

The narrow limits of time within which I was to see the work of our Mission, about the Inland Sea tore me too soon from the delightful and interesting surroundings of Hiroshima and the great educational institutions both of the Mission and the Government located there; but in the smaller city of Tokuyama, enjoying the hospitality of the Rev. W. R. Weakley and his accomplished wife in their Japanese rented house, I was able to come into touch with another aspect of our work. The Japanese house is not the permanent abode of the missionary, for a site has been purchased and a new residence will soon afford the missionary the congenial material surroundings upon which so much of his poise and usefulness depend. From Tokuyama to Okayama, a city of one hundred thousand population, where the Rev. W. A. Wilson, Superintendent of the Hiroshima District, lives, is an easy railway journey. Himeji is near at hand, although I doubled back to reach this beautiful city of fifty thousand population, where the Rev. S. E. Hager lives and labors. It is interesting to note that here we are still occupying the original chapel in which the senior Lambuth opened work in Himeji over thirty years ago. At Dr. Hager's residence the Epworth League met, and after addresses, a social hour with tea and confectionery followed. It was much like gatherings of young people at home, save for the Japanese mode of sitting on the floor, instead of in chairs.

In these smaller cities evangelism is the form of work carried on with greatest attention. It is this type of missionary endeavor that vitalizes all the rest and keeps the educational work spiritual in its motives and evangelical in its teachings. Our missionaries are profoundly impressed with the need of increasing the forces devoted to work of this type. If the impression has gone forth that in Japan we can afford to turn over to the Japan Methodist Church responsibility for direct evangelism, this impression should be quickly corrected. Dr. Hager is especially strong in demonstrating the fallacy of the theory that our responsibility is even primarily for educational work. And yet, the educational forces have been strengthened year after year, while the evangelistic missionaries have been diminishing in number as the result of death or invalidism. This state of things has come about because of the tremendous pressure upon the schools that has been exerted by the rapid development of the Government schools and by the corresponding enlargements required of the mission schools, which must meet the Government standards or go out of business. All the missionaries are alive to the difficulty and those of them who are teachers have charge of congregations also and otherwise use every opportunity to preach the gospel. But in the end it will be found that even these strong and ardent men and women cannot continue at their best while undertaking each the work of two persons. The Centenary promises relief and nothing else could have so eased the strain of keeping up with the demands of our great schools as to enable us to re-enforce the evangelistic workers.

In Japan our work is entirely an urban development. In the villages and the little towns we do not preach, simply because we have no men and women to spare for these untouched fields. The case is somewhat the same, I am told, with the Japan Methodist Church, which does not command sufficient forces to mobilize in the rural regions. Doubtless the policy of focalizing in the great cities and building up a constituency from among the best class of citizens of the empire was the wisest one; but those who laid the foundations in the cities about the Inland Sea among the Samurai had no idea of stopping there. Their centers were occupied to radiate from; their established works were bases of extension. But it is only after these many years that we shall be able to go forward upon the lines that have always developed the strength of Methodism and send the itinerant preacher whithersoever the people are to be found, and that only through the possibilities created by the Centenary. The reflex influence of such work upon the Japan Church and the Mission will be highly beneficial, and as migration from country to city goes on with increasing rapidity as the result of Japan's transformation into an industrial nation, the salvation of the people newly brought otherwise unprepared into the turbid currents of the cities' vices will be secured.

Kyoto was formerly the capital of the Empire, and one of the most interesting and beautiful of the sights is the Imperial Palace. A handsomely written permit to visit the temple, which of course I could not read, had been procured by Mr. Towson, our resident missionary, whose care and forethought included everything, enabled me to enjoy the wonderful beauty of buildings, gardens and decorations, which surpass anything else I have seen of the kind. As we went from room to room, intelligently directed by an officer who spoke excellent English, I was impressed by the simplicity of design and the exquisite vivacity and freedom of execution of the decorations. For the first time I saw a throne—a rather large and elaborate armchair. Kyoto is preeminently a temple city. I saw nothing quite so beautiful and elaborate as some of the temples at Nikko; possibly a city of six hundred thousand population is not so favorable for appreciation as the cryptomeria groves and avenues and ever-present mountain scenery of Nikko, which is a temple city in the sense that there is scarcely anything else there, save the summer palace of the Emperor. But Kyoto has eight hundred and seventy temples, some of the largest I had seen; one is especially famous as the "thirty thousand idol" temple, a Buddhist institution in which there are rank after rank in bewildering multitude of standing images, each having four hands, and never a variation of expression or posture. I have not been able to learn much about popular Buddhism and do not understand the meaning of the images and worship that I have seen in the temples. It is hard to connect these gross superstitions and idolatries with the atheistic philosophy of Buddha; but in its actual workings Buddhism in Japan demonstrates a good deal of vitality and has recently put on much of the paraphernalia of Christianity and has imitated its worship. Much use is made of preaching and religious education and, owing to the competition of Christianity, has become aggressive.

I saw an example of pure paganism in a celebrated shrine to the Fox God in Kyoto, before which there are thirty thousand votive torii, or gateways, which, placed in close succession, make an avenue three miles long. It is said that chiefly the country people patronize this shrine, as the fox brings or withholds luck for the farmer. At the office prayers written on little slips of paper pasted on sticks for placing in the ground before the shrine may be bought. I do not suppose that those I pulled from their places to keep as souvenirs will prove less effective if used to illustrate a missionary talk.

It is pleasanter to turn to some of the great works that are being carried on by the churches. We have three mission churches and there is one large, self-supporting Methodist church in Kyoto. An Epworth League Union has proved useful and inspiring. It was my privilege to address this body, and, after the address the ladies served tea in true Japanese fashion. The Rev. W. E. Towson is a cotemporary of the Lambuths, but was compelled to spend several years in America and only recently has gone back to Japan. He it was who attended Bishop Lambuth from the beginning to the end of his fatal illness and held the hand of the dying apostle of the Orient until his last breath in the hospital at Yokohama. His son, Hatton Dunnica, a brilliant Rhodes scholar, had volunteered for Japan, but was cut short by death due to wounds received in France. His name is on the roster of missionaries and his memory is perpetuated by the memorial fund that the Leagues are contributing to carry on the work in Japan. Miss Mamie, a daughter, is one of the missionary teachers at Hiroshima Girls' School.

One of the best known persons in the history of Japanese Christianity is Joseph Hardy Neesima, whose romantic story culminated in the founding of a great Christian university known as the Doshisha. I had time during my week-end visit to Kyoto only to walk through the grounds of the Doshisha and mark the goodly buildings. It was founded under the Congregational Church of America, but is now controlled by the Japanese. Within recent years the Doshisha has departed far from the faith and the ideals of Neesima, but is now returning from its Unitarian rationalism and will again fulfil its purpose. It is not safe for the churches to abandon control of their missions and schools now. Church history teaches us clearly the dangers that can be averted only through the larger experience of Western Christianity. Those who are teaching that the missionary's task is almost done and that the destiny of native churches should be committed to native peoples would do well to consider both the ancient and modern history of the missions. The experience of the West must be made available for the East in the way of moral and religious guidance long after the pulpit has mastered all the material arts of the teacher.

Osaka, with a population of a million and a quarter; and Kobe, having over six hundred thousand, are not over an hour's ride apart, and the intervening territory is almost covered by suburban residence towns, in one of which, Ashiya, our superintendent of the Kobe District, Dr. J. T. Myers, resides. At Osaka are a number of churches, in one of which I addressed a meeting of the young people and afterwards spent some time in discussing Epworth League work with the earnest young men present, while we lubricated by sipping tea and partaking of confections. Late though the hour, I had no fear that the tea would rob me of sleep, for the Japanese article refreshes, but does not drive sleep from one's pillow. I had been instructed by Dr. Myers to proceed to his house at Ashiya on the conclusion of the service. I do not know how I could have found his house at nearly midnight, or, indeed, how I could have got through the intricacies of the street car system in order to reach the interurban station but for his kind forethought. A Japanese street car system is, like everything else in the empire, under Government or urban control and is highly organized. There are innumerable transfers, by which the routes are operated with greater economy and the largest service is rendered; but how is a stranger, ignorant of the language and unacquainted with the routes, to utilize these excellent systems? But according to instruction, I awaited the guide who had been promised and he appeared at the right time and place, and, though he could not speak a word of English, my only difficulty was in expressing my gratitude as he left me in the moonlight as the door of the elderage opened to admit me.

Of many sights inviting the next day I chose rather to concentrate upon the Lambuth Memorial Training School for Women, which at present is under the superintendence of Miss Margaret Cook, a sister of Dr. Ed. F. Cook, Associate Secretary of the Board of Education. Situated in the heart of Osaka, and offering training for women workers, kindergarteners and Bible women, this great development of the Woman's Council is one of the outstanding Christian institutions of the city. The kindergarten training department of Hiroshima Girls' School has been removed to this place and is now a part of the Lambuth School. Providence has in this case, as in so many, favored our ladies in the securing of land. An admirable site in an improving, though thickly populated part of the city, with abundant room for playgrounds and gardens and easy of access to thoroughfares, was purchased as second choice in comparison with a palatial residence behind high walls. It will probably prove the very best. The buildings are those formerly used for a tooth-brush factory, and with reference to the material that enters so largely into the manufacture of one of the essentials of a civilized person's toilet, is denominated "the boneyard." All our American toothbrushes are made in Japan; and it is not through modesty that they do not all bear the inscription, "Made in Nippon." We use Japanese silks, brushes, mattings, china, and innumerable other articles without knowing it the while we inveigh against the commercial dishonesty of the "Japs." Misses Cook and Hatcher were my gentle guides throughout the day and in the evening deposited me safely at the Young Men's Christian Association, where I found about six hundred young men awaiting the message that I might bring. One of the secretaries whispered to me as I arose to speak, "Please be sure to close promptly at a quarter to nine." I was careful to do so, and found that all these young men were students of the "Y" night school and had given up one of their periods in order to hear me. To miss a class period is no inconsiderable thing for these earnest young men. From the midst of our advantages we can scarcely imagine how they hunger and thirst for knowledge and the technical skill by which they hope to rise in the world. I was told of one youth who lived in Kobe and earned his bread and supported his mother by work in a foundry, who attended this night school regularly for three years, after his classes taking the car for Kobe, walking three miles from the station to his home and appearing on time each morning for his work. In the city of Nashville is a great philanthropy, the Watkins Institute, that does for our home youth a similar work; but its use could be many times multiplied were it located in one of these busy, populous cities on the Inland Sea. I covet for these people such philanthropies, especially when they are offered in the name of the Lord of all nations.

Speaking of the Y. M. C. A. night school in Osaka introduces me most easily to my visit to Kobe and Palmore Institute. I had become quite at home at Palmore, as, passing through Kobe several times, I had stopped there as the guest of the Principal, Mr. J. S. Oxford. After returning to America I sat with an acquaintance in a restaurant, and in response to his question whether or not while in Japan I had met Mr. J. S. Oxford, I answered that I had the pleasure of staying at his house several times and of seeing a great work that he and Mrs. Oxford are doing. My acquaintance then told me of his boyhood friendship for Mr. Oxford and of the brave and consecrated struggle of that young man to obtain a college education in order that he might fit himself for skilled work for the Master. He is giving the riches of a wonderful personality to effecting for the youth of Japan what he wrought for himself under most difficult circumstances. He is wedded with a lady of the same spirit and quality, without whose co-operation the achievements of Palmore would be impossible. In a former letter I have referred to the opening of the school and the disappointment of many young men who had applied for admission, but who had been denied on account of straitened space and small faculty. Dr. Palmore, not a wealthy man, whose gift made possible the erection of this unique institution, never did a more judicious thing than when he enabled Dr. Lambuth to open this school; a rich man could not do anything that would more certainly consecrate some of his wealth than by making a gift that would bring Palmore up to date with equipment and faculty.

Kobe is the center of our work in Japan. There are several churches; one of them—the Central Church—is about to build a great church at an expense of $100,000. Whether the Japanese are wise in planning so largely for but one of their churches, I do not judge. I visited and addressed the young people at Hirano Church, among the first fruits of the Centenary. It has a modern building and parsonage and the congregation is strong and wholly self-supporting. But the crowning glory of our work in Japan is the Kwansei Gakuin, now a university, and by union with the Methodist Church of Canada, receiving its support from two sources, instead of laying impossible burdens upon the Southern Methodists alone. During the past year four new buildings have been begun and, if Centenary pledges are paid, will be completed. One is the Literary College, one the chapel to be used for daily assembling of the Middle School students, who number 61, and who have no place sufficiently large for meeting, except out-of-doors. I addressed the College of Commerce on one of the mornings that I spent at the Kwansei and the theological students on the other; but there was no place in which one could get access to the entire student body of sixteen hundred and fifty-six. The new auditorium will meet a necessity as well as afford a facility in the university life. At Kwansei a similar tale of disappointment to that of Palmore can be told. Last autumn 1515 new students applied for admission, of whom only 406 were admitted. One of the applicants said to President Bates: "Sir, I am suffering the agonies of death." This is neither hyperbole nor fun; it is the real state of the soul of one of these ardent Japanese youths to whom the opportunities afforded by such an institution as this mean life, and their denial something worse than death. I often think that the problem of adequately enlarging our schools on the mission fields would be solved if we could induce rich men to visit them and receive the impression of the unparalleled opportunities they offer for investment in life. The vast endowments go on piling up in American universities, far beyond their real needs, not even with the effect of bringing their advantages within reach of young people of moderate means, while souls starve for what a few millions of surplus here could give.

Dr. J. C. L. Bates, a splendid specimen of manhood, such as the Canadian Methodists seem to have on hand for every important work, is now the President of the Kwansei; but no one can think of the Kwansei without calling up the great figure of Dr. J. C. C. Newton, his predecessor, who through days of difficulty and small things believed in the enterprise, put himself into it and brought it up to its present status. This great Virginian is now past his three-score and ten, but his eye is clear and his form is erect and his step elastic. The joy of the Lord is in his soul and more than offsets the loss of the spring of youth. Relieved of the burdens of administration, which have been placed upon the strong shoulders of his young successor, he meets his classes in the theological department and ministers to a congregation in the city, and for both pupils and hearers turns the maturity of his Christian experience into evangelistic zeal and success.

"Prosperity attend him, since while passing on
Into the vale of man's decline
He yet with newer learning's tint
His mind imbues
And wisdom cultivates."

The concluding day of my busy stay in Japan was spent chiefly at the session of the mid-year meetings of the Mission, from which I went away regretfully, because these brethren had grown very dear; but after an absence from home of five months' duration there is a strong pull thither. It grew no weaker as the Pacific Mail Steamer, "Golden State," pushed, sometimes through stormy seas, toward the Golden Gate. The voyage was not especially enjoyable, as, with the exception of a very small group of missionaries, the whole company of passengers seemed wholly given over to amusement, which reached the nadir of indecorum, to say the least, in the abominable forms of modern dancing that occupied much of the evenings and hours of the night. At the dock in San Francisco were awaiting me Brothers Davis and Nelson. I failed to see Dr. Bulla, recently exported from the Baltimore Conference to the Pacific, who, with a consecration as complete as that of any foreign missionary, resigned his position as General Secretary of the Sunday School Board to grapple the hard problems of Methodism on the Pacific. The parsimonious policy of our church on the Pacific Coast has not altogether defeated success at the hands of the great and consecrated men who have wrought there, but it must yield to a broad, liberal, aggressive policy, and these brethren must be relieved of the burden of apology for a sectional name, which their very presence outside the South contradicts. That is, if we are to enter upon an era of success, to which our sacrifices entitle us.

With no mishap or delay between Kobe and Nashville, I arrived safe and sound at the appointed hour, full of gratitude for what I had seen and for the privileges that I had enjoyed in fellowship with the noblest men and women of earth, and, withal, that I was again with my own. On the way I had visited Mrs. Lambuth and Miss Mary and Miss Harland, in their home in Oakdale. I felt the difference for them, as the great and holy man whose home-coming they had so often anticipated now lies in his Asiatic grave, and they must go to him in the land where there are no partings before they can feel his presence again.

"All journeys end in welcome for the weary,
And heaven, the heart's true home, shall come at last.
Angels of Jesus, angels of light,
Singing to welcome the pilgrims of the night."

WORKING FOR THE MEMORIAL HOME.

My Dear Brother Carley: Do you ever get the blues and feel as if Jesus the Merciful had clean gone forever? And that the human heart of sympathy had dried up? If so, you ought to come with me for awhile.

Eight weeks' circulation among the itinerants and laymen of our church in Louisiana, together with Presbyterian and Baptist preachers, confirms my faith that Jesus has not gone away at all, but is in our churches and in the hearts of many who are not members of any of the churches. When I went under this noble institution—our Memorial Home—I was told that I was going under a heavy load. I have found it more off wings than a burden. The worthiness of the cause and the nobleness of the work have lifted me into new and higher fields and great favor with all classes of people. I am not carrying the institution—it is lifting me.

I have met four of the district conferences, most of our preachers, and twice that number of laymen; have been introduced to Rotary and Kiwanis clubs at luncheons, and dined with the rich and great in the oil fields. The Jews have been kind and generous. The banks and department stores have responded to the cause of "Christianity in Action." And the hiden hand of "The Invisible Empire"—those awful fellows (?) who cause the Governor to "see things at night," have vied with our noble and ancient order of Masonry to afford relief to these bruised reeds that Jesus would not break and the smoking flax He would not quench.

The day has not passed when men will give in His name without hope of present reward or praise of men. The world wants Christianity in action, not merely in talking shop. The winning church is the one that gives them a living Christ in action, and at no time have all the churches done more than they are doing to-day to show the world what He did and what He taught. This old world is really growing better.

E. N. EVANS.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

Rev. W. E. Arnold, D. D.

The Board of Church Extension was organized just forty years ago. The General Conference of 1882 met in Nashville. A resolution calling for a "Committee on Church Extension" was offered by Dr. D. R. McAnally, Editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate. When the Committee was organized, Dr. McAnally was its chairman. A Constitution was adopted, Louisville was selected as headquarters of the new Board, and Dr. David Morton, of the Louisville Conference, was elected Secretary—a position he held for sixteen years.

Concerning the work of the new Board, the bishops, in their Address to the General Conference of 1886, tell us that "of necessity it required one or two years to get fairly at work, and to impress itself upon the attention and heart of the church." The first year there was collected on assessments, $2,302.61, and as much more in the way of specials. The amount raised from all sources during the first quadrennium was $145,248.23; nevertheless, the bishops inform us that the Board had been "instrumental in building some 551 churches, distributed all over the territory of Southern Methodism"; a marvelous achievement with a fund so small. During the forty years of the Board's existence, it has given aid to nearly 11,000 churches and over 3,000 parsonages. According to the Report of 1922, the Board had given aid to churches and parsonages during its forty years' existence to the amount of $8,542,686.32.

The sole purpose for which the Board exists is to give aid in building churches and parsonages. Every bishop and every member of the Board is thoroughly enlisted in this work, and is keenly interested in helping every building enterprise that it is possible for the Board to assist. Instead of doling out the funds of the Board of Church Extension in a hesitating and niggardly way, as some seem to think, they try to make money in their hands go just as far as it will in helping every enterprise that they can help. Criticism of the Board at this point is unfair and unjust.

The funds at the disposal of the Board of Church Extension are wholly inadequate to the needs of the church. We are in the midst of an unprecedented era of church building. New fields are opening; bigger and better churches are demanded; Sunday school and Epworth League work has grown to large proportions; the church occupies a much larger place in the religious, educational and social life of the community than it ever did before, and the calls for aid in meeting these unprecedented demands have far outrun our contributions to this cause. In the three years just passed, applications have been made for donations and loans reaching the stupendous sum of $7,750,770. These years have put upon the Department of Church Extension the greatest strain to which it was ever subjected.

While the demands for aid have been so large and so insistent, owing to the business depression from which the country has been suffering, there has been a distressing falling off in the payments made by the churches on their assessments, and collections on outstanding loans have been difficult or impossible. And there is a widespread misapprehension with regard to the Board of Church Extension and the Centenary. Only $2,000,000 out of the Centenary funds were set apart for use by the Board of Church Extension, one-half to be used in donations and one-half to go to the loan funds of the Board. Of the amount to be used for making donations, forty per cent was to be used in the Foreign Field, leaving sixty per cent to be used in the Home Field. This was to be appropriated only as it was paid in. Up to the present time the Board has received from the Centenary $798,639.71. After one half of this has been put to the Loan Fund, and the forty per cent used in the Foreign Field, only $239,000.00 has been available for the Home Field during three years.

This year the Board was confronted with 533 applications, calling for donations to the amount of $1,079,950.15, and for loans to the amount of $1,277,845.00. To meet these askings, the Board had, on an estimate, only $44,338.89 net to give, and an estimated income of only $265,267.43 to lend. Of course, it was impossible to grant all the requests for aid. It was sad; sometimes it was exceedingly pathetic; but what could the Board do? Patiently, carefully, prayerfully they went over the application and distributed their meager funds as best they could with the light they had.

The meeting this year was held April 26-27 at the Board's headquarters, Louisville, Ky. It was well attended. All the bishops except Bishops Hendrix, Kilgo and Waterhouse were there. These three bishops are in feeble health. Mr. Dorman Thompson was absent on account of a broken hand, and Dr. W. W. Pinson was detained by illness. All the other members of the Board were present.

Of course, there was much routine work. Besides going carefully over the Calendar and making the appropriations, several matters of importance received consideration.

1. The Board joined the Board of Missions in a memorial to the General Conference asking that a Board of Home Missions be created and that it be united with the Board of Church Extension. The memorial asks that the Woman's Council be continued as it is, unless by agreement some better way can be devised for the administration of the Woman's work.

2. One of the most pressing needs of the church at the present time is the care of the students gathered in our university centers. How to do this has been a problem. The War Work Commission is closing up its affairs and will ask the General Conference for a discharge. They have an unused balance of about $1,500,000.00. The Board of Church Extension joins the Board of Missions in asking that this balance be used in this work for our uncared-for students in the great educational centers of the various States.

3. The Board also asked the General Conference to mature plans for raising, during the next quadrennium, an adequate sum for the care of our superannuates, and that right of way be given the Commission on Finance for this purpose.

4. A paper was presented by the President, Bishop W. F. McMurry, asking the Board to take under consideration a plan by which applications may be considered and acted upon quarterly instead of annually as now. The paper was referred to a committee of five, with instructions to study the whole subject and to report at a subsequent meeting what changes, if any, should be made in the Board's methods of doing its work.

5. Fine oil paintings of Bishop Joshua Soule, Bishop H. B. Baseom and Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh having been placed in the custody of the Board by the Trustees of Vanderbilt University, and hung in the office of the Board at Louisville, suitable resolutions were passed, acknowedging the courtesy and expressing appreciation of the same.

Several things found emphasis in this meeting. First, the absolute necessity of the Board's guarding the funds administered by it: The representatives of local building enterprises are not always careful as to titles, mortgages, indebtedness, etc. Often they come before the Board with schemes that are unwise, and that look to the building up of local interests rather than to serving the needs of the church. Many times the Board is criticised for not making gifts or loans when to do so would be to lose the money of the church and to betray the trust committed to them. The published rules of the Board must be observed. Again, it would be well always to advise with the Secretary of the Board before putting in an application. Half the applications that come to the Board are sent in before the conditions upon which grants are made are complied with, and before the trustees are ready to receive the funds appropriated. The counsel and advice of the Secretary would save much trouble and disappointment.

It goes without saying that the President of the Board, Bishop W. F. McMurry, knows the ins and outs of the Church Extension business. He has been at the work long and has learned his lesson well. He is rendering a most valuable service to the church as President of the Board. The Secretary, Dr. S. H. Burgin, has made a splendid record during the two years he has been in his present position. Careful, conservative, accurate, a man of fine business ability, knowing both men and values, he has given the church an administration which has been safe and sane and profitable to that part of the church's work which has been committed to him. During the past year, notwithstanding the financial stringency, he has added over $115,000.00 to the loan funds of the Board. The church will make no mistake in continuing this faithful and efficient servant in this important position.

MISSIONARY CENTENARY REPORT FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Missionary Centenary culminating in World Sunday was the greatest united effort put forth in the Louisiana Conference since the week the pledges were made, during the week of May 1919. Since January 1 to May 6, the total collections are $42,706.00. Still there are a few churches that have funds but have not yet reported. This is a most excellent showing, notwithstanding the excessive rains and floods at the time most of these collections were made. Great credit is due the presiding elders and pastors all over the Conference. Our local treasurers, almost without exception, have cheerfully carried out the instructions in mailing out the individual letters and literature to those who have made pledges. For the work done by these faithful treasurers, I wish to thank them most cordially. The total collections to May 6 are $294,776 on a pledge of $752,225.00, which pledge was almost $50,000 more than the quota.

Another remarkable thing about the Missionary Centenary in the Louisiana Conference is that nearly one half of the membership in May, 1918, made pledges to this great cause.

The Alexandria District has paid $36,122, which is 37 per cent; the Baton Rouge District, $35,703, which is 39 per cent; the Lake Charles District, $49,143, which is 34 per cent; the Monroe District, $39,697, which is 36 per cent; the New Orleans District, $60,544, which is 45 per cent; the Shreveport District, $72,492, which is 43 per cent; and the French Mission District, $993, which is 33 per cent.

Simmesport church, in the Marksville circuit, Alexandria District, has paid 5 per cent more than its pledge, and we are sure that more money will be paid in within the next two years. Boyce, Forest Hill, and Trout, in the Alexandria District, have paid their three years or more. In the Baton Rouge District, Alford Chapel, Darlington, and Tunica have paid their four years or more, and Olive Brauch, Oak Grove, Gilead, Wesley Chapel and Springfield have paid 60 per cent or more. In the Lake Charles District, Ludington, Hayes, Church Point and Robeline have paid their 60 per cent or more. In the New Orleans District, Sun, White Castle, Mary Werlein have paid their 60 per cent or more. In the Monroe District, Magnolia has paid more than 80 per cent and St. Joseph and Wesley Chapel have paid more than 60 per cent. In the Shreveport District, Bayou La Chute, Belcher, Lank End, Keithville, Homer, Hosston, Blanchard, Pelican, Benton and First Church, Shreveport, have paid more than their 60 per cent.

REV. DAVID M. FLOYD.

Rev. David M. Floyd passed from labor to refreshment at his home on Lamar Avenue, Memphis, Tenn., Thursday evening, April 27, 1922. He died in the triumph of a living faith.

Brother Floyd was a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. For a number of years he had been a local preacher. At the time of his death he was a local deacon. For eighteen years he served charges as a supply; seventeen of these eighteen years were spent in the North Mississippi Conference, and one year in the Memphis Conference. As a supply he served the poorer more difficult charges. He did not seek the easy places, he wished only for a place where he could serve God by ministering to his fellow men. Both in his preaching and in his life he adorned the teaching of Christ. Under his ministry many were called from darkness to light; and thirty young men heard and responded to the call of God to the Christian ministry. These converts and these young men responding to the call to the ministry are the seals of God upon his ministry. In his home life he was equally effective in exerting his Christian influence. All his five sons are Christians, and two of them are ministers of the Gospel serving charges in the North Mississippi Conference. Where he was best known he exerted the greatest influence. Brother Floyd was fortunate in his selection of a life companion. His good wife walked uncomplainingly by his side through all the years of their married life. She shared with him the difficulties and the joys of the itinerant life. In the great beyond many will rise up and call them blessed.

Funeral services were conducted in Galloway Memorial Methodist Church, Saturday morning April 29th. The services were conducted by Rev. Frank B. Jones, assisted by Dr. T. W. Lewis, Dr. Jno. R. Nelson, Dr. R. A. Meek, Rev. W. O. Lindsay, and Rev. Jno. M. Jenkins.

Brother Floyd was a member of the Masonic Lodge at Potts Camp, Miss. The Byhalia Lodge had charge of his burial at Forrest Hill Cemetary.

He is survived by one brother, one sister, a wife and five sons, Rev. Luther, Rev. C. T., C. G., W. M. and J. E. Floyd.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans District Conference met in Slidell, La., May 8-10, 1922. The opening session, under the leadership of Rev. J. G. Snelling, was an inspiring occasion. The music was furnished by the very capable male chorus of Bogalusa Methodist Church.

The Conference was well attended. Only one pastor, Rev. G. P. White, was absent, being deterred by sickness in his home. There were 51 delegates present.

Our presiding elder proved that he could well direct the affairs of the Conference. He was positive in the execution of the plans, yet courteous and affable throughout the entire session.

The reports of the pastors and delegates were indeed encouraging, and all struck the optimistic note. The various interests of the church were ably presented. Rev. W. C. Childress spoke in behalf of the Memorial Home. The Orphanage was ably represented by Rev. N. E. Joyner. The Christian Education Movement could find no better champion of the cause than Rev. A. S. Lutz, who brought before the Conference the need and importance of Christian Education.

Brother S. S. Thomas gave a most interesting account of the Centenary Movement. In the absence of Rev. H. T. Carley, D. D., the claim of the Advocate was presented in an able manner by Rev. R. H. Harper.

The preaching of the Conference was of a high order and the word was dispensed with fervor and to the edification of all by Rev. E. C. Gunn, Rev. H. N. Brown and Rev. W. C. Childress.

Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, H. F. Foster, S. H. Meyer, K. I. Bean, Dr. T. P. Bell, J. I. Gauthier, Mrs. J. E. Selfe and W. L. Ellis were elected as delegates to the Annual Conference.

The hospitality of the Slidell people was indeed bounteous and lavishly executed. A very pleasing occasion was the luncheon furnished both days at the Community House, as it had the tendency to bring the Conference together in social expression.

The next District Conference will be held in St. Mark's Church of all the Nations, New Orleans, Louisiana.

Sincerely,
W. D. KLEINSCHMIDT, Secretary.

THE VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren of the Vicksburg District:

Please note that our district conference, which was postponed on account of high water, will convene at Anguilla, on June 6, at 7:30 p.m. Let all delegates be informed of the date and urged to attend. I shall have to depend on the pastors for assistance in interesting our people in the conference, and shall greatly appreciate the hearty co-operation of each of you. Let the local preachers be urged to attend and to submit their written reports.

Committees will be announced at the opening of the conference.

Victor G. Clifford will preach the opening sermon, and C. C. Evans and C. F. Darcy will administer the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper at the close of the evening service, June 6.

Brethren, I call on each one of you to do your best, and to pray that we may have a good and helpful district conference.

Sincerely,
J. R. JONES, P. E.

May 12, 1922.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. M. J. Miller, Mayersville, Miss., 3; H. M. Goza, Delhi, La., 2; Rev. W. V. Shearer, Noxapater, Miss., 2; Rev. J. T. McVey, Pearson, La., 3 (six months); Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, Hammond, La., 5 (six months); Mrs. Belle Henry, Kossuth, Miss., 2; Rev. H. R. McKee, Prentiss, Miss., 2; Mrs. Kemp Williams, Walden, Miss., 4; Rev. V. R. Landrum, Hazlehurst, Miss., 3; Miss Maye Mitchell, Corinth, La., 7; Mrs. G. A. Fore, Forest, Miss., 4; Rev. L. E. Crooks, Campti, La., 2; Rev. W. G. Burks, Blue Mountain, Miss., 2; J. R. Abels, Pontchatoula, La., 10; Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, Indian Bayou, La., 1.

DATE OF THE ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Aberdeen District Conference will be held at Eupora, Miss., June 14-16, beginning on Wednesday, June 14, at 3 o'clock p.m., and will close at noon, Friday, June 16. We expect a large attendance upon the conference. Let all who expect to attend send their names to the pastor, Rev. W. B. Baker, that homes may be provided for all.

The following committees are named:

License to Preach and Recommendation for Admission on Trial—J. E. Cunningham, R. I. Collins, R. M. Evans.

Recommendation for Deacon's and Elder's Orders—W. H. Mounger, E. H. Cunningham, J. T. McCafferty.

The first sermon of the conference will be preached at 8 o'clock p.m., June 14, by Rev. E. E. McKeithen.

T. H. DORSEY, P. E.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Scooba, Miss., was the place and May 2 the date for the meeting of the Meridian District Conference. Rev. T. H. King and his hospitable people were the hosts, and the way they did their work would indicate that they had long practice in the art of caring for their guests. Forty or more lay delegates were on hand, a goodly proportion of them ladies. All of the twenty-three pastors of the district were present.

The presiding elder, Rev. Paul D. Hardin, guided the business of every session with skill and dispatch, and showed himself to be an admirable presiding officer. The writer was chosen as secretary and W. A. Hays as assistant.

The reports of the pastors were all optimistic of better things, and indicated a good spiritual condition among the churches. Many revival meetings are being planned for, and it is hoped that many souls may be brought into the kingdom this year. In this connection a committee

THE MONROE-RUSTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Monroe-Ruston District Conference met at Rayville, La., on April 28 and adjourned the 30th.

Rev. Robert Randle preached at the 11 o'clock hour. Brother Randle's active ministry is in his yesterdays, but not so with his heart—it is living in to-day and looking forward. His message was inspiring.

The Conference was called to order by Rev. K. W. Dodson, the much loved and honored presiding elder. After the election of a secretary, the following committees were appointed: Public Worship—K. W. Dodson, W. R. Harvell and G. L. Compton; Licensing—A. W. Waddill, P. M. Carraway, R. F. Harrell, C. E. Faulk, W. L. Calhoun; Admission—A. D. George, G. A. Morgan, L. W. Smart, S. W. B. Colvin, C. W. Scates; Deacons' and Elders' Orders—H. W. Bowman, J. D. Nesom, J. R. Roy, J. T. Shell, R. T. McClendon; Evangelism—N. E. Joyner, J. L. Evans, H. W. Cudd, J. M. Alford, T. L. James, Sam Collins; Quarterly Conference Records—P. H. Fontaine, J. T. Warlick, O. L. Tucker, Dr. H. B. Wamble, E. L. Walker, S. J. McClean; General State of the Church—H. W. May, D. C. Barr, J. C. Price, R. V. Fulton, J. L. Lay, H. J. Boltz, J. N. Dalton, P. M. Carraway; Lay Activity—R. O. Randle and all lay leaders.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Revs. K. W. Dodson, A. D. George and J. L. Lay. The preaching was done by Revs. Robert Randle, A. W. Waddill, P. M. Carraway, N. E. Joyner and the writer. (I failed to find out who preached Sunday night as I filled my own pulpit that day.)

The following State-wide men were with us and addressed the conference; Revs. Robt. W. Vaughan, A. S. Lutz, C. D. Atkinson, and Mr. S. S. Thomas.

H. W. Jordan, P. B. McCullen and C. K. Smith were granted local license, and W. H. Young and C. K. Smith were recommended for admission into the Annual Conference.

The Conference adopted the Evangelistic Committee report, which submitted a plan for a district-wide revival campaign to run through the summer months. This plan called for a singer to be employed for full time and for the pastors to hold meetings, assisted by this singer, in the "regions beyond," and that there is to be a district director and treasurer. Rev. N. E. Joyner was elected director, and T. L. James, treasurer.

Extracts from the report of the Committee on the General State of the Church: The majority of charges report good spiritual conditions. Several charges reported that there is mission territory adjacent to them.

Work of the Missionary Society good. The Sunday school work fine. Some charges use budget system for the caring of finances of the church. Large number of Epworth Leagues in the District. Not much is being done toward the circulation of the Conference and General Organ.

An appropriate resolution was adopted and sent to the Shreveport Times, expressing sympathy for the people in the flood districts. On account of the flood situation, several preachers could not be in attendance.

Delegates to the Annual Conference: R. O. Randle, F. A. Hinton, Robt. T. McClendon, E. M. Decker, A. P. Railey, W. L. Calhoun, J. E. Naper, C. H. Henry. Alternates: S. W. B. Colvin, Mrs. E. L. Walker, Mrs. Ineicher and C. N. Noble.

R. O. Randle was elected District Lay Leader.

Ad Interim Committee, A. W. Waddill, N. E. Joyner, J. L. Evans, L. W. Smart.

The next Conference goes to Jonesboro.

On Sunday, April 30, the Sunday school forces were on hand and rendered a delightful program, under the leadership of the Field Secretary, C. D. Atkinson. The writer was not there, but this is what a lady said who attended the exercises: "My! you should have been at Rayville Sunday. We had the best time imaginable."

Last but not least, at the beginning and during the sessions and at the close of the conference the pastor, Rev. W. R. Harvell, and his fine people were always on hand to see to it that all were provided for in every particular. Everybody had a good time and the members of the Monroe-Ruston District are happy.

J. L. EVANS,
Secretary.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Hattiesburg District Conference met at Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, April 25, at 2:30 p.m., and closed Thursday afternoon, the 27th. This was a most profitable and delightful session of the Hattiesburg District Conference.

Rev. W. W. Graves, our presiding elder, in that pleasing manner, carefully looked after all of the interests of the church. Twenty-three of the twenty-four pastors of the district were present. The lay delegation was not quite as large as usual, but a goodly number of splendid and efficient laymen and lay women were there to look after God's kingdom. The pastors' reports, in the main, were encouraging. The several committees faithfully looked after the work assigned them.

Rev. B. F. Lewis, superintendent of the Orphans' Home, was with us, and spoke in the interest of that worthy institution, with special reference as to how the Home was saving character to the church and State.

Rev. J. M. Morse, Secretary of Education, brought the Conference a message relative to the educational interests of the church. Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Centenary Secretary and Treasurer, and Epworth League Conference President, spoke in the interest of these two causes, and urged that the pastors see that the young people attend the Epworth League Assembly.

Rev. W. C. Childress made a plea for the support of the Memorial Home in New Orleans.

Our presiding elder, as he always does, put special emphasis on preaching the Word, and evangelistic sermons were preached by A. W. O'Bryant, J. B. Cain and J. L. Greenway.

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: K. T. Moore, W. S. F. Tatum, Jno. A. McLeod, H. V. Waits, James Hand, G. H. Holloway, and H. Ogden. The alternate delegates are: G. C. Terrel, Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Mrs D. E. Edwards, and D. McGilvery. K. T. Moore was elected Lay Leader.

Ad Interim Licensing Committee: J. T. Leggett, C. M. Crossley, J. E. Williams and S. C. Moody.

Richton was selected as the place to hold the next district conference.

Thursday afternoon a splendid Sunday School Institute was held, led by Rev. J. C. Chambers, Field Secretary.

Rev. J. T. Leggett and his co-workers at Main Street Church were untiring in their ecort to make our stay with them pleasant. All joined in hearty thanks for their kind hospitality.

J. H. JOLLY, Secretary.

NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Newton District Conference convened in Forest April 26-28, 1922. Tuesday was given over to Rev. J. C. Chambers, who conducted a very fine and helpful Sunday School Institute, with the able assistance of Rev. B. F. Lewis and Brother O. C. Hull, assistant field secretary.

Reports indicate a very gratifying growth in the Sunday schools of the district. At this time also the delegates listened with interest to the reports of Rev. B. F. Lewis concerning the Orphanage and Rev. J. M. Morse concerning Christian Education.

At 7:30 in the evening Rev. J. W. Ramsey preached the introductory sermon of the Conference. His these was the Resurrection, and the response at the close of the sermon showed his message was greatly appreciated. At the close of the sermon the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by Rev. O. S. Lewis and Rev. J. F. McClelland. The presiding elder, Rev. J. A. Moore, then took the chair and organized the Conference. The writer was elected Secretary, with S. F. Harkey assistant.

On Thursday morning the presiding elder gave a most inspiring talk on "Co-Laborers With God," basing his remarks on the third chapter of First Corinthians. Prof. Weaver, superintendent of the city school, extended a hearty welcome to the city of Forest. His felicitous remarks brought forth hearty applause. The generous hospitality of the good people of Forest was appreciated by every one.

The reports from the various charges were very encouraging, and, though the revival season is hardly begun, many additions on profession of faith have already been made. The work of the various departments of the church show steady progress, and the fact that the pastors are more and more alert to the needs of their charges.

W. C. Childress represented the Memorial Home, Dr. A. F. Watkins represented Millsaps College, and W. D. Hawkins represented both the Centenary and Epworth League.

Rufus William Oakey of Forest, Miss., and a student at Millsaps College, was licensed to preach.

Twenty-one out of the twenty-three pastors of the district were present; two local preachers, and forty-two lay delegates, making a total of 66.

The following were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference: W. J. Stokes, of Montrose; W. A. Davenport, of Forest; P. L. Blackwell, of Decatur; J. H. Curry, of Raleigh; W. H. Jones, of the Homewood charge; Mrs. R. H. Clegg, of Raleigh; Mrs. Lillie Newcomer, of Kingston, Laurel; W. C. Mabry, of Decatur. The alternates elected were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hilbun, of First Church, Laurel, and J. H. Bassett, of Newton.

A subscription was taken to send two pastors to the school for rural pastors at Birmingham. The amount of $60 was subscribed and the list turned over to H. G. Hawkins, of Newton, for collection. On motion, P. L. Blackwell, W. H. Jones, J. H. Bassett and W. A. Davenport acted as a committee with the presiding elder to select the two pastors. They chose C. H. Stralt and R. H. Clegg, with E. H. Cooley as alternate.

W. A. Davenport was elected Lay Leader. The Ad Interim Committee is composed of H. G. Hawkins, L. F. Alford, J. S. Purcell and E. H. Cooley. The next Conference goes to Hickory.

The sermons preached by H. G. Hawkins and S. F. Harkey were of a high order, and were greatly appreciated by the brethren.

The conference adjourned at noon Friday with the benediction by Rev. W. W. Hopper.

O. S. LEWIS, Secretary.

INTERPRETERS OF INARTICULATE NEED.

The problem of modern evangelism would be a long way toward solution if men came with this intelligible request to our churches and Leagues, "Sir, we want to see Jesus." The peculiar task we face to-day is to take inarticulate needs of men and interpret them to the men themselves. There is a restlessness in the hearts of individuals and in the seething social order of our day that knows neither its cause nor its cure. We must interpret it until men see how it is the lack of Christ that causes it and His spirit alone that will solve it. The need for Christ is as urgent to-day as it ever was then. But there is prevalent a great misunderstanding as to the Christian life and what it implies. Interpreters are the crying need. Can you by life and speech help a man disgusted with himself and critical of organized Christianity to feel the need of Christ? Would the atmosphere of your League service help a young man into utterance of his deepest need, "Sir, I would see Jesus?"—Dr. Elmer A. Leslie.

The golden hopes of mankind can be realized only by men who have iron in their blood; by men who scorn to do wrong and equally scorn to submit to wrong; by men of gentle souls whose hearts are harder than steel in their readiness to war against brutality and evil.—Theodore Roosevelt.

Woe to the man that wastes his wealth of mind,

The Home Circle

A CHILD'S HYMN.

For sun and moon and stars
We thank Thee, Lord of Light;
For happy play by day
And quiet sleep by night.
Children yellow, black and brown,
Watch the same red sun go down,
And the moon which lights our skies
Guards their sleep with loving eyes.

We know Thy tender love,
We thank Thee for Thy care,
For light and fields and flowers,
And all things everywhere.
Children live across the sea
Who have never heard of Thee.
We know Thy love can pray,
"Bless the children far away."

THE RULE OF THE GAME.

"Tell me something that girls can do better than boys," said a supervisor in one of Boston's public schools.

"They can cook," was one answer.

"They can sew," was another.

"Two girls can stay angry at each other longer than two boys can," was a third answer, given by a freckled faced little chap with merry eyes.

The girls had to admit this, after which the teacher asked the boys to explain the reason why boys become friends again so quickly.

"Well, you see, perhaps two boys who have quarreled are on the same side in a baseball game, and the captain says to 'em, 'You two fellows settle your differences or you get out!' Then they make up. Even if you have been fighting, you have to shake hands when the fight is over."

"Is that the rule of the game?" was the inquiry.

"Yes," the boys assented. "Always."

Now, girls, this principle is big enough to fit everybody—small child or grownup. There is no such thing as being alone in this world. Wherever you are, whatever you are doing, you will have to play or work with a "lot," and no game or employment can succeed unless every one in it is ready in case of disagreement to shake hands and "make up."

Girls have many virtues that boys may well envy, but this masculine quality of common sense good fellowship is one that all girls should strive to emulate.—Julia H. Thayer.

THE TRUSTY SHEEP DOGS.

The sheep-dogs of Scotland are guides and defenders not only of the sheep flocks, but also the children of the crofters. Were it not for these shaggy, intelligent fellows, born shepherds of the weak and defenseless, it would be unsafe for the children to go far from the lonely and isolated crofts in the outlying districts. The schools are far distant and it is a long, rough journey across the moor from home to school and back again. And so the sheep dog goes along with them and safe-conducts them to and fro. Moreover, he must carry the books for them, for the little folk would be unequal to the task of carrying any extra weight in the long tramp. Over the dog's back the books are slung and no one need worry for the safety of the children or their belongings. The sheep dog knows his duty and is proud and eager to do it.

The rural libraries established by the Carnegie Trust, are also using the dogs in distributing books among the homes of the crofters. In fact, it would scarcely be possible for the inhabitants whose crofts are so far from the library centers to share in this great Carnegie benefice, were there not the sheep dogs to act as librarians. Good literature for the elders as well as the children is dispatched and returned on the sturdy backs of these reliable dogs.—Our Dumb Animals.

DR. WOODPECKER, TREE-SURGEON.

Although the eagle has the emblematic place of honor in the United States, the downy woodpecker is distinguished as the most useful bird citizen, says Enos A. Mills in "The Spell of the Rockies." Of the eight hundred and three kinds of birds in North America, his services are most helpful to man. He destroys destructive forest insects. Long ago Nature selected the woodpecker to be the chief caretaker—the physician and surgeon—of the tree world. This is a stupendous task. Forests are extensive and are formed of hundreds of species of trees. The American woodpeckers have the supervision of uncounted acres that are forested with more than six hundred kinds of trees.

With the exception of the California big tree, each tree species is preyed upon by scores, and many species by hundreds, of injurious and deadly insects. Five hundred kinds of insects are known to prey upon the oak, and a complete count may show a thousand kinds. Many of these insects multiply with amazing rapidity, and at all times countless numbers of these aggressive pests form warrior armies with which the woodpecker must constantly contend.

In this incessant struggle with insect, the woodpecker has helpful assistance from many other bird families. Though the woodpecker gives general attention to hundreds of kinds of insects, he specializes on those which injure the tree internally—which require a surgical operation to obtain. He is a distinguished specialist: the instruments for tree-surgery are intrusted to his keeping, and with these he each year performs innumerable successful surgical operations upon our friends the trees.—Our Dumb Animals.

LINCOLN'S FIRST TRIP TO NEW ORLEANS.

"Whether Abraham took his flatboat that he had built to New Orleans or not, we do not know," says Ida M. Tarbell in her "Boy Scouts' Life of Lincoln." "It is quite possible that he gave up this trip because he had an opportunity to go about this time as a hand with one of his acquaintances, an older man, who was making the trip on a much larger boat than he could have possibly built. A little later, too, he went down the river to New Orleans on a journey of which he often talked when he grew to be a man. This trip was made as a 'bow hand' on a trading boat that Mr. Gentry, the leading citizen of Gentryville, was sending down, in care of his own son, and he hired Abraham to go along for $8 a month and his passage back.

"To take a flatboat down the Ohio and the Mississippi as large as that the Gentrys built was a task that called for both brains and muscle. The boat was fully forty feet in length, with a double bottom of stout oak planks. It had a rough shelter on the deck. It was provided with two pairs of stout, long oars at bow and stern, a check post and coil of rope, and what was called a setting pole for steering. The current of the river would carry such a boat as this from four to six miles an hour. The crew's work was largely piloting. There were many bends in the river, the winds were capricious and the currents tricky, and in many places the traffic crowded. It called for skillful steering. They traded as they traveled, tying up wherever they thought there was a chance for a market, exchanging their boat's load of bacon, potatoes and cloth for cotton, tobacco and sugar.—Exchange.

GRACE SUFFICIENT.

The other evening I was riding home after a heavy day's work. I felt very wearied and sore depressed, when swiftly, and suddenly as a lightning flash, that text came to me, "My grace is sufficient for thee." I reached home and looked it up in the original, and at last it came to me in this way, "My grace is sufficient for thee"; and I said, "I should think it is, Lord," and burst out laughing. I never fully understood what the holy laughter of Abraham was until then. It seemed to make unbelief so absurd. It was as though some little fish, being very thirsty, was troubled about drinking the river dry, and Father Thames said: "Drink away, little fish; my stream is sufficient for thee." Or it seemed like a little mouse in the granaries of Egypt, after the seven years of plenty fearing it might die of famine. Joseph might say: "Cheer up, little mouse; my granaries are sufficient for thee." Again, I imagined a man away up yonder, in a lofty mountain, saying to himself, "I breathe so many cubit feet of air every year I fear I shall exhause the oxygen in the atmosphere"; but the earth might say: "Breathe away, O man, and fill thy lungs ever; my atmosphere is sufficient for thee." O, brethren, be great believers! Such faith will bring your souls to heaven and heaven to your souls.—C. H. Spurgeon.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

L. H. Estes, H. M. Dobbs, H. M. North, W. A. Shelton, J. H. Felts, C. C. Selecman, Victor P. Moses, Mrs. Nat G. Rollins, Mrs. Fred A. Lamb, J. Taylor Stratton, S. R. Hay, R. E. Stackhouse, T. A. Smoot, Mrs. H. A. Dunham, Forney Hutchinson.

Committee on Public Worship.

F. P. Culver offered the following, which was adopted:

Be it resolved, That the presiding elder of this district and the pastors of this city be constituted a Committee on Public Worship.

Special Committee for Hospital Commission.

C. C. Selecman moved that a special committee of ten be appointed by the bishops to have charge of all memorials with reference to the Hospital Commission. The motion prevailed.

J. A. Anderson offered the following resolution, respecting an interpolation in the Constitution of the Church which was adopted:

Whereas Paragraph 43 of the Discipline, providing for a method for altering the Restrictive Rules, contains the following words, "which may be altered upon the joint recommendation of all the Annual Conferences by a majority of two-thirds of the General Conference succeeding"; and whereas these words appear in their present form for the first time in the Discipline of 1906, and are manifestly an unauthorized interpolation, apparently based upon a misinterpretation of the constitutional action in the year 1828; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the editor of the next edition of the Discipline be instructed to delete from Paragraph 43 the aforesaid words.

Method of Selecting Members of Several Boards.

The following resolution was presented by H. B. Johnston:

Whereas there is a desire among our people to have a more democratic method of selecting the membership of the various Boards of our church, and whereas each Board should have a different representative; therefore,

Resolved, That each delegation select a person from the Conference they represent for each Board, and that the membership of the Boards be selected from the lists thus furnished.

This resolution was signed by a large number of delegates, and was discussed at some length by H. B. Johnston, B. F. Lipscombe, Mrs. Luke Johnson, M. A. Childers, J. B. Winn, A. C. Millar, Plato Durham and P. H. Linn. It was moved that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Revisals. The vote was taken and the Bishop said: "I think the noes have it." A division was called for and resulted as follows: 129 for and 158 against. A motion to postpone consideration of the matter until the next day was also lost, and the vote was then taken upon Mr. Johnston's resolution, and it was adopted.

Announcements were made, certain papers not presented earlier were presented and referred, and the session adjourned with the singing of a hymn, and the benediction pronounced by R. H. Bennett.

THIRD DAY—FRIDAY, MAY 5, 1922.

The General Conference met in session of the third day, according to rule, at 9 a.m., Bishop James Atkins in the chair. The devotional service was conducted by the Bishop, who called upon Rev. James Kilgore, of Texas, to lead in prayer; "My faith looks up to Thee" was sung, after which the Bishop read as a lesson a part of Luke iv, beginning at verse 30, and made an address upon the Scripture read.

Bishop Atkins announced the membership of the Committee on Hospitals, ordered in a resolution of Thursday's session, as follows: W. J. Johnson, Ivan Lee Holt, W. H. Stockham, T. S. Southgate, Mrs. N. G. Rollins, L. M. Stratton, J. H. Gilliam, J. M. Rogers, C. E. Hayes, J. T. Leggett. The readers of the Advocate will notice that Rev. J. T. Leggett of Mississippi, widely known throughout our patronizing territory, was named on this important committee.

The Bishop then said: "I now have the pleasure and honor of turning the chair over to Bishop Denny. In doing so I turn over to him my gavel, made of walrus tusks by Alaskan Indians and presented by them to me." Bishop Denny took the chair, declaring with respect to the gavel that he had never found much use for a gavel.

The order of the day—the hearing of the reports of the bishops—being at hand, it was moved that the reports be referred without reading to the Committee on Episcopacy and published in the pages of the Daily Advocate as space will permit.

The Committee on Introductions and Fraternal Correspondence was named as follows: James M. Rogers, Plato T. Durham, Paul H. Linn, W. C. Cram, J. G. McGowen.

P. H. Linn moved a reconsideration of the matter which had been passed upon the day before—the manner in which nominations should be made for the several Boards. After a rather spirited discussion, the motion for reconsideration carried, and it was then moved that a special committee be named to report for adoption or rejection a different plan.

A memorial from the Oklahoma Conference, asking that a committee of fifteen be appointed to consider the advisability and the manner of consolidating the General Boards of the church, was authorized.

The report of Dr. Charles W. Tadlock, fraternal delegate to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the report of Dr. Forrest J. Prettyman, fraternal delegate to the Methodist Church of Canada, were presented and read to the Conference.

The secretary was asked to call the roll of the Conference and to report on the names of the members of the Special Committee on Heresy. Among the selections of committeemen from the various Conferences, Rev. W. W. Holmes was named from the Louisiana Conference, Rev. J. R. Jones, from the Mississippi Conference, and Herbert Holmes, from the North Mississippi Conference.

Announcements were made and the Conference adjourned.

FOURTH DAY—SATURDAY, MAY 6.

Bishop Denny called the Conference to order at 9 o'clock. Rev. George E. Booker, of Monument Church, Richmond, Va., announced the hymn and led in prayer. Bishop Denny made an impressive address from the fourth chapter of the First Epistle of St. John, after which the Conference rose and sang, "All hail the power of Jesus' name."

Bishop Murrah took the chair and called for the announcements of committees ordered at the session of Friday. The Committee of Fifteen to consider the consolidation of Boards was announced as follows: J. H. Eakes, E. L. Woolf, J. B. Mitchell, Victor O. White, H. C. Morrison, J. R. T. Major, Peter Stokes, E. J. Garrison, Mrs. S. H. Bowman, Mrs. J. H. Dickey, H. H. White, W. A. Brock, W. R. Odell, P. A. Martin, J. M. Williams.

The Committee to Consider Constitutional Questions: J. E. Dickey, M. E. Lawson, Plato T. Durham, J. L. Clark, J. W. Perry, J. E. Cockrell, R. O. Randle, G. S. Hardy, J. G. McGowen. On each one of these committees a layman from the Louisiana Conference was named—H. H. White on one and R. O. Randle on the other.

Bishop Mouzon presented the report of the Commission on the Constitution, and the report was referred to the Committee on Constitutional Questions.

P. H. Linn presented Report No. 1, of the Special Committee on Superannuate Endowment, which was adopted. It was in the nature of a formal legal paper transferring to the Board of Finance the sum of $9500, which the late James T. Calvin bequeathed to the agents of the Publishing House at Nashville, Tenn., for the use of the widows and orphans of our preachers.

The Committee on Revisals recommended nonconcurrence in a number of memorials having to do with changes in our usages and law—a memorial from the Alabama Conference with reference to the district stewards assessing the presiding elder's salary, a paper from the Alabama Conference requesting action that will prohibit boards of stewards from including in the amount assessed for the salary of preachers in charge any amount paid as moving expenses of said preachers in coming to the charge, a paper from the Memphis Conference requesting repeal of the law providing for the election of a licensing committee by the District Conference, and a paper from the Memphis Conference requesting that the law of the church be amended with reference to requirements for admission on trial into the traveling connection, so as to make the minimum requirement the securing of fifteen units in the secondary schools and graduation from a junior college or recognized standing, or the completion of two years' work in an A grade college. Nonconcurrence in these four items was voted by the Conference. The fifth item brought on a lively debate. It was a request from the North Carolina Conference to change Paragraph 142 of the Discipline by the insertion of the words "and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper," thus enlarging the powers of preachers in charge who are not ordained. The Committee on Revisals recommended non-concurrence, and the same recommendation was made with regard to a petition sent in by J. A. Burrow and W. P. King relating to the same subject. In speaking upon the question, W. P. King said: "We object to the report of the committee because we are persuaded that a wrong distinction exists as touching a discrimination between the right to baptize and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. We can not discern any distinction in the sanctity of these two ceremonies. We think it is a distinction that this Conference ought to remove. Furher, we recognize, as many presiding elders have testified, that there are congregations and entire districts that go for an entire year without the Lord's Supper; that a circuit having more than four churches takes more than a year before some of these people have the opportunity of this Sacrament." C. L. Brooks favored non-concurrence and said that if the matter were left to him he would restore the condition that formerly existed when preachers not ordained were not allowed to officiate at marriages or baptize. But he said that the right to baptize "enables our pastors to compete with denominations to prompt to give their preachers the right to do these things. It is not essential that the preacher have the right to administer the Lord's Supper as it is that he have the right to administer baptism." J. A. Burrow began his remarks with this statement: "It is simply a question whether or not a pastor who is competent to have the care of souls should also have the care of sacraments; whether or not a preacher can conduct persons into the spiritual kingdom, but is not competent to conduct them into the visible kingdom." After some further discussion, the report was sent back to the committee.

The Committee on Revisals read their report No, 3, recommending concurrence in a memorial from the Woman's Missionary Council, asking that the president of the Woman's Missionary Society be made a member of the Quarterly Conference. The report was adopted by the Conference.

Another item of interest during the session was Report No. 1 of the Committee on Education, which dealt largely with the affairs of the Southern Methodist University.

FIFTH DAY—MONDAY MAY 8.

Bishop Murrah called the Conference to order at 8 o'clock, and called upon Rev. J. H. Feits, of the North Mississippi Conference, to conduct the devotional service. The Bishop then gave a fine address upon the third chapter of Philippians. Bishop Murrah then presented Bishop Mouzon as the presiding officer of the morning session.

One of the most important things done during the session was the adoption of Report No. 2 of the Committee on Boundaries and Finance, which provided for the merging of the Los Angeles Conference with the Pacific Conference, and the creation of the Arizona Conference. The Pacific Conference will now embrace all the State of California except the town of Needles, and the Arizona Conference will embrace all of the State of Arizona and the town of Needles, Calif.

The report of the special committee appointed to report a plan for the nominations of members for the several Boards was read and adopted, as follows:

We, your committee to whom was referred for modification the plan for nominating members of Boards, report as follows:

We recommend:

1. That each delegation shall be privileged to nominate for each General Conference Board, viz., Publishing Interests, Education, Church Extension, Missions, Sunday Schools, and Epworth Leagues, and for the Book Committee, the Commission on Finance, the Commission on Temperance and Social Service, and for such other Boards, Commissions and committees as are to be nominated by the Standing Committees—one clergyman and one lay member from the Conference represented by the delegation.

2. That such nominations shall be sent to the Secretary of the General Conference, who shall distribute the same to the respective chairmen of the appropriate committees.

3. That, so far as is consistent with the charters and constitutions and with securing efficient executive committees for tho several organizations above named, tho membership of each Board shall be selected from the list of nominees under these rules provided.

4. These rules shall become effective as soon as adopted by the General Conference.

Signed by: John W. Bergin, Chairman, and Martin E. Lawson, Secretary.

A proposal to make all members of the church 18 years of age and over members of the quarterly conference, the doing away with the church conference and the giving of the functions and duties of the church conference to the quarterly conference, failed of adoption.

Representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church were introduced: Dr. James R. Roy, editor of the New York Christian Advocate, and Dr David G. Downey, book editor.

SIXTH DAY—TUESDAY, MAY 9.

Bishop Mouzon called the Conference to order at 9 o'clock. Rev. F. S. Onderdonk, of the Texas-Mexican Mission, led in prayer, after which Bishop Mouzon delivered an address upon the words, "Called to bo saints." The Bishop then surrendered the chair to Bishop Moore as the presiding officer for the day.

Report No. 1 of the Committee on Missions was adopted as follows:

Your committee to which was referred a memorandum from the Cuban Mission Annual Conference praying that said Mission Conference be created into an Annual Conference, and that said Cuban Conference be established and shall embrace the Republic of Cuba.

A new Conference—the Cuban Conference—embracing the Republic of Cuba, was thus formed.

An interesting feature of this session was the introduction of Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of tho Methodist Episcopal Church. In presenting him to the Conference, as a matter of privilege, Bishop Moore said:

"The son of a parsonage, an educator of distinction, bishop in charge of an area on the Pacific Coast for two quadrenniums, and now serving a second term on the Boston area, brother of a man whom we know and loved and who brought to us a great message at Oklahoma City."

In response, Bishop E. H. Hughes said:

"Bishop Moore and dear brethren all, I have too much respect for my own repute for judgment, likewise too much consideration for the business of the General Conference, to permit me to make any lengthy response to these very kind words of introduction and to your equally kind greetings. May I now, however, say one or two things? First, I very greatly appreciate the honor of this presentation, and as long as I live I shall hold it in grateful remembrance. Secondly, let me say that every day since the opening of this General Conference I have put up prayer to God that he would bless your proceedings and guide you to all wise choices. Third, while the official greetings of my own dear church will be presented by our beloved and distinguished Dr. Downey, it is none the less a very great pleasure for me to speak my own personal word of Christian love. And feeling, likewise, the pressure of a great multitude of hearts on my own at this very moment, I take the liberty, representing one hundred and fifty thousand New England Methodists and almost four millions of my fellow religionists in the Methodist Episcopal Church, simply to give you a word of covenant that we shall unite in hailing Christ as King forever and forever. God bless you all."

The Committee on Temperance and Social Service presented Reports No. 1 and No. 2. W. F. Bryan said in explanation:

"Report No. 2 deals with the resolution that the secretary send greetings from this Conference to ex-President Wilson and President Harding. I move that the Rules be suspended and the paper be put on its passage."

The Rules were suspended and Report No. 2 read, as follows:

Your Committee on Temperance and Social Service begs leave to submit Report No. 2 as follows:

First, resolved, That this General Conference instruct its Secretary to convey our greetings to the Hon. Woodrow Wilson, the apostle of modern democracy and world peace; that we assure him that we stand for the great principles of international equity and good will which he so clearly enunciated. We pray God's blessings to rest upon him and pledge ourselves to the promotion of the great truths which he so ably set forth.

Second, resolved, That we congratulate President Warren G. Harding and Secretary Charles E. Hughes upon the good work done at the Washington Disarmament Conference, and assure them of our hearty support in all measures looking to the establishment of peace on earth and good will among men.

J. W. BERGIN, Chairman,
W. F. BRYAN, Secretary.

At the mention of the name of Woodrow Wilson there was prolonged applause, the Conference rising. There was also applause at the mention of the names of President Harding and Secretary Hughes.

The resolutions were adopted by a standing vote.

Dr. W. B. Beauchamp read the report of tho Centenary Commission and made a most interesting address. He requested that some of the bishops, especially the occupant of the chair, and Bishop Cannon, Bishop McMurry, Bishop Darlington and Bishop Ainsworth, give brief statements concerning the things that had been accomplished through the Centenary in their respective fields of labor. Bishop Moore asked Bishop Atkins to take the chair while he made the report requested of him. Following Bishop Moore, the other bishops named made statements.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

A revival meeting has recently been held with gracious results at Grand Cane, La., where Rev. T. D. Lipscomb is pastor. He was assisted by Rev. R. A. Bozeman.

The preachers of tho Vicksburg District are asked to note the change of date in their district conference. See elsewhere tho notice of the presiding elder, Rev. J. R. Jones.

Rev. W. L. Duren, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, and Mr. S. H. Meyer, prominent layman of the Louisiana Conference, are attending the session of the General Conference.

Rev. J. A. Poe, Route 3, Lexington, Miss., will have some time to assist pastors in meetings during August and September. Those desiring his assistance may write him at the address given above.

Rev. W. J. Newsom, our pastor at St. Francisville, La., has been compelled to lose six weeks from his work on account of a serious attack of influenza. We are glad to note that he is convalescing.

Rev. Henry T. Young, our pastor at Natchitoches, La., who has had experience as an evangelist, would like his brethren to know that he will have tho time to assist in a revival meeting of ten days duration and embracing the last Sunday in this month.

The Editor, who went as Fraternal Messenger from our church to the General Conference of the Colored Methodist Church meeting in St. Louis, was most cordially received. He went from there to Hot Springs, where he now is, visiting at the session of our own General Conference.

The Trinity Advocate, Los Angeles, has this to say concerning Dr. S. H. Werlein, formerly pastor of First Methodist Church, New Orleans: "Dr. Werlein, our presiding elder, is doing fine work in the Los Angeles district, and is greatly beloved not only by the pastors but also by the laymen of the church."

Rev. A. S. Oliver, writing from McComb City, Miss., under date of May 15, says: We had 102 present at prayer meeting last Wednesday night. Good Mothers' Service yesterday, and the League had a Mothers' Program last night that was simply grand. La Branch St. church has some very fine young people.

Rev. M. K. Miller writes that he has just moved into the new parsonage at Louisa, Miss., the house being completed just in time for him to escape the high water at Holly Bluff, where he had been living. The house in which he had lived at Holly Bluff was submerged to a point three and one half feet above the floor. Only two houses in the town were not reached by the water and the people there have suffered greatly.

ATTENDANCE AT PRAYER MEETINGS, MONROE DISTRICT.

Following are reports of the attendance at prayer meetings sent in by the pastors of the respective charges:

Epps, Rev. P. B. McCullin.....50
Farmerville, Rev. R. V. Fulton.....32
Jonesboro, Rev. J. C. Price.....31

A BIRTHDAY GIFT.

What can I give him,
Poor as I am?
If I were a shepherd,
I would bring a lamb.
If I were a wise man,
I would do my part—
Yet what I can, I give Him—
Give my heart.

MRS. MARY LEGGETT was born Nov. 15, 1846, and died at Heidelburg, Miss., Jan. 31, 1922. Sister Leggett was converted and joined the Methodist Church when quite young. She loved the church and was a loyal member; not only enjoying a definite Christian experience, but putting it into practice in the church, the community and the home. On Aug. 17, 1865, she was married to Mr. John Leggett, this union being blessed with six children: the late Mrs. Lorena Davis, of Pachuta, Miss., and, remaining to mourn their loss, Messrs. James and Luther Leggett, Mrs. M. L. Gordon and Mrs. Addie Brashier, of Eucutta, Miss.; Mrs. Ida Travis, of Heidelburg, Miss., and her aged husband, Mr. John Leggett, of Eucutta. Her remains were laid to rest in Zion's Rest Cemetery, in the presence of a large company of relatives and friends. We sorrow not as those who have no hope, but find consolation in the Christ she trusted. She requested that parts of John 14 and 16 be read, and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "O, Think of the Home Over There" be sung at her funeral. These were fitting tributes to her life.

Her Pastor,
R. T. PICKETT.

J. W. McQUEEN was born Jan. 8, 1850, and departed this life Jan. 26, 1922.

He came from Pike County, Miss., when a young man and settled at Star Hill, in West Feliciana Parish, where he lived until the end came. He identified himself with the church early in life and after coming to this parish became a member of the M. E. Church, South, serving as steward and trustee of the Star Hill Church until the time of his death. He was a kind husband, a loving father, a true Christian. He loved his church and pastor and his home was always the home of the preacher. He leaves a widow, Mrs. J. W. McQueen; two daughters, Mrs. T. J. MaHoney, of East Baton Rouge, and Mrs. James Perkins, of Star Hill. To the bereaved—While that vacant place can never be filled and the voice is hushed, may you have comfort and strength may you have comfort and strength, may hope but may we have that hope that your loss is his gain.

His Pastor,
W. J. NEWSOM.

THE SOUTHERN ASSEMBLY FOR 1922.

The many friends of the Southern Assembly, the "Southern Capital of Southern Methodism," situated at Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, will be interested to know that those in charge are planning for what seems to be the greatest year in its history. Never before has such widespread interest been manifested as indicated by the unusually large number of inquiries concerning programs, hotels, railroad rates, etc.

In the past years the standard of the Conferences and platform entertainments has already attained to such a high ideal, it is perhaps a little presumptious yet in line with facts, we believe, to say that the program of 1922 will go down as one of the very best yet from every standpoint.

Beginning with the Southern Epworth League Conference, June 28-July 8, on through the entire summer, closing Aug. 27 with the School of Evangelism under the direction of Dr. O. E. Goddard, you will have the opportunity of attending training schools, conferences, chautauquas, and entertainment features, taking part in or seeing and listening to great pageants and generally having a grand, good, wholesome, inspirational time.

The Southern Passenger Association has granted for our conferences on special selling dates on the certificate plan the rate of one and a half fare. In addition to this, any time during the summer unusually attractive summer excursion rates are on, particularly from St. Louis, Memphis, Vicksburg and New Orleans.

Plan to spend some time at Lake Junaluska, which, as one of our bishops has said, is the greatest single educational and inspirational institution of the entire Southern Methodist Church.

IGNORANCE OF STUDENTS.

The Review of Reviews recently undertook to find out a little about the college boys in the United States, and the questionnaire which it sent out contained questions as to "frequently-mentioned men, places, and issues affecting national life," such as "Uncle Sam," Budget Director Dawes, Lloyd George, Samuel Gompers, Sovietism, collective bargaining, Sinn Fein, and the like. Out of 17,500 analyzed replies only 332 got more than 90 per cent, and 2,708 got over 70 per cent; the rest ran from 29 per cent up.

Some of the answers were worth recording. For instance, Lloyd George was said to be "King of England," "King of Ireland," and "Ambassador to the United States." Samuel Gompers was "head of shipbuilders," "a poet," "Labor's representative in Congress" and "Minister to France, England, and Japan." The Budget was said to be "a bill of particulars," and "a booklet for keeping expenses." Sinn Fein was "a lawless mob in Russia," "the Socialists in Ireland," and "a gang of mysterious men."

These replies make us smile, and some of our genial pessimists will tell us with an air of triumph, "I told you so;" and we shall be told that our school system on this continent is all wrong and things are worse than they were seventy-five years ago. Personally, we find it a little hard to get excited over the results of such a questionnaire. We are not of the select number who always knew everything, and we recall some very trying moments which we spent years ago in trying to read some intelligence into certain examination papers; and our vivid recollection is that what we didn't know was overwhelmingly superior to what we did know. And we are very well acquainted with some useful men to-day whose average on examinations was nearer 25 per cent than 75 per cent.

It may be that such a questionnaire is a fair test of a young person's knowledge. We do not care to say much about that, as the psychologists ought to know; but we know this, that there are a great many intelligent people, and very useful people, who would never make very high marks in a written examination. And there are probably very few of us who can really do ourselves justice in any kind of examination, either written or oral.

Our mind goes back a few years to the time when the probationers were examined before the district meeting as to their theology, and we remember quite distinctly that not infrequently, when the district meeting was trying to get the probationers' views, the fact developed that the examiners themselves were as far apart as the poles in their own views; and the examination of the probationers developed into a spirited, and occasionally heated, discussion amongst the older members of the meeting.

One thing we may take for granted—our young folks are not fools. They may seem to be; they may talk like it; and we may get out of all patience with them because they are not as wise as we think they ought to be; and yet they are not quite fools. In fact, we have slowly been coming to the conclusion that the fools are more apt to be sitting in the examiner's chair. And when we hear that our young folks are phenomenally ignorant and that unless an educational earthquake occurs the future of the church and the State is certain to be speediest mental degeneration, we comfort ourselves with the thought that men have been making such prophecies for a good many generations; and we hold fast to the belief that things are not half so bad as they seem. We don't mean that they cannot be bettered, but we do think that they might be a great deal worse. And for what we have we thank God and go forward in hope of better things.—Christian Guardian.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Send the offering taken when you hold Sunday School Day to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss. He needs the money to put it to work.

Write to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss., for a room at the College, if you mean to attend the federation or training school.

If you need a catalogue or any information as to your classification in the school, write your humble servant, to Miss Ramey, or to Brother Stephens.

You remember, we begin classwork Thursday afternoon, June 1. You will find it hard to make up for lost time—the truth is, you cannot.

To join the Federation, you must fill out a blank and send it to the office at Nashville, where the class is enrolled; then send one delegate or the entire class to Grenada May 31st, and the class can join the Federation. Organize, enroll, federate, and work to win the ten thousand on the outside to our side. This is a simple task, but simple people will not undertake it. Be ready to give a good report of your work. Give the name of the class, motto, number in your class; tell what you are doing and how you do it.

Only the trained man can grapple with the work of the church to-day. Trained in prayer—yes, trained in praying. Few realize how poor is our best praying. Trained to study. This is almost a lifetime work, but it is worth a great deal to make the right kind of a beginning. Trained in dealing with children of different ages, trained in management of the different organizations of the church. The reason we have secured the services of such men as Mr. Brabham and Dr. Richardson is to give our men training in the above mentioned subjects. But how can our preachers and superintendents get this training if they do not make the sacrifice of time and money to attend such a school as we have provided?

If we had a few superintendents like Mr. L. A. French, of Winona, we could make it possible for some of the hard-pressed men to get the benefit of such training as we propose to give at Grenada. Mr. French sent the offering made on the fifth Sunday in January, the offering on Sunday-School Day, then went the "second mile," and sent the offering made by the school on the fifth Sunday in April. If we had $500 at our disposal we could bring fifty circuit men to Grenada and give them a start that would keep them going in the upward way as long as they live. People, send your preacher, send your superintendent, and see what a change will take place in your church life.

THE ASBURY STATUE.

An Appeal.

The equestrian statue of Francis Asbury, which is to be erected in Washington by the Methodists of America, has now been cast in bronze. The design of the circuit rider by Augustus Lukeman has received the unanimous approval of the Fine Arts Commission of the Government, and Congress has granted a superb site on public ground, in Sixteenth Street, "the street of the Presidents," which leads to the White House, and the Washington Monument. It only remains to provide a suitable pedestal, prepare the plot, and erect and dedicate the group with appropriate ceremony.

The Asbury Statue will be more than an ornament to the national capital. It will stand as a token of the life of the spirit and the influence of the Christian churches in a city which already abounds in memorials of statesmen and soldiers. It will commemorate in forms of enduring beauty the rugged personality of the one great Methodist pioneer whose untiring efforts to carry the inspirations of religion to the remotest settlements of the expanding republic have earned for him a high place among the founders of American civilization.

Thus far all expenses have been met by voluntary contributions in small amounts from individuals and churches. The bronze is cast, and all bills are paid to date. But the statue still lies in the foundry. It cannot be removed without additional funds. The Committee must have $30,000 to complete its work in a manner worthy of the standard set by the sculptor and of the site granted by the Government. There should be no loss of time. Further delay will be dangerous, for we cannot expect to hold this valuable reservation indefinitely unless we keep our promises and place the statue upon it.

Methodists of every sort have an equal share in Francis Asbury's fame. In his day we were all one in body, as, thank God, we still are in faith and purpose. Therefore, contributions are solicited in large or small amounts from individuals, churches and Sunday schools wherever the name of Asbury is honored. To any school which contributes $25 or more, a beautiful certificate will be given.

As life draws toward its close God dulls our eyes and ears and all our senses, that, being thus shut out from the outer world, our minds may the more retire from the world, withdraw into their own sanctuary, and there be occupied with him, and prepare to meet him. Be this method of His providence a guide to us! Keep the rein over your own minds; control them; master them; check them, for the very sake of keeping them in check; so shall you the better have them in your power, in your prayers, too.—Dr. Pusey.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Macon, Miss., was the host of the fifty-second session of the Columbus District Conference, from April 28 to 30, inclusive, and, under the direction of its pastor, the Rev. S. H. Caffey, and his wife, rendered every aid to make the conference one of fellowship and perfect comfort. A total of about eighty-five delegates and preachers were in attendance more or less from the beginning to the end. Under the leadership of the Rev. A. T. McIlwain, presiding elder, every item of business was transacted and every interest claiming attention was heard. The opening sermon was preached by the Rev. W. V. Shearer of Noxapater. He delivered a very impressive message from Mark 5:19. On Friday morning, the 28th, the conference was called to order at 8:30 o'clock, with the presiding elder, Rev. A. T. McIlwain, in the chair. The presiding elder read the 126th Psalm and brought an inspiring message on "Service." After this, Mrs. J. N. Riley, of the Methodist Orphanage, gave a brief report of the work done in the Home and solicited the prayers and interest of all.

The conference roll was called by J. H. McKinnon, and practically all of the preachers and delegates of the Columbus District answered to their names.

J. H. McKinnon was elected secretary, with Rev. Olin Ray as assistant. The conference instructed the secretary to send a telegram, expressing our sympathy, to the Rev. J. W. Dorman, who is in our hospital at Memphis. After this, the presiding elder called for the reports of the pastors. All gave interesting reports of their work done to date, looking forward to a great revival of religion this year.

The sermon at the 11 o'clock hour was preached by Rev. H. M. Young, of Artesia, who delivered a splendid sermon from Rev. 1:18, on "The Living Christ," which was followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The devotional service of the afternoon was conducted by Rev. W. A. Langley, who read from the 14th chapter of St. John.

The Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sunday School Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, made a strong and helpful address on Sunday school work, emphasizing the great need of trained teachers. Another phase of the Sunday school work was presented by Rev. W. A. Langley, who emphasized the importance of observing Sunday School Day. The presiding elder introduced J. L. Ferguson, of Millsaps College, who addressed the conference in behalf of the College, calling attention to the fact that this College belongs to the Methodist Church, and requested the prayers of its membership.

The Committee on License to Preach made the following report: Samuel Ashmore for license, granted. Robert Lee Myers and Chester Ray recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

The following local preachers were called and their license renewed: D. C. Hull, H. Lipscomb, W. H. Miller, C. M. Ray, D. J. Savage, J. W. Westbrook, T. E. Woodfin, Wade Heath, and L. L. Langley.

At the evening hour the Rev. Carroll Varner, of West Point, Miss., delivered a very impressive sermon from Matt. 4 on "The Temptations of Our Lord."

On Saturday, the last day of the conference, the session began promptly at 8:30 o'clock; the devotional services were conducted by the Rev. R. L. Ellis, who read the 17th chapter of John. The following were elected members of the Licensing Committee: Revs. T. H. Lipscomb, H. M. Young, Olin Ray and T. M. Brownlee. Dr. N. D. Guerry was unanimously elected Lay Leader. The names of the following were announced as the Committee on Lay Activities: Dr. N. D. Guerry, J. Lem Seawright, J. H. McKinnon W. R. Cronch, B. G. Hull, J. L. Fullilove, J. C. Cavett, J. A. Toler, E. M. Livingston and J. T McLeod. The presiding elder called the question on the program, "Can we have a revival in every church?" The discussion was led by Rev. W. L. Storment, who was followed by Revs. S. H. Caffey, H. M. Young, Carroll Varner and Olin Ray. These impressed the fact that we must have a vision of God in our own hearts first, a vision of the worth of souls in the world. At the 11 o'clock hour on Saturday, the Rev. O. A. Clark delivered a splendid sermon from Romans 12:1 on "Consecration." The devotional service of the afternoon was conducted by Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, of Shuqualak, who read from the 5th chapter of Matthew. The Rev. Olin Ray presented the cause of Missions and Centenary pledges, and emphasized the great need of paying pledges. Mrs. Kemp Williams, of West Point, Miss., gave a beautiful report of the work done in the district by the Woman's Missionary Society, reporting 111 tithers. The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: J. H. McKinnon, D. C. Hull, Mrs. T. J. Lee, Dr. N. D. Guerry, D. A. Meek, Mrs. W. M. Lamberson, W. C. Futvoye and J. A. Watson, and H. J. Shull, B. C. Hull, N. C. Oakes and Kemp Williams were elected as alternates.

The presiding elder called the next question on the program, "Are we looking after our rural territory as we should?" The discussion was led by Rev. Guy Ray, who was followed by Rev. A. L. Davenport, Wade Heath, Olin Ray, A. T. McIlwain, W. A. Langley, M. A. Burns, W. J. Newsom, J. C. Going and J. H. McKinnon, emphasizing the fact that the rural churches must have help if they are ever developed into what the outsiders expect of them.

The conference adjourned after a day of pleasant business transactions. At the evening hour, after the business of the conference was closed, Rev. Seamon Rhea preached a most enthusiastic sermon from 1st Corinthians 1:9, "We are co-laborers with God." On Sunday morning a love feast was conducted by the Rev. A. L. Davenport. At 11 o'clock the Rev. W. L. Storment, of Ackerman and Wiey, delivered the closing sermon of the conference. This sermon was delivered in a masterly way, such that it found its way into the hearts of his hearers, never to be forgotten, but to live with them on and on. Josh. 3:4, "For ye have not passed this way heretofore," was the text.

The conference adjourned to meet in Ackerman in 1923.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

was appointed to secure a tent for evangelistic purposes, and it is expected to be used in some genuinely missionary work.

O. B. Matheny was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. S. M. Graham was elected Lay Leader. W. A. Hays was elected as District Reporter to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The lay delegates to the next Annual Conference are: C. W. Cochran, C. G. Stokes, Mrs. R. W. Hare, D. W. Heidelberg, J. J. Houston, Miss Bessie Hardee, J. C. Durnell, and W. D. Hawkins. Alternates: W. D. Chatham, Miss Ella Orgeond, and J. B. Holland. A fund of $90 was provided for to send three of the rural pastors to Birmingham to the Summer School there.

An unusual feature, but very helpful one, was that in the closing service: the presiding elder called for testimonies as to the helpfulness of the conference to those in attendance in spiritual things, and many responded. The fires of religious fervor were burning in many hearts and it was good to be there. Many spoke of this being the most spiritual and helpful district conference they had ever attended.

Rev. M. M. Black, Commissioner of Millsaps College, gave us a forceful message about his work. Rev. W. C. Childress, of the Memorial Home of New Orleans, delivered a message bearing on the great needs of that institution. O. C. Hull represented the Sunday School Board efficiently and made himself very helpful to our work. Our own W. D. Hawkins, Centenary worker and League leader, brought messages of inspiration and cheer. We missed you, Mr. Editor, and hope you will come to see us soon.

CALOMEL ROBBED OF NAUSEATING QUALITIES

Medicinal Virtues Retained and Improved—Unpleasant and Dangerous Qualities Removed—New Tablet Named "Calotabs."

A recent triumph of modern pharmacy is the "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines, thus enters upon a wider field of popularity—purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the one successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One tablet on the tongue at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no danger. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver and a big appetite. Eat what you please.

Beware of imitations! Genuine Calotabs are sold only in "checker-board" (black and white) packages bearing the copyrighted trade-mark "Calotabs." The large, family size sells for thirty-five cents; vest-pocket size, ten cents. All dealers are authorized to refund the price if you are not delighted with Calotabs.—Adv.

THE QUARTERLY MISSIONARY BULLETIN.

The change of the Bulletin from a monthly to a quarterly publication was made because it was considered a better investment of money to put missionary news items through the Secular Press Bureau of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This Bureau serves regularly six hundred big dailies and fifteen hundred weeklies. It is the purpose of this Bureau to keep Methodist news before the public. The Sunday School Board, the Epworth League Board, the Board of Church Extension, and the Board of Missions, General Work, are all patronizing agencies. The Woman's Missionary Council is now added. The Bureau will send news items to the Woman's Page editors of Conference organs and Conference Bulletins.

THE SEVEN FOREIGN FIELDS

A summary of the Council's work reveals the fact that the Woman's Missionary Council has now in the seven foreign fields 134 trained missionaries, 213 Bible Women and native helpers; and in the thirty-five schools conducted by the Council an attendance of 7,586. The value of the property owned by the Council in these fields is $2,234,222.

FRUITS OF MISSIONARY SERVICE.

The second evening of the Council session Mrs. Downs called to the platform the fifty boys present, students from the Wesleyan Institute, one of our church schools in San Antonio. As the boys marched in order to their places, their bright, attractive faces, their manly carriage spoke in no uncertain terms of the success of the work done among their people. The boys sang, first in English and then in Spanish, the good old songs of Protestantism. Unrestrained applause was the evidence of the appreciation of the women of the Council.

During the Council meeting Senorita Jovita Orlega de Ramas delighted her audience with her charm of manner. She spoke in fluent English of the Mexican Dorcas Society of the Mexican Methodist Church, which she represented. She is another of the fruits of missionary work in Mexico, having been a pupil in our mission school when Miss Case was a missionary in Mexico, and being a graduate of our school in Guadalajara. Some twelve or fifteen young women, all members of the Dorcas Society, rendered in Spanish a message in song at the conclusion of Senorita's talk.

THE HOME BASE GOAL.

Believing that a goal toward which the Conferences may address themselves without interruption for a quadrennium will secure a continuity of activity with the most satisfactory results, the following goals were set by the Council for the coming quadrennium:

1. Two thousand new organizations, of which eight hundred be adult, five hundred young people, and seven hundred juniors.

2. One hundred thousand new members, of which fifty-five thousand shall be adult, fifteen thousand young people, and thirty thousand juniors.

3. Eight hundred Baby Divisions, and fifteen thousand on the Baby Roll.

Each Conference is to assume its proportionate share of these goals and district and auxiliary plans be made to reach them.

PLANS FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL SERVICE.

On recommendation of the Committee on Social Service the following decisions were made by the Council:

1. That whenever possible committees on Social Service shall come together for the study of community conditions and for conference plans and methods which have as their ultimate aim the Christianizing of all the processes of life.

2. That the Conference Superintendent of Social Service plan for a special meeting with the District Secretary and the Auxiliary Superintendents, within the districts, to discuss social conditions and methods of work.

3. That Christian Citizenship be made the subject of the quarterly Social Service studies for 1923.

IMPORTANT MEETINGS IN MEXICO.

The third volunteer convention of the Student Volunteers of our church in Mexico met in Saltillo, April 9-16. The first annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mexico Conference was held in Saltillo, April 10-15, and the four missionaries, volunteers who had completed their Bible course in Saltillo, were to have been consecrated on Tuesday night, April 11, and to receive their appointments at that meeting. Mrs. F. H. E. Ross, Treasurer of the Woman's Council, has gone to Mexico to visit these meetings.

THE MONTEVIDEO CONGRESS.

So wonderful were the results of the Panama Congress, which was held in 1916, that the Committee on Co-Operation in Latin America is planning to have a similar meeting in the city of Montevideo, in South America.

The Woman's Missionary Council will co-operate in this congress and send representatives from the States and from Brazil.

The name of this gathering is to be: "The Congress on Christian Work in South America."

The date is set for Feburary, 1924.

The area covered is to be the South American Continent. (It is now the plan of the committee to have another meeting about a year later in the City of Mexico. This meeting will be for the West Indies, Central America, and Mexico.)

In 1600 non-Christian nations possessed 93 per cent of the earth's surface, while Christian nations possessed only 7 per cent. In 1900 only 18 per cent belonged to the non-Christian lands and 82 per cent belonged to the Christian nations. In 1800 three of the five great continents and two-thirds of the fourth were closed against missionaries, with the Scriptures given in only 66 languages, but in 1900 in 500 languages. Then there were only 70,000 native Christians, while in 1900 there were nearly 4,500,000. In 1800 only $70,000 were spent for missions; in 1900, $20,000,000. In 1908 there were 18,500 missionaries and 96,000 native helpers. Half a million souls were won to Christ in India in the last decade of the nineteenth century. The number of native Christians has doubled in the first ten years of this century. History is an excellent cordial for the drooping soul.—Bishop Hendrix's address to Missionaries and Deaconesses at San Antonio.

MATERIALISM.

The very first sin that was ever committed was caused from the beauty and attraction of one of God's creations. When God put Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden, he said: "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the tree of knowledge, of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." But the tree was pleasant to the eyes, good for food, and something to be desired, so Eve was easily tempted by the serpent to taste of the fruit. After she had eaten, Adam was also tempted. Then was the time that evil came into the world, and it was due to the beauty and attractiveness of the tree. God's works are beautiful and appeal to us, but the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the vainglory of life still lay snares in our path. When we fix our eyes on things apart from God, we are on the way to danger; when we let His works speak to us only of Him and His will, we shall see greater beauties and shall be helped by them.

There are cravings in every human being. Many try to satisfy these by things. The soul cannot be fed by things, but only by Himself. The cravings are meant to make us seek God; the things are meant to point to the realities in Him. So Jesus used the water of the well and the material bread to lead his hearers to long for the bread of life and the water of life. Whoever stops at the material blessing misses the reality. The material object is made to last but for a time, in order that we may not be deceived into valuing that in place of its eternal counterpart.

The most wonderful inventions and the mightiest machinery impress us more with the contrast between them and the mind of man that masters them. The lesson is not of the wonder of the invention, but of the measureless worth of the maker.

Practically every one in enlightened lands looks with contempt or pity on an idolater. Yet many a worshiper of an idol thinks of a being that is only symbolized by an image, while the one that scorns him may be giving his days to seeking gold for itself without thought of noble uses for it.

The ideal of success put before young people is the gaining of money. But it should be kept in mind that the main thing is the use made of possessions and not the gaining.

A CLEAR BRAIN and healthy body are essential for success. Business men, teachers, students, housewives, and other workers say Hood's Sarsaparilla gives them appetite and strength, and makes their work seem easy. It overcomes that tired feeling.—Adv.

SPRING DEBILITY

Loss of Appetite, That Tired Feeling and Sometimes Eruptions.

Thousands take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring medicine for that tired feeling, nervous weakness, impure blood and say it makes them feel better, eat and sleep better, and "makes food taste good."

Spring debility is a condition in which it is especially hard to combat disease germs, which invade the system here, there and everywhere. The white blood corpuscles, sometimes called "the little soldiers in the blood," because it is their duty to fight disease germs, are too weak to do good service.

Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens the "little soldiers" and enables them to repel germs of grip, influenza, fevers and other ailments; relieves catarrh and rheumatism. It has given satisfaction to three generations. Get it today, and for a laxative take Hood's Pills.

I started taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in connection with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and began to improve right away. I took four bottles of each, and I was well. Since then when I feel rundown I take a bottle or two, always with excellent results. I have used Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, too, from time to time, and find them splendid."—Mrs. R. E. FROM MINDEN, LA.

Our work here is going on fairly well. Recently we have increased our Sunday school enrollment by 100. On Easter Sunday we had 84 in the Men's Bible Class and 75 in the Women's Bible Class. On that day we had the largest attendance ever recorded in Minden. The contribution for the Orphanage was $1083. Our presiding elder was with us last Sunday night and expressed himself as well pleased.

We have one of the best young Leagues in the State, or elsewhere—only seven months old. We have 22 members—10 in Sunday school work, 11 in Quiet Hour Covenant, 15 in Fellow Workers Covenant, 8 subscribers to the Epworth Era, 13 enrolled in study circle courses, 3 in Christian Stewardship Covenant; subscribed on African Special, $50; paid, $40; raised during time, $68 I call that pretty good.

quite a number of accessions to the church, and more on the list to be received. BRISCOE CARTER.

THE KOREAN DOLLAR.

To the first Conference inereasing their missionary offering to the Epworth League Missionary Special to the amount of $1000 over the previous year will bo given one of the ten Korean dollars of which much has been said recently in the church press.

You recall the story Bishop Lambuth wrote, telling that on his last journey to Siberia a Korean woman placed ten dollars in the plate when the offering was taken. She had never before seen a preacher or been to one of our congregations. She had been converted by a Korean woman refugee who had fled to Siberia, and. feeling grateful to the spirit of Christianity, she had saved carefully for four years, and these ten dollars were her net saving for this time.

This Korean dollar which will be given to the first Conference increasing its amount $1000 is one of these Korean dollars which Bishop Lambuth sent back to this country.

Neutralizes Uric Acid!

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a scientific combination of salts prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

A Trying Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Phila., Pa.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I was weak, nervous, dizzy and had headaches. I was troubled in this way for two years and was hardly able to do my work. My friends advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am very sorry that I did not take it sooner. But I have got good results from it and am now able to do my housework most of the time. I recommend your medicine to those who have similar troubles. I do not like publicity, hut if it will help other women I will be glad for you to use my letter."—Mrs. FANNIE ROSENSTEIN, 882 N. Holly St., Phila., Pa.

Detroit, Michigan—"During the Change of Life I had a lot of stomach trouble and was bothered a great deal with hot flashes. Sometimes I was not able to do any work at all. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your little books and took it with very good results. I keep house and am able now to do all my own work. I recommend your medicine and am willing for you to publish my testimonial."—Mrs. J. S. LIVERNOIS, 2051 Junction Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

The critical time of a woman's life usually comes between the years of 45 and 50, and is often beset with annoying symptoms such as nervousness, irritability, melancholia. Heat flashes or waves of heat appear to pass over the body, cause the face to be ved and often bring on headache iness and a sense of suffocation.

Another annoying symptom which comes at this time is an inability to recall names, dates or other small facts. This is liable to make a woman lose confidence in herself. She becomes nervous, avoids meeting strangers and dreads to go out alone.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted to help women at this time. It exercises a restorative influence, tones and strengthens the system, and assists nature in the long weeks and months covering this period. Let it help carry you through this time of life. It is a splendid medicine for the middle-aged woman. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs and contains no harmful drugs or narcotics.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Eighth Day, Thursday, May 11.

Bishop McMurry opened the Conference and, after the approval of the journal and the singing of two hymns, announced that Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, had kindly consented to deliver the usual address given at the devotional service. Bishop Hughes then addressed the Conference.

Bishop Darlington took the chair and the business of the Conference was taken up.

J. H. Eakes read the following telegram from Woodrow Wilson, addressed to A. F. Watkins, Secretary:

"I am greatly honored and cheered by the message from the General Conference and beg that you will convey to its members my warmest greetings and heartfelt thanks. It is delightful to be assured of such comradeship in the enterprise of justice and peace." This telegram was in response to a message which had been sent Mr. Wilson the preceding day.

The following telegram, a reply to greetings sent to President Harding, was also read:

"The President sincerely appreciates your generous message of yesterday. He is gratified to have the assurance of your approval and support."

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Episcopacy was read by A. J. Lamar and adopted, thereby passing the character of all our bishops, retiring Bishop Hendrix and Bishop Kilgo and continuing Bishop Waterhouse on the retired list.

After a spirited debate the proposal to limit the tenure of office of the episcopacy was voted down by a decisive majority.

There was a long discussion, in which parliamentary questions and the Conference rules of order as well as the merits of the case were involved, of Report No. 2 of the Committee on the Laymen's Missionary Movement. The report was adopted and there was created a Board of Lay Activities, the secretary of which shall be elected by tho General Conference.

During this session, Bishop H. H. Fout, of Indianapolis, fraternal messenger from the Church of the United Brethren, and Dr. J. Williams Butcher, fraternal messenger from the Wesleyan Methodist Church, and Rev. Namio Yanagihara, fraternal messenger from the Japanese Methodist Church, were introduced to the Conference. Each responded briefly with fitting remarks.

Evening Session.

An audience which completely filled the auditorium assembled in the evening to hear the messages brought from the Wesleyan Methodist Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Bishop Candler presided. The hymn, "Jesus, united by thy grace," was sung, and Dr. Hoyt M. Dobbs led in prayer. The hymn, "Try us, O God, and search the ground," was sung. The Bishop then asked the Secretary to read the credentials of the two fraternal delegates who were to speak that evening.

Bishop Candler then presented Dr. David G. Downey, Book Editor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as the fraternal messenger from that Church. Dr. Downey then delivered a fine address, at the conclusion of which Bishop Candler made some fitting remarks and announced the hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds."

Dr. J. Williams Butcher, General Secretary of the Sunday School Department of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, was then introduced as the fraternal messenger from the English brethren. Dr. Butcher then delivered his fraternal message.

Dr. S. G. Bland, of the Methodist Church in Canada, pronounced the benediction.

Ninth Day, Friday, May 12.

The Conference was called to order by Bishop Darlington, who conducted the devotional service and delivered an address. Dr. A. F. Smith, of the St. Louis Conference, led in prayer.

Bishop Du Bose was presented as the presiding officer of the day.

Dr. D. B. Brummitt, editor of the Epworth Herald of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Dr. S. G. Bland, fraternal messenger from the Methodist Church in Canada, were introduced to the Conference.

W. L. Clark stated that Miss Belle Bennett was elected a delegate to the Conference, but on account of sickness was unable to attend. He moved that a telegram of sympathy be sent her, and this was ordered to be done.

The order of the day was taken up —namely, the consideration of Report No. 3 of the Committee on Episcopacy, recommending the election of five bishops. There was a long debate, in which A. C. Millar, W. F. Bryan, J. W. Mills, H. D. Knickerbocker, W. W. Armstrong, A. J. Lamar, I. W. Cooper, and P. H. Linn took part. An amendment that the number of bishops to be elected be four was lost, the original motion prevailed, and five bishops were ordered elected.

The Secretary read a communication from Bishop Bell, of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, also the credentials of Bishop H. H. Fout, fraternal messenger from that church. Bishop Fout was then presented and he delivered an address which made so great an impression upon the Conference that at several times the members arose to express their approval of the sentiments he uttered.

After Bishop Fout's address the credentials of Rev. Namio Yanagihara, fraternal messenger from the Japanese Methodist Church, were read. He was presented, and he delivered his fraternal message, which was favorably received by the Conference.

Announcements were made and the Conference adjourned.

FROM GREENVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We had 520 at Sunday school this morning, 221 of them being in the Big Brothers' class. There are not many finer classes in the State. Hon. Walton Shields, State Senator, gave the address of the class. The class had charge of the Mother's Day program at its 11 o'clock hour, and it was superfine. Great congregations, fine music, stirring addresses, lots of tears, 117 mothers present, flowers, memories, thanksgiving, determination for a better life—all this and more the service meant. The waters of the Mississippi river are falling but the spiritual tides are rising. E. S. LEWIS.

MATERIALISM.

Youth is the time when longing and bright dreams of great deeds in the future are natural. Those that firmly resolve to live throughout their lives a Christian life are prepared to scorn the worthless, instead of sneering at the highest.

A materialist is not a person that denies God; he is one that lives as if this life were all he has to think about.

Materialism is desire gone wrong; desire fixed upon wrong objects. The Christian fixes desire on things above, upon character and ideals.

Service is the key-note of Christianity. Selfishness is the key-note of worldliness. Profit is exalted by one, and pleasure by the other.

We dream sometimes that we have great possessions; we awake, and our possessions have melted into the air. The thing the materialist imagines are solid, are, in fact, only dreams. They will melt away. Only God and the things of God abide.—Frances Celeste Bailey.

CONDENSED REPORT OF AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

The biggest year of Bible circulatiou siucc the high levels of tho war period, is reported by tho American Bible Society in their Anuual Report just issued.

The total number of volumes circulated during the year was 4,855,164, which is more than a million in excess of the distribution of the preceding year. The largest increase is shown in China, where 2,362,730 were circulated. From Japau, the Near East, aud all of Latin America, there has coiue an increased demand so great that the Society has been unable to meet it.

During the year the Society has been busy with many important translation programs. The revised Spanish New Testament has been completed and will be ready for distribution during the couing year. Translation work has gone forward also in Luragoli for missions in British East Africa, in Quechua for the Bolivian Indians, in Zulu for the Black people of South Africa, in K'pelle for use in Liberia. In China large parts of the Scriptures have been issued in the new Phonetic Script, which is a simplified written form endorsed and promoted by the government.

During the year the Society has arranged for the reorganization of its manufacturing program and hopes thereby to largely increase its output. It will make use of the largest and best organized printing concerns in America for the rapid production of its books in many languages for use in all parts of the world. It will continue to use its own plates and exercise painstaking supervision of versions in accordanco with its policy of over one hundred years.

NEW ORLEANS

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 69—No. 21. | Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South | Whole No. 3459.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. | NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, MAY 25, 1922 | CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Advocate: When I left New Orleans on Monday evening, May 8, I was bound for St. Louis, Mo., to perform my mission as fraternal messenger from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the General Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America. The trip, made without change by way of the splendid service of the Illinois Central Railroad, was relieved of its tedium by the company of the Rev. Mr. Neumann, pastor of one of the evangelical churches in New Orleans, who was on his way to attend a conference of his church at a point in Illinois. The efficiency of modern methods of travel was illustrated by our rolling into the great Union Station at St. Louis at 1:45 p.m., Tuesday, exactly on time. After securing comfortable quarters at the Hotel Claridge, I got in telephone communication with the colored brethren and learned that I was expected to deliver my message on Wednesday evening.

I attended the sessions of the Conference on Tuesday evening and Wednesday morning, hearing the address of the fraternal messenger of the Methodist Episcopal Church—one of their distinguished colored educators—at the former, and observing with great interest the proceedings of the body at the latter. It was interesting to observe the ability with which the presiding bishop directed the affairs of the Conference and to see the creditable way in which the business of the session was transacted. The item that aroused most discussion was a motion to rescind the law that provided for the compulsory retirement of their bishops at the age of 70. After vigorous speeches pro and con, and after the untangling of various parliamentary complications, the law was rescinded—to the evident satisfaction of some of the bishops who otherwise would soon have been placed upon the retired list.

On Wednesday evening, accompanied by Dr. C. O. Ransford, assistant editor and business manager of the St. Louis Christian Advocate (to whom I am indebted for delightful companionship and most brotherly courtesies), I again visited the Conference and delivered my message. I was, of course, received with every mark of respect, and my words of greeting were given a characteristically generous response. At some future time I may publish in your pages what I had to say on that interesting occasion.

I left St. Louis on Thursday morning at 9 o'clock for our own General Conference, in session at Hot Springs, Ark., arriving at my destination at 10 o'clock that night. I had made reservations at the Townsend Hotel, which I had found to be a comfortable hostelry on a previous visit to Hot Springs, to which I repaired and "wished for the day," that I might look for the first time upon the great quadrennial assembly of the church.

The headquarters of the Conference are at the Eastman Hotel, which can comfortably care for 1000 guests, the business sessions being held in the Auditorium Theatre. I was early in the great lobby of the hotel, which I found seething with delegates and visitors. The full delegations of your three patronizing Annual Conferences were on hand, and many friends—preachers and laymen—from our territory whom it was a pleasure to greet.

OUR NEW BISHOPS.

Bishop William Benjamin Beauchamp.

Bishop Beauchamp was born in Richmond County, Virginia, March 16, 1870; educated in Randolph-Macon College and Vanderbilt University; admitted on trial in the Virginia Conference in 1893. Appointments: Park View, Portsmouth; Trinity, Norfolk; St. James, Richmond; Broad Street, Richmond; Trinity, Newport News; Main Street, Danville; Monumental, Portsmouth; Fourth Avenue, Louisville, Ky.; Secretary of Laymen's Missionary Movement; Director General of Missionary Centenary.

Bishop James Edward Dickey.

Bishop Dickey was born in Jeffersonville, Twigg County, Georgia, May 11, 1861; educated in Emory College; admitted on trial in North Georgia Conference in 1891. Appointments: Professor in Emory College; Grace Church, Atlanta; Conference Sec'y of Education; First Church, Griffin, Ga.

Bishop Sam R. Hay.

Bishop Hay was born in Deaterville, Tenn., in 1865; educated in Southwestern University, Georgetown, Texas; admitted on trial in the North Texas Conference in 1887. Appointments: First Church, Houston, two pastorates; St. Paul, Houston; First Church, Dallas; Centenary, St. Louis, Mo.; First Church, Beaumont, Texas; other Texas churches; presiding elder of the Fort Worth, Dallas, and Houston Districts.

Bishop Hoyt McWhorter Dobbs.

Bishop Dobbs was born in Spring Garden, Alabama, November 16, 1878; educated in Southern University and Vanderbilt University; admitted on trial in North Alabama Conference in 1901. Appointments: Mt. Appointments: Mulkey Memorial, Fort Worth; Abilene; Dublin; President Polytechnic College (now Texas Woman's College); Vice President Southern Methodist University; Secretary Board of Church Extension; President Southern Methodist University.

Since so much of the legislation of the General Conference is considered only after it has been passed through committees, to which practically all matters are referred, not much progress had been made in positive enactments; but when the committees have had time to consider the measures referred to them and to prepare their reports, the legislative wheels revolve rapidly. Report of the actions of the Conference will be given in due time.

As is always the case, much interest was taken [illegible] connectional offices, it was generally agreed that a member of the [illegible] Dr. F. N. Dickey, with 194. On the third ballot, S. R. Hay was elected, with 187 of the 378 votes cast. On the fourth ballot, H. M. Dobbs was elected, with 270 of the 378 votes cast. On the fifth ballot there was no election, O. E. Goddard and H. A. Boaz leading, with 110 and 113 votes, respectively.

The Conference [illegible] Friday afternoon, after the announcement of the result of the fifth ballot. On Wednesday morning, before the sixth ballot was taken, Dr. Goddard stated to the Conference that he did not desire to be elected to any connectional office, preferring to return to the pastorate; and on the sixth ballot H. A. Boaz was elected, with 243 votes of the 377 cast.

Other elections were recorded as follows: Book Editor and Editor of the Review, G. T. Rowe; Editor Nashville Christian Advocate, T. N. Ivey; Editor Sunday School Literature, E. B. Chappell; Sunday School Secretary, J. W. Shakford; Secretary Board of Church Extension, T. D. Ellis; Secretary Epworth League Board, P. S. Parker; Secretary Board of Education, Stonewall Anderson; Secretary Board of Finance, Luther F. Todd; Secretary Board of Missions, Foreign Work, E. H. Rawlings; Secretary Board of Missions, Foreign Work, W. W. Pinson; Secretary Board of Missions, Home Work, R. J. Russell; Secretary Board of Missions, Home Work, J. W. Perry; Secretaries Board of Missions, Foreign Department of Woman's Work, Mrs. [illegible] Case and Miss Mabel Howell; Secretaries Board of Missions, Home Department of Woman's Work, Mrs. J. W. Downs and Mrs. J. H. McCoy.

Dr. Geo. S. Sneed, fraternal delegate from the Louisiana Conference, was called to Columbus, Ohio, on Tuesday to officiate at the funeral of the late O. A. Weeks, and the first alternate from Louisiana was [illegible] in his place at the beginning of Wednesday's session.

At this writing no [illegible] legislation has been enacted, and it does not seem probable that any will be [illegible] Women's General Board has been created, the Home Board and the Constitution of the Board of Missions has been rewritten in an attempt to adapt the Board to the requirements of the [illegible] demands of the missionary operations of the church. HUMAN RATIONALISM AND DIVINE REVELATION.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

There can be no worse use of a great truth than perverting it by a false application of it; and we have apostolic authority for affirming that the truth may be held "in unrighteousness."

The truth that Christianity is pre-eminently a religion of experience is a principle of supreme importance. It rests on the fact that the Christian's God is the Living God, who can, and who does, make himself known to such human hearts as hunger and thirst after the knowledge of Him. He is not an abstract conception of the intellect, nor an unsubstantial figment of the imagination, but He is an All-wise and All-loving Person seeking to dwell with men and to make His abode with them. "For thus saith the high and lofty One, that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is holy, I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble and to revive the heart of the contrite ones" (Isaiah lvii, 15).

The capacity and privilege of devout souls to know God by an indwelling experience can not be emphasized too much, nor proclaimed too often. But it should not be perverted by an illegitimate application of it as some are now disposed to pervert it.

There is a class of men who, desiring to weaken the authority of the Holy Scriptures and deny the existence, if not the possibility, of any supernatural revelation whatsoever, affirm that the seat of authority in religion is found within the individual, and that personal experience is the test of anything that purports to be from God. These men say that the Scriptures are no more than a record of human experience, full of much that is erroneous and untrue, but a reasonably faithful record of religious experience among certain ancient Jews and early Christians, the study of which is quite helpful in promoting religious experience in the hearts of people to-day. They are fond of the maxim of the rationalists, "that which inspires me is inspired, and that only." This is to make personal consciousness the test of revealed truth, and to elevate any man's experience to the level of the inspiration of the Hebrew prophets and Christian Apostles, if indeed such individual experience is not exalted thus above the sacred writings "of whose authority was never any doubt in the church."

To say that such a theory is born of conceit and begets conceit after its kind is a mild characterization of it. It is an amazing manifestation of conceited self-sufficiency. It is not merely vain conceit, but most vicious conceit.

It pulls down the pure Word of God and in its place sets up as many peculiar and spurious revelations as there are eccentric egotists to utter foolish things. It depreciates almost to worthlessness the rich inheritance of divine truth which was bequeathed to us by "holy men of God who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," and which sacred deposit the church of all ages has guarded and transmitted with conscientious care.

We have apostolic authority for saying of the canonical Scriptures "that no prophecy of the Scriptures is of any privato (i.e. of one's own) interpretation"; but this rationalistic view of inspiration subjects every part of the Divine Word to the most private and peculiar interpretation. Such being the case, it can not fail, when carried to its logical consequences, to corrupt both doctrinal and ethical truth, to destroy both the tenets of the Christian faith and the laws of Christian morality.

If the Gospels are no more than a record of experience, what proof of the deity of Christ or of the fact of His bodily resurrection can they bring us? What evidence for His virgin birth can they supply?

As a matter of fact, very many, if not most, of the men who hold this rationalistic view of inspiration refuse to accept both the Virgin birth and the bodily resurrection of Jesus. Others who have not the temerity to repudiate outright these affirmations of the creed do not hesitate to say that belief in these two great truths is not necessary to either Christian faith or Christian life; they would have us trust in a phantom deity for the Redeemer and instead of His resurrection rest in a shadowy spiritual appearance of Him after His crucifixion. For the monumental supports of Christianity they would substitute props of psychical mists.

From such a position it is but a step to go on to the questioning, if not to the flat denial, of the existence of a personal God as taught even by bare theism. Personality is held to be no more than an anthropomorphic symbol of God, and finally it is resolved into a sort of deific potency. The upshot of this disintegrating naturalism is the dissolution of all Christian doctrine, with nothing left at last but a dusty residuum called theosophy, or the pulverization of theology into a dry pantheism.

Then the disintegration of doctrinal truth is followed speedily by the dissolution of moral principles; for when belief in the personality of the Sovereign and Holy Being, to whom men are accountable, is overthrown, there remains no basis for morality except what each individual, in his godless and lawless individualism, may conceive to be useful or agreeable. Why should such an one hesitate to profane the name of God after God has ceased to be to Him a real personality? What sanction for any of the commandments in the decalogue or any part of the Sermon on the Mount is left? And when these two great codes of morality are annulled, moral chaos is reached.

There is no half-way station at which the rationalistic advocates of naturalism can stop, once they renounce God's revealed Word, and set up individual experience as the source and test of inspiration. Many of them have already gone to the bottom of doubt and despair, and many others are on the way to the same melancholy destination.

We must hold to and contend for "the faith once for all delivered to the saints" (not discovered by them from their inner consciousness), or we must give up Christianity altogether, once and for all.

We have a sure word of prophecy whereunto we do well to take heed as unto a light that shineth in a dark place. If we turn away from the guidance of that heavenly luminary, and walk in the light of our own fire and in the sparks which we have kindled for ourselves, we shall surely lie down at last in sorrow and rayless gloom. (Isaiah 50:11.)

In a recent article the editor of the Watchman-Examiner puts this matter most clearly and cogently. He says:

"The clear-cut issue before the Christian to-day is the choice between a naturalizing rationalism and a supernatural revelation. There is no middle ground. A man can not serve two masters. He who erects his building on rationalism builds his house upon the sand. He who builds firmly on revelation rears his structure upon the rock. Rationalism changes form, it has the voice of the charmer, but its hands are palsied and its feet follow the path of death. It has no record of lives transformed by a renewing of God's grace. It can not create; it can only copy. It is an iconoclast whose alabaster box has no ointment. It dismantles a heart and then follows it with dismay. It injures a friend before it has hardly gone the half mile with him, and then both often fall together into the path of death.

"Revelation brings to the traveler the sunrise, bears in its hands the gifts of love; leads its friends to the uplands of hope and into the fields of spiritual service. It transfigures human life in all its relationship. It turns the desert into a garden. The cloth woven on its looms is a design of heaven and never wears out. It is a physician who heals the hearts of men and gives his life in compassion.

"Rationalism robes itself as an angel of light. Revelation is an angel of light. 'Choose you this day whom you will serve!' He who goes after rationalism goes to the field of spiritual death and loses his way in the barren wilds of unbelief. He who follows after Revelation finds the marks of the pierced Son of God and treads the path that never strays from the truth. In these days of agony the world is weary of the dirges of rationalism. It wants comfort in its night of sorrow. Only Revelation can teach it to sing the songs of salvation."

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel.

Back in the Pelican pines! Amen. The little bungalow in Mansfield is the center of the world, and the center of the bungalow is Sister Steel! How happy I am that she has not changed from the old-fashioned girl into a modern woman in economic costume! I have been in Mississippi for three months, starting in at Mathiston and winding up in Columbus. That is a stalwart young fellow at Mathiston, and he has a man's job. Mathiston needs his whole time, yet he has to divide it with several appointments. Some day we will quit such foolishness and adopt a wiser policy. It will take the spirit of the pioneers to do much studying in Thrower's situation. But they did it under even harder situations. You may say what you please, but Methodist preachers are good judges of women and horses. Thrower is lucky to have such a wife; but it was funny to see him toting his baby all around town, just as if the pretty little fledgling was the only baby in Mississippi!

My next appointment was at Clarksdale—the "Queen City of the Delta," they proudly style themselves, not without some good reasons; for Clarksdale is a lovely little city. My boyhood was spent in the Delta, so I always feel at home there, although it is a very different country now from what it was then. Then it was a wilderness from Memphis to Vicksburg, and we called it "the bottom," or "the swamp." Now it is the Delta, a vast plain, dotted with beautiful farms and thriving cities, traversed by railroads and smooth highways. The day will come when the single cotton crop will give place to diversified farming, and the Delta will feed the nation. They can grow everything in the Delta, and beat the other fellow. I found Rev. E. Nash Broyles a very brotherly man, wide-awake on his job with a full head of steam, studious, actually reading good books and studying, and with an idea that a preacher must be a sure enough man if he is to lead his people to high places. A man's ideal of his ministry is a very vital thing in his make-up. Broyles has the finest Epworth League I know of. The attendance averages around a hundred, and there is not a dull minute in the service, judging from the one I attended. Mississippi has been the recruiting ground for high steeple preachers, and if they don't hold on to such climbers as this vigorous parson the first thing you know he will be a "transfer;" and then he will begin to have experience! Broyle has not learned to put on the brakes, and is liable to get a hot box. If he will "sprinkle cool patience" on his headlong zeal, he will last longer.

In Clarksdale I had the great pleasure of renewing my acquaintance with the Rev. T. W. Dye, D.D., and his delightful family. In his prime,

Brother Dye was one of the strong men of his Conference. He is now retired, and not as vigorous at 80 as he was at 40; but his eye is as bright, and his mind as keen as when he used to wield his merciless logic against error and his martial earnestness in advocacy of the truth as it is in Jesus. He came of a race of Methodist preachers, and there are hopeful signs that, though the chain has a missing link, the succession will bo perpetuated in some of his grandsons—a bright galaxy of youngsters in the home on the banks of the Sunflower. Like an Ozark pippin, Dye gets mellow as he gets older, and the fiery scout who followed Forrest has become the gentle Christian, calmly awaiting his reward.

From Clarksdale I went to Greenville. Here I found Rev. E. S. Lewis, who is in his fifth year, in high favor with the people—Gentiles and Jews, white and colored. If a man must beware when all men speak well of him, then Lewis had better be on his guard. They all said he is a "good man," and you know what Paul said about a good man in Romans 5, 7. I had the finest hearing from the men in Greenville that I had in any place i have been; I mean more men attended my meetings. As in Clarksdale, so here, I had the pleasure of dining with the Rotarians. I found this community considerably stirred up about the Ku Klux Klan. The Rotarians passed some severely condemnatory resolutions at the meeting I attended. I don't belong to the Klan, but I am on their side in this controversy. This is a free country, or at least it is supposed to be a free country, and men have a right to belong to an order which holds the principles of the Ku Klux. I wish they would do away with their disguise, however, except on special occasions, when they might wear it just for fun. It was needed when the Ku Klux first started; but it is not needed now, and it gives every lawless man a convenient way to escape. Every lawless deed is laid on the Ku Klux.

From Greenville I went to Greenwood. My messages were given in Greenville under the auspices of "The Big Brothers' Class" of Brother Lewis' Church, a fine body of men; at Greenwood they were given under the auspices of the Ministers' Alliance. Rev. V. C. Curtis, the Methodist pastor, showed me much kindness. He is planning a large annex to his church, in the face of a most depressing economic situation in the Delta, and will doubtless see it through. In Greenville I had the pleasure of preaching for the Episcopalians, the liberal rector, Dr. Davidson, inviting me to speak at one of his Lenten services. So in Greenwood I had the pleasure of renewing my acquaintance with the rector, Dr. Rose. He says he heard me preach a sermon on the Resurrection in Richmond, Va., fifty years ago, which he still remembers. He took his girl to my church because it was the longest walk! I like the Episcopalians, and if the Methodist Church unites with the Northern Methodists, or becomes a Unitarian Church, as it is fast becoming under the present trend, I'll get me a pew in the old historic Church. An Episcopal bishop assures me that he has a place for me at once, if I will come. I don't want to change, but won't follow where the liberals are leading now. We Methodists who are loyal to our past, and to the apostolic faith once delivered to the saints, may have to organize ourselves. When Luther shook Roman Catholicism till it rocked on its base, Loyola saved it by organizing his Society of the Jesuits. When English Christianity had become a dead orthodoxy, Wesley saved it by organizing his Methodist Societies. Why can't we organize an Evangelical Society, pledged to fidelity to our belief, and save the cause from the disintegrating effect of the rationalism taught at both Emory and Dallas? I find our people are true to our Methodist faith in spite of the defection of some of our leaders. The "beloveds," both Felts and Pope, Delta P. E.'s, treated mo courteously. But this story is like the Arabian Nights, to be continued—so adieu.

And as we have borne the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.—Cor. xv. 49.

A SURVEY OF THE PACIFIC SLOPE.

By A. C. Zumbrunnen, Survey Secretary.

During the month of February I was on the Pacific Slope, Oregon and California, making a survey to discover what the opportunities and responsibilities of our church were in that section, and what was necessary in equipment and maintenance in order to measure up to those opportunities and responsibilities. The survey covered four districts, Portland, Sacramento, San Francisco, and Los Angeles. Five conferences were held with the pastors and presiding elders. In addition to getting some very specific data regarding each one of the churches in these districts we now have in that field—the territory served by each, and what would be necessary in the way of equipment and maintenance for carrying out an adequate program of occupancy to measure up to their responsibilities and opportunities—open conferences were held in which very free and frank discussions were made of the problems and needs of that section, and how these could best be met.

These conferences were as illuminating as was the information given on the schedules used in making the survey. In them were revealed the points of view and attitudes of the pastors and the people whom they serve, or seek to serve. There is nothing more important to understand in working out a program than these things.

Some very clear impressions were received. They seem to be so important and vital and so little realized by the church as a whole that they are passed on with the hope they will bring about a better understanding and appreciation of conditions in that section of our Home Field, and that the consideration it merits may be given it.

One of the first impressions received was that there is a Field, or that there is a mission, for the M. E. Church, South, on the Pacific Coast. This mission consists in caring for our own who are already there in considerable numbers and who are coming in constantly increasing numbers. This holds especially in the southern part of California. We also have a mission to those coming from other sections, especially from the North-Central and Northeastern States. In the Los Angeles District the pastors stated that from fifty to seventy-five per cent of their members were neither formerly Southern Methodists nor from the South. The pastors from the Portland District reported that an average of eighty-five per cent of their members were from the North and East.

In addition to the foregoing, the survey revealed many unoccupied fields where no churches were ministering to the people. For instance, a new section of Portland, Oregon, containing five thousand people within a radius of ten blocks; one half of Grant's Pass, a town of about 4,000, are without any churches. In conference with Bishop Du Bose, the presiding elder, the ex-presiding elder, and leading pastors of the Portland District, they gave eleven places where there were wide-open fields that we should enter at once. It was reported that San Francisco, having a population of 525,000, has less than 15,000 members in her Protestant churches. The author just received a survey of the Japanese field of the Pacific Conference, by Rev. W. A. Davis, evangelist to the Japanese on the Pacific Coast. It reveals still another field and mission for our church.

He reports eight Japanese communities in California having a population of 8075, of whom 217 are Christians, in which no denomination is doing any work—a wide-open mission field.

Our mission, then, is not simply to care for "our own." It is also to minister to a large number of people in many communities otherwise uncared for. The West is new. There is no "tradition of the elders." Denominationalism has little hold here. The people go to the church that seeks to serve them vitally. The pastors from the four coast districts estimate that they are now reaching 13,075 people, and that with adequate equipment and maintenance they could be reaching 40,550 in five years.

We have another mission in this section of our home land, another vital contribution to make. It is the same that Wesley made to Protestantism, i. e., evangelism and spiritual warmth. This the other denominations do not seem to be supplying according to the testimony of our pastors. Here is an opportunity for making a vital contribution, one that is absolutely necessary if the West is to be captured for Christ and made a vital part of the Kingdom of God. Evidently we have a mission on the Pacific Slope.

Not only were the above impressions received, but also some as to what is necessary if our church is to measure up to its opportunities and responsibilities.

What is necessary for us to measure up to our opportunities, to fulfill our mission? In part, at least, the following:

1. A better trained ministry. This is again the testimony of the men on the field themselves. The problems are so vital and big that only men of largest training and greatest ability will be able to measure up to them. The ministry should be an indigenous one, so that it would appreciate the point of view of the West and know how to minister to it.

2. There is also need for a better equipment than we now have. Our churches are at the present, in the main, wholly inadequate. They do not compare favorably with those of other denominations. The truth is that many of our own most able and desirable members who go West pass up our own churches and go into others. For the same reason we fail to reach the other people of influence. Adequate equipment is vital and expedient. It would be far better to provide such in a limited number of places than to seek to cover the whole field with the present sort.

3. Closely akin to the foregoing is that of better support for the ministry. The present support is wholly inadequate. The kind needed to meet the conditions of that section cannot be secured on present salaries. For a while the local churches will not be able to meet the situation. The field at present is clearly missionary. On the other hand, no field promises larger returns on investment than this one. The Pacific Methodist Advocate states that members of our churches pay fifty per cent more per capita than in the far South. In February the leading Conferences, with respect to the amounts paid in on the Centenary pledges, were respectively the South Carolina Conference with $9.40, and the Portland with $13.02 per member.

4. The same consideration should be given our Western work as that of the old South or in the overseas fields. These outposts must be maintained if we are to measure up to our opportunities and responsibilities in the home field. They should not only be maintained, but strengthened so they will become more vital.

And, finally, as we occupy our home field, so will we occupy the Foreign Field. The strength and resources of the Home Base will determine the church's work on the Foreign Field. The adequate occupation of the West is a vital matter to our church and the advancement of the Kingdom of God.

THE JOHN BROWN MEETING, MERIDIAN, MISS.

One of the greatest revivals ever held in Meridian closed on Sunday night, April 30, having continued four weeks. Rev. John Elward Brown, General Evangelist, of Siloam Springs, Ark., with his party of three helpers, was in charge. The meeting was projected by the Methodist Ministers' Association and was a co-operative effort by the six Methodist churches and two of the leading Presbyterian churches of the city. The services were held in a tabernacle with a seating capacity of at least twenty-five hundred, erected for the occasion. Great throngs attended, beginning with the first service, and after the first week the tabernacle was crowded at all evening services. The building was utterly inadequate to accommodate the Sunday afternoon and evening services, thousands being turned away from some of them.

It is estimated that from ten to twelve thousand people heard Brother Brown on the last day of the meeting.

Brother Brown is a great gospel preacher—spirit-filled, Scriptural, courageous and sane; and the people heard him gladly. The morning services were times of spiritual refreshing to the Christians, and his great messages on the Spirit-filled life and other helpful themes were good to the use of edifying. He is very fortunate in the character and ability of his assistants. Prof. Alva Willgus, soloist and chorus director, captured the audience from the start. He trained a splendid choir of about three hundred voices and succeeded in getting nearly every one in the congregation to sing. Prof. Floyd Clark, pianist, is indeed a wizard in his line, and won the hearts of all. Last, but not least, Miss Anne Andrews, soloist and special worker among the young people, did a very splendid service.

Brother Brown uses the inquiry room for seekers, and during the meeting about three thousand souls passed through it. There were many hundreds of professions—some quite remarkable—embracing all ages. A gracious work was done within the church membership. Also a remarkable work was accomplished among the school children, the tabernacle being thronged with them on several special occasions.

Our churches were practically full on the mid-week prayer meeting occasion, following the close of the meeting Sunday night; and our Sunday school and church attendance on the Sunday following showed a marked increase. Nearly all Protestant churches in the city are receiving new members as a result of the meeting. The Methodist churches have received to date about one hundred and fifty, with probably more to follow.

The financial end of the campaign, instead of being a burden on any one, proved to be a delightful service. The people responded gladly to all appeals. The Meridian Methodist Ministers' Association most cordially commends the John Brown party to any church, or association of churches, desiring a revival of old-time religion.

A LETTER FROM CHINA.

By Dr. A. P. Parker.

Things are moving on in this old-new country in rather an uncertain way. Politically, the country is still divided between the north and the south. About three-fourths of the country is in sympathy with the northern government. The southern government professes to stand out for constitutional government. But, really, at bottom the whole situation depends upon the movements of the military governors of the provinces, who are more or less independent of any central control. We hear frequently of projects on hand for the unification of the north and south, in which it is said that the military governors are negotiating for the purpose of bringing about such a result. But, so far, these schemes have all gone awry, and we are no nearer unity now than we were four or five years ago. Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the President of the Southern Government, has been for some time preparing a military expedition to go north and attack Peking, but so far nothing serious has come of this. It would be tedious to name the other principal leaders in this internecine broil. The principal event of recent times, which has come about as the result of the Washington Conference, is the restoration of Shantung to China and the withdrawal of the Japanese troops from that region.

Meanwhile, Japan is seeking by some twist or turn of affairs to gain her ends in getting a foothold in China, and especially in Manchuria. Even her promise to give up Shantung has not mollified Chinese resentment against Japan very much. The Chinese are afraid of the Japanese, and they have good reason to be afraid. The high-handed measures taken by Japanese officials in regard to the Koreans not only fill the Koreans with fear and hatred, but also serve to arouse and continue those feelings among the Chinese. As an example of the hatred of the Koreans to the Japanese, two young fellows ran amuck on the Bund (our main foreshore street) here in Shanghai a few days ago, in an attempt to assassinate a Japanese official. Their bullets struck a lady, who was going round the world and had landed in Shanghai for a while. Just as she came on shore from the steamer, the fatal bullet struck her. The Japanese official was not hurt. The two young men were ultimately arrested, and are being held in the Japanese Consular Court for trial. Like all political assassinations, this mad act of the Koreans has done and will do their cause more harm than good.

Meanwhile, our mission work goes on in this country in a very encouraging manner. We are planning very extensive operations in our mission in China, depending on the income from the Centenary offerings for their execution, and we shall be grievously disappointed if the collections are not paid up in full, for our plans all depend on receiving the amounts that have been promised us.

The commission we sent to Manchuria to survey the country and choose a station for opening our work there has just returned. Their full report has not yet been made. But there is every reason to believe that they are very hopeful of the prospects of the new mission, which we want to open there in the near future. We hope the Board will be able to appropriate the money and appoint the workers needed for successful work in that region.

The health of the mission, generally, is good. We are very sorry that we are to lose some members of our mission, who, for one reason or another, are returning home in the coming summer and will probably not come back to China. We must have more workers, not only to fill the vacancies of those who have to go, but to increase our working force to meet the opportunities that are constantly opening up before us.

Shanghai, China, April 3, 1922.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS AND CHURCH EXTENSION.

New Orleans District Conference.

Dear Brethren: We feel that for the New Orleans District no more important matters will come before this conference than the two items of this report.

They are items of special importance to us because of the peculiar and very difficult problems of Protestantism in this section. These problems are such as to require a much greater outlay of money and a larger complement of workers than can be provided locally. We do not think that it is too much to say that our problems have not been fully understood by the church at large; neither has the church had an adequate sense of responsibility for maintaining the position of Methodism in this great field.

New Orleans is not only the South's greatest port, but is the second port of the Nation, and is the chief metropolis of a State which has lately come into such economic importance as to attract people from every quarter of the world. This means that we are not only responsible for our local problems, but for the care of a Methodist constituency coming to us from all parts of the country, and coming with an economic rather than a religious purpose.

Hence we feel that it is quite too much to require that we shall take care of such an appalling task without church-wide sympathy and support.

With the completion of the magnificent plant on Rampart St., we feel that St. Mark's and Mary Werlein Missions may be left with the responsibility for the foreign elements that we seek to reach. But there are many promising and important residence sections which are receiving practically no consideration at our hands. And for this neglect we are losing the loyalty if not the respect of many of our best people.

Accordingly, we feel that the Conference and the General Board of Missions should both help us in the maintenance of such an inclusive and vigorous mission enterprise as shall enable us to fully meet our whole responsibility.

We believe further that the Church Extension Board can render invaluable service by helping to provide chapels in such sections as Gentilly Terrace, Lake View, City Park, Metairie Ridge, and Broadmoor. These chapels could provide propagation stations as feeders for our established centers of worship, and at the same time conserve every interest of Methodism in a great and growing city.

We are glad to note that through the untiring efforts of our presiding elder we now have $7500 on the calendar; but we feel that this should be but a beginning and a sign of encouragement.

Report No. 3 of the Committee on Itinerancy was read, together with a minority report. The minority report recommended that the time limit on the pastorate be removed entirely. It was ably presented by Forney Hutchinson and others. The minority report failed of adoption and action was taken upon the majority report. It was adopted as follows:

Itinerancy Report No. 3.

Your committee had before it quite a number of memorials dealing with different phases of the time limit, and we recommend concurrence in the following resolution signed by Peter Stokes and M. T. Pyler:

Strike from Paragraph 121 the words "provided, further, that where a Quarterly Conference shall request and a majority of the presiding elders shall concur by ballot, the bishop may appoint a preacher to a pastoral charge for more than four consecutive years," and substitute for the above the following: "provided, further, where a majority of the presiding elders shall concur by ballot, the bishop may appoint a preacher to a pastoral charge for more than four consecutive years."

As the law will now be the matter will be taken out of the hands of the Quarterly Conference, but leave it possible for the bishop to appoint a preacher to a pastoral charge for more than four consecutive years "where a majority of presiding elders shall concur by ballot."

It will be of interest to the readers of the Advocate to know that Louisiana has been placed with the Virginia and the Baltimore Conferences, becoming a part of the First Episcopal District, with Bishop Candler as the presiding bishop. The Louisiana Conference will be held in Shreveport, La., November 22.

The Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences have been placed with the South Georgia and the Florida Conferences in the Tenth Episcopal District, with Bishop Ainsworth as bishop.

The Mississippi Conference will be held at Crystal Springs, Miss., November 30, and the North Mississippi Conference will be held at Water Valley, Miss., November 8.

FROM MAY TO MAY AT CENTRAL MERIDIAN.

It is finished—the first year at Central Meridian. We preached our first sermon as pastor of Central Church the first Sunday in May, 1921. First Sunday of May, 1922, having come, we naturally review the year.

We came to a broken-hearted people. Our own heart bled with theirs because of the death of their great pastor, Rev. H. B. Watkins—"he being dead yet speaketh." No pastor was ever more universally loved than he. His monumental work in this pastorate was so constructive and effective until it has not been difficult for his successor to realize upon his foundation and plans.

Central Church is a great church. The membership is responsive and loyal. Under the blessing of God their fine co-operation has made possible certain helpful results. During the year we received 73 on profession of faith and 133 by certificate, making a total for the first year of 205. Sixty of these came in the recent revival. We "suffer the little children to come," and have baptized 35 infants. We have divided the membership into nine territorial circles and have five leaders for each group, most of whom are wonders of efficiency.

The attendance upon the Sunday school and services of the Church is good and growing. The mid-week prayer service is an inspiration. The first mid-week service after our recent revival we had 355 present. Expecting more this week. Every department of the church work is well organized and doing splendidly.

Our financial record for the year is a good one. Soon after arriving we put on the Christian Education Movement and secured $18,000 in subscriptions. March, of this year, with Bishop McMurry inaugurating the work, we provided for the paying off of all indebtedness on this magnificent property, by securing in cash and gilt-edge subscriptions $26,000. The plan is to dedicate the church Easter Sunday, 1923; $8,000 cash has been paid on subscriptions to church debt during the year. At our second quarterly conference, held last night, our treasurer reported $14,191.41 paid on budget and special accounts for the first five months of this Conference year. The healthy condition of the church is revealed by a large number of "ready-for-service" people and with but few exceptions every household contributes to budget and special funds.

John Brown, of Arkansas, and his party held a great city-wide revival for Methodism, with two Presbyterian churches co-operating, in our city April 2-30. Another will report this meeting, but we testify that Central has had a gracious visitation from the Lord.

Our presiding elder, Rev. P. D. Hardin, with his sympathetic interest and intelligent efforts in behalf of every forward step in the church, contributes no little part to whatever success is attained.

The writer would emphasize that he personally shares but little of the credit due for the already attained goals of this great church. Our church is not static; it is in a great movement upward! Up to fuller knowledge of the Lord and His Christ, and on to a more efficient service for His glory. The Holy Spirit is with us. There is an urge in the memory of Herbert Watkins. A ready and willing people, sympathetic hearing and counsel of Rev. R. F. Witt, and Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, and the efficient services of Miss Madge Stuart as church secretary and a wise and faithful board of stewards, are some of the causes of Central's keeping on going forward. A great God, a great people, a wonderful opportunity and a tremendous responsibility! Pray for us.

J. LOYD DECELL, Pastor.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE INSTITUTE.

By no means fail to attend the Louisiana Conference Institute at Centenary College, June 1-8, 1922. This is your Conference Institute. May we have the pleasure of greeting you there? This will be a week of inspiration, cultivation and recreation. We are securing some of the best talent on the program which will be as follows: Daily lecture on "The Doctrines of Methodism," "The Holy Spirit," "The Problem of the Rural Church," and each night an inspirational address. In the afternoon we will have a recreational program under the direction of a capable leader. Come for the week. The college has placed the dormitories at our disposal. All we will have to do is bring sheets, pillow cases and towels. Board will be furnished by the college at actual cost.

This is a fine opportunity to get an outing and a schooling at a very nominal outlay. There will be no fees. Your traveling expenses and board for 8 days will be all the necessary expenses.

Come and let us make this first session of the Louisiana Conference Preachers' Institute such a success that next year all will look to it with pleasure. Bring your note book and pencils, as there will be no text books, but lectures by experts in these various lines and there will be much worth taking down for future reference and use.

Come, bringing your quota of brotherliness and enthusiasm to contribute to the well-being of the body.

STANDARD TRAINING SCHOOL AT GRENADA COLLEGE.

On the first day of June the third Standard Training School for our Sunday school workers will open at Grenada College. We are expecting a large attendance. If you want to be sure of a room at the college you had better write to Rev. J. E. Stephens. I desire to urge our young preachers to attend. It would be a fine investment for the churches to raise a fund and send their pastor, or at least pay part of his expenses. We want at least 250 at the school this year.

I want to speak particularly of the course taught by Mr. M. W. Brabham. This course is especially for the preachers on circuits, who have small one room schools. Mr. Brabham is one of the strong, vigorous men who turned aside from a prosperous business career to give his life to Christian service. He is a great teacher and one of the finest fellows in the world. Let's give him a great class. Write Rev. J. E. Stephens that you are coming. The time is June 1-7.

ITINERATING IN BRAZIL.—RIO GRANDE DO SUL.

By Dr. E. H. Rawlings.

Third Article.

In the last nineteen nights I spent seven on the train, and of eighteen days, eleven. But I had been to that wonderful empire state, Rio Grande do Sul in the southern part of Brazil. We are now nearing Sao Paulo, returning from the South, and with one or two exceptions have visited all the principal towns of our mission in the southern part of Brazil. The trip itself was significant. It is hard for even a secretary to realize how far our work in South Brazil is from the Conferences in Central Brazil. From the last town in Central Brazil to the first in the South Brazil Conference it takes nearly as long as from Japan to Chiua, and about twice as long, or three times, as from Japan to Korea. South Brazil is in many respects a separate mission.

Passo Fundo and the Texas Students.

We touched first at Passo Fundo. Brother Daniel and wife were absent on furlough in the States, but Brother and Sister Betts and Miss Harper did all the honors necessary, and more. It was pouring rain, but we went the whole town over inspecting the new school site, meeting contractors regarding material for the new buildings, calling on the Mayor, who assured us of his interest in our work and his purpose to co-operate with us in every way possible, and at night attending the fiesta at the church, at which the visitors were welcomed and feasted and in turn themselves spoke. Brother Betts had been down here not quite two years, but interpreted for us and did it like a veteran.

I was thinking all this day of the Methodist students in Texas, and their enthusiastic support of Brother Daniel and Miss Harper, and the work in this far-away field. If there is a better site in this whole state for the school we are building, I did not see it, and I thought if our Texas friends could visit this splendid little city and see what has been done already in the church and school, and its promise for the future, they would feel that all their interest and labor in its behalf was justified, and they would, by their continued support, make sure of yet larger things for the future.

At Santa Maria we spent the night on our way out and another night and day on our return. The commodious parsonage was well on the way to completion, in size and appointment little less than a hostel, with the thought of entertainment for our missionaries and workers that must pass this way when going to almost any town in the state. The Bishop laid the corner-stone of a new Centenary church, we assisting, and considerable time was given to inspecting lots and search for a possible site for the new girls' school. We have not closed the matter of the site, but two are available, on either of which the school would have a point of vantage worthy the purpose the women have in mind in the building of the school. It is to be the center of their educational work in South Brazil. Here are to be trained the teachers and other women workers for our own church, and if their money gets to the field in time to profit by the present rate of exchange it will go barely two and a half times as far as when the survey was made, enabling them to build a school at this railroad center that will worthily serve our great plan for this state.

Porto Alegre and Its Promise.

We came to Porto Alegre, the capital of the State, where Brother and Sister Claude Smith are stationed. It was a Sabbath, cold and rainy, but the sun came out in time for Sunday school, and we attended the school of our Central Church. In the afternoon we walked to the Protestant cemetery to stand for a few moments by the grave of Brother E. E. Joiner, who so nobly and heroically gave his life for the work of the Gospel in this land, and then climbed up the hill to the site of our new boys' school on a bluff overlooking the city. Here is to be built one of our three colleges that are to be the center of our cultural work in all our training processes for the South. I had heard much of this splendid site. Bishop Moore, the founder of this institution and largely the author of our present scheme of education for the Brazil Mission, had done his best by picture and description to make us at the office understand how splendid a thing we had in this site. But when we stood upon this elevation and looked down upon a city of 100,000 people, beautifully laid out, splendidly built, across the junction of the four rivers with the lake below, involuntarily we exclaimed, "The half was not told us," and we all agreed, including Dr. W. J. Young, of Emory University, that in the States we had not the site of an institution anywhere that, for beauty and impressiveness in situation, is the equal of that upon which we are to build Porto Alegre College. We visited the new domicile of the American school, looked over its property, taking tea with the ladies in charge there, discussing with them their plans for the developing of this school, and on Sunday night I spoke to a congregation in Central Church, fine in size not only, but in appearance, and in all the elements that make up an inspiring congregation in North America. I preached again on the Pentecost.

Santa Anna, Uruguayana, Alegrete, and Else.

At Santa Anna, a town of 20,000 population, we were entertained by the Brazilian pastor in the new parsonage already built of Centenary money, laid the corner-stone for the new church, and that night preached to a congregation filling the church to the doors and packing the aisles.

From Santa Anna we came on Saturday night to Uruguayana. This city of twenty-five thousand people is situated on the Uruguay River, and from the porch of the college building the plains of the Argentine across the river were clearly in view. The work here, as elsewhere, far exceeded our expectation.

As Secretary, I thought I was keeping up with what is going on fairly well, but I am beginning to think I am not. Perhaps it is not surprising when one remembers that there are eleven fields in the full flush of Centenary enlargement and prosperity. If the Secretary should not fairly visualize the work in every far-away corner, it would not be strange. Besides, I am beginning half to suspect that the missionary is so busy doing things he does not take time to tell about it, or if he tells at all, it is not to the Secretary. Tho good things the missionaries write to Miss Porter, reserving for the Secretary their problems. Anyway, I was not at all prepared for what I found in Uruguayana. In 1906 Brother Joiner came to this city and began work, and for a whole year no one came. He says that again and again he was on the point to resign and give it up, but he stayed by his post and preached the Gospel in his hired house to his wife and little children, wishing that some one would notice him even if only to oppose and maybe do him violence. But at the end of a year the tide turned, and at the Sunday school hour, this Sunday school could hardly be excelled in the States. The work of the Sunday school was greatly stimulated and developed under the pastoral care of Brother G. D. Parker, now our pastor at Santa Maria, who was taking this itinerary with us. The Brazilian pastor, Brother Jayme, has cared for the work so skilfully as to carry it still further forward. The boys' school here has been renovated, and, under Brother Lehman and wife, is rapidly returning to its old prosperity.

In the afternoon we visited four Sunday schools conducted by the students of the school and members of the Central congregation. One of these little schools was in a building erected with Centenary money, another in a stable, and the other two in private homes. In one of these homes 12 people were present, and at the night service the pastor reported that there had been 692 people present at the Sunday school that day.

At Alegrete we found a church building enlarged and improved with Centenary money, with its day school entirely self-supporting and 175 pupils, with six Sunday schools in and around the city. The church gave us, in the afternoon, a reception with all the festive features so characteristic of this hospitable people and expressive of their appreciation of the work being done by our church, which they declared had restored to them the Gospel rightfully theirs in the New Testament, but declared that the Roman Church had taken from them. The action was made the more unique and interesting by the unveiling of a picture of Bishop Moore, whom they hailed as a friend and benefactor.

We Are Winning in the South.

That night to a large congregation I spoke on the Centenary. Bishop Moore insisted that he had spoken often and would speak again when I was gone, and Dr. Young was storing energy and information for our English-speaking audiences. I have only touched the high points as I have gone rapidly over this itinerary in South Brazil. In my notes are points of interest, stories of devotion and daring, and successful achievement equally as wonderful as these set down here. It is a great state, one of the two or three greatest in the republic. Somebody has called it the Texas of Brazil and to others than Texans that would be high compliment. With its history, and the sweep of its wonderful plains covered with fat cattle, and the spirit of its marvelous progress, it is in every way worthy of this designation.

And our church is winning—wonderfully winning. Our little force of missionaries, with Brazilian leaders recruited through the years, against the greatest difficulties and discouragements, have held their ground, and, in positions consolidated beyond the knowledge of the church at home, were anxiously awaiting reinforcements when the Centenary came bringing to their rescue such reinforcements as they had dared scarcely to dream. With the Centenary impulse and Centenary funds comes a bishop who not only has not spared himself in every detail of self-sacrificing attention to the work, but has had the vision and courage of a great constructive leadership. We are now not only placed, but entrenched in nearly every important center of the state and are rapidly occupying towns of five thousand and above; and more than this, we are, true to our old form, pushing our way out into the open country. As we stood on the heights of Porto Alegre looking over across the river to the plains and the hills miles in the distance, the Italian presiding elder waved his hand proudly and said, "All this is my territory!"

Our brethren have seen the possibilities of the Sunday school in a marvelous way, and, with the spirit of the best in our organization of the work at home, are taking on almost innumerable outstations to which later the church will come. We are furnishing a parochial school, self-supporting, in connection with every church, and in the midst, a college thoroughly religious and evangelical at Porto Alegre for the training of our Brazilian pastors and leaders, and at Santa Maria a Normal school for the training of women workers. We are not content with holding our own. Catholicism knows we are not, and their bishops warn the people against us by name. And well they may. Rome is aggressive and militant, but she is losing. Last week, in a single section of this state, three priests laid aside the cassock, declaring they would have no more of Rome; and a fourth, leaving the Romanist church a year ago, has come into our church and has applied for admission at our next Annual Conference. We have connected with our work in Brazil not fewer than seven ex-priests. Bishop Moore has just received a letter from a Lutheran pastor offering a congregation of 200 members if we would take them over and furnish a pastor for that part of the country. We have passed the stage of consolidation in this state and with confidence, in the spirit of our Methodist fathers in the early days of our country, and with the spirit of Christ upon us, we have begun a great campaign of conquest.

THY TOUCH, O GOD.

By T. V. Voorhees.

God, touch my eyes, that I may see
The good, tho pure, the clean;
That for my vision there may be
No sight that might be mean.

God, touch my tongue, that it may speak,
My lips, that they may frame
No word to make my brother weak,
No thought to mar thy name.

God, touch my heart, that it may beat
With holy purpose pure;
That I may with the sin-sick meet
And point to Christ, the cure.

God, touch my life, that I may give Myself in service free:
That men may see, where'er I live,
Thy love mirrored in me.

THE OWLS IN THE ATTIC.

A California gentleman from the city purchased a big country home that had been vacant several years. After spending a large sum for improvements, he moved in to find that the rats made his nights hideous and the gophers destroyed his lawn, garden and trees as soon as they were planted. To add to his discomfort, a half-dozen barn owls chose his house for a meeting-place. They flapped, stamped, fought and hissed on the roof, and in the attic, while the rats, in increasing numbers, scurried, squealed, and fought in his bedroom and kitchen. One night the exasperated man went out with his gun to fire at an object in the moonlight, and with a dull thud a heavy body fell on the veranda roof.

When morning came, he climbed into the attic to find an open window leading out to the veranda, where he found the big owl he had killed, but, on the floor under the rafters of the attic, another blinked her big eyes to see what danger was near. She left her nest with two white eggs to crowd into a corner. The eggs and the bird did not interest the man so much as the materials of the nest, built of bits of fur and bones of his enemy, the rat. The attic floor was strewn with bits of dried rat skins and bones. He now understood and stroked the hissing, frightened bird affectionately. That night a half-dozen owls celebrated for hours, flapping, hissing and stamping, but the disturbed sleeper only smiled. He was glad his friends were having a good time.

After another week the noise of the house ceased, not a rat or a mouse was to be seen, the only sound heard in the night was a gently swish of wings mingled with low hisses; the noisy shrieks had gone with the squealing and scurrying rats.

Fearing that his friends had gone, he returned to the attic one evening to find the mother owl guarding two funny little balls of whitish gray cottony down, with hooked beaks and tiny talons resembling those of the big fellow he had killed, and reminding him of two tiny white monkeys huddled in a corner for warmth.

He snapped out his light to watch. Noiselessly an owl friend entered with supper for the little family. The meal was a big gopher.

The man watched an hour while owl friends brought into the attic six gophers, a rat, and seven field mice.

Now the two little owls have grown up, and the owner smiles and wishes they were a dozen. His fields, lawn and garden are free of gophers, rats, and mice.—Our Dumb Animals.

EASY TO LIVE WITH.

Who and where the woman was who once offered as her New Year's prayer, "Lord, make me easy to live with," it little matters. Suffice it for our present purpose that the memory of what she said lasts from year to year and decade to decade like the odor of sweet ointment. We can easily picture her to our imagination. She was doubtless of the worrying type, high strung, and maybe a bit cantankerous. Perhaps she had worn out a husband or two, irritated her children, and alienated some of her neighbors. Up to the time of her offering this petition, those who knew her best would probably have agreed that she was hard to live with.

The great attesting fact in her personal history to us, who know her only as a type, is that she had undergone a moral awakening. At last her eyes had been opened to see herself as others saw her and as God saw her, and when this sense of her angularities came upon her, it must have overwhelmed her. The depths of her nature were stirred, she saw what the exact trouble was, and bravely she assumed the main responsibility. Very likely, up to that time she had held others accountable for the criss-cross situation; their failures and crabbedness made it hard for her to keep the house looking right and to do her day's work well. But this transformation altered that. She began thinking about the times when she had irritated others, perhaps even pestered them, and the reason dawned upon her why so few persons sought her society.

Then the secret of a different status bore gloriously upon her vision. She must needs relax a little and become flexible, sympathetic, considerate. Then life would take on new zest and value, and even if others were just the same as they were before, the fact that she had turned over a new leaf would count powerfully in the home and neighborhood. What if the husband and son, brother or nephew or neighbor, should hereafter speak of her not as the woman hard to live with, but as one easy to get on with—would not that altered estimate of her disposition pay for all the struggle requisite for producing it?

Ah, but the accomplishing of the change! Can a fountain that has been sending up brackish waters all at once pour forth sweet streams? Can a thorn-bearing bush blossom all at once with roses? When this poor woman began to realize how hard it would be to become different from what she had been, no wonder she dropped upon her knees and sought the Source of all power.

A good prayer for any one at any time. Most domestic troubles are due to the presence in the home of some one or more persons hard to get along with. Most church rows arise from the uncompromising temper of somebody more or less influential, perhaps prominent enough to sit on the broad aisle. Discord in the community and in the Nation is due to unmanageable, unyielding elements in the population. But one and another could only be brought to see that his business year in and year out is to become easy to live with, what a pleasant world this would be!

CROW MADE SHIP ITS HOME.

Many years ago, as the whaling ship Diana was returning from a voyage in the Arctic Ocean, her captain and crew were surprised one day to see a crow, in a state of great exhaustion, flutter into the rigging. The nearest land was more than two hundred miles away, so such a visitor was quite unexpected.

With great care and gentleness the bird was caught; and after receiving as much attention as any storm-tossed traveler would require, it was offered its liberty again. But, though thoroughly restored to health and vigor, it refused to leave the ship. With loud caws of contentment it would hop about the deck as though that were its real home; and when darkness settled down upon the ocean, it retired into the rigging, there to roost as comfortably as any of its stay-at-home relations among their leafy elms.

When the Shetland Islands were reached, the captain of the Diana sent his feathered passenger on shore, naturally thinking that this would be in accordance with its wishes; but the next day, when the ship was forty miles farther on the route to Hull and was quite out of sight, the sailors saw a dark speck in the sky which grew and grew, till, to their astonishment and delight, the passenger they had left behind fluttered joyously on board, cawing its satisfaction at reaching home once more, if not reproving them for giving it the slip.

Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Proceedings.

TENTH DAY, SATURDAY, MAY 13.

Bishop Du Bose called the Conference to order, and, after a hymn and prayer led by Bishop McMurry, delivered an address.

Bishop Ainsworth took the chair and, stating that the Conference had not made rapid progress in the transaction of business, appealed for quiet and the careful attention of every one to the business of the session.

The following resolution, signed by W. Erskine Williams and forty-two other delegates, was read and adopted:

Resolved, That we approve of the organization of the Methodist Men's Club in the local church and recommend that the Board of Lay Activities make such provision as may seem best for its development, organization, and for the carrying on of the work.

The report of the Committee on Reorganization of Boards was read by J. H. Eakes. Upon motion of Mrs. J. H. McCoy, the report was ordered to be considered seriatim. The report was fully discussed by Mrs. McCoy, A. J. Lamar, J. H. Eakes, S. Southgate, J. B. Mitchell and others, and, with some amendments, was adopted. The report as adopted is as follows:

Report of the Special Committee on the Reorganization of the General Boards.

Your committee, appointed to consider memorials concerning the reorganization of our General Boards, begs leave to submit the following report:

The number of memorials touching various phases of this question which have come into our hands indicates a widespread dissatisfaction with the work of our Boards as now constituted, and a demand for some form of consolidation which shall prevent overlapping and promote economy in administration. But since the task of consolidation is too complicated to be undertaken in the short period of time allotted to a General Conference Committee, we therefore respectfully recommend:

First, that the General Conference authorize, and does hereby create, a Commission composed of six clerical and nine lay members, three of whom shall be women, for the ensuing quadrennium for the purpose of working out the details and legal requirements of a plan (which shall hereinafter be suggested) for the consolidation of the General Boards of our church, and that the Treasurer of the General Conference be instructed to pay the expense of this Commission.

Second, the said Commission shall have power to employ legal counsel, call in the secretaries of the various Boards for information and advice, and to invite aid from any available source. All vacancies caused by death, resignations, or otherwise shall be filled by the Commission ad interim. It shall be the duty of this Commission to meet on the call of the first-named person thereof, at such a time and place as he shall designate, to organize by electing a permanent chairman, a secretary, and such other officers as it may deem necessary, to determine its rules of procedure, meet from time to time upon the call of the chairman until its work is complete, and to report its findings to the next General Conference. Said report to be published at least three months before the next session of the General Conference.

Third, we recommend that the said Commission be requested to follow as nearly as feasible the following general plan:

1. The formation of a General Board of Foreign Missions, under which shall be related all the work of the church outside of the United States of America (excepting the work of the Woman's Board).

2. The formation of a General Board of Home Missions and Church Extension, under which shall be related all the Home Mission work of the Board of Missions as it is now constituted (except the work of the Woman's Board), all the work of the General Board of Church Extension as it is now constituted, all the work of the General Board of Temperance and Social Service as it is now constituted, laymen's activities, hospitals, etc.

3. The formation of a General Board of Education, under which shall be related all the work of a General Board of Education as it is now constituted, all the work of the General Epworth League Board as it is now constituted, all the work of the General Sunday School Board as it is now constituted.

4. The formation of a General Board of Finance or Superannuate Endowment.

5. The formation of a Woman's General Board of Missions, under which shall be related all the work of the Woman's Missionary Society, both Home and Foreign.

Fourth, the various delegations to submit two names each, from which nominations are to be made for membership on this Commission.

Signed: J. H. Eakes, Chairman; Peter Stokes, Secretary.

A part of the Saturday session was given to the hearing of the fraternal address of Rev. Salem G. Bland, B.A., D.D., fraternal messenger from the Methodist Church in Canada. Dr. Bland delivered a very able address, upon the conclusion of which the Bishop made fitting remarks. In the course of his remarks the Bishop referred to the close relation between the Canadian and the American people as follows: "It is a matter of congratulation that between Canada and the United States, along more than three thousand miles of boundary, no frowning cannon has been set for more than one hundred years. We are assured that so long as the spirit that is manifested by you, my brother, shall be manifested by the people of Canada, and the spirit the Methodists of America feel in their hearts shall prevail, there will never be any clash of the people of these United States of America and our neighbors on the north."

The following resolution, instructing the several boards of the church that handle funds to give schools of our own church the preference in the matter of building and aiding churches that serve institutions of learning was adopted:

Whereas quite a number of the communities where our schools are located are without adequate church facilities to meet the demand of our church schools; and whereas numerous Methodist students are being turned away from our own schools for the lack of dormitory and other facilities,

Therefore, we memorialize the General Conference in session at Hot Springs, Ark., to instruct the various agencies of our church that handle funds that can be directed to the construction of college equipment or the erection of church facilities, to give our own schools the preference in such matters; and to further instruct these agencies that may have money on hand for educational purposes, or have subscriptions for such purposes, to use same as above indicated.

At the close of the session Rev. Marion S. Monk read the assignments for preaching services for Sunday, and Dr. S. G. Bland pronounced the benediction.

ELEVENTH DAY, MONDAY, MAY 15.

Bishop Ainsworth opened the Conference. Rev. D. E. Hawk of the West Texas Conference led the prayer. The Bishop read the third chapter of Ephesians and delivered an address, after which he surrendered the chair to Bishop Cannon.

On motion of J. A. Burrow, a telegram was ordered sent in response to a telegram received from the Woman's Society of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Bishop presented Dr. Charles S. MacFarland, General Secretary of the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. Dr. MacFarland delivered an address in which he gave some report of his work and expressed his belief "that the ideal of bringing together for their common tasks and duty all the communions is not becoming a dead issue." He declared that the evangelical churches have a greater fundamental moral and spiritual unity than has the Roman Church, which is so often held up as a striking example of unity. He stressed the need of such an organization as the Federal Council in order that this fundamental moral and spiritual unity may be turned to good account in united evangelistic efforts, in taking up the problems of capital and labor, in the department of mercy and help at the national capital and in the work that may be done through international relationships. He paid high tribute to Bishop Lambuth and spoke of his great interest in the Federal Council.

The report of J. H. Reynolds, Director General of the Education Campaign, was heard. He stated that every effort had been made to develop in the people a Christian education consciousness, that every avenue of approach had been used the platform, the printed page, the stereopticon and motion pictures. "We undertook," he said, "to establish and to conduct a great popular school in Christian education. In this school the two and a half million members of our church were pupils." The results were gratifying, despite the financial stringency during which the campaign came. The financial returns were good while the value of those who gave themselves to life service and the development of a conscience along the lines of Christian education could not be estimated.

The remainder of the report of the Board on Lay Activities was read and adopted with amendments giving the presiding elder and the pastor membership on the district and charge boards respectively.

There was quite a little discussion over an item in the report of the Committee on Publishing Interests calling for the publication of the Discipline in Spanish, and an amendment offered by J. W. Clay asking that the Discipline be also brought out in Portugese. Result was that the item was amended was adopted and the Discipline will be brought out in both Spanish and Portugese.

Henry T. Carley, fraternal messenger to the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, in their General Conference session in St. Louis, was presented to the Conference, and he made report of his message to the colored brethren and the cordial welcome which he had received.

The secretary read the credentials of W. A. Bell, fraternal messenger to the Conference from the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. The Bishop then presented W. A. Bell to the Conference and he delivered his fraternal address.

The Bishop made a fitting response to sentiments expressed by the fraternal messenger. At the close of the bishop's remarks a hymn was sung, Dr. J. W. Butcher, the fraternal delegate from England, pronounced the benediction, and the Conference adjourned.

TWELFTH DAY, TUESDAY, MAY 16.

Tuesday, being the day set for the election of five new bishops, was naturally an interesting day. The Conference was called to order by Bishop Cannon. Dr. R. H. Bennett, of the Virginia Conference, led the prayer. Bishop Cannon read a portion of the sixtieth chapter of Isaiah and delivered an address.

A telegram from Miss Belle H. Bennett, gratefully acknowledging the receipt of the telegram of sympathy in her illness which had been sent her, and praying God's blessings upon the Conference, was read.

The report of the Committee on Standards of Doctrine was read by A. J. Lamar and adopted. The report recommended that the address which was a part of the report should be sent out to the church. We hope to publish this address in the Advocate in the near future as space will permit.

There was a spirited debate upon the minority report No. 11 of the Committee on Revisals, recommending that the stewards of a charge be elected by the church conference. The minority report failed of adoption, and stewards will, as heretofore, be elected by the quarterly conference.

The first ballot for bishops was taken and the result announced just before the close of the session showed that there had been no election. A second ballot was taken and the tellers retired to count the ballot. Soon afterward the Conference adjourned to meet in afternoon session.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session was called to order by Bishop Candler, who announced a hymn, and afterward called upon Dr. A. B. Jones to lead the Conference in prayer. The Bishop said he would forbear to make any remarks, and business was taken up.

Balloting upon the new bishops was the chief business of the afternoon session. Some account of the balloting in detail, and the names of the bishops elected, may be found in the letter of the Editor, written from Hot Springs.

During the interim in the balloting there was quite a lively debate on report No. 3 of the Committee on Education. The amended section of the report, which was under discussion, would have taken away the right of an Annual Conference to admit a man who lacked the educational requirements, when the case seemed exceptional. Dr George Sexton, of the Louisiana Conference, made a strong speech against that section of the report. Others were heard for and against the proposition. When the vote was taken the result was that the section was ordered stricken out.

After it had been announced that the fifth ballot had resulted in no election, the Conference adjourned at 5:50, the benediction being pronounced by Bishop-elect W. B. Beauchamp.

THIRTEENTH DAY, WEDNESDAY, MAY 17.

Bishop Atkins called the Conference to order and announced a hymn. Rev. Alonzo Monk led the prayer, after which Bishop Atkins read the first fourteen verses of the seventh chapter of Matthew and delivered an address.

Bishop Denny took the chair and the Conference proceeded to business.

On behalf of the Book Committee, R. E. L. Morgan announced that at a meeting of the committee held in Hot Springs, May 16, A. J. Lamar, of the Alabama Conference, and John W. Barton, of Dallas, Texas, had been elected as Publishing Agents, and D. M. Smith, who has so long and faithfully served as one of the agents, as Publishing Agent Emeritus.

Report No. 1 of the Committee on Hospitals was read. It provided for a Hospital Board of nine members to be nominated by the College of Bishops and elected by the General Conference, who should study the hospital situation and devise plans for the promotion of hospital enterprises throughout the church, and should meet at once and select headquarters, secure a charter and make any additional plans necessary for the permanent and continuous work of the Board. The report called for an appropriation by the Conference of $12,500 annually for four years to carry on the work of the Board. After a full discussion, the report was adopted.

J. P. Hilburn moved that the Bishop and the Secretary be requested to wire a message of greeting to the Southern Baptist Convention, meeting in the city of Jacksonville, Fla. The motion prevailed.

Judge M. E. Lawson read a telegram to the effect that the United States had been asked by Great Britain, France and Italy to join in the investigation of outrages in Armenia, and upon his motion resolutions were adopted requesting the United States government to accept the invitation.

Bishop Kilgo, who, on account of ill health, had not been able to attend every session of the Conference, was present during this session, and addressed the Conference.

The remainder of this session and the afternoon session were largely taken up with the balloting upon the connectional officers.

FOURTEENTH DAY, THURSDAY, MAY 18.

Bishop Murrah called the Conference to order, a hymn was sung, and the Bishop read as a Scripture lesson the parable of the ten virgins, as recorded in Matthew xxv, and delivered an address. Rev. Robert Selby, of the Mississippi Conference, made the prayer. Bishop Monzon took the chair as the presiding officer for the day.

The report of the Committee on Missions was discussed at length, item by item, and, with certain amendments, adopted. The report called for the election of two foreign secretaries and two home secretaries for the Board of Missions, and for two foreign secretaries and two home secretaries for the Woman's Department of the Board.

The morning session and the afternoon session were largely taken up by the election of the several connectional officers. An evening session was ordered and the Conference adjourned at 5 o'clock.

Evening Session.

Bishop Moore called the Conference to order, and, after devotional service, Bishop McMurry took the chair.

Bishop Denny read the nominations by the College of Bishops for members for the new General Hospital Board, as follows: Bishop Candler, W. J. Johnson, L. M. Stratton, A. F. Smith, R. E. Cooper, J. T. Leggett, J. R. Ivey, T. A. Smoot, M. M. McCall. The nominees were elected.

The majority and minority reports of the Committee on Church Relations and Bible Cause touching the question of unification with the Methodist Episcopal Church were discussed. Many were heard on the minority report, including Dr. R. A. Meek. The question was put upon the minority report, and it failed to carry. The question was then put upon the majority report, and it was adopted. The three last items of the report are as follows:

3. We agree with the Episcopal Address and adopt as our own the language of the same in saying: "The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has always been desirous of the most fraternal relations with all evangelical churches, and especially with the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which we are bound by the close ties of doctrine and history. We express the fervent wish that in the years to come these ties may be strengthened and these relations may become more and more fraternal."

4. We respectfully recommend that this General Conference appoint a Commission to be nominated by the Committee on Church Relations and to be composed of five bishops, ten traveling elders, and ten laymen, for the continuance of negotiations looking toward unification in harmony with the basic principles already agreed upon by the Joint Commission as feasible and desirable, or upon such other basis as our Commission may determine.

5. Instead of the Joint Convention proposed, we recommend a special session of the General Conference of our church. When a plan for unification is endorsed by a two-thirds vote of each Commission and approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, then our College of Bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session of our General Conference.

FIFTEENTH DAY, FRIDAY, MAY 19.

Bishop McMurry called the Conference to order and conducted the devotional service. Before prayer was made the Bishop informed the Conference that Dr. P. H. Linn was seriously ill and he asked that Dr. Linn be especially remembered in prayer. Dr. Seleeman led the prayer. The Bishop then read the first fourteen verses of John, xiv, and delivered a short address. He then surrendered the chair to Bishop Darlington.

The following resolution was read by J. S. Ryang, of Korea, and adopted.

Resolved: 1. That the goal for our Church throughout the Connection during the coming quadrennium shall be the winning of at least one million souls for Christ, in addition to all other objectives.

2. That all of our Church papers are requested to publish this goal for the information of the membership.

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Superannuate Endowment was read and fully discussed by Dr. Todd and others. It called for the raising of $10,000,000 during the coming quadrennium, not by the intensive methods used in the Centenary and Education Campaigns, but chiefly through the regularly established organizations of the church. Each charge will be asked to pay an amount equal to the amount it pays to ministerial support. This amount is to be paid the first year or thereafter by installments if necessary. After full discussion the report was adopted.

Afternoon Session.

The following resolution was among the items of importance taken up at the afternoon session:

Resolved, That the salaries of the connectional officers who retire at the close of this session of the General Conference shall be paid by the Boards concerned until the next session of their Annual Conferences, or until they are appointed to some other work, and the Boards concerned are hereby empowered and directed to pay the same.

Signed: A. J. Lamar, G. B. Winton.

It was adopted.

Monday, May 22, at 11 a. m., was fixed as the time for the final adjournment of the General Conference.

Evening Session.

Report No. 1 of the Committee on Border Work was read by the Secretary. This report emphasized the great need of caring well for the Home Field and especially for those sections lying on the border of our territory. Item 2 of the report read as follows:

2. That the General Conference direct that at least sixty per cent of whatever surplus may arise after the $25,000,000 of Centenary Missionary money called for by Report No. 3 of the Committee on Missions of the General Conference of 1918 has been raised and applied as in said report directed be set aside and used for Home Mission work.

The item, after some discussion, was adopted.

Item 5 provided, That the Department of Home Missions be authorized to employ, at a stated salary, evangelists for exclusive service in the territory now embraced by the Northwest, the Pacific, the Denver, the West Oklahoma, the Illinois, the Arizona, the New Mexico, the Western Virginia, and the Northwest Texas Conferences, the number of such evangelists not to exceed six during the next four years.

J. P. Hilburn moved to amend the item by inserting the words "Florida Conference" in the seventh line, and the amendment was accepted by the committee. R. H. Wynn offered an amendment that the Louisiana Conference be also included. The amendment was adopted. Item 5 was then adopted.

Other items of the report were taken up and then the report as a whole was adopted.

M. M. McCall presented Report No. 1 of the Commission on Finance, together with a minority report both of which were read by the Secretary. After lengthy discussion the majority report was

MRS. MARTHA A. CALHOUN, wife of Evander M. Calhoun, was born in Dale county, Alabama, February 22, 1847, and on the 17th day of November, 1921, surrounded by her family and friends, near Mount Olive, Miss., she quietly left her earthly home, after a sojourn of 74 years, 8 months and 25 days, and went home to live with God forever. Mrs. Calhoun's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Thompson, moved from Dale county to Clarke county, Alabama, when she was a girl about ten years of age. About ten years later, on December 24, 1867, she was married to E. M. Calhoun. Soon after their marriage they moved to Covington county, Miss., where they reared a large and useful family, consisting of three boys and six girls, all of whom survive her, except one son who died at the age of 20. With motherly tenderness, Mrs. Calhoun devoted her life to her family, rearing her children in the statutes of the Lord, and so impressed them that as they developed in mind and body they accepted mother's God as their God, and are all servants in His Kingdom to-day. What a sunset was her life, radient with joys celestial, and marked by a perfect will to stay or to go into the presence of her Lord. For months it was known that she was being prepared in body for her heavenly home, but her going away was not the end of life, but was in reality a foreglow of a life to be spent with God that shall never end. She has gone into life eternal with songs of deliverance. The influence of this godly woman over her household, over husband and children, and over the whole community was most beautiful and impressive. The life of husband and wife, throughout the years, was one continuous love affair. Their home was truly the home of the Prophets, and all their substance was consecrated to God. Few homes have ever entertained more of the Lord's servants than this home. And O, how they all do miss her! But God has promised a reunion another day. Let us all look forward to it till His coming again.

AN OPEN LETTER

To the Christian Women of the United States of America,

In Behalf of the Orphans and the Captive Maidens of Armenia.

My heart's desire is to bring to you the affection and the good wishes of the 200,000 orphans whom you have been supporting, and the grief and tears of my 70,000 sisters yet in Turkish harems. If you unlock the doors or Armenia, you shall have all their signatures on this paper.

You American Christians have reason to rejoice for the glorious service rendered Armenia since 1895 through your missionaries, the Red Cross, and Near East Relief. Armenia belongs to you; you have been to us as it were "a pillar of cloud by day and by night a pillar of fire." The name of an American always inspires the very poor of Armenia. These 200,000 children now living by your sincere love pennies, nickels and dimes are the products of your practical Christianity. In spirit and in purpose they are Americanized;—they are the masterpieces of your high ideals; they have love, trust and perfect confidence in you. They worship you. They belong to you, body and soul.

"The harvest is past, the summer is ended," and we are not saved. Because our Allies, with whom we fought with the same ideals and purpose, for whose cause we lost half our nation, our sacred home life, and every earthly possession, have left us. Our Allies, in whom we trusted, have delivered us in the hands of our enemies. And now we are not a subject race with one oppressed, but we are being accused by the Turks as traitors and are being treated with revenge, hatred and terror by every Moslem in Turkish Armenia. They are saying, "Where are your Jesus and your beloved Allies whom you trusted?". They are driving out our missionaries now. But the greatest of all our tragedies is the flirting of the Turk with European diplomats. Constantinople with its unsurpassed hospitality, its costly gifts, its modern Cleopatras, have bewitched every foreign diplomat, whose "delightful" reports count more than rivers of blood and tears of Armenia. And young Armenia is losing faith in governments and in God.

Who is going to help save Armenia in the last moment? What would Jesus do? Who will answer the friendly call of President Harding and ex-President Wilson? They have left it to the people to decide our case in giving protection. Therefore, it is left to you, to let us die or help us live. Our salvation is in your hands. Which will you sign, the decree or Haman or the decree of Esther the Queen? For seven years we have knocked at your friendly doors. Seven years of hunger and you gave us meat; wounded and bruised, you are giving us noble service and tender care. "In the valley of the shadow of death," and you are praying earnestly for us. Will you not give us seven minutes—just seven minutes—of your precious time to write to your President, Secretary of the State, Senators and Congressmen to give us a chance in place of charity, safety in place of sympathy, protection in place of promise, and salvation from humiliation as "eternal beggars?"

Just 5000 of your Christian women can give us an educational mandate and protection. The cost will never exceed your charity of the last seven years. Now is the time for you, as Christian women, to express yourselves in practical demonstration of giving us moral and physical strength—a guarantee of good behavior of the Turk, and the only door to carry your message and the message of God to our enemies, the Turk.

This is the message of Armenia, the living and the dead:

"To you from falling hands we throw the Torch (the Torch of Faith); be yours to hold it high. If ye break faith with us who die," our little ones will become Mohammedans, and our trials may be upon all nations.

Please, please, we beg you, give us seven minutes to ask peace and protection from your government, and help Armenia to live for Ilis sake.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, of Greenville, wants to know if there is a larger class of men in the Conference than Big Brothers; 221 were present on the 14th; 520 in the entire school. These big classes need to put their bigness into our Federation at Grenada, May 31. Come on, all the big brothers of the Conference.

The class at Indianola makes a splendid picture and no doubt this class is doing work according to its size. Let us have a big representation of this class at the Federation.

You ought to see what the class at Sardis has done. This class has made a park with swings, wading pool, tennis court, drinking fountain, etc., for the entertainment of the children and young people of the town. This class will be represented at Grenada the last day of this month.

FREE TO ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER SUFFERERS

A Trial Treatment of "HIMALYA"

We don't care who you are or where you are—a man or woman, young or old, or whether you have had Asthma for fifteen years or fifteen months—all we want is your name and address, so that we can send you, free of charge, a trial treatment of "Himalya," our simple, convenient and reliable home remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever.

We want to show you, at our expense, and prove to you beyond any shadow of doubt, and to your entire satisfaction that Himalya will stop all difficult breathing, wheezing, choking spells, and all smothering sensations and painful paroxysms once and for good. We want to demonstrate to you conclusively, that, regardless of what climate you live in, your age or occupation, that this splendid remedy will do for you exactly what it has done for thousands of other sufferers in past years. We want you to know how different Himalya is from other treatments—inhalers, douches, opium preparations, fumes, smokes, etc., how it purifies the blood and renovates the whole system, eradicating the disease by removing the cause.

Don't Delay. Don't wait until another attack comes, but start the treatment at once. Send no money, simply mail the coupon below.

The last call before the meeting of the Wesley Bible Class Federation and the Training School to be held at Grenada. I pray that every pastor, superintendent and interested worker will bring these meetings before the people in an emphatic and effective way, that our people may realize the far-reaching influence these meetings will have upon the life of our church. Speak in public, work in private, never stop until you have secured one or more to attend these meetings. Blessings upon all who have a mind to work.

The question has been asked, why have a course for teachers of young people, when there are so few classes of young people in any of the schools? The answer is in the question. We must have teachers who understand young people; then we shall have an ever-increasing number of young people in our Sunday schools. Think on this matter. If you have no young people's classes, is it because there are no young people to be taught? God help us to wake up before it is too late.

Suppose every superintendent and preacher in the Conference should take a notion to ignore the law of the church and discard Sunday School Day altogether? One school has no more right to leave the observance of this day off than another. What one has a right to do, all have the same right to do. The entire work of the church suffers when one man fails to do what is expected of him. It is getting late in the year to look after this matter, but not too late.

If the Sunday School Board was indifferent to the needs of the people; if it wasted money in unreasonable overhead expenses, there might be some excuse for failing to give the amount it asks for preparing our teachers to do more effective work. The Board has gradually enlarged its program until the greater part of the Conference is reached with its paid and volunteer workers. No board in any church in the Conference is doing more work and of a higher type than is the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The Conference Standard Training School, meeting at Millsaps College June 8-14, is going to be the best ever. Dr. Brown has gathered a strong faculty and a strong corps of lecturers. Sunday school and church workers cannot afford to miss this chance.

The first Sunday in this month was spent at Hopewell. The work is small.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

but there are some loyal, fine workers. Brother James Sells is the popular pastor. He will report a fine year's work.

Thursday night, the 11th, was spent at Quitman as well as Sunday night. I enjoyed my visit there. Brother Ellis is doing a good work. Signs of progress are on every hand. The church and school are growing.

Friday morning I stopped off at Crandall and preached for Brother Rutledge. We had a good service. Three persons who were not church members manifested a desire to flee the wrath to come. The same morning we drove over to Theadville, and I spoke to a fine body of folks. That afternoon we were to be at State Line but were rained out.

Saturday night I spoke at State Line to most of the church workers. We had a good conference, and they are promising to go forward.

Sunday morning was spent at Theadville. These folks, with small effort, can grade 80 per cent and 1" standard. I am looking each day for a notice that they are ready to be graded. There were ten or more who came up Sunday morning to surrender completely and be wholly the Lord's.

The following schools have sent in Sunday School Day offerings to date: Shubuta, Brandon, Fernwood, Madison, Capitol Street, West End, Laurel; First Church, Brookhaven; Collins, Oak Grove on the Nebo charge, Mendenhall, Galloway Memorial, Pascagoula, Vancleave, Mount Pleasant, State Line on the Matherville charge, Philadelphia and Picayune. We trust that more will hold the day and send in the offering.

Cured Her Rheumatism

Knowing from terrible experience the suffering caused by rheumatism, Mrs. J. E. Hurst, who lives at 508 E Olive St B-355, Bloomington, Ill., is so thankful at having cured herself that out of pure gratitude she is anxious to tell all other sufferers just how to get rid of their torture by a simple way at home.

Mrs. Hurst has nothing to sell. Merely cut out this notice, mail it to her with your own name and address, and she will gladly send you this valuable information entirely free. Write her at once before you forget.

For the better class of teaching positions, write Dept. 2, H. D. Yates Teachers' Bureau, Nashville, Tenn.

"An Ounce of Preventon is Worth a Pound of Cure."

A disturbance of the even balance of health, which often occurs in these trying days of constipation, causes serious trouble. Nobody can be too careful to keep this balance up. When people begin to lose appetite, get tired easily, feel an improper heaviness on sickness, weakness, or debility. The system needs a tonic, craves it, and should not be denied it; and the best tonic that many people recommend is Hood's Sarsaparilla. What this medicine has done in keeping healthy people healthy, in keeping up the even balance of health, gives it the same distinction as a preventive that it enjoys as a cure. Its early use has illustrated the wisdom of the old saying that "a stitch in time saves nine."

Preventive treatment now and then calls for the use of a good cathartic or laxative, like Hood's Pills, which are purely vegetable and act quickly and thoroughly.

666 quickly relieves Colds and LaGrippe, Constipation, Biliousness, Loss of Appetite and Headaches.

Pro Cor Hull is doing great work. Pray for him. The Newton District is responding and I am hoping for great things.

Two new Sunday schools this week.

Pray for the work and the workers

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE STANDARD TRAINING SCHOOL.

The Second Session of the Mississippi Conference Standard Training School, is to be held at Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., June 8-11, 1922.

The total cost, exclusive of traveling expenses, will be $10. This covers board, room rent, and the cost of the text book. Sheets, towels, pillowcases, and bedcovers must be brought along.

The six courses of instruction which we offer are as follows: "Methods of Teaching," "Pupil Study," "The Sunday School," "Beginner Organization," "Primary Lesson Material," and "Junior Organization."

You will note that the last three courses were not given in the Training School last year. Our plan is to keep rotating the specialization courses so that teachers in the various specialization departments may secure all the various specialization credits needed for the "gold seal" diploma.

This seal, as you know, can be secured only by work done at standard schools, such as the one to be held at Jackson.

If you can't it will be possible for you to come, please write the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, 211½ West Capitol Street, Jackson, Miss.

C. A. BOWEN,
Dean of Standard Training School.

TO THE PASTORS AND SUPERINTENDENTS, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Sunday School Board of your Conference is very much in need of funds at this time. Our Training schools are on, and we must have money to pay them. Please get the Sunday School Day money in to me at once. Thank you.

LEAGUE ASSEMBLY AT BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

Dear Leaguers: We expect to do some good work at our Assembly at Brookhaven this year. I feel sure there will be many young people who will go back to their home Leagues better qualified to work in the churches, largely as a result of their application to the courses offered.

However, it will not all be work. The greater part of each afternoon will be devoted to recreation under the direction of Mr. E. O. Harbin of Nashville, Tenn. There will be the swimming pool, gymnasium, tennis courts, etc., at our disposal. Hikes, games and many other forms of recreation will be introduced by Mr. Harbin. Bring your bathing suit, tennis racket, etc., so that you can enter into all of these good times. There is no reason why this should not be a most pleasant vacation.

And don't forget the stunt night! Each district and probably each chapter will be asked to "put on" some kind of stunt on stunt night. Be thinking of this now, and perhaps you will have something good all ready when you arrive at the assembly grounds. If you have any kind of costume which will help in making your stunt more effective, bring that along, too.

Have you written that district song yet? Remember, the district will have a contest to select the best district song, and any Leaguer may compete for his district. Perhaps you can help your district to win.

THE DEVIL'S BEST TOOL.

It was once announced that the devil was going out of business and would offer all tools for sale to whoever would pay his price. On the night of the sale they were all attractively displayed, and a bad looking lot they were. Malice, Hatred, Envy, Jealousy, Sensuality, and Deceit, and all the other implements of evil were spread out, each marked with its price. Apart from the rest lay a harmless looking wedge-shaped tool, much worn and priced higher than any of them.

Some one asked the devil what it was?

"That's discouragement," was the reply.

"Why do you have it priced so high?" "Because," replied the devil, "it is more useful to me than any of the others.

"I can pry open and get inside a man's consciousness with that when I could not get near him with any of the others and when once inside I can use him in whatever way suits me best. It is so much worn because I use it with nearly everybody as very few people yet know it belongs to me."

It hardly need be added that the devil's price for discouragement was so high that it was never sold. He is still using it.

SELF-SUPPORT.

One of the most interesting and encouraging features of the missionary work in the foreign fields during the past quadrennium is the growth in self support. Except for new equipment and the salaries of the missionaries, the school at Piracicaba meets its own expenses. This school has three missionaries and twenty native teachers. Other schools in Latin-America do almost as well. The McTyeire School, Shanghai, China, also receives sufficient fees to meet all current expenses except the salary of the missionaries. If this can be maintained it will mean an enlargement of our work in the future.—Selected.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Natchitoches Missionary News.

At the last social meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church, April 27, Mesdames T. L. Weaver, C. E. Hooper, Mary B. Hargrove, Breedlove and Somerville were hostesses at the church. The church parlor was beautifully decorated with roses and red lilies, and delicious cake, Eskimo pies and lemonade were served.

The program was on China, and Mrs. Henry Irwin who, with her husband, was missionary to China for eight years, gave an inspirational talk on China, telling of the things she knew by experience. She had on exhibition souvenirs, consisting of wonderful hand embroidered tapestries and mottoes, vases, incense burners of hammered brass over a hundred years old, leopard skins and beautiful kimonos made by the Chinese.

Her message in part follows:

"The Union College for Women in China grew out of a great need for higher education in their own country for Chinese women. Many have come to America to study in former years, but the new life had its disadvantages. Ginling Union College, situated in the Orient, but controlled by some of the best minds of America, gives higher education to the Chinese woman while yet fostering her love for and obligation to her own land. As a result, many more graduates have gone into service for their own people.

"Growing out of a love for the Bible and emanating from a call to definite Christian service, the Union Bible School in China is one of the most glorious monuments to the Cross as lived out in the daily life of the Christian missionary. Children of Chinese martyrs are among the students. One girl, bereft of parents and sisters in infancy in a riot against the Chinese pastor of a little Christian chapel, will soon go back to that same village to teach the Bible to the children of her parents' assassins. Such is Christianity in China, where the word of God is a real lamp. The written character in China is a sacred thing. No piece of paper is ever burned if it has the characters upon it. Some of this same reverence enters into the Chinese Christian's love of his Bible. The Bible has saved him from fears of death and punishment. For this peace the Christian in China is willing to pay a great price. If need be, he will suffer death, as did many in the Boxer uprising.

China looks to America in a peculiarly appealing manner. The Chinese church looks to the American church for help and inspiration. To each of us comes the call to live the Christian life in such vigor and truth as will send a ray of hope back to old China. Let us follow the gleam in our own lives. Let us live out the Word of God as Christians should."

MRS. EMMA CUNNINGHAM.

ANNUAL DISTRICT CONFERENCE OF THE WOMAN'S MISSIONYAR SOCIETY, NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT.

At two o'clock in the afternoon of May 9, 1922, the Annual District Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society, New Orleans District, convened at the Methodist Church of Slidell, La., Mrs. J. D. Rumph, presiding, Mrs. H. A. Lamberth, acting as Secretary and Mrs. J. A. Alford at the piano.

As some of the delegates to the Church Conference, which was also in session there at that time, expressed a desire to be present at the Missionary meeting, Mrs. Rumph extended a cordial invitation to all to come. The church was filled almost to overflowing.

Mrs. Rumph announced that she would take up the devotional program first and opened the meeting with "Savior, Like a Shepherd, Lead Us," sung by the congregation.

Mrs. Geo. S. Brown had charge of the Devotional Service and read Prov. xxii. 6, for her scripture lesson. She made a very appealing talk on "Training the Child Up in the Way It Should Go." She stressed the lack of leaders and invoked the co-operation of parents in seeing that the children get the training that they should. There is a splendid lesson in the story she told of "The Beautiful Orchard." This story will be published later on the Woman's page.

Mrs. G. O. Salassi made the visitors feel truly welcome and at home in the greetings she gave in behalf of Slidell and of that Auxiliary.

Mrs. C. F. Niebergall responded to Mrs. Salassi, in behalf of the visitors, and she also gave some interesting facts gathered at the Annual Council at San Antonio, Texas, in April. On speaking of the proposed discontinuance of the Council she said that the Council should continue as it is, at least until the women have full laity rights. Answering a question, she said that by right of office, all Presidents of Missionary Societies are members of the quarterly conference.

The visitors enjoyed a piano selection from Liszt, well rendered by Miss Nellie Buskay.

St. Mark's Hall—Mrs. J. B. Parker, President of City Mission Board, gave a very clear and thorough outline of the work done and also of that to be done at St. Mark's Hall. She spoke of the improvements under construction there and particularly of the Clinic, and its possibilities.

Mrs. J. G. Snelling gave a very helpful and interesting talk on Social Service Work, dividing this talk to cover Community Problems and the Inter-Racial Committee. Under the first item the Social Service Committee has a big task to watch the Motion Picture and other social life of a community, endeavoring to do real "service" for the less fortunate folk, and the aim of the Inter-Racial Committee is to help the negro work out his own problems.

Mrs. M. P. Schneider favored the gathering with a piano selection, Salut D'Amour, which was very pleasing.

Here the meeting was interrupted by Brother Giles presenting a large box of fans, compliments of Mr. A. Donaldson, to be distributed to "The Ladies," presuming that the gentlemen did not need them. Many thanks, Mr. Donaldson.

Mrs. Rumph had prepared a "Quiz" on the Conference Minutes but as the time was getting short this was omitted and the congregation sang "Blessed Assurance." This closed the program and as it was time for the next session of the Church Conference, all of the delegates retired to the Community House and the woman's body went into the business session.

There are fourteen charges in the district and thirteen of these had representatives in the meeting to make a report, namely: Algiers, Bogalusa, Carrollton Avenue, Covington, Epworth, Felicity, First Church, Louisiana Avenue, Parker Memorial, Rayne Memorial, St. Mark's Hall, Second Church and Slidell.

These reports are very gratifying, and it will surely mean "The More of His Kingdom's Sure Increase" when women continue to band themselves together in such loyal, earnest and prayerful bands as these, with this as their aim.

One depressing fact reported by nearly all auxiliaries is the decrease in the Young People's societies and we hope that the seed sown by Mrs. Brown's talk will take root and bear much fruit—in leaders for the young people.

Mrs. Niebergall reported that the Bulletin will no longer be received monthly but will be a quarterly publication. While if the demand could be made large enough to justify it, it could be kept as a monthly paper,

FIFTY YEARS AGO

A young man who practiced medicine in Pennsylvania became famous and was called in consultation in many towns and cities because of his success in the treatment of disease. This was Dr. Pierce, who finally made up his mind to place some of his medicines before the public, and moving to Buffalo, N. Y., put up what he called his "Favorite Prescription," and placed it with the druggists in every state.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has long been recognized as a tonic for diseases peculiar to womankind. After suffering pain, feeling nervous, dizzy, weak and dragged-down by weaknesses of her sex—a woman is quickly restored to health by its use. Thousands of women testify that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Perscription has entirely eradicated their distressing ailments.

More recently that wonderful discovery of Dr. Pierce's, called An-uric (for kidneys and backache), has been successfully used by many thousands who write Dr. Pierce of the benefits received—that their backache, rheumatism, and other symptoms of uric acid deposits in joints or muscles have been completely conquered by its use.

but reporting only of the Louisiana Conference. This seems favorable, and all Superintendents of Publicity are requested to let Mrs. Cunningham have an expression from their respective auxiliaries regarding this.

As the time for closing had come, the meeting came to a rather abrupt close, the reading and approving of the minutes being omitted, as was also the closing song, "Blest be the tie that binds." But with best wishes to all that, with renewed strength, more faith and in greater numbers, God willing, we meet again next year at St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans. Again extending to the ladies, and others of Slidell who assisted them, the sincere appreciation of the visiting ladies for their kind hospitality.

MRS. H. A. LAMBERTH,
Secretary.

A LETTER PASSED ON WITH OUR PRESIDENT'S ENDORSEMENT.

Dear Mrs. Niebergall: We want to observe "Go to College" week, from May 21 to 28. We would be glad to have attention called to this matter in each of our societies. The main thought is the bringing of our colleges before our people, showing them the value of Christian Education, then sending the names of any prospective students to the head of the institutions.

Our work is moving on splendidly and growing with increasing interest. We are anxious for our boys and girls to be fired with an ambition for a college education and to be trained for world leadership.

We are counting on the Woman's Missionary Society doing much to awaken enthusiasm in this work.

With best wishes, yours very truly,

ALBERT S. LITZ,
Conf. Secty. of Education.

THE CENTENARY BRINGS BLESSING TO WONSAN.

By V. R. Turner, P. E.

The District Class was held in Wonsan, January 28 to February 5, 1922. Every charge in the district was represented. There were 128 students, full time, 11 teachers, 6 hours in study for 6 days. Four classes were in session at the time. Eight days, including the time the class was in session; the evenings were given to revival services. We were fortunate in having Rev. J. S. Ryang of our Conference lead these services. He gave us good preaching with good results. The church was filled to its capacity to hear him in his able presentation of Scriptural truth.

One especially interesting and encouraging fact about our class was the large number of new Christians that attended. At least 75 represented new churches that have experienced a great revival within the last eighteen months. Many students came in from places forty miles from Wonsan, and some from even greater distances, walking the whole way. The only financial aid given was one half of the food bill while in the city that is, during the time the class was in session. Never before have I seen such earnest desire on the part of men to learn the truths of God's Word.

In the new churches of the Centenary we have been enabled by the Centenary funds to provide, we could not have expected to hold the new believers that have come in. We cannot thank the friends at home too much for their offerings. You cannot imagine the thrill of joy that fills our hearts when we see what has been made possible by those gifts. Eternity alone will reveal the full results.

In our district only, in 1921, we secured 15 churches to house its members, practically all of whom were new in the faith at a cost of $1,428.50. Each group has contributed to the enterprise in addition to the amount paid by us. In my opinion, no other church building enterprise quite compares with this when we consider the amount put in by the Board and the results gained.

Things are going well with us, but we are continually embarrassed by the numbers that are coming in. Especially is this true in our attempt to reorganize the school work here in the city. We are temporarily using the old school building, but it by no means meets the needs of the hour. If we can possibly make room for them, we will have not less than 250 students at the beginning of the new session in April. If we can secure a new school building by next fall, I am confident we can make good. The demand is most urgent.

I have just had a visit from Rev. Quak Myung Hi, from the Kojeh circuit. He commenced the Conference year with six churches on his circuit and now reports fourteen. Last year his charge was divided into three, and if the present speed is kept up till next Conference, the same will have to be done this year. Two years ago, in the Tong Chun County, we had only five churches. We now have 32. The five also have greatly increased in membership and in interest.

One of the factors of greatest importance in our work outside of the city of Wonsan is the primary schools we have been enabled by the Centenary to undertake. One of these schools, Kil Myung, is four miles from the city. The other, Koo Ryung Mal, is down the coast forty miles. Both have good, four-room, brick-veneer buildings, built to accommodate 164 students each, without crowding. It is their first year of operation, and it appears that they will be filled to overflowing the 1st of April, the beginning of the new session. There is no more hopeful field of opportunity in the Wonsan District than the field of primary education. Indeed, we cannot expect permanent results for the church if we neglect this department of activity.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE ACTIVITIES.

Dear Mr. Editor: I wish to report concerning the new department of Religious Education at Millsaps, or rather about a program that was conducted concerning the country church in one of the classes the other day.

The class is at present studying the country church problem, using as text books "Solving the Country Church Problem" and "The Evolution of the Country Community." To supplement the text books and also get some practical insight into the conditions right here in Mississippi, Prof. Bowen secured Rev. N. G. Guerry, of the Shufford charge, and Rev. I. H. Sells, of the Harrisville charge, to speak to the class. Rev. Mr. Guerry has charge of the North Mississippi Conference Demonstration Charge and Rev. Mr. Sells that of the Mississippi Conference.

Previous to Brother Guerry's entering the ministry he was engaged in the work of farm demonstration work, being a graduate of A. and M. College. Both speakers told of the difficulties and problems that they had met on their charges and how they were solving them. Both concluded by stating that they believed the outlook to be very hopeful if the church would keep up and carry out the programs now being experimented on at the demonstration charges.

SURE TO HELP SICK WOMEN

Mrs. Baker, So Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Anxious to Help Others

Lebanon, Indiana.—"I was completely run down from women's troubles and stomach trouble and for a long time was hardly able to do my work. I had some friends who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they told me about it. I know what it has done for me and I recommend it to others, as I am sure it will be a great help to all sick women. It is a wonderful medicine, and I give you permission to use my testimonial and my photograph."—Mrs. EMMA BAKER, 310 S. East St., Lebanon, Indiana.

These letters recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound ought to convince women of the great worth of this medicine in the treatment of ailments to which they are often subject.

Mrs. Baker calls it "a wonderful medicine." If you are suffering from troubles women often have, or feel all run down, without any ambition or energy for your regular work, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a natural restorative and should help you as it has Mrs. Baker and many, many other women.

CENTENARY ANNOUNCEMENT.

The report of the Finance Department of the Centenary up to April 30 shows that the Mississippi Conference has paid 47.2 per cent of their total pledge, which places our Conference in fifth place in the percentage of pledges paid. Let's go to the top—what do you say?

I wish to thank every one who helped to make this possible, and earnestly request that we "carry on" till the end.

Special mention should be made of Fannin charge, in the Jackson District and Waynesboro circuit charge in the Meridian District. Three churches in each charge are on the "Honor Roll."

Fanning charge has paid: Andrew's Chapel, 80 per cent; Fannin, 64 per cent; Oakvale, 60 per cent.

Waynesboro charge has paid: Hiwannee Church, 72 per cent; Hebron, 62 per cent; Fedora, 71 per cent.

There are 37 other churches on the Honor Roll, but not so many on any other charge.

Let us all work in a systematic way, and the money will be collected.

SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Seashore District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in the Methodist Church at Poplarville, Miss., April 18, 1922, and continued its deliberations until the evening hour of the 19th. The efficient presiding elder, Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presided with usual dignity and ease. The writer was elected secretary, with Rev. J. F. Campbell assistant; the latter, living up to his good name, carried the greater part of the burden.

All of the pastors, with the exception of three, were present, and an unusual number of laymen attended the session. The presence of three ex-presiding elders, all stationed in the bounds of the district, added greatly to the occasion.

The various connectional interests were well represented by the following: Centenary work by W. D. Hawkins, who gave the new Centenary pictures of the Orient on the first evening; Rev. B. F. Lewis presented the accomplishment, as well as the needs, of the Orphans Home, and D. C. Hull represented the Sunday school work.

The reports from the pastoral charges were good, quite a good showing made in the number of accessions by profession of faith. The various departments of the church show steady progress.

The sermon preached by Rev. L. L. Roberts of Columbia, Miss., was of high order, very spiritual, and appropriate.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: J. C. Ross, T. S. Ford, J. G. Hardy, H. B. Rush, R. W. Hinton, D. R. Webster, C. B. Gates, and T. A. Rawls.

Resolutions of sympathy and brotherly love were sent to Rev. J. H. Moore and Rev. G. S. Harmon, who were unable to attend the conference because of illness.

One of the great features of the conference was the testimony meeting, conducted by the presiding elder, to which both lay delegates and preachers responded, giving proof that "the presence and power of the Holy Spirit abides, and the evangelistic fires still burn," leading the host of Israel against the foe.

On nomination by the committee the conference elected the following district Sunday school officers: Secretary, G. L. Carley; Missionary Superintendent, H. B. Rush; Elementary Superintendent, Miss Stella Provost; Intermediate-Senior Superintendent, C. B. Gates; Young People-Adult Wesley Bible Class Superintendent, Miss Mary Weston. The District Lay Leader, Colonel R. B. McGee, was then elected by the conference.

Resolutions and official passage on points clearing the title and deeds placing the Camp Ground School on an equal footing with other like schools of our church, were some of the worthy items of this district conference. Rev. W. H. Van Hook was commended for his faithful work and interest in the welfare of the school.

Logtown was chosen as the place of meeting for the next district conference.

The Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, pastor of our church at Poplarville, because of illness of a daughter attending Whitworth College, was absent on the evening of the 18th, but his good wife, with the committee, saw that every delegate was cared for, and their stay in the town made a pleasant one, for which the conference voted hearty thanks.

CALOMEL PURIFIED OF OBJECTIONABLE EFFECTS, AT LAST

Success Crowns Efforts of Pharmaceutical Chemists to Rid Popular Medicine of Its Nauseating and Dangerous Qualities — Calotabs the New Name.

A triumph of modern pharmacy that is destined to bless the whole world, from the king on his throne to the humblest laboring man—that is the opinion of druggists who have been watching the sale of the new calomel tablet that is free from the objectionable effects of the old-style calomel.

An occasional purifying of the system and thorough cleansing of the liver are absolutely essential to the maintenance of health, and calomel is the only drug that gives permanent results. Now that the unpleasant effects are entirely removed, the popularity of the new calomel, Calotabs, will be vastly increased. One tablet on the tongue at bedtime, with a swallow of water, that's all—no taste or unpleasantness of any kind. A good night's sleep and you wake next morning feeling fine, with a clean liver and a hearty appetite. Eat what you please—no danger.

Beware of imitations! Genuine Calotabs are sold only in "checkerboard" (black and white) packages bearing the copyrighted trade-mark "Calotabs." The large, family size sells for thirty-five cents; vest-pocket size, ten cents. All dealers are authorized to refund the price if you are not delighted with Calotabs. —Adv.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 69—No. 22. | Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South | Whole No. 3460.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. | NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JUNE 1, 1922. | CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

SIXTEENTH DAY, SATURDAY, MAY 20.

The Conference convened promptly at 2 o'clock, with Bishop Ainsworth in the chair. Dr. J. P. Hilburn conducted the devotional exercises. Bishop Ainsworth surrendered the chair to Bishop Cannon.

A resolution was adopted instructing all the General Boards to publish annually in the Nashville Christian Advocate a statement of income and expenditures, similar to the annual statement made by banking institutions.

The Board of Missions was authorized to appoint a committee of not more than seven to act with a like committee from the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church to work out a more efficient plan of co-operation with that denomination.

The Centenary Commission was continued as now constituted for the purpose of carrying out the Centenary task.

The bishops announced the nomination of Bishop H. M. Du Bose as chairman of the Epworth League Board, and his nomination was confirmed.

The question of changing the words, "holy catholic church," as they appear in the creed, was brought up. After a lengthy discussion, the motion to change was defeated.

A motion to change the ratio of representation of the Annual Conference, in the General Conference, from one clerical and one lay delegate for every forty-eight members of the Annual Conference to one for every sixty, was defeated.

Report No. 3 of the Committee on Publishing Interests was adopted as follows:

Your Committee on Publishing Interests has considered memorials from the Kentucky Conference, the West Oklahoma Conference, and a memorial signed by certain individuals concerning the districting of our territory and the consolidation of our Conference organs, and has also considered a paper from the Southern Methodist Press Association. After a careful consideration of conditions, we have reached the conclusion that the dividing of the church into areas and the establishment of a paper for each area is at this time impracticable. The Conference organ properly maintained seems to us to be the best system for the securing of denominational publicity and for the consequent advancement of the largest interest of the Kingdom. We therefore recommend:

1. That we commend the Southern Methodist Press Association, composed of practically all the editors of our church, in its efforts to solve the perplexing problems of religious journalism and to bring our periodicals to a high degree of efficiency.

2. That patronizing Conferences and single Conferences that maintain their own papers are urged to give a substantial support to these organs by making such an assessment when necessary for their maintenance as will enable them to render the most valuable service to the church. It is also desirable to secure permanent funds sufficiently adequate to maintain these Conference papers in a manner befitting their importance.

3. That wherever practicable what is commonly known as the budget system or some other plan be used by each charge to put the Conference paper into every Methodist home. We suggest that Annual Conferences supplement the efforts of local charges in the circulation of our Methodist periodicals and that we regard the financing and circulating of our Conference organs as of equal importance with the other claims of the church.

4. That one of the first objectives of the quadrennium shall be the putting of the Conference paper into every Methodist family.

5. That we recommend to the Book Agents that they give to each of the Conference papers a reasonable amount of advertising, believing that such advertising will be not only of substantial assistance to the Conference organs, but that it will largely increase the sales of the Publishing House. We furthermore recommend that the Southern Methodist Press Association be authorized to present from time to time to the Book Committee the necessity of this assistance and the importance of mutual co-operation.

6. That we also recommend that Conferences or groups of Conferences not owning their church papers make arrangements to own, control, and publish their own organs, for we fear that, when Conference papers are owned by individuals or corporations, they can never receive the wholehearted support to which they are entitled.

7. We recommend that the following paragraph be inserted in the Discipline immediately after the paragraph numbered 68:

"For the better instruction of our members and for the promotion of all Annual Conference enterprises, as well as the general work of the church, let Conference organs be maintained by groups of Annual Conferences, or by a single Annual Conference where conditions require it, and, when necessary, let assessments be made for the support of these organs by means of the budget plan, or in some other practical way, let each church put the Conference organ into every Methodist home. Let the circulation of church periodicals and the distribution of Christian literature be diligently and faithfully promoted by pastors and official members. Let each pastor report, for insertion in the Conference statistics, the number of Methodist families in his charge and the number of Conference organs and general organs taken, and the amount raised for the circulation of these organs."

The recommendation of the Committee on Publishing Interests, that the Nashville Advocate, the Review, the Epworth Era, the Missionary Voice, and other connectional periodicals be consolidated into one, was thoroughly discussed, after which it was defeated by a vote of 113 to 130.

GET RID OF RACE HORSE GAMBLING IN LOUISIANA.

The State of Louisiana now has the opportunity of ridding itself permanently of an institution that has absolutely nothing to commend it, but that, on the other hand, is wrong from every conceivable point of view. We refer, of course, to horse racing as it is carried on for the benefit of the gambling fraternity in New Orleans. If this were only a local evil, it might be well to leave the settlement of the matter to local interests; but it is more than State-wide in the evil it does and in the scandals it provokes. The Legislature now in session has before it two bills—one to permit racing, with its attendant gambling, under State supervision, the other to prohibit this evil altogether. Let those who believe in maintaining the Constitution of the State, which says that gambling is a vice and that the Legislature shall adopt measures to suppress it, those who believe in protecting our young people from the corrupting influence of the gambling mania, those who believe that economic welfare is dependent upon productive labor and not upon parasitical indolence—let all good citizens of every condition and class throughout the State make known to their representatives in the Legislature in no unmistakable terms their desire to have the State freed of this evil that is second only to the outlawed lottery as a debaucher of youth, and a good day will be at hand for Louisiana. Now is the time to kill horse race gambling in this fair State.

Afternoon Session.

The Conference met at 3 o'clock, Bishop Cannon in the chair. After devotional exercises, Bishop Candler took the chair.

On motion of H. H. White, a resolution denouncing race track gambling, signed by the Louisiana delegation, was presented and unanimously passed, as follows:

Whereas gambling is a vice and is so recognized, not only by the laws of our church, but by the Constitutions of many States, and whereas race track gambling is an especially prevalent and seductive form of this vice, be it

Resolved, That this General Conference denounces all forms of gambling, and particularly race track gambling and betting attendant thereon, and urges all lawmakers and citizens to support the passage and enforcement of laws for the suppression of this great evil.

Bishop James Atkins took the chair. The Committee on Church Relations and Bible Cause nominated, and the same were elected, the following as the Commission to continue unification negotiations with the Methodist Episcopal Church:

Bishops Collins Denny, E. D. Mouzon, J. M. Moore, W. F. McVeigh, James Cannon, Jr.

Traveling Elders—P. H. Linn, F. P. Culver, H. H. Sherman, D. H. Acton, Stonewall Anderson, N. M. Watson, W. E. Arnold, T. N. Ivey, J. T. Leggett, T. D. Ellis.

Laymen—J. S. Chandler, H. H. White, J. H. Reynolds, R. S. Hyer, R. E. Cooper, J. W. Fristoe, W. H. Stockham, R. E. Blackwell, G. T. Fitzhugh.

The following Commission to negotiate concerning union with other Christian bodies was nominated and elected:

Bishops W. A. Candler, U. V. W. Darlington, H. M. Du Bose.

Traveling Elders—Lan Lee Holt, W. A. Cooper, E. B. Chappell, R. B. Hawk, J. M. Dannelly, J. A. Anderson.

Laymen—D. R. Anderson, L. F. Sensabaugh, J. G. Brown, W. C. Everett, S. G. Bratton, Levin Smith.

TRAVEL LETTER FROM DR. AND MRS. COOPER.

The railroad journey from Lausanne to Paris occupies between ten and eleven hours, and takes one through a very beautiful portion of country. The most interesting place through which we passed was the little city of Dijon, the ancient capital of Burgundy. Here a large contingent of our American soldiers quartered during the recent war. Here, too, our daughter, Miss Lois Cooper, was stationed for several months while she was a Y. M. C. A. worker, "over there." A home of some of her French friends whom she wished us to meet was in sight of the railroad station; but our train did not stay there long enough to allow us to venture a visit.

Another interesting sight, of a very different nature, was a tall shaft, a monument, situated on a high cliff, surrounded by a flat, rolling portion of country. Though our train did not pass very near it, we kept this granite column in sight for several miles. When we inquired what monument it was, you may imagine our surprise when we were told that it was erected to the old Gallic hero, Vereingetorix, of whom Julius Caesar wrote in his commentaries. In moments like these, we realized the infancy of our own country.

We reached Paris about eleven o'eloek at night and found it wonderfully wide-awake and ablaze with electrie lights. In spite of being weary, we were much interested to note some methods of transportation which were new to us. Our guide divided our party, putting us into two large busses, or "carry-alls." After we were seated wo were astonished to see a porter place a ladder up the side of our vehicle and mount to the roof of it. Another porter handed him, or, rather, threw him, from the pavement, various portions of our baggage, or luggage, as they call it over there. Up went handbags and heavy portmanteaux until the roof of our bus was so heavily laden that we feared it might come down on us. But Paris was so beautiful as we drove through it that night, we forgot all uneasiness.

Hotel Byron (Beerone, as the French taxi drivers called it) was our stopping place. It is just off the Champs Elysees and near the Are de Triumphe. Here, to our joy, we found home letters awaiting us; and here we tarried for several nights. We do not say for several days, for most of our waking hours were spent in sightseeing.

In a previous letter we have told how, on our first brief stay in Paris, we visited several of the greatest of the cathedrals and other public buildings. Sonie of these came in, this time, for a little closer study.

Our first morning was spent in the Louvre and though we had been rather "fed up" on art galleries while we were in Italy, our enjoyment of it this time was even more keen than on our first visit. Our appreciation was greatly enhanced by the fact that we had for our guide a young matron who was a graduate of Wellesley College. She had come to Paris ten years previous as an art student and had married a Frenchman. Her knowledge of art and her love and enthusiasm for it illuminated the various pictures of which she spoke and made us feel that we were looking at these masterpieces with unusually intelligent eyes.

The Luxembourg Gallery is, of course, far less magnificeut and extensive than the Louvre, but we found it very interesting because of its modern statuary aud paintings. It is sometimes called the anti-chamber of the Louvre, for here many great works of art have remained for years, on probation, before being given place in the halls of the Louvre.

Perhaps it was the realistic touch of these contemporaneous Freuch artists that made their work, both in marble and on canvass, so wonderfully attractive to us that we felt very loath to leave, especially to leave the Hall of Statuary, which we had entered first and where we lingered longest. Here we felt, more than in the Louvre, that the true artist has a more vital concern than merely to protray physical beauty. It seemed to us that there was scarcely ono of the deeper emotions to which "poor, sad humanity" is heir that was not here sympathetically interpreted.

The Luxembourg Gardens, in the rear of the Art Gallery, are very beautiful and interesting. Two things prevented us from devoting as much time to them as they deserved: it had rained very hard an hour or two before we entered the gardens; and we felt that we must take most of the afternoon for our visit to the Cluny Museum, or miss seeing it.

The Hotel de Cluny, as the guide books call it, is unique both for its situation and contents. The building was erected in the fifteenth century by the Abbots of Cluny, who lavished Gothic decorations on its exterior as well as its interior. Within the grounds are the remains of the Palais des Thermes, a portion of the baths connected with the old Roman palace of the governor of Gaul, built the latter part of the sixth century. It is an experience long to be remembered to step from modern, bustling, twentieth century Parisian streets into the courtyard of this medieval palace, whose walls, pavements and soil are encrusted with the damp moss and lichens of centuries past. Once within doors, the feeliug ehanges somewhat, for here we find products of all ages, rather than of the ancient world. This museum is devoted to the "Art Crafts," rather than to the fine arts of painting and of sculpture, although these greater arts have some place here. One passes from room to rooui with a feeling of constantly increasing wonder and admiration for the variety and extent of the displays of artistic workmanship in bronze, brass, china, glass, tapestries, laces, household furniture, costumes, and even shoes of every age and period. All of this is very fascinating as well as instructive, particularly to the feminine mind. However, one does not carry away from the Cluny any of that "divino dissatisfaction" with one's own attainments which haunts for hours the visitor to the Louvre and makes him feel that he must learn more ere he comes here again.

One delightful afternoon was spent at Versailles, visiting the palace and the grounds. That the palace is quite extensivo you may well believe when we tell you that it was erected at a cost of two hundred million dollars. Its exterior is not half as beautiful or so imposing as you would expect from a building that was so expensive The interior, however, is a worthy storehouse for the many treasures which it contains. From the time of Louis XIV, who erected it, to the year 1793, this palace was used as the pleasure house of the kings and courtiers of France. Since that date, it has been converted into a national museum. During its royal days three of the kings of France were born here, and from its portals two queens passed into another existence; treaties have been signed here and other history-making events have transpired. Many of these happenings are commemorated in statuary, paintings or tapestries within these halls.

The ground floor of the palace is not so interesting as the others, for it is largely devoted to office rooms and to mementoes of the Republie. On the first floor are seven halls, decorated on every inch of wall space with wonderful Gobelin tapestries which depict the life of Louis XIV. Further on are famous staterooms, including the golden reom of Apollo, or the throno room, and the Glass Gallery which has seventeen windows on one side overlooking the gardens, and seventeen mirrors on the opposito wall. The north wing of the first floor is given to ten halls of historic paintings which portray all the great battles of French history, at least all the great victories. Many of these paintings were executed by great masters and are interesting from an artistic as well as historical point of view. But to see so many and such realistic representations of the horrors of war made one glad to turn away to other apartments.

On the second floor one found numerous portrait galleries and the private rooms of some former kings and queens. These latter were wonderfully beautiful. though rather formal and overornamented to suit our American taste.

Some of the formalism of the royal apartments is repeated in the precision of the geometrical arrangement of the famous Gardens of Versailles. Here, however, precision and regularity are not overdone, for the visitor passes from one delightful surprise to another as he steps down terraces which are adorned with marble basins filled with flowers, statues and groups of bronzo figures, and enormous fountains. It must be a wonderful sight to see these hundreds of fountains "at play," but this was not our privilege; for, in order to save expense, the French government displays the fountains only on special occasions. We were told that the water for these fountains was brought from a distance of ninety-eight miles.

Next in interest to the fountains is the "Tapis Vert" (Green Carpet), which is at the head of an artificial canal, called "The Grand Canal." The latter is 200 feet wide and one mile long. In the days of Louis XIV this Grand Canal was covered with gay colored Venetian gondolas with silken "hangings," and almost every night witnessed a wonderful illumination of the lake by fireworks. To-day the gondolas are replaced by pleasure craft of less picturesque and romantic nature—from the simple rowboat to the motor-ching.

Off the Tapis Vert are numerous charming groves and dells. Some which we visited were the Rockery, with its pretty waterfall, the Queen's Shrubbery, the King's Shrubbery, and the Colonnade, which has thirty-two wonderful marble columns. Gut this marble colonnade could not equal in beauty an avenue of magnificent trees not far from it. As we looked at these grand specimens of nature's majestic workmanship, in such close proximity to the best that man can do in the way of adorning the landscape, we thought of the passage, "What is man that thou art mindful of him?"

Time fails us to tell of other beauties of the garden and of our visit to the Great Trianon and the Little Trianon, of their exquisite furnishings and interesting historical associations. One of our last stops was at the old coach-house, near the Great Trianon. These curious old coaches, used by former French sovereigns, reminded us that even though we can now boast of rapid transit, time still has a way of getting away from us all too soon. The admonition was needed, for in spite of hurrying, we did not get back to Paris until after nightfall.

One more day in beautiful Paris closed this chapter of our journey. We spent the forenoon in the shopping district, buying a few souvenirs to bring back to America. Some members of our party provided themselves with Parisian costumes, but we made no large purchases, for though most everything on sale was beautiful, the prices did not seem to us reasonable. Later, when we came to London, we were glad that we had not spent our money, for we found the London shopping districts much more fascinating than those of Paris, "tradition notwithstanding."

The afternoon was spent in an automobile drive to many of the most famous places of the city, principally to the great cathedrals and up and down the great boulevards. Most of our party had visited Notre Dame, but we could not refrain from entering its wonderful portals again. And once more we marveled at the degree to which Europeans have achieved individuality as well as beauty in the construction of their great cathedrals. Could we not learn a lesson from them in this particular? It seems to us that too often, here in America, we have the "type" church and the public library, city hall or statehouse.

One of the finest of the old churches of Paris, the Church of St. Genevieve, is now, for the third time in its history, a Pantheon, or Temple of Fame. In it France honors all its most illustrious men. In the vaults in the basement are the tombs of Mirabeau, Marat, Voltaire and Rousseau, who were formerly buried here. Other vaults contain the remains of some of the greatest statesmen, warriors, artists, and writers whom France has given to the world. Several generals of the late world war lie there. Beautiful wreaths of immortelles and fresh flowers attest the fact that individuals, as well as the nation, honor these great men. As we came up from these vaults and walked through the spacious building, beneath its impressive dome and around the walls which are decorated with modern, impressionistic paintings of scenes from the life of St. Genevieve, we were much impressed with the thought that with the French, if not with others, love, reverence, faith and superstition are interwoven in such a way as to be an inspiring incentive to yet greater things.

The Madeleine is the most magnificent of the modern churches of Paris. Its architectural pattern and its faultless eloquence of detail, within and without, mark it as truly classic Greek in its plan and execution. For this very reason it seems to lack some of that individuality and atmosphere which surround Notre Dame. It is situated in the very heart of one of the busiest and most fashionable districts of Paris. It certainly appeals to the artistic if not to the spiritual sense, and in this much, at least, is a step above materialism.

But what part of Paris is not artistic and beautiful? No section of it that we visited! We do not blame the French for their devotion to this lovely city. So far as we know, they are right in claiming for it the distinction of being the most beautiful city in the world. At least this is the way we felt as we drove for the last time down the Champs Elysees.

PREACHERS' INSTITUTE AT CENTENARY.

Centenary College will be signally honored during the first week in June. By action of the Louisiana Conference, the first week in June will witness the coming of the preachers to Centenary for their first summer institute. It will work a new era in Louisiana Methodism It will place our State and Conference abreast of the times. Many of the Conferences of Southern Methodism have enjoyed these summer institutes for years, and all such are enthusiastic over the benefits received.

Centenary and Shreveport will welcome the brethren, and a most helpful program has been provided. There will be courses of study, great lectures, free open discussions and round tables, book reviews and inspirational addresses from some of our most noted men. Men like Bishop McMurry, Dr. Alberson of Texas, John Brown of Arkansas, Dr. W. W. Patton of Tennessee and several of our own beloved leaders in Louisiana will assist in the institute. Great problems like the rural church, orthodoxy, fundamentals of the faith, model church organizations, and the best evangelical methods will be studied under experts in these various lines. The afternoons will be largely given over to recreation and games. Under the leadership of a trained play director, it is planned that the preachers will become boys again and renew their youth by the wholesome method of play. How few of us know how to play, how to relax, how to co-operate with our fellows in team work. This course in innocent games and play will put iron in our blood and new heart into our work. We shall be able to help our young people better than ever.

The buildings and grounds of the College will be available free for the use of the institute. There will be no charge for tuition—no fees at all. The only expense attached to attendance upon this great feast will be the cost of board. The College will furnish its dining-room, kitchen and equipment free, also its cook and matron. The ministers will pay only the actual cost of the food. The meals will thus be at the lowest possible price. No one is to make any profit out of the institute. Rooms are free, but each visitor must bring his own sheets, towels, pillow (if desired), as the College cannot furnish these. The Shreveport District will pay the teachers and lecturers, so that no fees will be asked.

Brethren, come and enjoy this great occasion. If you cannot stay for the entire institute, spend at least a few days and get a new lease on life. Remember the date, June 1-8. Drop a card to Dr. Sexton so he can know how many to arrange for.

R. E. SMITH, Dean.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The North Mississippi Epworth League Conference will meet at Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., beginning the afternoon of Wednesday, June 7, and continuing in session until Friday evening, June 9.

Every League officer and the pastors of the churches are regularly accredited delegates, and each League should elect two or more representatives besides these. The delegations are not limited. All Leaguers or church workers who will pay for their meals in the college dining room, and meet with the sessions in the chapel and classrooms, will be recognized as members and be entitled to all the privileges.

R. P. NEBLETT.

MISSISSIPPI CONF. EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLY AND CONFERENCE.

The First Annual Assembly and Twenty-fifth Annual Conference of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League will be held at Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., June 5-11, 1922. The theme will be, "Recreation and Culture."

Accommodations. The entire equipment of Whitworth College is turned over to the Epworth League Assembly for this week. A charge of $1 per day will be made for table board and room. No other charges will be made. Everything else is free. However, delegates and visitors should bring the following with them: pillows, pillowcases, sheets, towels, and soap. These can be easily packed in your suitcase.

The Time to Attend. Every one attending the assembly should plan to get to Brookhaven on Monday afternoon, the 5th; and remain until the following Monday morning. It is very important that every delegate should remain until the meeting is over.

Directed Recreation.—Afternoons will be used for directed recreation, which will be in charge of E. O. Harbin, of the Central Office, Nashville, Tenn.

Junior and Intermediate.—Miss Sadie Donuan, of Georgia, will conduct the Class in Methods in the Junior and Intermediate Leagues.

Life Service Groups.—Dr. C. G. Hounshell will have charge of the Life Service Groups and teach the Class in Methods on the Missionary Department.

Chapter Membership Fee. Each chapter should be careful that their membership fee ($2.50 for Senior and $1 for Intermediate and Junior) is paid, since the constitution requires this.

Chapter Record Books.—Each chapter should be sure that their secretary's record book is sent to the conference, to be examined by the committee on records. Your chapter cannot receive its proper standing until this book has been examined.

Certificates of Credit.—Certificates of credit on the Standard of Efficiency and Diplomas will be issued, and each delegate will have the opportunity of securing [illegible] at this assembly.

Social Night.—Stunt Night will be interesting. A banner [illegible] district, chapter, and individual will present [illegible] at this time. The feats are in [illegible] Leagues. A vote will be taken by the assembly to the best stunt.

Banner.—A banner will be presented to the district [illegible] the largest number of delegates present, and [illegible] district having the largest [illegible] delegates present will be custodian of the banner for the year. Seashore District won the banner last year, and Biloxi [illegible] it this year. What district will win the banner at Brookhaven?

Certificates.—Each League will be awarded a certificate in proportion to how they measure up to the Standard of Efficiency.

Special Cars.—Every district except the Brookhaven District is planning to run a special car. Ask your district secretary about the car from your district.

Who Should Attend.—Each presiding elder, pastor, and Epworth League president and superintendent of the Junior Leagues, with not less than two delegates from each League—more if possible.

Should a pastor have a church without a League, he should attend, and bring two or more of his young people with him; or if for any reason he cannot attend, he should send his young people.

African Special.—Be sure to send Rev. L. F. Alford, Laurel, Miss., the amount your League subscribed on the African Special, and if you did not make a pledge, your League should have a part in this great work. Therefore, send what your League can pay.

Epworth League Pin. An Epworth League pin will be awarded to the district that submits the best Epworth League song, the pin to be the property of the League in the district who composes the song.

DESERT FLOWERS.

By F. A. Dicks.

Two men of business met in one of the streets of New Orleans. 'Twas Carnival day, and the floodtide of maskers and merry makers swept by, glittering with color and mad with mirth. Strangely enough, during the conversation between these two, a passing allusion was made by one to a scripture text to illustrate the business matter in question.

The face of the other man wore a reminiscent look as he said: "The other day I took dinner with a friend and while we were seated at the table, a child of five years put up his little hands and asked him to ask God to bless the food. My heart swelled with emotion as I thought of my own childhood days when my good old Presbyterian mother taught me of God and Bible history. And then my thoughts swept over the intervening years of hard business struggles, each year taking me further away from her teaching until now I am as you know me, a hard hearted old business man, doubting and putting everything to the acid test. I [illegible] get away from that little fellow with the folded hands and his little prayer at the dinner table—I find myself thinking and longing for the faith and trust my mother taught me."

His friend replied: "What you have said brings to mind that on the west coast of South America there is a vast desert lying between the mountains and the sea where rain had not fallen in the memory of man. Well, an extraordinary thing happened. A rain came, and some days after the great desert was ablaze with color. Strange and beautiful flowers from seed which had been buried in the sands sprang into life and bloom. Your experience reminds me of those desert flowers."

ACTION CONCERNING UNIFICATION.

Church Relations and Bible Cause—Report No. 1.

The Committee on Church Relations and Bible Cause had under consideration that part of the Episcopal Address referring to the relations of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with the Methodist Episcopal Church; the reports of the majority and the minority of the Commission on Unification; the statement of Bishop Warren A. Candler on the same subject; and certain memorials, some urging and some opposing the continuance of negotiations with the Methodist Episcopal Church in the matter of unification. These papers have had the most careful consideration, and we beg leave to report:

1. We express our warm appreciation of the faithful efforts of the members of our Commission on Unification to bring to pass upon a proper basis the unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Knowing that there may be differences of opinion as to the details, we approve in principle the plan of unification by reorganization wrought out by the Joint Commission on Unification and submitted by our Commission to this General Conference.

2. Although the plan of the Joint Commission did not meet with the approval of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church which met in Des Moines, Iowa, May, 1920, we note that this General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church declared itself ready to accept any equitable plan of union that shall be mutually satisfactory to the membership of both churches, and appointed a Commission, authorized and instructed to act with the Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, either in arranging for a convention or in perfecting plans already before the two churches or in working out new plans of unification, for submission to the two churches. This action of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church has been communicated by the Commission of that church, through the Commission of our church, to the General Conference, now in session, referred to your Committee on Church Relations and Bible Cause, and by it referred to us.

3. We agree with the Episcopal Address and adopt as our own the language of the same in saying: "The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has always been desirous of the most fraternal relations with all evangelical churches, and especially with the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which we are bound by the close ties of doctrine and history. We express the fervent wish that in the years to come these ties may be strengthened and these relations may become more and more fraternal."

4. We respectfully recommend that this General Conference appoint a Commission to be nominated by the Committee on Church Relations and to be composed of five bishops, ten traveling elders, and ten laymen, for the continuance of negotiations looking toward unification in harmony with the basic principles already agreed upon by the Joint Commission as feasible and desirable, or upon such other basis as our Commission may determine.

5. Instead of the Joint Convention proposed, we recommend a special session of the General Conference of our church. When a plan for unification is endorsed by a two-thirds vote of each Commission and approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, then our College of Bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session of our General Conference.

Church Relations and Bible Cause—Report No. 2.

The General Conference of 1918 instructed our bishops to appoint a Commission to negotiate with a like Commission from the Methodist Episcopal Church with reference to "the exchange of territory and such other adjustments as may be possible and practicable, in order that all needless waste and competition may be eliminated and that American Methodism may under the most favorable conditions and to the best advantage occupy and cultivate the whole field." Our bishops, at their first meeting after the General Conference of 1918, appointed the Commission thus ordered, and we have been informed that a like Commission has been appointed by the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The matter communicated to this Joint Commission bears a vital relation to fraternity between the two churches and affects directly the matter of unification. Irritating competitions cannot fail to engender hostile sentiments toward any form of unification and create obstacles in the way of its coming.

We recommend, therefore, that this Commission be continued and that the Commission on Unification, for which provision is made in this report, be and is hereby instructed to extend all possible aid and co-operation to this Commission, to the end that the fraternal purposes for which it was constituted may be speedily accomplished and that American Methodism may without needless delay occupy and cultivate the whole field under the most favorable conditions and to the best advantage.

Church Relations and Bible Cause—Report No. 3.

We recommend that in further negotiations for unification the Commission of our church exercise scrupulous care that the relation of sympathy and support by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on behalf of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America be kept in view. To that body, composed originally of the colored members of our church and organized at their request, Bishops Robert Paine and Holland N. McTyeire ordaining its first bishops, we owe peculiar obligations of duty and honor which we cannot forget or ignore in contracting relations with any other body of American Methodists.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON STANDARDS OF DOCTRINE.

We have had referred to us memorials, petitions, and resolutions from the North Mississippi, Southwest Missouri, Los Angeles, Western North Carolina, and Mississippi Annual Conferences, and several such communications from District Conferences, churches, and individuals, as well as one from the General Board of Missions.

After giving patient, careful, and prayerful consideration to these papers, we recommend that the General Conference adopt and publish an address to the church in the following terms:

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

We, your representatives in General Conference assembled, in view of the fact that there have come to us various memorials and petitions which indicate that in parts of the church and among some of our people there is a degree of alarm lest the time-honored and universally accepted doctrines of our Methodism are not being presented in their purity by certain of our preachers and teachers, send you our greetings and beg to assure you that we, and we believe the great body of our people, still adhere unwaveringly to "the faith once delivered to the saints."

It may be that some, using that liberty which Methodism has always allowed to its representatives; have gone too far in questionable speculations. We would not have our people, our young people in particular, led to accept beliefs contrary to our recognized standards of doctrine. Those standards are amply set forth in our Articles of Religion and in the Apostles' Creed.

We therefore call upon all Annual Conferences, Boards of Trustees of our institutions of learning, and other responsible officers of our church, to take all necessary steps to "banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to God's Word."

No article of our faith has been from the beginning more precious or more vital in our history than the divine inspiration and sufficient authority of the Bible. We recall to you once more those emphatic and comprehensive words of our fifth Article of Religion: "Holy Scripture containeth all things necessary to salvation; so that whatsoever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man, that it should be believed as an article of the faith, or be thought requisite or necessary to salvation."

Such is the faith which we have inherited from our fathers and by which we unfalteringly hold. God has wonderfully rewarded our loyalty. The past quadrennium, the last year especially, has been for our Zion one of unexampled prosperity. Our people have been moved to pour vasts sums of money into the treasury of the Lord. Multitudes of souls have been the harvest of our ministry. Our increase of membership last year (91,315) was the greatest we have ever had in one year, and greater than that reached the same year by any other branch of Methodism. Meantime, the young people of our church societies and institutions of learning are offering themselves by the thousand for lives of sacrificial service.

As enforcing the sentiments for which we would have our people stand, we bring to their attention and commend to their consideration the following weighty paragraphs from the Pastoral Address of our honored and beloved bishops:

"Heretofore our church has been remarkably exempt from destructive influences and revolutionary tendencies. Our preachers (with few, if any, exceptions) have been characterized by purity of doctrine and elevation of life, and the spirit of our people has been marked by the most admirable conservatism of evangelical Christianity.

"We do not disparage devout scholarship, nor discourage efforts to reach sound learning in all departments of thought and promote investigation along all lines of useful research. From the first Methodism has fostered education and walked unafraid along all the paths of intellectual culture. From its founders and fathers, who came forth from the halls of famous seats of learning, we have inherited courage in pursuit of truth and confidence in following its light. We have received also from them the disposition to maintain the faith once for all delivered to the saints. They were not, and we must not be, unstable children, tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine. Modish rationalism must not be permitted to affect our devotion to the established tenets of ancient and abiding Christianity.

"In these times of doubt and distress the message of the enduring gospel of the Son of God, with apostolic accent and authority, must speak tranquillity and order to a perturbed and distressed world. The demands of the hour exclude the propagation of novelties and notions.

"The learned and devout men into whose labors we have entered did not follow cunningly devised fables when they made known to our fathers the way of salvation. Mists arising from astral myths and ethnic legends did not becloud their judgment nor dim their faith, and to the sure word of prophecy in which they trusted we shall do well to take heed in these troubled times as unto a light that shineth in a dark place. The present is not the age for discovering the gospel, so long revealed, but for declaring it as a body of saving truth which even an angel might not seek to displace for another gospel without incurring the just anathemas of all holy and faithful souls. Our office is not to produce a new Christianity, but to preach with the power of the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven 'the old, old story of Jesus and his love.'

"It is our deep conviction that the one evil out of which spring all the uncertainty and distress of the present times is sin, which lies so deep in the human heart. We believe, therefore, that throughout all our borders, in our schools as well as in our churches, the evangelical note should sound out loud and clear, excluding all doubtful disputations. The one sure way to keep our faith sound is to keep our Christian experience fresh and vital and growing. And the best defense against all the forms of incendiary rationalism on the one hand, and of the fanaticism of ignorance on the other, is a great offensive movement against all the forces of iniquity. Therefore, do we 'speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward.' We call for an advance along all the lines of evangelistic activity. As during the quadrennium just past we have laid stress on the missionary and educational work of the church, so during the coming quadrennium let the forces of the church be organized in a mighty effort to bring lost men and women to the Son of God. To this end, let the spirit of brotherly love prevail in all our borders; let us put away all worldliness out of our hearts and lives; and let unceasing prayer be made to the God of our fathers for the outpouring of his Holy Spirit upon all our people."

Signed: A. J. Lamar, Chairman; G. B. Winton, Secretary.

CONNECTIONAL OFFICERS.

The General Conference elections for secretaries, editors and publishing agents resulted as follows:

Book Editor and Editor of the Quarterly Review, Dr. G. T. Rowe; Editor of the Christian Advocate, Dr. T. N. Ivey; Sunday School Editor, Dr. E. B. Chappell; General Sunday School Secretary, Dr. John W. Shackford; Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, Dr. T. D. Ellis; General Secretary of Epworth League Board, Dr. F. S. Parker; General Secretary of Board of Education, Dr. Stonewall Anderson; Secretary of Board of Finance, Dr. L. E. Todd; Secretary of Board of Lay Activities, John H. Reynolds, LL.D.; Missionary Secretaries, Foreign Work, Dr. E. H. Rawlings and Dr. W. W. Pinson, and Home Work, Dr. R. L. Russell and Dr. J. W. Perry; Foreign Department, Woman's Work, Miss Esther Case and Miss Mabel Howell, and Home Work, Mrs. J. W. Downs and Mrs. J. H. McCoy; Publishing Agents, Dr. A. J. Lamar and Mr. J. W. Barton.

Dr. W. G. Cram was elected Director-General of the Centenary Missionary Movement, and Dr. A. J. Weeks, of the Texas Christian Advocate, was elected Editor of the Missionary Voice, these elections being made by the General Boards concerned.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The General Conference gave prominence to the cause of Christian Education. The Board of Education will have charge of the carry-on program, as no doubt their greatest achievement has been the harmonizing and unifying of the educational forces of the church. They have made Christian Education a reality in the thinking of all the people.

We welcome Bishop Candler upon his return to hold the Louisiana Conference. He has been the great exponent and champion of Christian Education in the Southland. His address to men of means in the South ought well to have been heeded years ago.

He gave the warning cry and told us where we were heading in the educational world. A new era has dawned in the life and activity of the church and in no department is this more apparent than in the field of Christian Education, to which our beloved Bishop has given so much of his time and energy.

The "Go-to-College Week" was a pronounced success. Many sermons were preached and addresses given in which the young people were inspired with an ambition to attend college. Let us follow up this work between now and when the colleges open. By personal work, we can surely guide many young people in their life's purpose. We can make this kind of work tell during our revival services this summer. Give the young people a chance to volunteer for life service. Our outstanding need at this time is for Christian leaders. We can raise these up in due time if we turn our young people to the Christian colleges.

We urge upon our collectors to send in their reports every month. Where the first payment has not been made, we trust diligent effort will be put forth to secure it this summer.

The Louisiana Preachers' Institute will be in session at Centenary College from June 1 to 8th. It is intended for this to be a great inspirational gathering of our preachers to help solve the peculiar problems that may be before us here in Louisiana.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conf. Secy. of Education.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE LEAGUERS.

Dear Leaguers: Only three more shopping days until Christmas! Oh! I beg your pardon; I mean only three more "hopping" days until the Epworth League Assembly at Brookhaven. If you haven't made your arrangements for this Epworth League week, you will have to do considerable "hopping" to get everything fixed up in time. However, it isn't too late, and even if you have not thought before of attending this assembly, there is yet time if you are a good "hopper."

How about the requirements for the standard of efficiency? Have you measured up in every possible way? Perhaps you have not paid all of your African Special or your chapter membership fee. Let me again impress upon you the importance of making remittance of these items to the Conference Treasurer, Rev. L. F. Alford, of Laurel, Miss.

If you have failed to select your delegates, there is yet time. Don't be afraid of sending too many. There will be plenty of room at the College. Be sure to be there for the opening session and stay until the close if possible, because you will miss some of the best parts of the program if you do not.

Very sincerely,
ERMA M. KILE,
Conference Secretary.

REMEMBER THE PRAYER MEETING.

Many things get in the way of the prayer meeting, but just now bad weather and commencements are the offender. Come on, Brother Preacher, and tell us how many you had last Wednesday night, and not "in spirit" either, but sitting right there on a front seat. I had thirty-one. Yes, I am ashamed, but I can do better. Tell me about your crowd. There are some big prayer meetings in Louisiana. Take time to send the Advocate a post card next Thursday. Be a good sport and lend a hand. We need it!

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

From Greenwood I went to Charleston, Miss. Rev. T. M. Bradley met me in his "Lizzie" at Oakland with his sweet little girl, Josephine, aged about 4. As I approached the car, she said: "Howdy, Brother Meek." It speaks well for Meek, presiding elder, but evidently all preachers "look alike" to Josephine. Ten miles of good road, through picturesque woods, made the ride to Charleston a pleasure, and Bradley dropped me at the "Lafisco Hotel." He wrote me they had a fine hotel in Charleston, but when I read his letter I remarked to Sister Steel that Bradley was either a humorist or he forgot that I was a traveler and knew what a good hotel is; but he was right. The Lafisco is a model. When I left I wished that, like the magician in the Arabian tale with his tent, I could fold it up, put it in my pocket and take it with me. The name is made up from the abbreviation of the firm name, Lamb, Fish Company, Chicago people, who have here the largest hardwood sawmill in the United States, so they told me in Charleston. But mill tales, like fish tales, sometimes have holes in them. But this is the most extensive mill I have seen, unfortunately temporarily shut down, while millions of feet of valuable lumber in unsawn logs are going to waste. Charleston is also the seat of the famous "Pine Crest Farm," one of the finest stock farms in Mississippi, where they make a specialty of breeding Duroc hogs. They have a pig out there valued, some told me, at $70,000, others at $7,500. The latter figure is big enough. The pig's name is "Sissors." He lives in genuine porcine pomp, has a pretty bungalow all to himself, a private bath, and somebody to wait on him all the time! Some pig! A field of red-top clover seen from the road would repay one for a trip to Charleston just to show what Mississippi soil will do when it is given a chance.

Bradley is a wheelhorse, one of the steady, strong, level-headed sort that can pull; but you have to work him on the off-side. You can't ride him. He has a head of his own, and I imagine the crack of a whip would make him kick the harness off. He treated me like a gentleman. He serves a noble people. What charming women Mississippi can boast, and Charleston has a shining galaxy of them. They taxed me with their graceful kindness, would have me to eat in their homes, insisted on riding me in their cars, and said they would give me a home there if I would come! And they have lovely homes. Charleston is right on the edge of the Delta, where the hills slope down to the wide alluvial plain made by the Mississippi ages ago, and which it tries to re-fertilize by its overflows now. But man has interposed his art, and banked out its waters, which, at this writing, threaten to sweep his dikes aside, and cover the plain in spite of his levees. I remember very distinctly the visit of a Confederate soldier to our home in the Delta during the war, mis-called "The Civil War." He was a civil engineer, and a very intelligent man. When the war began they had just begun to construct the upper part of the levee, and had cleared the timber from Lake View several miles; then work had to stop, and everything got busy to try and keep the Yankees from overflowing the country; which failed, I will add lest some should forget it! My father was in favor of the levee, but this Confederate officer, who I think had extensive lands in "the bottom," was opposed to that system of handling the problem. I became very much interested in the conversation. By the way, the fireside conversation of my father with visitors to our home during those days were one of the finest educational influences of my youth. I did not get to school till I was about grown; but I took in a great deal of information through my ears. I tell about these things in my book, which I hope will soon be ready. "Home Life in Dixie During the War." Going back to the engineer, he said the Yellow River in China had been leveed for a thousand years, and the bottom of the river had filled up until it was in places above the level of the surrounding country. He said the proper way to do with the Mississippi was to open more exits by cutting parallel channels to carry off the surplus water. Let the river overflow, he said, and fertilize your land, and give it more outlets by cutting canals. He did not mention reservoirs along the upper Missouri and its tributaries that would hoard the water for irrigation, as has been done on the upper Arkansas; but I am not sure if his plan coupled with this would not be a more satisfactory method than the levee. It is certain that the problem has not been solved yet. The present system is tremendously expensive, and in unusual floods, such as have prevailed this year, millions of fertile acres have been submerged, and millions more imperiled.

Leaving Charleston, I stopped off at Grenada to visit Glenwild. A wealthy man in Chicago, Mr. John Borden, bought the old Payne plantation, five miles south of Grenada, and is building up there one of the most extensive and magnificent stock farms in the country. I was born seventy-odd years ago on the western edge of this estate. The little farmhouse where I entered the world has disappeared, and even the identical spot where it stood is uncertain; but it was on this farm. I happened to refer to the fact at Charleston, and Mr. Campbell, Mr. Borden's manager, was present, and gave me a cordial invitation to visit the farm. I was sorry to miss him when I went. But what I saw paid me for my walk, for I went on my own legs! O yes, they paid me enough at Charleston for me to ride out there; but a thousand things crowded on my mind, and I wanted to think, and there is no chance to think going at high speed. I enjoyed the walk almost as much as what I saw at Glenwild, and I only saw the fine buildings, and the general design as it is visible near the railroad. Mr. Borden has planned on a big scale. I doubt if there is anything like his farm in the South, unless it is in Kentucky or Virginia. Mr. Borden, I was told, is a lover of field sports, and pays the keeper of his dogs a salary that would make a superannuated preacher feel mighty easy. It would take the whole of the Advocate to tell what one sees there: the vast buildings, the drives, the beautiful fences, the fine cattle, the modern improvements of every sort. Mr. Borden is a young man, under forty, I was told, and has ample means to realize his splendid dream of rural development. Mississippi is fortunate in acquiring such a citizen, and such an institution as he has established at Glenwild. I left a note for Mr. Campbell, and told him to give Mr. Borden my respects, and assured him that I appreciate his taste in selecting my birthplace as the site of his farm, and building such a fine monument for me on it! The lightning of luck struck the spot, if it did not strike me. I hope to meet Mr. Borden himself some day, and thank him in person for conferring such distinction on ground that will always be sacred to me. More to follow.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

I spent two days last week in Hot Springs Ark., the seat of our General Conference. This meeting of delegates from the home and foreign fields of a great church is an interesting and impressive scene. I listened to some of the debates concerning important and momentous issues and questions of the day, as these are related to the church, but the human element of the gathering was to me by far the most fascinating. In the lobby of the Eastman Hotel, where the crowd swarmed between sessions, one could see the spirit of real American democracy—may I not say, at its best? Bishops and visitors, delegates, men and women, secretaries and circuit riders, all met together on a plane of an abandon and yet of a purpose that was truly delightful. Meanwhile a vast amount of work was going on in the committee rooms, judging from the earnest and purposeful expression on the faces of these toilers. Some men were there seeking office and found it not, and others had office thrust upon them, who sought it not. It's truly wonderful how honesty and sterling qualities of true manliness count and turn the scale in such things. The parable of the talents is true, even when applied to a General Conference. There is a divinity, working through and with human agencies, which shapes such things, rough hew them how we will. And the hewing is pretty rough at seasons. This much will I say, if the spiritual life and power of our church keeps pace with the intellectual and cultural talent I witnessed among the men composing this great Conference, our Zion will remain safe. As presiding officers, our bishops are facile princeps. They have to be to control the situation, for some of the leading delegates—and not a few—are skilled parliamentarians, and do not hesitate to use their training in gaining the point under debate. Yet the courtesy and consideration of the true gentleman is so evident that one wonders at its grace. I came away glad that I belong to so great a church and could share in some small way its joy and its purpose.

* * *

One movement I am glad was defeated, yet only by a bare majority. I refer to not making the office or place of bishop a life tenure. I utterly fail to see the reason or wisdom of setting aside a man to the highest place in the church and then, after four years, relegating him to the ranks. It seems to me that this question, now happily settled for a season, marked in broad outline the difference between a congregational and episcopal form of church polity. I have made some study of church history, and I do not know of any council or body of churchmen which ever before proposed a like measure. I am quite sure that in the apostolic church, when one was set apart to an order or office, it was for life, thereafter. The great bishops and fathers of the ages, subsequent to the times of the apostles, never dreamed of abdicating their places at the command of people or council. One may say these are precedent arguments. The Ten Commandments and some few other unchangeable principles are precedent. The true relation of American democracy is volated and not vindicated here, for the best expression of democracy known is that of representative form. While we do not hold that old motto true "that where is the bishop there is the church," yet we do believe most earnestly and truly that our bishops are worthy and faithful messengers, ambassadors and representatives of the church. And American democracy has all these and some more. Order or office whatever he is, whenever you have by solemn consecration or ordination by a service backed by all the authority of the church itself, up to this time, placed him as a prince in the household of God, let your procedure be valid. Anything else is "stultocracy" and not fair democracy. I have not the faintest hope of ever reaching this place in our church, but if it were offered to me under the condition of a four-year tenure, I would refuse it, for if a man is "truly called to the office of bishop" it surely is a life call.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors and Sunday School Workers of the Vicksburg District.

Dear Brethren: Please keep in mind the district conference and Sunday School Institute, which convenes at Anguilla on Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, June 6. Urge your delegates and Sunday school workers to attend. Let it be remembered that the Quarterly Conference Records are to be on hand for examination. Don't forget to pray that the Lord be present to direct in all matters of the conference.

ELEANOR'S WISH.

By Margaret Brown Elms.

Eleanor was curled up in a big tapestry chair, reading a most delightful story. The thoughts of soon having to leave these comforts were not quite so pleasant as little girls' thoughts usually are.

The little hand of the clock pointed to seven, and in two minutes the big hand that moved so quickly would be on six. Then it would be bedtime.

"Come, darling, it is half-past seven," mother said.

Eleanor closed her book with a sigh. "Do you know what I wish, mother?" she asked. "I wish I could sit up in a chair like this all night, instead of going to bed. Then I wouldn't have to undress, or dress again in the morning, and I could read as long as I pleased."

"I guess my little girl would be glad to go to bed after she had tried it a few hours," mother replied.

"But, mother, I never feel tired in the morning, and I really think it is a waste of time to have to get ready for bed every night."

"It's because you get the rest you need that you are not tired, dear," mother explained.

Eleanor little dreamed that, on the following night, her wish would be granted.

The next morning she and her father and mother seated themselves in the comfortable chairs of a parlor-car. They had planned to go to the White Mountains, and although it was snowing, they had decided not to postpone the trip.

As they traveled northward, the storm kept increasing. Snow had been falling in New Hampshire several hours before the people in Boston had seen a single snowflake. By noon the train was not moving nearly so fast as it had been during the morning hours, and they were obliged to put on an extra engine. In the early afternoon, although both engines were working as hard as possible, they could not make the upward slope without the greatest of difficulty. Every little while the big engines would stop without warning. After a great deal of puffing and blowing, they would suddenly start ahead, jerking the cars so that once or twice Eleanor was almost thrown on the floor. This experience, however, delighted her.

At last they were moving so slowly that the landscape hardly changed at all.

"What time will we get there, daddy?" Eleanor asked.

"I don't know, dear. The train is over three hours late already," was the reply.

"Oh, goody!" Eleanor exclaimed. "We'll have our dinner on the train, then, won't we?"

"I guess so," daddy answered, looking a little grave.

Eleanor greatly enjoyed eating in the dining car, so the prospect of having another meal there was an agreeable one.

About six o'clock the train stopped again. After waiting in vain for it to start once more, Eleanor's father asked the conductor a few questions. Then he told Eleanor and her mother that they were stalled.

"What do you mean by 'stalled'?" Eleanor asked.

"The train is set fast in the snow, and the engine can't move it," he explained.

"Will we have to stay here, always?" inquired Eleanor, thoughtfully.

"Oh, no! We may have to stay here all night, but we'll surely get out to-morrow," was the reassuring answer.

Eleanor curled up a little tighter in her chair, as she turned the pages of her book. She had nearly a hundred pages of "Heidi" yet to read. She smiled as she thought how wonderful it would be not to go to bed for once in her life.

Everybody in the parlor car, including Eleanor, was awake at ten o'clock, when the conductor announced that it would be impossible for them to move from their present position until the next day. He assured them that they were safe where they were, and that things might have been much worse.

As time went on, Eleanor became more tired and restless. Her eyes refused to stay open, so she was obliged to stop reading. Yet she could not sleep. Her face and hands were hot, and although daddy's coat was over her, she could feel little breezes blowing all around her. She tried hard to make the sandman come, and she wished when he did come he would stay a long time. She counted up to a hundred. Then she counted again, and yet again. She repeated all the poems she knew, and thought of the names of all the books she had read. At last the sandman came. He went away, however, when some men walked through the train. They were carrying lanterns, and she wondered why they were walking about in the night. She collected her thoughts a little and asked daddy when it would be morning.

"It's only two o'clock, dear," he replied.

"Where's mother?" she asked wearily, raising herself and looking around.

"Right here, darling," mother replied.

"Are you tired, mother?"

"A little, dear. Are you?"

"Oh yes, Mother. I wouldn't be, though, if I could undress and go to bed," she replied.

Several times before daylight she awoke and asked similar questions. How she wished morning would come and bring the glorious sun!

At last dawn came, and the storm had ceased. Then everybody went outside to look at the big engines. They were almost buried in ice and snow, and several men were chopping the ice away from them with heavy pickaxes. Eleanor could hardly believe that such powerful looking monsters could be made so helpless by the winter's storm.

"Mother," she said, a little later, "I think chairs are made to use in the daytime but not at night. And after this, when half-past seven comes, I'm going to be glad to undress and go to bed."—Zion's Herald.

FOOLISH GRIEVANCES

A grievance collector is not only gathering in new troubles all the time, but cherishes the old ones as well—gets them out every day or two, pinches and punches them to see how sore they are, and then holds them up for anybody to see who will look, much as a small boy does a sore toe.

A certain grouchy old collector of grievances has told me four times in the last two months about a fellow who killed his dog twenty years ago—and he gets fighting mad every time he tells it. And there is a woman who has been recounting for fifteen years how a certain friend slighted her at a party, and she always adds vindictively: "And I've never spoken to her since she isn't worth noticing, anyway."

Seems strange, doesn't it, that one should so clutter his life with silly grievances, fill his heart with bitterness, and occupy his mind with wrongs, real or imaginary, long passed? The brain is one's workshop. Thought and emotion are the tools, the will is the motive power. Here we must work out the problems of to-day's work and of future living; here we must consider, judge, resolve; here we must face the truth and grow into its likeness.

Unless this workshop is cleared for action, how can we concentrate our efforts on the things worth while? If thought is busy with silly slights, small grievances, supposed wrongs, how can it be free and strong for the day's work? If the feelings are embittered by a constant array of sour, sore grudges, what chance is there of winning that cordial liking, the feeling of kinship necessary both for success and happiness? And if the will is kept busy sharpening retorts, hammering our bolsters, and dressing boomerangs to fling at imaginary enemies, what strength is left to do with right the work the hands find to do?

Out with the rubbish! Let not the sun go down on thy wrath. Most of the insults were never meant, few of the slights ever intended; most of even the real wrongs against us do not appear wrong from the other fellow's viewpoint. And whether the grievances are real or imaginary, it is just as hurtful and silly to go on collecting them. Forget them, let them slip from the mind, make little of them, laugh at them—forgive them.

Those who learn to live and work and love, whether the winds blow east or west, whether the sky is fair or stormy, whether the world smiles or frowns, nods or winks, are invincible. A clean, pure heart, and a sweet, poised temper turn grievances into favors or, at worst, make of them jokes.

There are many things that it is foolish to collect, but the silliest of all is grievances.—Parish Visitor.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Churches of Christ in America, the following were elected from our patronizing Conferences: Louisiana, F. N. Parker; Mississippi, M. L. Burton; North Mississippi, R. M. Weaver.

A report of the Committee on Missions, recommending that the surplus of about $1,500,000 of the War Work Fund be applied to providing church facilities for Methodist students at State institutions of learning, and a recommendation from the Committee on Education that the fund be equally divided between church institutions and the building of churches at State institutions were considered together. By a vote of 114 to 121, the recommendation of the Committee on Education was lost, and the recommendation of the Committee on Missions was adopted.

Evening Session.

The Conference convened at 8 o'clock, Bishop Atkins in the chair. After devotional exercises, Bishop Denny took the chair.

The Committee on Missions submitted a report recommending certain changes in the administration of Mission Annual Conferences. After a lengthy discussion, the whole matter was referred to the Board of Missions for careful study, a report to be made at the next General Conference. An interesting feature of this discussion was the speech of Jose Ferraz, of Central Brazil, speaking through an interpreter, and the speech of J. S. Ryang, of Korea.

A resolution providing that the Boards that issue annuities should offer a uniform rate of interest was read and adopted.

SEVENTEENTH DAY, SUNDAY, MAY 21.

Morning Session.

After an impressive sermon by Bishop Warren A. Candler on "Fidelity to the Gospel of Christ," in the Central Methodist Church, Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, Bishops-Elect William B. Beauchamp, James E. Dickey, Sam R. Hay, Hoyt M. Dobbs, and Hiram A. Boaz were consecrated bishops.

These were presented for ordination by the following elders: W. A. Christian and E. H. Rawlings; J. H. Eakes and W. H. La Prade, Jr.; J. W. Mills and W. J. Johnson; S. L. Dobbs and A. J. Lamar; A. D. Porter and Geo. S. Slover.

The service was in charge of Bishop Candler.

The bishops present and Dr. F. P. Culver and Dr. T. A. Smoot assisted in the service.

Afternoon Session—Memorial Service.

The General Conference met in Central Church at 3 P.M., Bishop Murrah presiding. The hymn, "Asleep in Jesus," was sung. Bishop Murrah read the ninetieth Psalm, and Bishop McMurry led in prayer.

The hymn, "Servant of God, well done," was sung.

The report off the Committee on Memorials was presented and adopted as follows:

Your Committee on Memorials beg leave to report that they have a memoir of Bishop Joseph Staunton Key, who departed this life on April 6, 1920, as prepared by Bishop William N. Ainsworth; that of Bishop Henry Clay Morrison, who died in December, 1921, as prepared by Bishop John M. Moore; that of Bishop Elijah Embree Hoss, as prepared by Bishop Horace M. Du Bose; that of Bishop Walter Russell Lambuth, as prepared by Dr. Ed. F. Cook; and that of Bishop James Henry McCoy, as prepared by Dr. L. C. Branscomb; and respectfully submit the same for the consideration and disposition of the General Conference.

The memoirs were read by L. H. Estes, Secretary.

The Conference sang, "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and the benediction was pronounced.

EIGHTEENTH DAY, MONDAY, MAY 22.

The Conference convened at 8:30 o'clock, Bishop Denny in the chair. After devotional exercises, Bishop Candler took the chair, but surrendered it immediately to Bishop Beauchamp. Several reports of committees were presented and adopted without reading. Bishop Dickey took the chair. Several committee reports were presented and adopted without reading. The proposition of the Commissioners of the Southern Assembly to present the Lake Junaluska property to the church was adopted with the amendment that the property could not be accepted by the church unless presented free of debt.

Bishop Dobbs took the chair. Bishop Denny announced that Bishop Mouzon would serve as the bishop on the Committee of Appeals. Bishop Mouzon announced the organization of the Commission on Unification, as follows: Chairman, Bishop E. D. Mouzon; Secretary, H. H. Sherman; Executive Committee, Bishop Mouzon, T. N. Ivey, P. H. Linn, J. S. Candler, J. H. Reynolds.

The organization of the Commission on Unification with the United Brethren was announced as follows: Chairman, Bishop W. A. Candler; Secretary, E. B. Chappell.

Bishop Boaz took the chair. Various reports of committees were read and adopted. The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That all general Boards, Commissions, committees, and other interests requiring appropriations from the General Conference shall in so far as may be practicable file with the Commission on Budget, at least thirty days prior to meeting of each General Conference, a detailed estimate of their budget for the succeeding quadrennium, and shall assist said Commission in getting such data and information as may enable the Commission on Finance to intelligently perform its duties.

Bishop Candler took the chair. The list of ten practical educators to fix standard college requirements was read as follows: Paul H. Linn, C. M. Woodward, Andrew Sledd, J. A. Robins, W. P. Few, J. M. Williams, D. R. Anderson, J. Reese Linn, W. R. Webb, W. F. Quillian.

Various reports were adopted. The following resolution was adopted: In order that the church may be informed and the Boards and their employees may be protected from the hurt of frequent rumors that exorbitant salaries are being paid; be it, therefore

Resolved, That this General Conference instruct all Boards, Commissions, and Committees to publish in their Year Books or other publications of general circulation the salaries paid all who are employed by such Boards, Commissions, and Committees.

A resolution of thanks to all who had helped make this one of the most delightful General Conferences in the history of the church, was unanimously adopted by a rising vote. A vote of thanks was also given the bishops as the presiding officers of the Conference.

The time having arrived for final adjournment, a hymn was sung, prayer was offered by Dr. F. N. arker, and a brief address was delivered by Bishop Candler, after which the doxology was sung and the benediction was pronounced by Bishop Candler.

Editorial.

FAREWELL—AND HAIL!

According to the Plan of Episcopal Visitation adopted for the next quadrennium, our patronizing Conferences are now under a different episcopal superintendency. Four years ago Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo was in charge of the district embracing the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences; after two years, however, the serious impairment of his heelth made a readjustment necessary, and Bishop W. F. McMurry was placed in charge. By the new arrangement, the Louisiana Conference is placed in the First District, along with the Virginia and the Baltimore Conferences, with Bishop Warren A. Candler in charge, and the Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences are placed in the Tenth District, along with the South Georgia and the Florida Conferences, with Bishop W. N. Ainsworth in charge. Bishop W. F. McMurry is assigned to the Seventh District, embracing the Denver, the Missouri, the Southwest Missouri, and the St. Louis Conferences.

Bishop McMurry gave himself fully to the work assigned to him and, in the midst of many official duties, found time to acquaint himself with the conditions and needs of the Conferences under his care and to render them efficient episcopal service. He is without a superior as a presiding officer, he is vigorous in the administration of the affairs of the church, and he is always ready to give time and attention to the working out of the problems that arise from time to time in his territory. He is a thorough master of affairs, business-like in his administration, but approachable and brotherly in all his dealings with preachers and people. He won the highest esteem of the brethren in these parts, and they would have welcomed him for another quadrennium.

Bishop Candler and Bishop Ainsworth do not come to us as strangers. Bishop Candler, the honored senior bishop of the church, is at home in both Louisiana and Mississippi, and he is returning to friends who will receive him with cordial good will. Bishop Ainsworth is coming for the first time as bishop in charge, but he already has many friends in the Conferences to which he has been assigned, and he will, we are sure, receive a hearty welcome.

At the time this is written—Monday, May 29—Bishop Kilgo lies critically ill at Memphis, Tenn. He attended the General Conference at Hot Springs, but was confined to his room a great deal of the time by reason of his physical weakness. He started on his return to his bome at Charlotte, N. C., on Monday after the adjournment of the Conference, but his condition became so serious on the train that he was removed from it to the Methodist Hospital upon arrival at Memphis. According to the press reports, his physicians hold out little hope for his recovery, and it may be that he will have passed to his reward before this issue of the Advocate is in the hands of its readers. The church will remember him and his family in tender sympathy in these trying hours.

DATE OF LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

We are authorized by Bishop Warren A. Candler to announce that the Louisiana Conference will convene on November 22, instead of November 8, as at first announced in the Plan of Episcopal Visitation. A few copies of the Advocate of last week had already been run off before notice of the change was received (these, however, were sent to Mississippi subscribers), but the correct date appeared in the larger part of the edition. Let all concerned take notice—the date of the Louisiana Conference is November 22. The place of meeting is Shreveport.

WORTH GOING TO.

The following meetings are scheduled to meet on the dates indicated. All of them are official gatherings of the church in our territory, and each one of them is vitaliy related to the work that needs to be done in our varlous fields of activity. We hope the attendance will be all that could be desired.

North Mlssissippl Wesley Bible Class Federation, Grenada, May 31-June 1.

North Mississippi Standard Tralning School, Grenada, June 1-7.

North Mississippi Epworth League Conference, Grenada, June 7-9.

Mississippl Conference Epworth League Assembly, Brookhaven, June 5-11.

Mlssissippi Conferenco Standard Tralning School, Jackson, June 8-14.

Louisiana Conference Preachers' Instituto, Shreveport, Juno 1-8.

Louisiana Conference Epworth League Assembly, Mansfield, June 13-20.

Seashore Divinity School, Biloxl, Miss., June 13-23.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., requests us to state that his address for the summer will be 812 Manteo Street, Norfolk, Va.

Rev. and Mrs. W. N. Ware, Jackson, Mlss., announce the arrival of a daughter, Margaret Amanda, on May 22. Blessings upon the little one and her happy parents!

Rev. John Paul, of Wilmore, Ky., recently assisted Rev. R. S. Walton in a revival meeting at Texas Avenue, Shreveport, La. Much good was accomplished in the meeting.

We are greatly pleased to know that Mrs. W. M. Williams, wife of our pastor at Purvis, Miss., is improving, after an illness of several weeks, during which she was under the care of a trained nurse.

Rev. W. L. Duren, pastor of Rayne Memorial Methodist Church, this city, delivered the literary address at the commencement exercises of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., on Tuesday morning of this week.

We acknowledge the honor of invitations to attend the commencement exercises of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., of Trinity College, Durham, N. C., and of Scarritt Bible and Training School, Kansas City, Mo.

Miss Ladye Nelson Boykin, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Boykin, of Boyce, La., was graduated from the Boyce High School on May 25. We greatly appreciate an invitation from her to attend the graduating exercises.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, preached the commencement sermon and delivered the address at the close of the Seashore Camp Ground School, Rev. H. W. Van Hook, president.

Rev. Leon Picone, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Italian congregation, at Ybor City, Fla., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call recently. He was called here on account of the death of his father in this city.

Rev. A. R. Hoffpaulr, of Estherwood, La., requests us to say that he stands ready to assist any of the pastors of the Lake Charles District in their Sunday services, should they desire his help, provided he can return home on Sunday night.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, pastor at Bogalusa, La., paid the Advocate office a call on Friday of last week. He stated that the contract for the new church has been let. The building will represent an investment of $50,000, and will be up-to-date in every respect.

On Mother's Day, the following attendance was noted at the First Methodist Church of West Monroe, La., Rev. J. L. Evans, pastor: Sunday school, 276; 11 o'clock service, 320; Epworth League, 100; evening service, 351. Four members were received by baptism at the morning service.

Rev. C. C. Wier, of this city, preached the dedicatory sermon of the new Methodist church at Weirgate, one of the most important sawmill towns in Texas, on a recent Sunday. Members of Brother Weir's family are among the heaviest owners of the great mill at Weirgate.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, pastor of Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., after spending several days at the General Conference in Hot Springs, Ark., returned by way of Columbus, Miss., where he preached the commencement sermon for the Stephen D. Lee High School of that city on May 21.

Bishop U. V. W. Darlington will preach the commencement sermon for Millsaps College next Sunday morning, Rev. E. K. Means will deliver the address to the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday evening, and President Guy E. Snavely, of Birmingham-Southern College will deliver the literary address on Tuesday morning.

Rev. J. W. Chisholm, recently transferred from Mississippi to Texas, and appointed pastor of the First Methodist Church at Seguin, delivered the address at the Firemen's Memorial Day service recently. By request of the Firemen's Association, the address was printed in full in the Seguin Enterprise.

Rev. L. E. Crooks, our pastor at Campti, La., began a meeting on May 21, in which he was assisted by Rev. J. B. Wagoner, general evangelist, of Lebanon, Tenn. At the very beginning of the meeting indications pointed to a great revival. Brother Wagoner would be glad to assist other brethren in Louisiana in their meetings.

Many Louisiana and Mississippi visitors, both preachers and laymen, men and women, attended the sessions of the General Conference in Hot Springs. If we should undertake to name them all, we should have to use a column or so of space. Of one thing we are sure—no other States were more creditably represented at that great gathering.

The following note from Rev. Carroll Varner, West Point, Miss., is of great interest: "The opening of the new Methodist church took place on the second Sunday in May. Both services very largely attended. At the morning service the pastor appealed to the congregation on loyalty, and reviewed the history of the building. It is a joy to the Methodists to be under their own roof after rented quarters so long. Cost of building when completed, $80,000."

On Sunday, May 21, Rev. M. M. Black, Commissioner of Millsaps College, preached the commencement sermon for the High School at Quitman, Miss., to a large and appreciative audience, the service being held in the Baptist church. It is rather a striking coincidence that Prof. Hood, the principal of the High School at Quitman, Rev. J. D. Ellis, the pastor of the Methodist church, and the commencement speaker all hail from Copiah County, Mississippi.

PRAYER MEETING ATTENDANCE.

We have received the following reports of prayer meeting attendance for last week:

Farmerville, La., R. V. Fulton, 27; Jackson, La., B. D. Watson, 30; Epps, La., P. B. McCullin, 36; Ruston, La., N. E. Joyner, 31.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or moro subscriptions recently: Rev. N. O. Hunt, Courtland, Miss., 2; Rev. A. J. Beasley, Pachuta, Miss., 2; Rev. L. F. Alford, Laurel, Miss., 2; Rev. S. S. Holladay, Pelican, La., 2; Rev. E. C. Gunn, Bogalusa, La., 13; Rev. H. N. Brown, Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans, 2; Rev. D. C. Bennett, Coushatta, La., 2; Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Columbus, Miss., 7; R. H. Nestler, Epworth Church, New Orleans, 3; Miss Mayc Mitchell, Coushatta, La., 5; Rev. J. C. Price, Walnut Grove, Miss., 3; Rev. G. W. Russell, Paris, Miss., 2; Rev. G. B. Love, Ratliff, Miss., 2.

CHANGE OF DATE.

School For Rural and City Pastors.

Dr. R. L. Russell, Home Mission Secretary, requests us to call attention to the fact that, on account of certain local conditions, the dates of the School for Rural and City Pastors at Hendrix College, Conway, Ark., have been changed from June 9-20 to June 12-23. Let all concerned take notice.

MY MOTHER'S HANDS.

By Rev. Frank C. Collins.

Those hands that have scrubbed and washed for me;
Those hands that have toiled the whole day thru';
Those toil-worn hands aro beautiful to me,
Tho' scarred and furrowed with wrinkles, and rough.

I love those hands of my mother dear,
For the soothing power of their tender touch,
For their subtle secret of banishing fear,
And I care not how rough and wrinkled they be.

Only let those hands be placed in mine,
As long ago when I was but a lad,
And lead me as then up the way of time,
Safely at last to that Haven of Rest.

Some day—(God spare her yet) tho' who can tell—
Those toil-worn, wrinkled, but beautiful hands
May be folded in rest, at the toll of the bell;
No longer, then, shall I feel their caress.

But, mother, my dear, tho' those hands turn to dust,
Their power to soothe, their loving caress,
Shall ne'er forget by one whom you love,
And still in my visions shall beckon and bless.

McDonoghville, La.

KEEPING YOUNG.

No subject, perhaps, is of such ever freshly blooming interest as the one of retaining youth. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, gives his rule in a current magazine. He says the mind should conduct its own education, and keep on conducting it. For this he has three simple rules: "Observe! Remember! Compare!"

Keeping the eyes of the body and the mind alike open to new material is important. Then, one should remember what one has observed, and compare it with other observations. "You will find yourself thinking out conclusions. These conclusions are real knowledge; and they are your own."

This method, he says, made John Burroughs a great naturalist, Napoleon a great general, and it is the foundation of all education.—Selected.

Our church and community suffered a great loss Saturday morning, May 13, when MRS. M. M. BATSON was called to the world beyond.

She was a leader in our church and community; in almost every instance, she arranged the program and furnished the music for special occasions. She was superintendent of the Junior League and elementary superintendent of the Sunday school. She had lofty ideals, and no one could surpass her as a leader for the children. Her unselfishness towards others ever displayed a beautiful Christian character. Her vocation in life was music, and her wonderful talent was appreciated by all, not only as a teacher, but also as a composer. She was an ambitious mother, a loyal wife and a true friend. She loved her church, and never forgot to speak a word of encouragement to her pastor. She would often lay aside her important home duties to serve on the program of the W. M. S. and assist in its socials and entertainments.

We shall miss her in the church, but we expect to meet her in the mansions above.

We pray God's richest blessings upon the bereaved husband and children, and pledge them our sympathy and help.

HER PASTOR AND THE MEMBERS OF THE W. M. S., Wiggins, Miss.

In Memoriam.

By Mrs. W. J. Calhoun.

Sleep on, sleep on, dear friend, and take your rest
With your head pillowed on the Savior's breast;
We loved you, but He loved you best:
Good-by, good-by, but not farewell.

Until the shadows from this earth are cast,
Until He gathers in His sheaves at last,
Until the twilight gloom be past—
Good-by, good-by, but not farewell.

Until we meet again before His throne
Dressed in the spotless robes He gives His own,
Until we know as we are known—
Good-by, good-by, but not farewell.

My heart was made sad when I received a letter from Mrs. C. W. Ducker, of Waldheim, informing me of the death of her father, Brother ENOCH TALLEY, April 7, 1922. Brother Talley lived to be 75 years and 5 months old. He leaves a wife, seven children and six great-grandchildren, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his going away. It was my privilege to serve as his pastor for 5 years. His home was the preacher's home. I always had a hearty welcome, and I shall never forget his kindness to me. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for 70 years. He loved his church and was ever ready to give of his means towards its support. He was a man of prayer, and a regular attendant upon the sanctuary. How he will be missed! May God's blessings rest upon his dear wife and relatives in this time of sorrow is my prayer.

F. N. SWEENEY.

MRS. NELLIE MAE HAMILTON was born July 31, 1895. After about three months of recent intense suffering she died at seven o'clock on the morning of April 29, 1922. In her early youth she joined the church and was for many years quite a regular attendant at Forest Grove Methodist Church. In 1920 she was happily married to Mr. Otis Hamilton, at Hampton Roads, Virginia. Her friends and loved ones mourn her loss because she was a friend to all who knew her. She bore her afflictions bravely and cheerfully. She leaves an infant six months old. May we all so live that we may reach that place of eternal reward to which Mrs. Hamilton has gone.

Her Pastor,
J. W. O'NEIL.

At the request of his family, and for the information of his friends, I send you the following notice: Brother KIRBY SMITH ENOCHS was born March 25, 1863, and was for many years a minister and a member of the Mississippi Conference. Twenty-five years ago he was married to Miss Stanton, of Mississippi, with whom he lived in tender relation till March 3, 1922, when, at his home near Whistler, he passed to the other world. He is survived by his widow and two sons, William Enochs and Kirby Stanton Enochs. For a number of years he had led a very quiet life and perhaps had passed from the notice of some of his old-time friends. When the end came he was among those who had not known him earlier in life, but who were kind to him and whose love and respect he had gained.

J. P. ROBERTS,
Pastor M. E. Church, South.
Whistler, Ala.

MRS. MARY ESTES RAINEY was born April 24, 1841, married Samuel Rainey, August 31, 1854, and died February 23, 1922. She was the mother of six girls and four boys, all of whom died in infancy except three. A son, Robert, died at eight years of age and a daughter, Mrs. Lou Lear, died Jan. 14, 1911. Mrs. Barney Miller is her only surviving child. In her youth she united with the Baptist church, but soon after her marriage she joined the Methodist church. She was a charter member of Flower Hill Methodist Church of Oak Ridge charge. She was a devoted member of this church at her death. The cemetery where she lies sleeping was started by her father in the corner of his yard. She is resting within 100 feet of where she was born! She was one of the most devoted, consecrated and cheerful saints I ever knew. Though unable to walk for forty-three years of her life, because of rheumatism, she was happily and cheerfully submissive to her Father's will. It was an inspiration to visit her. I always left her inspired and more ready to fight the good fight of faith. She loved her church and pastor—prayed for them and regularly supported them. She was a regular reader of the New Orleans Advocate, and she read other periodicals and kept abreast of the times. Her latter years were spent with a granddaughter, Mrs. J. W. Bradshaw, another staunch Methodist. I thank God that I ever met her, and, while her chair is vacant and her smiling face has vanished, we will see her again in the sweet by-and-by and rejoice evermore. Amen! The sustaining grace of Jesus be with and abide with the family left behind.

Her former pastor,
J. A. WELLS.

WALTER MONROE, son of Mary Sabrina and Walter U. Stoetzner, was bor in Livingston Parish, La., March 1, 1903, and died March 29, 1922, at Kerrville, Texas. He was the only boy in a family of five children. At the age of ten years he was converted and joined the Methodist Church. The family moved to Kerrville in 1919. The body was shipped to Livingston Parish, La., for burial. The pastor under whom he was converted and joined the church, Rev. H. C. Murphy, conducted the service, assisted by Brother Frazer, the present pastor of that charge. The whole community met the funeral procession at the cemetery. The writer was with him much in his last days and knows that his faith was firmly fixed. He was ready to go. His going was a great loss to the family and friends, but God knew best. His home-going was triumphant, and there he will wait until the day when God shall call us all to be with Him in the mansions of glory.

His Pastor,
J. GRADY TIMMONS.

MRS. ELIZABETH RAMSEY HOWARD, wife of Dr. Robert E. Howard, was born in Greensboro, Ala., March 14, 1867, and passed peacefully to her reward, from the family residence, in Durant, Miss., May 11, 1922. She was the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. T. Y. Ramsey, who moved to Durant in 1888. She was married to Dr. R. E. Howard, November 29, 1893. She was converted at the age of ten years

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONF. NOTES.

The final arrangements have been made for the Standard Training School. Some one will meet the trains the afternoon of June 8th, and if you will notify us we will be sure and have any train that you come in on met. Take the North West street car and get off at the end of the car line and go to the Millsaps College dormitory, which you face as you alight from the car. Indications are fine. Your Sunday school could not spend better money than sending some one to this school. A fine program awaits you.

In addition to the schools already reported as having observed Sunday School Day, the following have sent in offerings: Shiloh, Kingston (Laurel), Brandywine, Galatia on the Scotland charge, and Daleville. Let the good work go on. If our friends will continue to help, our bills will all be met and we can go forward.

FREE TO ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER SUFFERERS

A Trial Treatment of "HIMALYA"

We don't care who you are or where you are—a man or woman, young or old, or whether you have had Asthma for fifteen years or fifteen months—all we want is your name and address, so that we can send you, free of charge, a trial treatment of "Himalya," our simple, convenient and reliable home remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever.

We want to show you, at our expense, and prove to you beyond any shadow of doubt, and to your entire satisfaction that Himalya will stop all difficult breathing, wheezing, choking spells, and all smothering sensations and painful paroxysms once and for good. We want to demonstrate to you conclusively, that, regardless of what climate you live in, your age or occupation, that this splendid remedy will do for you exactly what it has done for thousands of other sufferers in past years. We want you to know how different Himalya is from other treatments—inhalers, douches, opium preparations, fumes, smokes, etc.—how it purifies the blood and renovates the whole system, eradicating the disease by removing the cause.

Don't Delay. Don't wait until another attack comes, but start the treatment at once. Send no money, simply mail the coupon below.

The Harrisville Circuit Institute, held with the Poplar Springs Sunday school, is the best circuit institute reported to this office. They did not report what goals they had decided upon for the coming quarter in detail, but I feel sure that they will be up to the standard of the rest of the program. One Sunday school, Rexford, reports as many Sunday school pupils as the whole charge reported a year ago. If all our circuits would work on this idea for their Sunday schools, I believe it would mean much for their progress.

Sunday was spent in Vicksburg, Crawford Street. These people are going forward. Brother Selby is in high favor and God is leading on to victory. The rain kept us from seeing them at their best. They are entering a union campaign of all the Protestants. Pray for them in this great effort.

The past month is the best for teacher training we have had in the past years. It is a token of what we can do if we will put our minds to it.

Sunday School Day? If not, do it now.

Standard Training School. Please come. Let us hear from you about it. Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS,
Field Secretary.

THE VALUE OF REPORTS.

A well-made written report may be as religious as a prayer. We are told in God's Book that the prayer of a righteous man availeth much. While this is true, it is possible for one to block the answer to his own prayer for the extension of the Kingdom by carelessly refraining from reporting work done therein or work left undone, as the case may be.

Leaders all along the line in religious work want reports from the field. In no other way can they know results and plan intelligently for the future. It is analogous to reports sent to commanding officers of an army. By such the weak places are revealed, so reinforcements may be sent to the proper place, and the news of victories inspire all to greater efforts.

For our Children's Week Campaign report blanks are available. One is intended for the local school, and at the close of the week it should be filled out by the Chairman of the Children's Week Committee and forwarded immediately to the District Elementary Superintendent. It is a good plan to have one of the report blanks in hand before Children's Week. Then the points upon which record should be kept will be known.

Every evidence points to a wonderful widespread observance of Children's Week this year. Let no one subtract from the final record of results by failing to make a report.—The Elementary News Letter.

The above makes the plea for the Children's Week report. Those who have observed the week should get their report in as soon as possible, that the total may go to the General Board.

Vaiden was the first to report a splendid forward step as the outcome—a parent teachers' association for the Sunday school.

FROM FIRST CHURCH, SHREVEPORT, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I have been much interested from time to time in the reports of the several Sunday schools of our Conference and of the Mississippi Conferences, as given in your paper. There seems to be a Sunday school spirit pervading the whole country. Shreveport, perhaps as much as any other place, has been enjoying this forward Sunday school movement.

It may be of interest to you to know of the work being done in the Sunday school of the First Methodist Church. I am giving our average attendance for the last two months: In April our average for the five Sundays was 1347, and for the month of May, three Sundays already passed, an average of 1298, making a total for the two months of 1329.

Our largest attendance was on April 30, when we had 1503; our smallest attendance was on May 7, when we had 1177. This falling off on that Sunday was due to local conditions over which we had no control.

Our enrolment now numbers nearly 2200. The following report is given in the Morning Times of the Methodist Sunday schools in our city the last Sunday: First Church, 1319; Noel Memorial, 401; Mangum Memorial, 286; Cedar Grove, 146; Texas Avenue, 190; making a total of 2342 in the Methodist Sunday schools of this city.

This does not show our full strength, because of threatening showers at the Sunday school hour.

We are, indeed, grateful for this forward spirit and the influence that it is having upon our people. We at First Church are now using rooms outside the building, and will have to use others as we can procure them.

This condition will necessitate the erection of an additional Sunday school or educational plant in connection with our present building.

HENRY F. BROOKS.

HELP ONE ANOTHER.

"Help one another," the snowflakes said,
As they cuddled down in their fleecy bed;
"One of us here would not be felt,
One of us here would quickly melt;
But I'll help you, and you help me,'
And then what a splendid drift there'll be."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

From the Corresponding Secretary.

Dear Auxiliaries: A recent letter from Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb says that she is greatly concerned to find that the first quarter's financial report is about $1600 behind the first quarter of last year. It is gratifying to our secretary to know that the Louisiana Conference is not in this delinquent list, but that our first quarter is $200 in advance of the first quarter of last year. Let us not be too confident, however, for summer is close upon us. study classes, 6. JELL-O

Ice Cream Powder

ICE CREAM THAT MOTHER MAKES GOES FAST

UP to very recent times home-made ice cream was not the real thing at all. Now when mother (or the maid or the cook) makes ice cream she uses one package of Jell-O Ice Cream Powder and one quart of rich milk for half a gallon of ice cream—and she never fails to have "good luck."

Jell-O Ice Cream Powder is sold by all grocers, two packages for 25 cents.

MARRIED.

A beautiful church wedding took place in our church here on the evening of April 20, when the pastor united in holy bonds of matrimony Mr. Alexander S. Jones and Miss Frances L. Peterman. The extra large crowd in attendance at the wedding and reception bespoke the high esteem of this fine young couple. The bride is an only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Peterman—one of the best families in Franklin—and the groom is a fine young Christian business man of Weeks Island, where they will make their home.

The only son of Mr. and Mrs. Peterman was married in Seattle, Washington, a few days before Miss Frances was married here, and has returned with his bride, who was formerly a Franklin girl, to make their home here.

GIRLS! LEMONS WHITEN SKIN AND BLEACH FRECKLES

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle contalning three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of harmless and delightful lemon bleach. Marsage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day, then shortly note the beauty and whiteness of your skin.

Famous stage beauties use this lemon lotion to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, also as a freckle, sunburn, and tan bleach because it doesn't irritate.

and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and lived a consistent Christian life, always mindful of every interest of her Master's kingdom. She was an ardent worker in every department of the church and always loyal to her pastor. She loved her church with an undying devotion. Few people have ever lived in Durant who will be more greatly missed, not only in the church, but also in civic circles and as a physician's wife. The profusion of floral offerings, as well as the vast throng which crowded the church, bore testimony to the love and esteem in which she was held. She was the mother of two children, who, with her husband, survive her: Mrs. Joe Stokes and Miss Yancy Howard. Two brothers, Frank and Matthew, and two sisters, Miss Clscell and Miss Rosa Ramsey, are the only remaining members of the immediate family of the preacher father, T. Y. Ramsey, Sr., who was a member of the North Mississippi Conference.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, in the dispensation of an all-wise providence, Mrs. Elizabeth Ramsey Howard has been called to her reward; and,

Whereas, in her going away, the Woman's Missionary Society of the Durant Methodist Church has suffered an irreparable loss; therefore be it

Resolved, first, that, while we know that she has entered upon that rest from her labors which comes to His children, we are deeply grieved when we think of the vacant chair and the broken circle;

Second, that as words are inadequate to express our loss to our society and to our church, we commend her life as a shining example, worthy of emulation, as a citizen in the community, as a neighbor, wife, mother, and church member;

Third, that we extend our heartfelt sympathy to each member of the bereaved family, admonishing them to seek consolation from Him who is the only source of comfort in an hour such as this;

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this society, a copy sent to the family, and a copy to the Durant News, New Orleans Christian Advocate, Missionary Voice, Nashville Advocate, with request for publication.

Signed by: Mrs. R. P. Neblett, Mrs. T. R. King, Mrs. R. C. Elmore, Committee.

RENWAR VS. RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." FRECKLES

Now Is The Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

MINERALIZED WATER ROUTS CHICKEN LICE

Tablets Dropped into Drinking Founts Banish Vermin, Make Fowls Grow Faster and Increase Egg Yield.

Any poultry raiser can easily rid his flock of lice and mites, make chickens grow faster and increase their egg yield by simply adding minerals to the fowls' drinking water. This does away with all bother, such as dusting, greasing, dipping and spraying. The necessary minerals can now be obtained in convenient tablets, known as Paratabs. Soon after the fowls drink the mineralized water, all lice and mites leave them. The tablets also act as a tonic conditioner. The health of the fowls quickly improves, they grow faster and the egg yield frequently is doubled. Little chicks that drink freely of the water never will be bothered by mites or lice.

The method is especially recommended for raisers of purebred stock, as there is no risk of soiling the plumage. The tablets are warranted to impart no flavor or odor to the eggs or meat. This remarkable conditioner, egg tonic and lice remedy costs only a trifle and is sold under an absolute guarantee. The tablets are scientifically prepared, perfectly safe, and dissolve readily in water.

Any reader of this paper may try them without risk. The laboratories producing Paratabs are so confident of good results that to introduce them to every poultry raiser they offer two big $1 packages for only $1. Send no money, just your name and address—a card will do—to the Paratab Laboratories, Dept. 944, 1100 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City Mo., and the two $1 packages, enough for 100 gallons of water, will be mailed. Pay the postman $1 and postage on delivery, and if you are not delighted with results in 10 days—if your chickens are not healthier, laying more eggs and entirely free from lice and mites—your money will be promptly refunded. Don't hesitate to accept this trial offer as you are fully protected by this guarantee.

DOCTOR ORDERED WOMAN OBEYED

Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and is Now Well

Chicago, Illinois.—"You surely gave women one good medicine when you put Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on the market. After I had my baby I was all run down and so nervous it kept me from gaining. My doctor did everything he could to build me up, then he ordered me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with his medicine and I am now a new woman. I have had three children and they are all Lydia E. Pinkham babies. I have recommended your medicine to several friends and they speak highly of it. You are certainly doing good work in this world."—Mrs. ADRITH TOMSHECK, 10557 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

There is nothing very strange about the doctor directing Mrs. Tomsheck to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. There are many physicians who do recommend it and highly appreciate its value.

Women who are nervous, run down, and suffering from women's ailments should give this well-known root and herb medicine a trial. Mrs. Tomsheck's experience should guide you towards health.

NEW ORLEANS

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 69—No. 23. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3461.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JUNE 8, 1922. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE REMEMBERED THE "FORGOTTEN MAN."

(The following is the report of the Special Committee on Superannuate Endowment to the recent General Conference, which report was adopted.)

We, your Special Committee on Superannuate Endowment, having had before us numerous memorials relating to the matter of adequate provision for the support of superannuates and the widows and orphans of preachers, beg leave to report as follows:

Whereas the General Conference held in Atlanta, Ga., May, 1918, created the Board of Finance with authority to conduct, under special provisions and regulations, "the support of the Conference claimants of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, formerly administered by the Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Joint Boards of Finance of the several Annual Conferences," authorizing and instructing said Board of Finance to receive from the Board of Trustees all the assets of every character and kind of the Superannuate Endowment Fund, and instructing said Board of Finance to proceed in every proper way, and with all diligence, to raise an adequate endowment to care for the Conference claimants; and whereas said General Conference gave the right of way during the quadrennium 1918-1922 to the organized campaigns of the Missionary Centenary and the Christian Education Movement, limiting the efforts of the Board of Finance in the soliciting of funds for Superannuate Endowment during the quadrennium to the usual and ordinary methods of obtaining contributions; and whereas the Board of Finance during 1918-1922 has, in obedience to the expressed will of the General Conference, recognized the right of way of the Missionary Centenary and the Christian Education Movement, so far as all special efforts were concerned, and has therefore been limited in its efforts to increase the Superannuate Endowment Fund; and whereas the Conference claimants of our church have continued patiently to suffer and wait, as they have suffered and waited through the entire history of the church, on account of lack of proper support; and whereas the Board of Finance, organized under the direction of the General Conference, and incorporated under the laws of the State of Missouri and located in the city of St. Louis, has become strongly and firmly established, thoroughly equipped and competent to handle large funds; and whereas it was generally understood by the members of the General Conference of 1918, and has since been generally understood throughout the church, that the quadrennium 1922-1926 would be given to a special effort to provide an adequate support for our long-neglected Conference claimants—

Therefore, we recommend that the Board of Finance be given the right of way during the ensuing quadrennium, 1922-1926, for launching a special effort throughout the territory of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to raise a minimum of $10,000,000 as an Endowment Fund for the support of our Conference claimants.

And since the church has been engaged during the period of 1918-1922 in two highly organized and intensive campaigns for many millions of dollars, and since it is important that any special effort for large funds during the ensuing quadrennium should be projected in a manner not to preclude the successful completion of said campaigns or to overstrain and embarrass the faith and works of the church, we recommend that the proposed special effort for Superannuate Endowment be conducted under the following general specifications:

1. The Name of the Movement.

The movement shall be known simply as "The Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment."

2. The Time to Begin.

The Board of Finance shall be authorized to submit the detailed plan of procedure to the Annual Conferences of 1923, so that all the churches may begin to secure pledges in the spring of 1924, or at such later date as the Board of Finance shall deem wise.

3. Apportionment to Charges.

Every charge in the church will be asked to raise a minimum amount equal to the amount assessed for its pastor and presiding elder for the Conference year 1922-23, and urged to pay the said amount in one year or in annual installments over a period not too exceed five years, as each charge may determine for itself.

4. Division of Receipts.

Every charge in the church will be required to remit all collections on pledges direct to the General Board of Finance, to be credited by the Board fifty per cent to the General Superannuate Endowment Fund and fifty per cent to the Conference Superannuate Endowment Fund of the Annual Conference from which the remittance is made. The General Board will administer all Conference Funds so accruing, and pay the income from them annually to the respective Conference Boards of Finance for distribution by them to their claimants and under their rules.

5. The Character of the Effort.

While the undertaking shall be an organized movement, it shall not have the same intensive and extensive organization which were necessary in the other campaigns. The conclusions of the Board of Finance on this subject, and which we approve, are as follows:

(a) The effort shall be conducted chiefly by the regular church organization, through the bishops, presiding elders, pastors, lay members—all following in their appointed fields of labor a concise and simple program which will be published in detail and distributed in convenient form among those who will be requested to carry on.

(b) The preachers will not be detached from pastorates to serve the cause on salaries as Conference secretaries, or for full time in other capacities, but a comparatively few such men may be engaged for short periods to assist in the preparatory work at Annual Conferences and in the presentation of the cause in selected charges. It is the aim of the Movement to depend chiefly on the interest, love, and loyalty of the bishops, presiding elders, pastors, other interested preachers, and lay members, to provide such voluntary service as will guarantee complete victory and at the same time reduce the expense to an absolute minimum.

(c) The simple organization contemplated will be thoroughly explained at the Annual Conference, further emphasized at the district conference when possible, and chiefly wrought out in the charge.

(d) While a suggested plan of procedure will be placed in the hands of every pastor, he shall have liberty in working the plan and shall be free to use his own initiative in adapting same to his particular field to secure the best results. However, pastors will be urged strictly to regard the fundamentals of the plan presented.

(e) There will be no Conference or district treasurers. The charge organization, under the auspices of the quarterly conference, will collect all pledges and remit same direct to the General Board of Finance. Furthermore, progress on the payment of allotments shall be reported annually, using specially arranged columns in Statistical Table No. 4, to be provided in the Minutes of the Annual Conference.

(f) The Secretary of the Board of Finance will arrange for a brief period of publicity in the churches just preceding the taking of the pledges, and the pastors will be urged to utilize all available services during this brief period for presenting the great needs of our Conference claimants, and to distribute literature, in an effort to prepare the people for making worthy pledges to Superannuate Endowment.

(g) It is intended to issue only one general publication, which will be a book-pamphlet arranged to tell an appealing story of the needs of our Conference claimants, and one other pamphlet for the direction and use of the pastors. In addition the church press will be used extensively, and such other legitimate means of publicity as are consistent with a policy of rigid economy.

6. Contributing Agencies.

There are several organizations of the church which, as such, should be encouraged to have a specific part in the effort proposed to provide adequate Superannuate Endowment:

(a) Sunday Schools.—These organizations, powerful and useful as they have come to be, owe a great debt to the preachers who were active in other days, but who are now superannuated and in distress. They should be given the opportunity to contribute systematically to the cause of Superannuate Endowment. However, the amount contributed by them shall be paid through the charge organization, and the charge shall be allowed to take credit on its quota for the amounts paid by its Sunday schools.

(b) Epworth Leagues.—It is most desirable that the organized young people of the church should not only assist the effort for Superannuate Endowment as individuals, but also as organized bodies. It is intended that they shall be given the opportunity to contribute as Epworth Leagues and under the same conditions cited for the Sunday schools.

(c) Women's Auxiliary Societies.—As we have among the Conference claimants more than thirteen hundred widows of preachers, many of whom lack the bare necessities of life, it appears that any movement to provide for their needs would not be complete without giving the women's auxiliary societies of the church, as such, an opportunity to assist.

(d) Laymen's Organizations.—The church has a great organized body of laymen. These strong and valiant men should be glad to co-operate in some way in behalf of adequate Superannuate Endowment. It is the aim to enlist them, as an organization, to do whatever they can to promote the effort.

CHURCH BUILDINGS IN EDUCATIONAL CENTERS.

By Bishop W. F. McMurry.

I. WAR WORK COMMISSION.

The following memorial was presented to the last General Conference at Hot Springs by the Executive Committee of the War Work Commission, and referred to the Committee on Missions:

"Whereas the Executive Committee of the War Work Commission, at a meeting held at Washington City, Feb. 14, 1922, recommended that some permanent provision be made for a committee or commission on soldier and sailor welfare work and that an amount of $120,000, or so much thereof as may be needed, be set aside from War Work funds accruing under the Centenary Commission for the support of said soldier and sailor welfare work during the quadrennium 1922-26; and

"Whereas the Board of Church Extension and the Board of Missions, at their annual meetings in the spring of 1921, appointed a joint committee to consider the needs for church buildings in educational centers with authority to survey the church, determine the need and how the need is to be met; and

"Whereas this joint committee from the Board of Church Extension and the Board of Missions has studied the situation as directed as far as is practicable and have formally reported to the Boards named that an amount of not less than $2,000,000 is needed to properly care for the educational centers of our territory; and

"Whereas, in the study of the field, as provided in the action of the Boards involved, it has become manifest, according to the report of the Joint Committee from the two Boards that one of the most urgent needs of the church is for adequate church facilities in educational centers, such as State institutions and independent foundations; and

"Whereas no provision was made either in the Centenary or in the Educational Movement for church buildings adequate to the needs of such centers; and

"Whereas in the providence of God the ending of the war at an earlier date than even the last General Conference dared to hope has made it possible for the War Work Commission to conserve and hold three-fourths of the amount provided in the Centenary by the General Conference for war work activities; and

"Whereas it does not seem possible to enter a campaign at this time for adequate funds to meet the need for church buildings at such educational centers; and

"Whereas the Executive Committee of the War Work Commission has declared that the balance of the funds set aside by the Centenary Commission for War Work, after caring for soldier and sailor welfare work, as already provided by the action of the Executive Committee, be used in construction of buildings in the interest of Methodist students at State institutional centers, and that the Board of Missions and the Board of Church Extension be charged with the responsibility of erecting such buildings on a fifty-fifty basis, the funds thus set aside be placed to the credit of these two Boards for that specific purpose and used as may be determined by these Boards for such work; and

"Whereas this action of the War Work Commission was presented to the Centenary Commission at its meeting held in Nashville, Tennessee, April 11, 1922, which Commission approved without a dissenting vote the judgment of the War Work Commission; and

"Whereas the Board of Missions, at its annual meeting held in Nashville, Tennessee, on Friday, April 21, without a dissenting vote, gave its endorsement to the action of the War Work Commission and the Centenary Commission; and

"Whereas the Board of Church Extension, at its annual meeting held in Louisville, Kentucky, April 27, heartily joined in the endorsemeent and approval of the action taken; and

"Whereas the action of the War Work Commission, the action of the Centenary Commission, the action of the Board of Missions, and the action of the Board of Church Extension, as quoted, were communicated to the College of Bishops at a meeting held in Louisville, Kentucky, on April 27, when the following action was taken:

"'Whereas we have been advised that the Executive Committee of the War Work Commission will request of the General Conference the approval of its plan to use, through the Board of Church Extension and the Board of Missions, the balance that would naturally come into its treasury in the interest of church building in Educational centers with special reference to State institutions and independent foundations; and

"'Whereas the Centenary Commission, the Board of Missions and the Board of Church Extension have cordially approved the plan as outlined by the War Work Commission; therefore, be it

"'Resolved, That the College of Bishops, recognizing the very great need for adequate church building equipment in the centers referred to, hereby gives its endorsement to the plan and joins in the request of the War Work Commission to the General Conference for approval.'

"Whereas the Board of Church Extension, the Board of Missions, have formally agreed to receive and administer this fund as set forth in the several actions quoted above, and secure the investments made by refunding bonds or otherwise, as may seem best, and to the end that the funds invested shall be returned to the Board or Boards making the invostment in the event of alienation of the property from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, or its ceasing to be used as a place of worship by the congregation of said church; therefore, be it

"Resolved, by this General Conference, That the action of the War Work Commission, the Centenary Commission, the Board of Missions and the College of Bishops be and is hereby approved, and that said Boards of Missions and the Church Extension are hereby directed to administer the fund referred to after retaining $120,000, or such amount thereof as may be necessary, for soldier and sailor welfare work 'for the purpose of assisting in erection of church buildings in educational centers and with special referenee to State institutions and independent foundations.'

"W. F. McMURRY
Vice Chairman.
"O. E. WATSON,
Secretary."

II. THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Committee on Missions reported on this subject to the General Conferenee as follows:

"Your committee had before it the record of the actions taken by the War Work Commission, the Centenary Commission, the Board of Missions, and the Board of Church Extension, concerning the disposal of the balance remaining from the fund provided in the Centenary War Work Activities, together with the request that the General Conference be asked for approval of the action taken by those Commissions and Boards.

"The action of the Centenary Commission is as follows: 'That we indorse the announced purpose of the War Work Commission to use the balance of the fund, after proper provision has been made for soldier and sailor welfare for the next quadrennium, for the purpose of assisting in the erection of church buildings in educational centers and with special reference to State institutions and independent foundations.' The Committee recommends concurrence.

"P. S. RADER,
Chairman.
"M. T. PYLER,
Secretary."

The above report was considered by the General Conference Saturday afternoon, May 20, and adopted.

III. AUTHORITY REQUESTED.

The $5,000,000 War Work Fund provided for in the Centenary was divided by the Centenary Commission, so as to make three-fifths of the amount available for "reconstruction and evangelization in the war-stricken districts of Europe," and two-fifths to war work in camp and field, much of which, in view of the termination of the war, has been unnecessary or impossible.

A special committee was appointed by the Centenary Commission in 1921, to which was referred, by the Centenary Commission and the Board of Missions, several questions in controversy. That special committee reported to the Centenary Commission on April 10, 1922, as follows: "The War Work Commission is still in existence and, in our judgment, may either give appropriate direction to these funds as nearly as possible in keeping with the original intention of the donors, or appeal to the General Conference for such direction of them as is now possible under the changed conditions of peace."

The Centenary Commission, at the same meeting, approved the request of the Executive Committee of the War Work Commission concerning the use of these funds.

The Board of Missions (representing the Foreign Department, the Home Department, the Women's Work) and the Board of Church Extension, agencies participating in the Centenary Askings, gave their approval to the request of the Executive Committee of the War Work Commission, and the College of Bishops in session at Louisville, Kentucky, April 27, gave their approval. The General Conference in Hot Springs on May 20, as shown above, approves, without modification, the plan of the War Work Commission.

IV. ADMINISTRATION.

1. If all the Centenary Askings amounting to $25,000,000 are collected, there should be available for use in erecting church buildings in educational centers, as set forth above, about $1,500,000.

2. The Board of Missions, at a called meeting in Hot Springs on April 22, named Rev. R. L. Russell, Rev. J. W. Perry and Mr. Louis Boeger as a committee of three to act with a like committee from the Board of Church Extension in gathering information and making recommendations for aid out of this fund.

3. The Joint Committee will, in all probability, meet at an early date, organize and make suitable announcement through the church press.

4. I have not the words to tell of the burden that has been lifted from my mind and heart by the action of the General Conference in approving this program and thus making available funds for the building of houses of worship in centers where our Methodist youth assembles in large numbers. This burden has been on me for sixteen years, and I give thanks to God and the General Conference for opening the way for doing something worth while in this, one of the most needy and neglected fields in our church.

5. I do not presume to speak for the Joint Committee, nor for the two Boards involved, but so far as my influence goes, communities desiring assistance from this fund will be expected and required to use local resources to the limit. The fund, if all collected, is wholly inadequate for the need, unless it be used to command the full resources of communities receiving consideration.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

In the fall of 1878 the Virginia Conference was held in Petersburg, Va. I had been for three years, and part of a fourth, pastor of Broad Street Church in Richmond, one of the leading churches of the Conference. I succeeded Dr. J. C. Granberry, afterward bishop, who had gone to a chair in the new Vanderbilt University. Bishop George the new Vanderbilt University. Bishop George F. Pierce held the Conference. He sent for me the first day, and told me he had received a letter from Bishop Paine asking him to transfer me to the North Mississippi Conference to be stationed at Columbus. I told him I had received a letter from Bishop Paine, and had replied asking to be excused. I did not want to leave Virginia. I had become attached to a noble people, had married a Virginia lady, had won my fight against opposition to "transfers," was at the top, and my church in Richmond would send a unanimous petition to Conference for my return, and so on. Bishop Pierce said he appreciated all that, but a situation existed at Columbus that required careful handling. The prejudice against "transfers," that exists in every Conference, had become a prejudice against Columbus, because they had wanted somebody from outside the Conference ever since the Conference had been organized. Bishop Paine thought that as I was a native of North Mississippi, the Conference could not complain of my return to what might be called my own Conference; while "the high-falutin" Methodists of Columbus would be satisfied with a preacher from Virginia. He said he agreed with Bishop Paine, and he urged me to come to Columbus. He reminded me of my promise when I joined the Conference to go where the bishop thought I was needed. I could not get around that. My young wife said, "Of course, we will go where we are sent," then slipped off and had a cry. So I started on my rambling around among the cities of Israel, and came to Columbus. I thought I was coming down the ladder to leave the most popular church in Richmond, Va., the capital of the Confederacy, a city renowned throughout the civilized world then, and come to a little inland town in Mississippi so unknown that I had to look it up on the map! But, bless your life, the Columbus people thought I was climbing up when I came to Columbus. So there was a clash, as when two streams meet, and I rode a turbulent sea for four years! The remarkable thing was that I found myself gradually being inoculated with the germs of Columbus pride, and almost disposed to think that the city on the James was a suburb of the city on the Tombigbee! I have been in a number of cities, served big churches in Richmond, Memphis, Nashville, Louisville, Columbia, Kansas City, and found them all delightful places to live; but I never had a happier four years than in Columbus. It was a colony of Southern aristocrats—those democratic aristocrats found in the South in the old time, and found nowhere else on this planet, or any other, probably! It is the "new rich" that put on airs. Where the aristocracy is in the blood money cuts no figure. The poorest man in Columbus in those days, if he was a clean man, was the peer of the richest; yet there was the innate refinement, the polish, the dignity, the pride of good birth and ancestral honor, that have ever marked the educated Southerner. Those old Methodist families, like the Billupses, the Sykeses, the Lipscombs, the Harrises, the Youngs, the Meeks, and many more, were the salt of the earth. They had lovely homes and their ideal was to make a home. They had a great church for those days, and it was the center of their affections. They had had as pastors such men as Neeley, Wadsworth, of Alabama, and McTyeire, the princes of the pulpit. They were a spoiled set! They handed it to you on a silver waiter then.

I have often wanted to go back, and renew my acquaintance with the dear old town; but the shepherds who have served there in recent years did not encourage my hope. When I was pastor there, I baptized a bright little fellow named Tom Lipscomb. He is pastor now, and he recently invited me to be with him in a meeting. I jumped at the chance. Great changes have taken place. The old people are all gone, except Sister Ervin, and a few others. The children I baptized then are mothers now, and the young people of that time are gray now with the frost of age. The town has doubled in size, and is changed in many ways; but the flavor of that old life is still there! Many of the old homes are left yet, and the church is just as it was, the old study looking just like I left it. Lipscomb says it is an "office" now, for the preacher of this time has little use for a "study." There is too much truth in that, but there are exceptions, and he himself is one of them. We have few men among us who have a finer intellectual equipment than Rev. T. H. Lipscomb; but Emory University could not stand his orthodoxy. Men like Lipscomb and myself make discord in the rationalistic orchestra. However, it is not fair to Lipscomb to associate him with me. My head has been cut off, and they may whet the guillotine for him. They will cut off a lot of brains when they do. Emory might have put up with his old-fashioned belief in the Virgin Birth for the sake of the salutary influence of his noble wife. She carries the atmosphere of gospel with her.

The biggest institution in Columbus, if not in the State, is the Mississippi College for Women. I am proud that I had some small part in starting this great enterprise, which has grown to such immense proportions, and is still expanding. I had the pleasure of speaking to the students while in Columbus, and am proud of the prospective womanhood of my native State. What a tremendous responsibility there is on Dr. Fant, the President, and his corps of teachers, to mould the character of such a multitude of young women! Who is sufficient for such a task? When I lived in Columbus there also lived there a little boy named Tom Locke. He was a fine little fellow. He grew to be a man, made money, and is now realizing his dream: A private Zoo! I've had the same dream, and got me a place in the Pelican Pines at Mansfield to make it real. I expected by this time to have had at "Bellwood" all sorts of animals and birds; but, alas, like so many of my castles, it was in the air. Mr. Locke's is well anchored. He has lions and leopards, bears and kangaroos, monkeys and Mexican pigs, and birds galore. What a glory Columbus has in its trees! They arch some of the streets like an emerald canopy. There is no prettier town in the land than Columbus, and it is still a seat of culture and refinement.

We had a gracious meeting. It was a means of grace for me to preach two weeks in my old pulpit, and to people many of whom I baptized as little children. I preached sometimes three times a day, and sometimes four; pretty good for a "superannuated" man. The Louisiana Conference superannuated me; but the Lord has not superannuated me; from which I infer that the Louisiana Conference thinks about a matter in one way, and the Lord in another. Amen! The will of the Lord be done.

WHAT IS MAN?

By Rev. T. J. O'Neil.

Far back in the dim and distant past, David, the sweet singer of Israel, while surveying the heavens, admiring their beauty, and making comparisons, had his inquisitiveness excited when he compared the moon and the stars to man. As a physical fact, man is very small when compared to the planets that shine above us. David could not fail to be impressed with this truth. Yet He knew man is a creature of great importance in the Divine estimation, because he is a creature of God's interest and visitation, and he sought to learn wherein man's importance lies. As he went on his quest, he decided man's importance consists not in his physical being when compared with worlds and systems of worlds, but in his intellectual, moral, and spiritual nature. His conclusion was, as announced in Psalms 8:5, "Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor."

In the great drama of life, man is one of the characters divinely cast. He is given position next in order to the hierarchy of Heaven. He is placed above all beasts of the field, fowls of the air, and fishes of the sea, and even above worlds, as evidenced by Divine solicitude, and Divine visitation, and the pertinent Scriptural question, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lost his own soul?" But does man continue in the high position in which he was divinely placed in his relation to the scheme of things? Some things that have happened recently persuade the writer that if all men were made but little lower than the angels, some of them have degenerated considerably.

Doubtless many who have read these lines saw, as did the writer, on page eight of the Times-Picayune of April 30, the picture of a deer, seemingly almost exhausted from fright and a hard battle for its life, when a crevasse was made in the levee four miles north of Ferriday, La., and wild torrents of water rushed through the crevasse, across forests and plantations, overturning houses, uprooting trees, and threatening destruction to all life that happened to be in its path. As you looked on the picture of that tired and terrified deer, so recently in imminent danger of losing its life in the wild, rushing torrents, at last resting quietly and securely on the soft grass on the side of the levee, trying to renew its physical strength, no doubt your emotions were stirred, your sympathy aroused, and you thanked God that it was safe in company with the human refugees who shared the protection provided by the levee.

As I read of the humane spirit manifested by those refugees, I was persuaded that the Psalmist's qualifying adjective would well apply to their case. They showed themselves to be, indeed, but a little lower than the angels; for what more could angels have done to the weary animal, unless they, by exercising their superior power, should have borne it away on unweary wings to more luxuriant pastures, and greater distance from the raging waters?

But how different the verdict I passed on other men! Appended to the story depicting the humanity of the good Samaritans on the levee not far removed from Ferriday, was an account of the barbarous spirit shown by other persons in St. Bernard Parish, where many flood-terrified deer were ruthlessly slaughtered.

As I read of this ruthless destruction of helpless deer, and of like slaughter in other places, and as I see men and boys not only kill innocent and harmless birds, but revel in the sport, I am persuaded that the genus homo is the most murderous and, in some respect, the most savage of all creatures.

We are stirred to the point of vengeance when we know of a child being torn by a beast, or a man being killed by an animal. But investigation reveals that the animal slays its victim to protect itself or its young, or to satisfy the gnawing of hunger, and not simply for sport.

Man was made to have dominion over beasts, birds, and fishes, and while he is protecting them, improving them, feeding them, and even while slaughtering such of them as may be needed for food, or a menace to man, he is rightfully exercising the power to him divinely delegated, and worthily wearing the honor with which he was divinely crowned; but when he ruthlessly kills innocent birds and animals just for sport, he is abusing his regal authority, and should be punished in this life, and I am quite sure he will be punished in the life beyond the grave.

TWO REPORTS ON THE CENTENARY.

All the work of the Centenary Commission during the past quadrennium was under careful review by the General Conference. Two reports adopted by the General Conference will be of special interest to our people, and these are here given:

1. "Your Committee on Missions had before it a memorial from the Centenary Commission for the continuance of the Commission. Your committee recommends that the Centenary Commission, as now constituted, be continued for the purpose of carrying through, as planned by the last General Conference, the Centenary task; provided, it be understood that at the end of 1923 this Commission shall make such financial adjustment as shall be satisfactory to all Boards concerned."

Signed: P. S. Rader, Chairman; M. T. Plyler, Secretary.

2. Your Committee on Missions asks the General Conference to adopt as its own the following as an address to the church concerning the shortage in the payment of the Centenary pledges.

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

The one outstanding fact of the quadrenniuu just passed in review by this General Conference has been the truly noteworthy increase and the magnificent total of our church's contributious in money. To the Centenary and the Educational Campaigns, causes in no sense hostile to each other, but close akin and parallel in interest and in importance, our people have given sums that but a few years ago would have been counted incredible. This Conference has taken special pains to provide that any slight conflicts of interest and admiration that might have arisen in the collection of the subscriptions to these two funds shall be wholly obviated. From now on the co-ordination between the two will be complete. In the interest of a collection absolutely one hundred per cent in full of all these pledges we address to you this letter.

It is only fair that you should know all the history of the collection and application of the Centenary Fund. For that purpose we cite you several self-explanatory items from the report just rendered by the General Treasurer, Hon. John E. Edgerton.

Total receipts to May 1, 1922....$14,402,499.87.
Expenses to date:
1. Of cultivation, preparation and Campaign ..... $511,491.15.
2. Columbus celebration ..... 302,012.65.
3. Collection (beginning July, 1919) ..... 1,010,096.97.

From these figures you will see that the expense of collection, including the Memphis meeting, have been between seven and eight per cent of the receipts, and the total expense, from some parts of which we are still gathering large returns, about twelve per cent. On pledges due there is a deficiency of about six millions of dollars. There has been no misapplication of Centenary money. There has been no extravagance in expense accounts. The figures of the Treasurer make this so evident that any hints to the contrary must be seen at once to be false. For any of our ministers or members to believe or circulate such charges is to sin against the facts and against the integrity and good name of the church which we all love. Already more than eleven millions of dollars have been applied to the work on the fields, and another million and a half is ready to be sent. The money is going straight to the objects for which it was asked and given. We urge our pastors everywhere, as shepherds of the flock of Christ, to assure their people that no part of their money has been wasted and that none will be.

Permit us to urge upon you two absolutely final and compelling considerations why all Centenary pledges should be paid in full:

1. The first of these is found in the fruits of the Centenary, and in the disaster that would result from failure now. This great increase in our missionary giving has been blessed of God, in the heartening and revivifying of our work on the various fields to a degree which it is impossible to picture to you. The native churches have responded nobly, inaugurating themselves a great campaign of intercession, of giving, and of life service. They are not only assuming as never before the support of their own work, but are joining us in making contributions in money and workers for the conquest of the world for Christ. The missionaries have taken new heart at the arrival of re-enforcements and at the increase of equipment in building and supplies on a scale which they had before never dared hope for. They feel that their church has not forgotten them. Plans for building and enlargement have been inaugurated on their faith that we will pay what we have promised. To check those movements and thwart those plans and blast those hopes would be a calamity so indescribable that it would go far to neutralize the good already done. Surely every one who has subscribed to the Centenary will think twice before becoming a part to such a disaster.

2. The second great consideration which we lay upon your consciences is that Christians must not default. Not to keep a pledged word is a sin that in the business world men hold unpardonable. How much greater is it when we have made our promise to God! We did not pledge these sums to the Centenary Commission, nor yet to the needy missionaries and their fields. We offered them solemnly upon the altar of Christ, that Savior and Redeemer who gave himself for us. Any member of the church who repudiates a promise such as that not only besmirches the honor of his church, but shames himself in the eyes of his own Lord. But, brethren, we are persuaded better things of you and things that make for salvation, though we thus speak. Let us therefore continue patient in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not.

ECCLESIASTES.

By George E. Bass.

Eeclesiastes is one of the most interesting as well as instructive books to be found in the Old Testament. Concerning its excellence as compared with other Old Testament literature, Dr. Adam Clarke says in his well known Commentary: "It is a production of singular worth; and the finest monument we have of the wisdom of the ancients, except the book of Job."

There has been considerable dispute as to who the author of this book was, but it has generally been ascribed to Solomon, son of David. No doubt one reason for this belief lies in the fact that verse 1 (chapter I) is supposed to refer to him. It is well to accept Solomon as the author, as he has some claim to such recognition, and no other person has yet been shown to have a better claim. Unless new claims to authorship can be sustained by unanswerable proofs, it is better to let the books of the Bible be accredited to these writers who in the past have been regarded as their authors. The truth is, little can be gained by forever raising needless questions of a conflicting nature about the authorship of the books of the Bible except to destroy the reliability of the writing. The Bible is not a collection of anonymous writings, and if any part of it is considered as such, it must necessarily lose much of its weight.

The time when this book was written is uncertain. There is great mental vigor displayed in handling the discussions involved, and the bold assertions concerning right and God would seem to indicate that the book was produced before Solomon fell from divine favor—probably when he was in his prime.

The purpose of the book in an investigation conducted to find out what is best for man in this life. That Solomon was eminently qualified for such a task goes without saying. He was perhaps the most brilliant monarch that ever sat upon an earthly throne. Jehovah had made him the wisest of men, and had given him such wealth and the leisure to give himself up to uninterrupted philosophical pursuits. Most of the world's other philosophers were handicapped—some by poverty, some by ill health, and some by persecution. It is certain that fortune smiled on none as it did on Solomon.

There are many great truths that Solomon brings to light in the course of his investigations. Of course, it is impossible to discuss these in detail in a short article. The following are a few important conclusions that he reaches:

The inadequacy of all material possessions and all physical and mental labors to satisfy the longings of a man's soul.

In the earthly life the simplest things are best for a man.

Man's wicked state is largely the result of a corrupt imagination.

Sometimes the wicked prosper in this world and the righteous suffer as the wicked should. However, in the end, it shall be well with those who fear God; it shall not be well with those who do not fear Him.

The great need is for a man to turn to God early in life before his heart is hardened and he become set in his evil ways.

The last chapter contains an accurate, but cheerless, description of old age. Its striking imagery makes it a fine piece of writing. Old age is an experience through which we must all pass if we live long upon the earth. It is very pitiful to see people who have no faith in God reach this period in life. Their best days are gone and there is little ahead of them but the wormwood and gall of a misspent life. Such is not the case with the Christian. He is approaching the goal for which he has made a lifetime preparation.

The medical profession has erroneously claimed that the circulation of the blood was discovered for the first time by Dr. Harvey in 1616, for it seems undoubtedly to have been known to the author of Ecclesiastes. "Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern." I will now give Dr. Clarke's comments on this verse, for they are interesting, instructive, and in every way well worth reading:

"Verse 6. Or ever the silver cord be loosed. We have already had all the external evidences of old age, with its attendant infirmatities; next follow what takes place in the body, in order to produce what is called death, or the separation of body and soul.

"1. The silver cord—the medulla oblongata or spinal marrow, from which all the nerves proceed, as itself does from the brain. This is termed a cord, from its color, as it strikingly exhibits the silver gray; and from its preciousness. This is said to be loosed; as the nervous system becomes a little more before, and at the article of death, wholly debilitated. The last loosing being the fall of the under jaw, the invariable and never-failing evidence of immediate death; a few struggles more, and the soul is dismissed from its clay tenement.

"2. The golden bowl be broken. The brain contained in the cranium, or skull, and enveloped in the membranes called the dura and pia mater; here called a bowl, from its resemblance to such a vessel, the container being put for the contained; and golden because of its color, and because of its exceeding preciousness, as has been noted in the former case. 'Broken—be rendered unfit to perform its functions, neither supplying nor distributing any nervous energy.

"3. Or the pitcher be broken at the fountain. The vena cava, which brings back the blood to the right ventricle of the heart, here called the fountain, the spring whence the water gushes up; properly applied here to the heart, which by its systole and diastole (contraction and expansion) sends out, and afterwards receives back, the blood; for all the blood floows from, and returns back to, the heart.

"4. The wheel broken at the cistern. The great aorta, which receives the blood from the cistern, the left ventricle of the heart, and distributes it to different parts of the system. These may be said, as in the case of the brain above, to be broken, i.e., rendered useless; when, through the loosening of the silver cord, the total relaxation of the nervous system, the heart becomes incapable of dilation and contraction, so that the blood, on its return to the right ventricle of the heart, is not received, nor that already contained in the ventricles propelled into the great aorta. The wheel is used in allusion to the Asiatic wheels, by which they raise water from their wells and tanks, and deep cisterns, for domestic purposes, or to irrigate the grounds. Thus, then, the blood becomes stagnate; the lungs cease to respire; all motion, voluntary and involuntary, ceases; the body, the house of the immortal spirit, is no longer tenantable and the soul takes its flight into the eternal world. The man dies! This is expressed in the following verse: 'Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God'."

This piece of writing on the subject of death gives us some idea of the depth of Solomon's mind, and Dr. Clarke's comment on it is very creditable to him.

The final conclusion reached is to "fear God and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." There is a reason for this conclusion, and it is told in chapter 12, verse 14: "For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." No author ever reached a better conclusion than did Solomon in this book. It is certainly in thorough accord with the teachings found throughout the Bible.

The career of Solomon was in the end a dark tragedy. He did not live up to what he had taught and what he knew to be right. God had done much for him and Solomon proved himself ungrateful for all these blessings. No wonder that God became very angry with him and gave him up to his wicked ways. It is always pathetic to see a man wreck himself when in youth he gave great promise of a noble character and a useful career. But when God's spirit departs from a man's life as it did from that of King Saul and King Solomon there is no hope for that man.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Rain, storms, floods, rivers raging, lakes brimming full and fuller, swamps and hollows changed into lakes, levees broken and about one-fifth of Louisiana an inland sea! Cyclonic storms accompanied with hail and thunder sweeping the highlands, where oil derricks are leveled and houses unroofed, not to mention the sad havoc wrought on growing crops! The days all clouded, gloomy; the nights dark with lowering mists; the farmers blue, the folks discouraged; the roads impassable. The grass, wild flowers and weeds are flourishing, so that the cattle are sleek and fat.

Yet there are compensations. God has promised that while the earth stands seedtime and harvest shall not fail. Everybody about me has enough to eat, fairly good clothes to wear, lives in a good house; and some are building better ones. Butter, eggs, chickens, garden products still abound, and when any of our people see a real hungry man, they are ready and willing to feed him. People are not making money very rapidly at this present writing, and some of them are mad about it. You may make "mad" mean what you please. Let us devoutly thank Almighty God that our faith does not live merely in the present, but reaches forth and covers a future radiant with hope and the promise of coming years.

I have lived in this wonderland for something over sixty-five years, and passed through fires, flood, pestilences, and storms of many kinds and names, yet it has been getting better and more wonderful with the march of the years. And so now, when a great, big, strong man begins to whine, I think he does not need sympathy; he needs a vision or a kicking—something to awaken his dormant powers and start him going.

I am glad we still have left some real downright, sensible men in the church. For this hopeful and encouraging fact was fully demonstrated by a majority vote in the recent General Conference, refusing to turn over to a general examining board the right of admittance into the Annual Conference. I believe in education. As a youth, I toiled through weary days and nights to procure means with which I paid expenses while attending college. But no literary test ever was, or ever can be, a standard for efficient, faithful work in the Kingdom of God. And if our Annual Conferences are not part of this Kingdom, we had better close shop and quit. This idea of an examining board practically choosing who shall constitute an Annual Conference is "highbrowism" gone to seed. I do not know what the other Conferences did about it, but I do know that in the Louisiana Conference, when this board was established, we reserved the right to pass on its work, and admit or reject our own men, and as a body I think we are sensible enough to know whom to admit or reject, regardless of the dictum of an outside board. We are perfectly willing for our young men to take the correspondence course and pay for it; but when it comes to aforesaid school or board determining whom we shall admit into our body, we very politely request the right to attend to our business.

EVERY DEED HAS ITS REACTION.

Everything that one does in life has a reaction, an echo, which either approves or condems the doed, and is ever afterward a reminder of nobility or baseness. Wherever you may be, you will feel the echo of your past deeds, whether pleasant or disagreeable. They will come back to you in memory waves. and will tend to make you happy or miserable.

If you have said a kind word and helped to lift a life out of an incongenial environment, if you have aroused the embers of an ambition that has been slumbering for years, and which would have gone out in darkness but for your fanning it into living flame, then will the echo applaud your act. "Scatter the flowers as you go, for you will never go over the same road again."

If you keep for the dead the flowers which you should give to the living, spared the kindly word of admiration and praise, or the expression of friendship and love, until the ears which they would have gladdened are deaf in death, then will echoes of condemnation haunt you. Tears, lamentations and flowers at a funeral do not atone for neglected opportunities to give happiness and contentment. Every thought or deed sends back an echo like itself. If we have been helpful and generous, sympathetic and kind, we will hear echoes that will encourage and satisfy. If, on the other hand, we have been mean and contemptible, vicious, narrow, indolent, we shall hear echoes that will cause regret and disappointment.—From the Columbian Herald.

Getting ahead of oneself is the only right way to keep going forward. Getting ahead of others is the wrong idea to follow.—Exchange.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL ROAD.

By Mrs. Lemuella Garrett Almond.

I shall give you a very brief glimpse of what I am pleased to call "A Sunday School Road." It is a road that some of us have been traveling for many years, and I trust there is yet a long stretch of it before us. To me this road has proved a very pleasant as well as profitable way, ever abloom with the flowers and rich with the fruits of spirituality.

As I now recall, my journeying upon this road began away back in God's own country, some forty-odd years ago. It was a lovely, shining Sabbath morning in the early years of my childhood. Mother dressed us, my sister and me, in our "Sunday best," little, long-sleeved white aprons, big sundown hats tied with blue ribbons, and plain little shoes that grandfather had made for us, and started us out over this road from which we have never strayed. Perhaps there are those here who will feel more than a passing interest in the glimpsing of this our common highway.

Very gally we pattered along this country road, across the grassy fields, deep into a piney grove where the soft pine needles made a brown carpet for our little feet, and on over the wooded hills where the birds and flowers were having their Sunday school in the great out-of-doors. The beautiful way was beautiful from the very beginning. After a pleasant walk of something over two miles, we came around a curve that brought us into sight of our first Sunday school building. It was a little one-room log cabin with a stick-and-dirt chimney, but O, its setting! It was built on a little rise in an old field with a dense grove of dark pine for a background. When one entered that grove it was like going apart to be alone with God. Somehow one felt shut in from the world. I used to think that I could hear God's voice calling to me out of the tops of the trees.

The children for miles around came there to learn their "A, B, C's," and to read and write and cipher. There was a big fireplace, wide enough to burn logs four or five feet long, one long rough desk where we sat to write in our home-made copybooks, and several puncheon benches. Our day teacher was our Sunday school teacher, our literature was the catechism, the Bible, and an old-fashioned hymn book. We sang "Happy Day" and "On Jordan's Stormy Banks" with a spirit of pure devotion; then we had prayer, heard the Scripture, and recited from our catechisms. The hour was holy; the wind soughing softly in the pines on the outside murmured us a benediction. This was the beginning of the Sunday school road for me.

"The years that steal our youth away
Come drifting, on, come drifting on,
Like snowflakes that endure a day
And then are gone, and then are gone."

As Albert Paine has beautifully said, the years came, they drifted on. After a while the old log schoolhouse would no longer accommodate our growing Sunday school. It was left to tumble down and a nice new church was erected. It was the pride of the country-side for miles around. We now had ample room and better equipment. The chatechism was laid by for quarterlies and little lesson papers similar to those now in use. The Sunday school road was broadening into a highway, always bright with flowers and always calm and peaceful. All who travel this road will testify to its quiet beauty, its benign influence, its holy leadings.

Anon, and the years drift on. The old country church is deserted, its congregation scattered. Some have gone to the small towns, where they have access to better advantages, some to the cities where still better advantages await them, but wherever they go, wherever you find them, these people of the country churches, you will find a people that are on the Sunday school road. The old log schoolhouse is gone; the old-style country church is almost a thing of the past; but in our hearts they live. We will not forget the place where the road began for us, this road that will never end until it winds up to the tops of the everlasting hills.

Our modern church edifices, supplied with every necessary equipment for worship and for teaching the Bible are but the outcome of the labor of love performed for us by our fathers and mothers, they who taught us the spirit of worship. To their faith, the "faith of our fathers," we owe all, everything. Is it not meet, then, that we pause right here and let our lips, as well as our hearts, testify to the debt of gratitude we owe to them and what they stood for, in the old pioneer days? They blazed the trail for us, the beautiful trail that widens with the years. Let us strive to make it a great international highway that shall be broad enough to lead all men to God.

Oxford, Miss.

J. R. PRESTON—AN APPRECIATON.

By Rev. J. B. Cain.

The passing of this noble Presbyterian layman, recently, touched the hearts of many outside his own denomination, and particularly in our church. Himself a graduate of a Methodist school, along with a group of men whose names are household words in Methodism, such as Bishop Atkins, Dr. S. H. Werlein, Dr. S. A. Steel, Dr T. B. Holloman, and others, he was always in close touch with the working forces of Methodism and intensely interested in her history and progress. When I knew him he was superintendent of the Sunday school in the historic Kingston Methodist Church, Adams County, and there his kindly interest and consecrated usefulness were felt by every pastor of that church during the years while he was there.

His service in the educational work of the State as Superintendent of Education and President of Stanton and Belhaven Colleges, has been told by others. This also is true of his connection with the Historical Society. Let it be said of the latter that no native-born Mississippian knew more Mississippi history or loved it more than Mr. Preston. Of two of his qualities only do I wish to speak, namely, his simple, rugged greatness, and his simple, steadfast Christian faith.

It is difficult to find language in which to describe his simple, kindly, and unassuming manner. He had associated on terms of perfect equality with the great minds of the South in his day, and could speak with ease and accuracy on the great questions of history and literature; yet he met and talked with the humblest and most illiterate workman with no spirit of condescension, but with a brotherly feeling that made the latter at ease in his presence. He could go from one atmosphere to another without any change in his own attitude, for it was always unassuming and sincere. To be in his home was a privilege to a young man, not only because of the welcome he gave, but also that of his splendid wife and her parents, Hon. and Mrs. H. B. Vaughan. Typical citizens of the Old South were they, and yet in thorough harmony with all the progressive spirit of the New. The Preston children are worthy recipients of an unusual heritage.

As a student in the universities, Mr. Preston had studied the great rationalistic doctrines of theology, but, according to his own statement, came away with the firm conviction that there was no avenue from man to God save the simple trusting faith that is taught in the New Testament. Such a statement from such a man has done more to strengthen my faith than any sermon I recall having heard in recent years. As a teacher of a Sunday school class in which there were representatives of several denominations, the fairness of his exposition was a matter of comment. He seemed to have risen above the plane where anything petty or narrow had any place, and to dwell in the sphere where minor differences are lost or come together in the path to the City of God. A great man has gone from among us.

A NEW SORORITY.

Sororities among girl students at College are a well-known factor in the educational world. A new one has been formed by the name of Alpha Delta Sigma. It was started by Miss Virginia Hamilton, a preacher's daughter, at Westhampton College, Richmond, Va. Its avowed purpose is to be an anti-dancing organization. Every member pledges herself not to dance and at the same time promises to use her influence to discourage the practice on every occasion. The sorority is said to be rapidly growing among college girls of the South, as more than one thousand have already signed the pledge cards.

This is a significant movement, as it starts among Christians in the atmosphere of the college to make real the Christian ideal. The social world certainly needs to be rescued from the idea that the dance is necessary for its success. It will take a great deal of education on this line to turn the tide the other way. The mastery of self is at the bottom of the whole business. Self-direction in the higher things will lead away from the lower levels. Let it become popular among the fair women of the South to eliminate the dance, and then we will be ready to say "good-by" to this kind of amusement and entertainment. So mote it be!

NEWSPAPER IDEALS.

By A. H. Folwell.

A newspaper editor recently asked his readers to suggest how he could make his paper an ideal daily. The replies he got included the following:

"Cut out the crimes, the murders, the sensational divorce case reports," intimated several old subscribers.

"Cut out the accidents, the railway and steamship disasters. They don't interest me," said a professor.

"Cut out the politics," said a woman reader. "I don't understand them and I don't want to."

"Cut out the League of Nations and all that heavy stuff," said a sporting man. "What's it all amount to?"

"Cut out the so-called funny pictures," said a careful mother. "Such pictures aren't funny, and they're bad, very bad, for children."

"Cut out the editorials," a politician remarked. "You're on the wrong side anyway."

"Cut out the woman's page," several male readers intimated. "What the dickens do you want that stuff for in a newspaper?"

"Altogether too much space given to sports," several subscribers said.

"A lot of your news is superfluous," said some; "condense more and leave out small stuff."

"You don't give enough news," said some, "and it is too condensed. Any live subject should be given plenty of space."

"Too much market news," a subscriber wrote. "I don't speculate in wheat or stocks."

"Your business page is poor," wrote a business man, "I want more market news."

"Too much space given to advertising," a number of readers intimated. "We want more reading matter."

"I like your advertising columns," a lady reader said; "they give me good bargains often, and I think if you wrote up the stores more and not bother so much about politics and sport and foolish people's letters it would be better."

"Can't understand why you don't give more space to scientific progress," said one letter.

Among other replies, one asked for more cable news, another for more national news, another for more local news, another for more pictures, another for more humor, another for more college news, several for a special music department, some for a regular literary column, a number for more religious news, and some to have the social and entertainment page cut out altogether.

The editor has concluded he had better run the paper to suit himself.

BUSTER'S SURPRISE PARTY.

By Alia M. Forster.

"Bow wow! Bow wow—wow!" and still the ugly man stood with long arms outstretched and hat akimbo.

"Bow wow—wow—wow—wow!" and Buster put his front feet on the rail of the fence. He would come nearer, he would. He guessed he would stir the old man in a minute! But the fellow never batted an eye and never moved out of his tracks. What impudence! The fellow looked as unconcerned as though a grass-hopper was legging it along.

Buster was disgusted. What was more—he was perplexed. But he wasn't going to waste any more barks; he might need them some other time. Growing bolder, he softly stole closer. He smelled his way along and finally reached the queer-looking man—the man who wasn't afraid of his bark.

Well, of all the funny men! There he stood up so high Buster almost broke his neck looking, with his ragged hat almost covering his face, and nobody could see just how he did look. His coat was ragged too, and his trousers—oh, my! they never would keep any one warm.

And his legs were so thin. Now maybe he was a poor, hungry, old man. Buster's master had taught him not to bark at that kind of folks. He wished he hadn't barked. He sat down and looked up pityingly at the old man. It must be hard to have to wear such ragged clothes, sometimes in the cold and rain, too. Buster wondered if he had no home. Why, even he, a brown little dog, had a nice warm house. He almost felt like crying—why, maybe—

"Why, hello, Buster," came from a passing neighbor boy. "What makes you look so forlorn?" He came closer and patted the brown head. Buster's tail beat a swift tattoo, and his eyes brightened a little.

Buster looked at Ted and then at the quiet old man before them, and his eyes grew sorrowful again.

Then Ted threw back his head and laughed so loudly that Buster stood up all bristly. He had a big notion to bark real cross at Ted.

"Oh, that's it, is it? Feeling sorry for the old man?" the boy said with another hearty laugh.

Buster was astonished at Ted's cruelty; he always supposed he was a kind boy. He would be ashamed to make fun of a poor old ragged man.

"Why, Buster dog, don't you know that is a scarecrow? They put them in the fields to keep the birds from the corn," and Ted started on.

Buster looked at the raggedy man rather sheepishly and followed Ted with his wilted tail drooping.—Exchange.

COLLECTIONS.

Rosalind dropped down into one of Miss Katharine's big piazza chairs, flushed and starry-eyed. "O, I've had the most wonderful time!" she cried.

"Where?" Miss Katharine asked, smiling at the excited girl.

"At Mrs. Novello's looking at her pottery collection. Just think of a little town like this having one of the finest private collections in existence! Miss Katharine—"

"Yes?" Miss Katharine encouraged her.

"Why are so many people commonplace and uninteresting? Why are they content to do the things that thousands of other people are doing? I—it seems to me I'd rather die than be commonplace! But most people don't seem to care."

Miss Katharine's fingers, busy with her crocheting, became still for a moment.

"Rena Novello is a born collector," she said, slowly. "She always was, even as a girl. Her potteries are wonderful, as you say, but there is a far more valuable collection than hers in this town."

"There is? Where?" Rosalind's voice was full of excitement.

"In your grandmother's upper drawer."

"In grandmother's—Miss Katharine, what in the world do you mean? Grandmother's upper drawer is just full of all sorts of funny things people have given her. Some of them are so funny!"

"I know. That mat that the janitor's wife worked for her, and the funny wobbly pincushion little Sammy Hindslow made when he was getting over typhoid, and cheap cotton handkerchiefs, and sachet bags that long ago lost their perfume, and impossible 'neck fixings.' I know them all, and I say again, it is the most wonderful collection in town. Your grandmother, however, never dreams that it is a collection."

Rosalind waited.

"Every single thing in that drawer means some one's love and gratitude, and more of them than any one will ever know mean discouraged lives that she has loved into courage and strength. A box of those handkerchiefs came from a young fellow who was in prison two years; and your grandmother stood by him when he came out, ashamed and ready to give up everything. Some are from girls to whom she has been a steady friend; many are from mothers, old and young.

"We could live without pottery collections, fascinating though they are, Rosalind, but the time will never come when this old world can get along without men and women to love us into being the best we can. Your grandmother's upper drawer is the finest exhibit of neighborliness I ever saw. I'd like to have it in the library after she dies, each thing with its life story attached. It would be better than volumes of sociology."—Selected.

HOW MANY THINGS?

"Seems to me I'm always doing things for mother," grumbled Jack, when she asked him to water the plants. "I've done lots of things this morning."

"How many things?" asked Aunt Amy.

"Oh, I went on an errand, and I fed the chickens! There's always so much to do on Saturday. And now those plants!"

"How many things has mother done for you to-day? Suppose you make a list."

"I will," said Jack. He brought it later, saying, "I really didn't think it would count up so, Aunt Amy."

The list read like this:

Found my collar.
Sewed on a button.
Got me a shoestring.
Wrote a note to ask if Tom could come over.
Got a splinter out of my finger.
Got a knot out of my kite string.
Found my fishing tackle.
Made me some paste.
Showed me about an example.
Fixed my hatband.
Found some nails for my shelf and helped fix it.

"I lost count there," said Jack.—Our Little Ones.

A SURE TEST OF CONVERSION.

Gipsy Smith, in his book of sermons entitled, "As Jesus Passed By," tells the following incident:

"Some years ago, in one of my missions in a village, a Yorkshireman professed conversion—a rough man, a drunkard, a swearer, a gambler—and he joined the Methodist Church. One of his pals of years ago called on him and said.

"'Jack, I hear thou's gotten converted.'

" 'Yes,' said he, 'I have.'

" 'And joined t' church?'

" 'Yes, and joined t' church.'

" 'Well, Jack,' he said, 'you remember so many years ago you borrowed a sovereign off me?'

" 'Oh, yes,' said Jack, 'I remember very well.'

" 'Well,' he said, 'now you are a Christian, I shall expect that sovereign back.'

" 'Oh,' said Jack, "tho Lord has pardoned my sins, and that is one of them.'

"I was not long in finding out Jack, and I said, 'Jack, that may be a very convenient sort of gospel, but if you are a Christian you will pay that man his sovereign if you sacrifice a coat to do it.' "

Here is a sure test of the genuineness of a man's conversion: is he willing to make any wrong right as far as he has the power? If he is not, his outward profession may be ever so loud, and his life may be to all appearances exemplary, but his conversion is not complete; he needs—as I heard a minister say one time—"he needs to go home and get converted some more."—Exchange.

TO MY BRETHREN IN MISSISSIPPI.

Greeting:

By appointment of the College of Bishops, and, I trust, with the approval of Almighty God, I have been assigned to the superintendency of our work in Mississippi for the ensuing year. I am delighted to be associated with my Mississippi brethren, and I covet nothing better than to be a true yokefellow with them in all the work of the church.

The opportunity before Mississippi Methodism was never quite so great as it is to-day. Fortunately our church is well planted in every part of the commonwealth. Other men have labored—many of them with the ardor and heroic sacrifice of the best of Methodism's pioneers—and we are entering into the heritage of their toils. No previous standards, however, will suffice to determine the programme for this new day. Our Methodism must bring to the people a full gospel that will supply their deepest needs. A campaign of Home Missions and Evangelism must be carried to every nook and hamlet in the State. Our educational institutions must be made strong enough in equipment, standards of education, and endowment to meet any competition in our part oof the nation. Great church buildings and liberal enterprises must be the order of the day. We must be content with no inadequate programme to meet the challenging day that is ahead.

To this end I desire to give a full proportion of my strength and time to the work in Mississippi in counsel and co-operation with my brethren in the great work which demands of every one of us his best. I earnestly desire the faithful co-operation of all the ministry and laity of the Conference in the prosecution of these plans.

Praying God's richest blessings to rest upon every one of you and upon all the work committed to our hands, I am,

Sincerely Your Brother,
WILLIAM N. AINSWORTH.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE REMEMBERED "THE FORGOTTEN MAN."

7. Resolutions.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this General Conference:

First—That the bishop and members of each Annual Conference should designate a day of the session of 1923 as Superannuate Endowment Day for the consideration of this great cause, and that the representatives of the Board of Finance be given right of way on that day for presenting the details of their plan.

Second—That the statistical blanks for use during the ensuing quadrennium, for pastor's reports to the Annual Conference, for Annual Conference statistical secretaries, and for the Quarterly Conference Records, be amended to include such columns and questions as are necessary to secure accurate reports of the progress of the movement.

Third—That the General Sunday School Board prepare, if it can be arranged, an occasional and appropriate lesson study on the Christian ministry and publish same in the Sunday school literature at convenient intervals during the period of special effort for Superannuate Endowment; and that every Sunday school in the church consider what it may do as an organization to assist the cause.

Fourth—That the General Epworth League Board be requested to arrange for special programs for the local chapters to be used periodically in the interest of Superannuate Endowment, and that it publish in the Epworth Era and Topic Cards a suitable lesson study in every instance; and that every chapter consider what it may do as an organization to assist the cause.

Fifth—That the Woman's Missionary Council is requested to take cognizance of the special effort for Superannuate Endowment, looking to encourage every Woman's Missionary Auxiliary in the church to carry out such a program of co-operation as may be arranged and recommended by the council.

Sixth—That the laymen's organizations of the whole church, including the Committee on Lay Activities in every Annual Conference, consider ways and means of assisting the special effort for Superannuate Endowment, and, by whatever method of procedure they may agree upon, urge the laymen of every charge to give themselves whole-heartedly in support of the plan of the General Board of Finance for the full accomplishment of the task.

Seventh—That the conduct of this special effort be committed to the Board of Finance with authority to make such variation in the Plan as may be necessary in carrying to successful completion the Plan of this General Conference for an adequate Superannuate Endowment.

Respectfully submitted,
PAUL H. LINN, Chairman.
L. H. ESTES, Secretary.

CENTENARY COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The Commencement of Centenary College for the current session has been an occasion of great interest, not only to the friends of the College throughout the Louisiana Conference, but also to the city of Shreveport. Every evidence indicates that it is the dawning of a new era in the life of this honored old institution. Commencement exercises were themselves very interesting. Bishop Samuel R. Hay preached the Commencement Sermon at the First Methodist Church of Shreveport, and at the evening hour he also preached the annual Y. M. C. A. Sermon, both of which were magnificent utterances and worthily ushered in the exercises of the Commencement.

On Tuesday morning, May 30, 1922, the graduating exercises were held, the chief feature of the occasion being a magnificent address delivered by Dr. W. L. Duren, of the Rayne Memorial Church of New Orleans, his theme being "The New South." Diplomas given to seven graduates, two of whom are preparing for the ministry and will probably complete their training at one of our universities. Fourteen students were given certificates of completion of the academy course, most of whom will enter the Freshmen class of Centenary College next fall. Three completed the one-year course in the Department of Commerce. These facts in themselves indicate the beginning of an enlarged era of usefulness for the College.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon Rev. W. L. Duren, of New Orleans and Rev. William Hamilton Nelson, a native of New Orleans, formerly a student of Centenary College, and now editor of the Pacific Methodist, San Francisco, Cal. The degree of Litt. D. was conferred upon Rev. G. Stanley Frazer, of North Alabama, and the degree of LL.D. upon Bishop Samuel R. Hay, of Houston, Texas. All these degrees were appropriate expressions of appreciation of distinguished service. It was also announced that the degree of D. D. had been conferred upon Dean Smith, of Centenary, by Birmingham-Southern College.

The session just closing has given evidence in many ways of the beginning of a new period of progress for the College. Two hundred and fifty-five students have been enrolled in all departments, which is probably the largest enrollment since the Civil War. The work of the College Department has been completely separated from that of the Preparatory Department, and a full faculty giving its whole time to the college work has been organized, meeting the demands for a Standard A-grade college. The faculty for next session has been increased and strengthened by several men with A.M. and Ph.D. degrees from universities like Harvard and Chicago and Illinois.

The generous proposition of the General Education Board of New York to contribute $250,000 to the Endowment of Centenary College on condition that $550,000 more should be raised by friends of the institution, making a total endowment of $800,000, has been met by the securing of pledges for $550,000 among the friends of Centenary, largely in the city of Shreveport. This large endowment assures provision for the maintenance of the College on a basis of successful administration and an enlarged program.

The pressing need at the present time is for facilities to take care of the enlarged enrollment that is certain to come next session. Every place available for students for next session up to the limit of present facilities is already spoken for. The President's office has received 154 applications from students who had not been solicited and of whom the office had never heard with reference to entrance next session. These applications come from nineteen different States, from Maine to California. Students are already enrolled from places as far off as Nashua, New Hampshire. The immediate and pressing need of the College, therefore, is enlarged accommodations for the increasing enrollment. No man could make a better investment anywhere of a large sum than by the erection of a dormitory to provide for the students who are within our reach. The Board of Trustees will in some way make accommodations for the enrollment for next session.

It is not out of place in this connection to emphasize the fact that the dominant ideals which the College has set for itself are the old ideals for which Centenary has always stood—the development of Christian character and a high order of broad scholarship. While the College has been successful in its athletics during the session, its greatest success has been in the development of loyalty to the College, of a high order of scholarship, and a definite insistence upon high ideals of character. The boast of Centenary in the olden days of producing men who are able to sway audiences in public addresses, is being maintained. One of our graduates, a young preacher student, by the way, won second place among representatives of the Louisiana institutions in a nation-wide oratorical contest. Several prizes and medals were awarded at Commencement to students for excellence in oratory, declamation, and scholarship.

Another significant feature of the Commencement was the very much increased interest on the part of the city of Shreveport in the College and its closing exercises. The friends of the College here look confidently forward to a history that shall maintain all that was best in the life of the old College and shall add those features which will make Centenary equal to the best colleges in the South.

W. WINANS DRAKE,
Secretary of the Board of Trustees.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Leon McCain of Lafayette, La., is to be commended for the fact that the Christian Advocate goes weekly into more than one hundred homes of his people.

Rev. B. T. Crews, of Greenwood, La., has recently closed a very gracious revival in his church. He was assisted by Rev. R. T. Ware. There were sixteen accessions to the church.

The church at Ruston, La., where Rev. N. E. Joyner is the pastor, recently gave an enjoyable reception to Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Rhodes, our missionaries at Torreon, Mexico, who are at present visiting the parents of Mrs. Rhodes in Ruston.

Mr. J. W. Carnes, who had been a member of the McDonoghville Church, across the river from New Orleans, and later a member of our Carrollton Avenue Church in this city, died at Tampa, Florida, after a long illness. He had been making his home in Tampa for some time.

We are grieved to learn through Rev. H. M. Ellis of the death of Sister T. W. Adams. She passed away on the morning of June 4 and was buried on the following day, at 10 a.m. All our readers will remember Brother Adams in this hour of great sorrow.

A revival meeting will begin at Bunkie, La., June 11. Rev. J. O. Haynes, one of our general evangelists, will do the preaching. The evangelist will be accompanied by his singer, Mr. Waltermire. The Methodist and the Presbyterian churches of Bunkie are co-operating in this meeting. Rev. George Fox is pastor of the Methodist church.

The contract has been let and work has begun on the new church at Haynesville, La., where Rev. A. J. Gearheard is the pastor. The building will be a three-story structure, providing for a Sunday school of 600 and a possible audience of 725. The building will be constructed of white brick and trimmed in Alganite stone. More than 100 persons have been added to the Haynesville church since Annual Conference last November.

The Editor is in Shreveport, La., taking part in the Preachers' Institute being conducted there. We learn that the attendance at the Institute is fairly good, and that Dr. E. W. Alderson, of the Southern Methodist University, and Dr. W. W. Patton, of Tennessee, are giving some fine addresses. Though he was not present at the beginning of the Institute, Rev. John E. Brown was expected to arrive on last Saturday and remain through the Institute.

A most memorable quarterly conference was recently held in the Greenwood Church, North Mississippi Conference. Three young men were recommended for license to preach: Aihert Beale, A. G. Gumble and C. S. Davidson. Brother Davidson will apply for admission on trial this fall; the other two young men will enter college to prepare themselves more fully for the ministry. The presiding elder of the Greenwood District, Rev. S. L. Pope, writes that the Greenwood Church is one of the most active that he knows of; 150 having been added to the church since the last Conference, $600 paid on benevolences, plans for a $40,000 Sunday school building under way, and ministerial support paid in full to date.

A BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE WEDDING.

A beautiful double wedding was solemnized Thursday morning, at 9:30, at the home of Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Doss, Jr., 1305 Monroe Street, Alexandria, La. Rev. Alonzo Early, of Quannah, Texas, in a very impressive manner, performed the double-ring ceremony at this double wedding of his two charming daughters, Miss Pauline Grace to Mr. James McKinley Caffall, and Miss Margaret Sue to Mr. Kleber S. Thompson, a number of friends and relatives being present.

The brides wore navy blue tricotine coat suits, with accessories in beautiful harmony, and had corsage bouquets of red rosebuds and forget-me-nots.

Miss Pauline is a graduate of Jennings High School and of Silliman Collegiate Institute, and has taught for several years in this State. Mr. Caffill is a splendid young business man of Jennings, La., the son of Mr. Frank Caffill, owner and manager of the Caffall Implement Co.

Miss Margaret is a graduate of Silliman Collegiate Institute, and taught the past session at Pineville, La. Mr. Thompson is an enterprising young business man of the Thompson Mercantile Company, of Marion, La., the son of Dr. O. H. Thompson, and is an A. B. graduate of the Louisiana University.

The home was attractively decorated in ferns and cut flowers.

The young people left immediately over the Texas and Pacific for New Orleans.

MR. W. C. LEWIS PASSES AWAY.

On Monday, May 29, Mr. W. C. Lewis, a member of the First Methodist Church of this city, died in Touro Infirmary of injuries sustained when he was struck by an automobile the preceding Saturday. Mr. Lewis came of one of the early Methodist families of Louisiana, and it was in the home of one of the Lewis family that Bishop Soule was entertained when the Louisiana Conference was organized in Opelousas. Several of Mr. Lewis' family have been distinguished judges in the Attakapas section of Louisiana and Mr. Lewis himself was prepared for the bar when the Civil War came. This interrupted his plans and he never took up the law after that struggle. He enlisted in the Eighth Louisiana Regiment, Confederate Army, and served throughout the struggle in the Stonewall Jackson Brigade under General Robert E. Lee, being in eighteen pitched battles, including Gettysburg and all the great conflicts. He was severely wounded at Antietam and later at Spottsylvania Courthouse. Mr. Lewis had served for thirty years as a clerk in the Criminal Court of this city. Judge Baker, with whom Mr. Lewis served for twenty-five years, and the present incumbent, Judge Ryan, paid splendid tributes to the character of Mr. Lewis at the funeral service. Interment was made in Opelousas, where Mr. Lewis was born eighty-three years ago.

Mr. Lewis was a brave and good man, ever distinguished by a high sense of honor and unswerving allegiance to those things which he believed to be right. He was a "gentleman of the old school," of a type that we sometimes fear is passing away. Rev. R. H. Harper, a relative of Mrs. Lewis, officiated at the services here and in Opelousas.

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

A complete program of the Corinth District Conference has been received from Rev. J. B. Randolph, the presiding elder. This conference will be held at Sherman, Miss., June 13-18. At 11 a.m. of the first day Rev. W. A. Wilson will preach, and, following the sermon, the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered. Preaching at subsequent services during the conference will be done by Rev. W. M. McIntosh, Rev. Melville Johnson, Rev. E. R. Smoot, Rev. H. P. Lewis and Rev. S. A. Brown. The following are made as "important suggestions": "That preachers and delegates attend the district conference full time. That local preachers be present to report or send in written reports and requests for renewal of licenses. That pastors and recording stewards see that quarterly conference records are brought to the district conference for examination. That pastors send in the names of all who will attend to Rev. J. L. Nabors, Sherman, Miss., that entertainment may be provided. And all are asked to pray and work for a great district conference."

PRAYER MEETING ATTENDANCE.

The following reports of attendance at prayer meeting last week have been received:

Farmerville, Rev. R. V. Fulton, 32; Epps, Rev. P. B. McCuhbin, 64; Lafayette, Rev. L. I. McCain, 59; Bastrop, Rev. G. A. Morgan, 31; Ruston, Rev. N. E. Joyner, 73.

One of the brethren who reported wrote that the count from his church was hardly fair, as a special meeting was held in connection with the prayer meeting. That is the very thing that needs to be done—the increase of the prayer meeting attendance by special features that may attract a larger number.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS.

It is one of the most difficult things in the world to change our first impression of a person, whether good or bad. We do not realize how rapidly the mind works when we meet a person for the first time. We are all eyes and ears; our mind is busy weighing the person upon the scales of our judgment. We are all alert, watching for earmarks of strength or weakness. Every word, every act, the manner, the voice—the mind takes in everything very rapidly, and our judgment is not only formed quickly, but also firmly, so that it is very difficult to get the first picture of the person out of the mind. Careless, tactless people are often obliged to spend a great deal of time in trying to overcome the bad first appearance they make. They apologize and explain in letters. But apology and explanations usually have very little effect, because they are so much weaker than the strong picture of the first impression, which frequently persists in spite of all efforts to change it. Hence it is of the utmost importance for a youth who is trying to establish himself to be very careful of the impression he makes. A bad first impression may be the means of barring him from credit and depreciating his worth at the very outset of his career. If you can leave the impression that you are a man first, that your manhood stands high up above everything else, then your integrity and your nobility are the most salient things about you and tower high above your other qualities. If people can see a real man behind everything else you exhibit, you will get the world's confidence.—From the Columbian Herald.

How shall we rest in God? By giving ourselves wholly to him. If you give yourself by halves you cannot find full rest. There will ever be a lurking disquiet in that half which is withheld.—Jean Nicolas Grou.

Day will return with a fresher boon;
God will remember the world!
Night will come with a newer moon;
God will remember the world!

FROM FANNIN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We are glad to be able to send you a good report from Fannin charge. This is our first year on this charge, but our association and work with the good people here have been most pleasant, and every indication is that the work of the Lord is prospering. These, truly, are a loyal people; many are really spiritual.

On the evening of December 17, just as the darkness had thrown her blanket over mother earth, wife and I made our arrival in Fannin. Our arrival being unexpected, there was no one at the parsonage to meet us; but, there being plenty of fuel, we were soon comfortably situated. However, in a short time the good people began to show up and remember us in a substantial way, and these tokens of love have continued almost daily. We have been remembered not only by our own people, but by other denominations as well. We found that new mattresses had been placed in the parsonage a short time before our coming.

The work has been pleasant from the very beginning. Dr. Tolle held our first quarterly conference, Brother Burton, our beloved presiding elder, being unable to reach us on account of sickness. Dr. Tolle makes a good presiding officer. Then at the time for our second conference, Brother Burton failed us again on account of sickness, and the road out of Jackson to Drake's being so bad he had no representative with us. So the writer had to try to feel like P. E. for a little while. Reports have been good. Every interest of the church is being looked after. The good people of Drake's on the day of conference remembered us with a pounding that lasted for weeks. The people on the Fannin charge know how to feed their preacher.

We have already planned for a revival to be held at each church on the charge, and have the promise of Brothers Dawson, Sells, Grice, Raley, and Westbrook to assist in these services. Dear reader, please pray for them and us that the Lord may give us a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit that many souls may be born into the kingdom and sanctified for the Master's work.

Sunday School

MSSISSIPPI CONF. NOTES.

When you read this our Standard Training School will be in session. We are boping and praying that it will be better than we have planned for even. Everything indicates that we will have a great tme. Pray that it shall be so.

The Brookhaven Institute was held the last two days of May. We did not reach 50 per cent of tne charges represented, but we did bave a mighty good time. I feel that any one who could have heard Dr. C. A. Bowen's address Tuesday night would feel that tbe whole effort was worth that one address. Of course, the school closings and the truck interefered much, but it was a great time.

The Theadville Sunday school places a "C" chart upon her walls with 70 per cent, a Progressive school. The very first to make tbis record.

The Wesson Sunday school places a "B" chart upon her walls with grade 85 per cent, an Advanced school. The first in the Conference.

The Brookhaven school is going after "A" Grade, 100 per cent. I believe with their fine workers they will make it.

The Board has assisted in organizing 14 new Sunday schools this year. I feel sure there have been other schools organized in which we did not take a hand. We would be proud to hear from every one who has organized a school. Give us the names of the superintendent and a list of the teachers.

There are 10 circuit-wide four-times-a-year institutes running now. That is 25 less than what we want. Who will help us?

Galloway Memorial Sunday school is running larger than ever before. They have some great plans maturing. We rejoice in their forward movement.

The Men's Bible Class of Capitol Street reports 250 present May 28. Has a class a better record in attendance? We do not have it in the office if there is. Let us hear.

The Barlow circuit has four Sunday schools running. Two are using union literature, and all are doing good work. Brother Long is in high favor with his folks and things look prosperous.

Rev. L. M. Sharp was elected president of the Preacners' League of Millsaps College. He desires the prayers of the brethren that he may lead his League into definite spiritual activities. Pray for him.

Rev. C. A. Bowen is anxious to put in teacher training for all the students of Millsaps. Can you encourage students to call for this work? If so, do your part and he will do his.

Brother Hull is doing great work. Pray for him. The people are giving him a good hearing. Hold up his hands.

Sunday School Day—we need the money, too.

Pray for the work and workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM GREENWOOD, MISS.

The Greenwood Methodist Church has had two rare treats within the last few weeks. Dr. S. A. Steel, of "The Pelican Pines," came to us and delivered a series of lectures on the Old Testament characters. He also preached at eleven o'clock on two Sundays and it is needless to say that he delighted the people with all of these strong messages. His lectures reveal such an extensive investigation, thorough study and insght into conditions under which the patriarchs lived as to excite wonder. With his ready command of pure English and power of description he made those ancient men of God so real that they seemed to live again in your very presence. His sermons on the "Crucifixion of Christ," and the one on the "Ground of Belief in Immortality" will not soon be forgotten. He says that he is seventy-two years of age, but his voice has lost none of its richness and his spirit none of the old-time vigor. It was a great pleasure to have him with us, and we suggest that any congregation that desires an intellectual treat will do well to send for Dr. Steel.

On the seventh of May, Brother W. M. McIntosh and his assistant, Rev. E. G. Phillips, came to us to begin a revival meeting. Brother McIntosh held a meeting here twenty-seven years ago which marked an epoch in the religious life of the city. A number of our leading citizens were converted at that time. They were glad to have him again, but were wondering if he had lost the zeal aud fervor of his early ministry; but the first service put all doubts to rest on that subject. He seemed to be as alert in mind and as active in body as he was thirty years ago. His preaching was with power and demonstration of the Spirit. It was the kind that stirs the conscience and makes people feel tbe need of a Savior. With the exception of an occasional flash of wit and a few well-aimed shafts of sarcasm, he did not dwell upon the common sins of the day, which is the main stock in trade of many evangelists; but he always endeavored to point the erring one to a better way, and impressed every one witb his intense earnestness, which is ono of the indispensable elements of a successful preacher.

The Rev. Ed Phillips is a regular evangelist and has had tbirty-two years' experience in this particular work. He is a sweet singer, a strong gospel preacher, and one of the best personal workers I ever saw. He is a man of refined feeling and chaste language. He makes a specialty of conducting services for men only, but a word never fell from his lips that would give offense to tbe ear of the most refined woman.

Last, but not least, we mention the work of Sister McIntosh. She is a trained worker of much experience and is successful in conducting services for children and women. I know of no evangelistic team which is to be more commended than these faithful servants.

The interest grew and the crowds increased from the first service. Notwithstanding the services at all the other churches in the town, excepting the Presbyterian, the church and Sunday school auditorium were filled to overflowing to hear the last message. The visible results of the meeting, besides stirring the consciences of those who were already members of the church, were more than one hundred professions and four of our young men answered the call to the ministry, and two young ladies put themselves upon the altar for the foreign field. All these young people came from the Epworth League, in which they have been active for two years.

We rejoice, and give God the praise.

FROM PINEVILLE, LA.

The greatest meetlng in the history of Methodism in Pineville has just closed, with Rev. Leon I. McCain as evangelist and Mr. Otis Spinks as singer. Every night from 50 to 200 people were unable to get into the church, every available space within the church being utilized. Forty-seven came forward to confess faith in Christ and start the Christian life; 65 promised to tithe; 18 family altars were erected, and 8 subscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate were secured.

This is accounted a great victory for Pineville, owing to the fact that this is a strong Baptist town, the home of Louisiana College.

On Sunday morning a love feast was held, which proved to be one of the greatest services of the campaign. Pastor and people are greatly encouraged and strengthened. Plans are on foot looking to tbe building of a larger church to take care of the crowds which have constantly on Sunday nights taxed the seating capacity of the church.

W. F. CHASE, P. C.

FROM LUCEDALE, MISS.

A good meetlng has just closed at Merrill, a point on the Lucedale circuit. The pastor was assisted by Rov. G. L. McNeese, of Trenton, Miss.

The meeting lasted eight days, with preaching morning and evening. The attendance, as well as the interest, was good throughout.

The old-time altar service was used, souls were saved, and we trust that it will mean a new epoch in the life of the community.

The church was organized there, receiving a goodly number by letter. Fourteen were received on profession of faith.

J. C. JACKSON,
Pastor Lucedale Circuit.

Do Not Neglect Your Blood

If it is in abnormal condition, the longer you delay taking a good blood medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, the longer it will take and the more difficult it will be for you to get back to "normalcy."

Not only boils, pimples, eruptions, but headaches, nervous spells, "all-gone" feelings, indigestion and loss of appetite are readily traced to impure blood. Thousands date getting on the right road to health from the day they began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Why not try it?

FROM CHALYBEATE, MISS.

Only those who have worked hard for a long time trying to accomplish something worth while for their church can appreciate the pleasure and satisfaction that comes from attending such quarterly conference as we have just had at Ebenezer, Chalybeate circuit.

After an able sermon by our excellent presiding elder, Rev. J. B. Randolph (one of the best in the Conference), we enjoyed a nice lunch served by the good ladies of that church, and also a pleasant social hour. It was the best conference that it has ever been our pleasure to attend. It was good from every point—a good sermon, a splendid report from our pastor, good collection. All the churches were represented, there being from two to four stewards from each church (a record-breaking attendance of the officials), and a very large crowd. Every one seemed to enjoy the day. The thing we were especially proud of was the paying of the parsonage debt, which has been hanging over us for so long a time. This debt was made by selling of an old parsonage, of which we were ashamed, and buying one of which many wealthy circuits or even stations would be proud of.

The former pastors, Rev. N. J. Golden and Rev. J. G. Johnson, had worked hard to accomplish this difficult task, and Brother Johnson left it in such a shape that Brother Ward was able to perfect it by the end of the second quarter. Too, we would not forget the part played by our former presiding elder, Rev. T. H. Dorsey, and Rev. J. E. Stephens, who has never lost interest in the little work he first served. He has a warm place in the hearts of our people here, who have watched him grow with much interest—we wish we had many more of his type.

Our pastor, Rev. M. L. Ward, is much loved by his people, not of his church only, but also by other denominations. He is pastor to all. He is a very busy man, ministering to the sick and needy in every way, and carries sunshine and laughter everywhere he goes.

We think we can see the work advancing along all lines. Our missionary society has done a splendid work this year, raising $287 up to the present time. This was raised to put on the parsonage debt. It would be interesting to have reports annually from every charge.

Let's wake up and help along this line. We are hoping this will be a great year for all our churches, and that we may be able to count our blessings. A MEMBER.

The New Calomel Is Delightful In Every Way

Sickening and Dangerous Qualities Removed—Medicinal Virtues Retained and Improved—Calotabs the New Name.

You have heard of smokeless powder, wireless telegraphy and colorless iodine—now get acquainted with nausea-less calomel—a calomel tablet that is wholly delightful in its effects, yet retains all of the system-purifying and liver-cleansing qualities of the old-style calomel.

Your doctor will tell you that calomel is the best and only medicine for biliousness, indigestion and constipation and now that it is pleasant to take everybody is taking Calotabs—the improved de-nauseated calomel tablet. One tablet on the tongue at bedtime, with a swallow of water, that's all—no taste, no nausea, no danger. Next morning you wake up feeling fine, your liver thoroughly cleansed, all biliousness, constipation and indigestion removed. Eat what you please—no danger.

Beware of imitations! Genuine Calotabs are sold only in "checkerboard" (black and white) packages bearing the copyrighted trade-mark "Calotabs." Tho large, family size sells for thirty-five cents; vest pocket size, ten cents. All dealers are authorized to refund the price if you are not delighted with Calotabs. —Adv.

A RESOLUTION.

The following resolution was passed at our Walnut Grove Sunday school. It then passed at the quarterly conference last week, and yesterday passed unanimously at our district meeting at Forest, and the secretary requested to send a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn., and to the Editor of the Sunday school literature:

Believing that the words inserted in brackets in the Scripture text of our Sunday school lessons are both useless and confusing, therefore be it

Resolved, That we request the Editor of our Sunday school literature to omit them from the Scripture text of our lesson.

DIGGING FOR GOLD IN JAPAN.

By R. S. Stewart, Jr.

III.

For years we have had a little group of Christians at Yukuhashi. They have met for Sunday school and church worship in a rented house, which has also served as home for the pastor. This house is located in one of the less desirable sections of the town and it has been difficult for the work to grow, partly by reason of our cramped and undesirable quarters. This group of Christians have been made glad, however, by the erection through Centenary funds of a neat chapel having accommodations for church services, Sunday school kindergarten and parsonage. The building is now ready for occupancy.

The town has a population of 8,000 people and is in a section where Buddhism is unusually strong. There are six large temples and four smaller ones, with twenty resident priests in town. This number of priests, however, is smaller than the average proportion for Japan. Probably there would be about one priest out of 300 people throughout the Empire, or a total of 175,000. This gives Buddhism a priesthood more than fifty per cent larger than the entire membership of the Christian church in Japan. Their temples are well located, often with beautiful grounds in which the children play and the weary rest. They have large incomes from farm lands belonging to different monasteries, from regular contributions of rice, from free-will offerings and from funerals. When we compare their numbers, wealth and magnificent equipment with the meager equipment of Christianity, nothing can account for the existence of our religion in this land save the presence of the living Christ. The crumbling of the walls of Jericho was not a greater manifestation of Divine power than is the crumbling of this mighty system before the Gospel of Christ.

It might be of some interest to mention a Buddhist service which I attended in Yukuhashi. Special evangelistic services were being conducted in a building on a crowded street. The building was so arranged as to represent the Buddhist idea of hell. The first figure near the door was the head devil who, like a stern judge, pronounced sentence upon his victim. A demon by his side was weighing in balances an unhappy creature. Clerks were standing by reading to the judge the record of each life. Sentences which had been pronounced were various, and all around the hall demons were represented executing the sentences of the judge. One victim is being cut through the head and another through the breast with saws held by exulting demons. Another is tied to a stake to be without food or drink for eternity. Another is having his tongue pulled out with pincers for

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Homer Missionary Society.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church at Homer entered the second quarter's work for this year with very satisfactory reports of the first quarter's work. Most all departments are well organized and doing good work.

The Juniors under the supervision of Mrs. R. W. Tucker and Miss Hefery meet every Sunday afternoon, and much interest is manifested in their Mission Study work.

The adults are taking their Mission Study in the form of lectures and quizes given by Mrs. Hugh Taylor, the superintendent of that department.

The literary programs have been very interesting and helpful. As far as possible the programs in the Year Book are carried out each month, special stress being given the prayer service conducted by some member of the Prayer Committee.

An interesting feature of the April program was a mock trial of our President, Mrs. W. A. McKenzie, who for the first time during an eight years administration had been absent from a business meeting of the Society. The examination to which she was subjected brought out a most inspiring report of the meeting of the Woman's Council at San Antonio which she had attended. The Judge's decision in her case was in favor of her complete justification and the Society, with a rising vote of appreciation for years of faithful and efficient service, renewed their allegiance to her leadership for the future.

The Society is carrying a budget of nearly $800 which includes dues, pledge ($300) and miscellaneous obligations. The Committee on Local Work reported a balance of $1600 in the Savings department, $400 of which was made on two entertainments given recently. This fund is to be used on the furnishings of our new church to be built this year.

Our membership is steadily increasing and it is very gratifying to see so many of the younger women of our church taking hold of the work with such enthusiasm. We pray that our efforts this year with God's blessing will do much towards the upbuilding of His kingdom, the one purpose for which we are all working.

MRS. GEORGE B. HEFLEY.

Something About St. Mark's Hall.

We are greatly indebted to the Junior Missionary Society of Houma for a generous supply of eggs, which, after being decorated with great merriment, were used in our Easter hunt at Audubon Park. Mrs. Paul Saunders, our ever-generous friend, was there with her car and ice cream. Messrs. Helmke and Singleton furnished trucks for the ride.

The prize for best work in the second grade was awarded to Kololah Burnton.

Brother Hayner gave us a very delightful story one afternoon.

The director has been asking some questions as to the most popular part of the sewing school (for ours is not all sewing). Below are three letters, and several answers are quoted verbatim. The favorite song of more than half is:

"Big girls, little girls, everybody come,
Come into our sewing school, and make yourself at home."

The music and words for this were brought from St. Joseph by our Head Resident.

"The thing I like best about the sewing school is the singing."

"The thing I come for most is the stories."

"Me, I like to sew better'n anything else."

"What I like most is my teacher."

"I can hardly keep from singing 'The Sewing School' all the time."

"Dear Beacon:

"I am going to sewing school. I can hardly say what I like best. I love my teacher, and also my beautiful basket that I won for good sewing. From

"KOLOLAH BURNTON."

"Dear Beacon:

"The sewing school at St. Mark's Hall teaches the children how to make iron holder, seams, baby clothes and a dress for yourself. We learn how to sing, pray and sew. The dues are 5 cents a month, and it is worth the money. JOHANNA SCHULTE."

"Dear Beacon:

"I started sewing school a month ago, and like it very much. I love to sew better than anything else, and I made a wash towel and a little apron.

"ANTOINETTE TOTE."

The most important date for the year for our girls is June 3d. Closing exercises for the Girls' Department are set for that evening at 7:30.

FROM THE FRENCH MISSION FIELD.

Dear Brother Carley: I want to send you this letter for you to put in the Christian Advocate, to give a vision of this French field. The Lord called me to work in his vineyard since Jan. 1. Rev. Martin Hebert, presiding elder of the French Mission District, found me at Labadieville, and asked me if I didn't feel called of the Lord to preach. I answered, "Yes." He put me on Bayou Blue circuit, and I can't tell you here how much work we have to do in this French field. When I first entered this field I had three appointments; now I have ten in all, and several other Macedonian calls. But I want to thank the dear Lord that I have some good help.

Lately I sent Rev. Robert Martin to Labadieville, one of our best preachers in the French field. He is a farmer, but he is so filled with the Holy Spirit that he wants to do his part for the Lord. The day he spent at Labadieville he preached twice to several visitors. They all were more than glad to hear him. He is the man the Lord called for that place, and he is wise enough to answer the Lord's call, "Here am I, send me." Rev. K. F. Martin also preached two sermons at Point au Chene lately. He is the Bayou Blue superintendent. He is a wonderful teacher. Albert Savoie is planning to preach as a local preacher. Gilbert Bergeron is a wonderful help in the field. So, let us keep on praying the Lord to send laborers in his field.

We have a great deal of work to do, but the trouble is, no transportation to go and do the work. I am on foot to serve all those places. If you know some one who feels able to help this French field, to bring the children of God into His kingdom, we will be glad to hear from him.

I am located in Houma, La.

G. A. LA GRANGE.

FROM LEAKSVILLE, MISS.

The second quarterly conference will meet with us May 28 at the Pinegrove Church. All eyes are turned this way for a good report. Every church in the charge is planning for a great revival this year.

We are to have with us at the Leakesville church Dr. Andrew Johnson, of Wilmore, Ky., and his singer, to be with us in a revival meeting June 11-25. This team is strong for God. Everybody in reaching distance of Leakesville is invited to attend this meeting.

The Leakesville Ladies' Aid is doing some fine work now. They have about $100 to recarpet the church and do some furnishing in the parsonage. Can you beat this for an Aid of seven members? Mrs. J. E. Alderman is the hustling president of this band.

The Sunday school is brimful of interest, and still increasing. J. T. Thomas is the superintendent. He is planning a plenic for the whole school to be given soon.

The Epworth League is booming, doing some nice work. An entertainment is being planned to entertain the Christian Endeavor and B. Y. P. U. A ball team is being organized in the League to answer some challenges made by some of the sister organizations. We deem it that clean church athletics is very wholesome for pastime. Mrs. W. C. Churchwell is the efficient leader in this League.

We are glad the General Conference is extending the service of laymen We love to use the laymen of our church, and do.

S. W. JOHNSON.

FROM BASTROP, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: On Sunday evening, April 30, a two weeks' revival campaign, led by Evangelist Dan E. Kelly, came to a close. Brother Kelly is thoroughly consecrated and is uncompromising with sin. His sermons are of a very high order, simple in language, profound in thought, orthodox in doctrine, and the Holy Spirit attended the Word in power as he expounded it. With wonderful effectiveness he drives conviction of sin into the hearts of men, and then, with the tenderest sympathy, he offers the divine remedy—salvation by grace through faith in Jesus Christ. Brother John Kelly, in his helpful and inspiring work as music director and personal worker, added materially to the success of the meeting.

As to the results of the meeting, I feel safe in saying it was a great spiritual awakening. Sinners were converted, backsliders were reclaimed, and the spiritual life of the church was quickened. Many testified to the fact that they had experienced a real revival of religion in their souls. Forty-six members were added to the church as a result of the meeting, making a total of fifty-three additions this year. G. A. MORGAN.

THANKFUL FOR A LITTLE CHILD

Mrs. Mertz Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Kutztown, Pa.—"I wish every woman who wants children would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has done so much for me. My baby is almost a year old now and is the picture of health. She walked at eleven months and is trying to use her little tongue. She can say some words real nice. I am sending you her picture. I shall be thankful as long as I live that I found such a wonderful medicine for my troubles."—Mrs. CHARLES A. MERTZ, Kutztown, Pa.

Many cases of childlessness are curable. Perhaps yours may be. Why be discouraged until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a faithful trial?

Spoken and written recommendations from thousands of women who have found health and happiness from its use have come to us. We only tell you what they say and what they believe.

We believe that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so well adapted to the conditions which might cause your trouble that good will come to you by its use.

Merit is the foundation of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has behind it a record of nearly fifty years.

lying. Another is spitted on a spear and waved aloft on account of his cruelty.

Surely these pictures are a terror to evil doers, we would think. And no doubt a certain amount of restraint is thereby exercised upon crime. But, unfortunately, the priest knows how to make it easy for his hearers. Let the evil doer repeat one prayer and it will erase his life. "Namu Amida Butsu"—"I believe in Buddba." This is sufficient for forgiveness without any true repentance or new birth being required. This is the "Justification by Faith" sect of Buddhism, which is the largest and most evangelistic of them all.

They thus invite their people, not to salvation from sin, but to a false security through the belief of a lie. And yet I think I have seen this same heathen idea masking itself in Christian garments in America. I have known men who have lived daily selfish and disobedient lives and yet who sheltered themselves in false security by calling upon the name of Christ in their formal prayers. How is this different from the Buddhist who uses the name of his diety only as a barrage behind which he may hide an impure life?

FREE TO ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER SUFFERERS

Our stay with the little group of Christians at this place was only three days, which was too short for the work tbat ought to have been done. However, every service was a time of blessing, and upon the last night there were three or more who asked to be baptized. There was evidence of genuine faith in Christ and blessing among the Christians. They now have a company of about ten. They are a heroic band who witness in a community where it requires courage of the highest order to be a Christian. They are worthy of your best love and prayer.

REORGANIZATION OF CENTENARY WORK.

To succeed Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, who until now has directed the Centenary activities, Dr. W. G. Cram of tbe Korea Conference has been elected Director General of the Missionary Centenary. Dr. Cram had a large part in the preliminary work of the Centenary and in carrying through the drive of May 1919. From December 1917 to August 1920, be was Associate Secretary of the Centenary Commission. He gave efficient service in the preparation of the survey on which the Centenary askings were based. In addition to this valuable work, he made other contributions to the success of the enterprise. It was believed that in view of the great issues involved in the collection of Centenary pledges, he should be held in the home field, hence, the action of the Centenary Commission in naming him as successor to Bishop Beauchamp. No better selection could have been made.

Dr. Cram and the Executive Committee of the Centenary Commission are now working out the plans for Centenary activities during the months ahead. It has been agreed that there will be a considerable reduction in the working force at Nashville headquarters. Certain departments will be transferred to other boards, and some will be discontinued. Such changes as are made, will be given publicity through the papers of the church.

FROM COURT STREET, HATTIESBURG, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The new Court Street Church to take the place of the one recently destroyed by fire, is well under way. This church, when finished, will take care of every department of our work.

We begin Sunday, June 4, a revival campaign, with Dr. L. J. Miller, of Nashville, Tenn., doing the preaching. We are expecting this to be a great year for Court Street Church.

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle contalning three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, sbake well, and you have a quarter plnt of the best freckle and tan bleach, and complexion whitener.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes bleach out and how clear, soft and rosy-white the skin becomes.

NEW ORLEANS

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 69—No. 24. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3462.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JUNE 15, 1922. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

FRATERNAL ADDRESS

Delivered by Dr. David G. Downey, Book Editor of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Dear Fathers and Brethren:

"Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ. We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers; remembering without ceasing your work of labor, and labor of love and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ."

To speak these hallowed words of greeting in the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, whose friendly messenger I am, is the crowning joy and honor of my life. Whatever differences exist in the minor matters of polity and ecclesiastical administration, it is none the less true that in the deeper things of Christian experience and purpose we are one. The word of John Wesley still stands—"If thy heart be as my heart, give me thy hand." And in the warmth and wealth of this assurance we, the sons and daughters of Wesley, to-day join hearts and hands and sing,

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

The quadrennium now closing has been for you a period of unusual prosperity. The record of the year just ended discloses a substantial increase in every important department of your work. The ministry of your pulpits and your pews has been signally blessed of God, and in this prosperity and in this evidence of divine favor we rejoice greatly. That God has been mindful of us and blessed us will, we are sure, be cause of thanksgiving to you even as it is to us. While it is not my purpose to enter into any detail as to the items that might be listed in evidence of the growth and prosperity of both these churches, this occasion cannot be allowed to pass without mention of the truly marvelous achievements of the Centenary Movement.

That this celebration of our common missionary anniversary was providentially timed of God to meet a world need and to match a world opportunity will not be denied by any competent interpreter of world conditions. That success has not been complete, that achievement has not been all that was hoped for, is doubtless true; but it is also true that the obstacles surmounted, the difficulties overcome, the mounts of vision attained have so far advanced the thinking and acting of both churches that recession to the previous standards of church thinking and living is utterly inconceivable. Methodist leaders in every age have been men of superb faith and far-reaching vision. Conscious of their providential call, they dared to follow where it led. First among the churches of the modern day, American Methodism sensed a world situation and planned to meet it. While the World War was encircling the nations in its fiery arms Methodist leaders, South and North, had the spiritual audacity to chart the moral need of humanity and to plan their program to meet that need. The response of Methodism everywhere was instant and inspiring. Other churches caught the contagion, speedily overtook, and now keep step with their comrades in world service. What the Centenary Movement has accomplished in widening the horizons, in stimulating the thought, in enlarging the generosity, and in quickening the zeal of Methodism is simply an earnest of the greater days that with God's help are yet to come. To-day we are consolidating our gains and bringing up re-enforcements in preparation for the next advance. In virtue of the idealisms and the enthusiasms of the Centenary the Son of God is to-day the leader of the most splendid crusade for the kingdom that the world has ever seen; and we are realizing as never before that

"The toppling crags of duty scaled
Are close upon the shining table-lands
To which our God himself is moon and sun."

I. The Sense of God.—It will be agreed, I think, that the realization of the kingdom of God in the earth is the business of the church. For this the church exists; and in proportion to its success in this respect, and only so, is it meeting its responsibility and opportunity. Now, the idea of God, by which is meant the sense of God in humanity, is basic to the kingdom. Fortunate it is that the church does not have to create this sense of God. God himself does that. It is his work. Jesus never attempted to create it. He assumed it. It has been well said that man is incurably religious. Indeed it is man's religiousness that sets him apart and differentiates him from other forms of animal life. No nation, and hardly an individual, has been found without some yearning, some aspirations for God. So true is this that without exaggeration it may be said that the hunger for God is universal.

"We sow the glebe, we reap the corn,
We build the house where we may rest,
And then at moments suddenly
We look up into the great wide sky
Inquiring wherefore we were born,
For earnest or for jest?"

To that inquiry there is only one answer—God.

II. Religion as Related to the Living God.—All great religious epochs have been coincident with the clear consciousness of a living God. When the sense of God has been dim and dull the world has dropped into the lowlands of materialism, and, per contra, when the consciousness of God as present and working in human life has been clear and definite the world has risen to the table-lands of the Spirit.

Take for purpose of illustration the Old Testament epoch. Read its literature. Of course this literature has its hollows as well as its hills, its moods of depression as well as of exaltation, its times of hesitancy and doubt as well as its periods of sublime faith; but the significant thing is that it is shot through and through with the sense of God, with the consciousness of God as a living, present factor in the affairs of men. At its best, as in Jeremiah, Isaiah, and the spiritual Psalms, it rises to a consciousness of personal communion and fellowship surpassed only by the sayings and the life of Christ.

No argument is needed to prove that at the heart of the New Testament era there is this renaissance of the sense of God. That is the explanation of the New Testament life and literature. After centuries of wandering in the wilderness of scribal-comments, interpretations and interpolations, Christ appeared, and once again put men in touch with a living God. "Moses said," he declared, "but I say unto you." He taught not as the Scribes and Pharisees, but as one with authority—one who was in touch with the source. It was the breath of spring after the frost and hardness of winter. It was the bubbling up of the water of life. Van Dyke speaks simple truth when he says that Christ "drew out of fallen, neglected hearts, by some celestial attraction, spontaneous, gentle, irresistible, a new efflorescence of faith and hope and love. Where he came a spiritual springtide flowed over the landscape of the inner life. Blossoms appeared in the earth, and the time for the singing of birds was come." It was the renaissance of the sense of a living God.

What is the religious lesson and warning of what we are wont to call the Dark Ages? is it not just this—the poverty and religious feebleness of an age that is out of touch with God? The Dark Ages had a vivid sense of ecclesiastical orders, creeds, formularies, confessions, and churches, but for the most part the time had lost original first-hand contact with a living God. Just here we find both the need and the meaning of the Lutheran reformation of revival. It was the partially successful attempt to get back to the source—to God.

Unless I greatly err, Methodism was the instrument in the hands of God for carrying forward the work so well begun by Luther and his co-workers. Some one has defined religion as "the life of God in the soul of a man," and when John Wesley on that May morning in 1739, after the strange warming of his heart the night before, walked out among the English hedgerows he not only enjoyed the songs of the birds and the odors of the spring flowers, but he knew the power of the indwelling life of God in his soul. He was now in conscious contact with the source. The impacts of the divine will met a ready response in him; and when that sort of thing happens with any man, and especially when it happens with a man of parts, God only knows what will be the result. The result in that instance was Methodism! And that is why we are here to-day. And I think it fitting, before passing to a more intimate consideration of our common Methodism, to pause long enough to pay a tribute to that little man whom God on that May morning ordained to a wider bishopric than was ever bestowed through human hands and councils. The foundations of Methodism in America, South and North, were laid by men and women who had come under the influence of John Wesley. It was his wisdom and vision that sent us Francis Asbury, Thomas Coke, and their compeers. It was his work and that of his fellows, as the historian Green tells us, that saved England in the time of the French Revolution "from the redfool fury on the banks of the Seine"; and it was an American poet, Richard Watson Gilder, son and nephew of Methodist preachers, grandson of a Methodist class leader, touched with the same fervor for righteousness that burned in Wesley's breast, who sings and who exhorts us while he sings:

"Let not that Image fade
Ever, O God! from out the minds of men.
Of him thy messenger and stainless priest,
In a brute, sodden, and unfaithful time,

Early and late, o'er land and sea, on-driven;
In youth, in eager manhood, age extreme—
Driven on forever, back and forth the world,
By that divine, omnipotent desire—
The hunger and the passion for men's souls!

Let kindle, as before, O heavenly light!
New messengers of righteousness, and hope,
And courage for our day! So shall the world
That ever, surely, climbs to thy desire
Grow swifter toward thy purpose and intent."

III. Methodism and a Living God.—We are fond of saying that Methodism is an experience. Very good, but an experience of what? "Of religion," you say. Again, very good, but what is meant by religion? Recalling that religion has been defined as the life of God in the soul, we come near to the true meaning of Methodist experience. It is not experience of a creed or a ritual or a book, and it is an experience of God. That is what Wesley had that night in Aldersgate Street, and that was what he kept through all the years. So Methodist experieces mean an original first-hand contract with God. In a word, it mediates the life of God to the individual. It asserts the possibility of the soul's touch with God and insists that this is the test of real religion.

Methodism has been charged with being subjective, introspective, and too much concerned with the individual. Doubtless the criticism has a basis in truth. None the less, the individual is first in the kingdom, though not the last or the whole. But the very charge proves the claim, to wit: that Methodism mediates a living God and expects the individual to be motivated by the divine inwelling.

It has been said that our hymns are too individualistic and introspective. Possibly true, but Methodists are apt to sing what they believe. And since they believe in and have an experience of God in their hearts, a God who meets with and ministers to men in their poverty or wealth, their sorrow or joy, their sin or holiness, they are quite likely to sing about it. We will doubtless broaden the range of our hymnology to include more songs of the social order, but I have no idea that we shall ever cease singing

"My God is reconciled;
His pardoning voice I hear;
He owns me for his child,
I can no longer fear.
With confidence I now draw nigh,
And, 'Father, Abba, Father,' cry."

Methodism, however, is not wholly subjective. It is objective and aggressive. Some one has defined it as Christianity in earnest. That is, Methodism mediates not only the life of God as an experience, but also that life in action. God is ever a worker. In the beginning God created, and there has been no cessation of his energy or activity. What man cannot do, God does. What man can do, God will not do for him. For the doing of the world's work there is needed God and man in co-operation. This is what George Eliot meant when she said:

"'Tis God gives skill,
But not without men's hands. He could not make Antonio Stradivari's violins
Without Antonio."

And when we think a minute we see that this is true. All God does is to make the raw material and gift Antonio with genius, but the genius of Antonio must play upon the crude material before we can have the musical instrument. Doubtless we can imagine the material, mental, and moral universe as coming complete and perfect in every point from God, but experience teaches us that nothing of that sort has been done, and reason reveals that it ought not to have been done. The late President Hyde, of Bowdoin College, expressed God's plan and man's right relation thereto when he said:

"O Lord, we most of all give thanks
That this, thy world, is incomplete;
That battle calls our marshaled ranks,
That work awaits our hands and feet.

"Beyond the present sin and shame,
Wrong's bitter, cruel, scorching blight,
We see the end at which we aim,
The blessed kingdom of the right.

"What though its coming long delay;
With haughty foes it still must cope.
It gives us that for which to pray,
A field for toil and faith and hope."

And Methodism—Christianity in earnest—all at it and always at it, is one of God's agencies for building a complete world.

No greater compliment has ever been paid to Methodism than the unconscious compliment of those who sneeringly say that the Eighteenth Amendment is Methodistic. That shows that Mehodism has not spent all its time in hymn-singing and in introspective testimonies. It makes it clear that Methodism has linked up with a righteous God who has a passion for righteous ends. Methodism saw the waste, the devastation, and the death wrought by intoxicating liquors and in common with other mediating agencies of God it threw itself whole-heartedly into the fight for a dry America and won! We share your just pride that in that great battle the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the superb leadership of your Bishop Cannon, held the right of the line and forced the fighting. And those who are seeking to overthrow the law by circumventing it, by making it ridiculous, by disobeying it, by maliciously and mendaciously discrediting it, might just as well understand that back of the Eighteenth Amendment there is a body of Methodist sentiment—a sentiment representing the ideals of millions of Methodists who will not brook any infraction or infringement of the law. Methodistic! Yes, thank God it is, but it is much more than that—it is nothing less than the life of God going forth in the service of humanity. It is God in touch with human life, and Methodism rejoices that in the day of opportunity it was able to come to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty.

Methodism has not been slow to note that individual Christians, when united in financial, industrial, or political organizations, often announce unchristian principles and do unchristian deeds. Here again, through a vital contact with a living God, it learns the truth and becomes an agency of God for mediating that truth and transmuting it into action. It does not hesitate to say that what is unchristian in an individual is unchristian in an organization. It declares that moral sanctions and moral obligations hold in corporate as in individual life. So we place the Social Creed of the churches in both our Disciplines and send it out as part of God's truth and plan for this present workaday world. And we will not be stopped from declaring that truth and pushing that plan by any pious exhortations to preach the simple gospel, by which is meant a flabby sentimentality without any actual relation to present-day life and work. Methodism well knows that the word of God is sharper than a two-edge sword and a discerner of the thoughts and intents not merely of individuals but of corporations as well. So long as men and women toil under intolerable conditions Methodism will not content itself with academic discussions about creeds and ancient formularies from which the spirit has long since fled. And it will insist that "The crest and crowning of all good,

Life's final star, is brotherhood;
And till it come, we men are slaves,
And travel downward to the dust of graves."

Methodism is optimistic. It believes in goodness and in man. It holds to a latent goodness in every man and seeks to develop it. In this it is again revealing and mediating the optimism and enthusiastic love of the living God, of whom the Psalmist said: "He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till he have set judgment in the earth, and the isles shall wait for his law." God has so much confidence in and so much love and enthusiasm for the goodness latent in his lowest child that he came in Christ and was crucified that the thief on the cross and all other sinners who repentantly come to him might one day be with him in Paradise. Even so Methodism. It holds fast the belief in the savability of each man and of all men and of all the agencies and organizations of men. As your College of Bishops truly said in communication to your last General Conference, "Methodism, almost alone of the many branches of the church, has proclaimed in her doctrinal standards as well as in her pulpit ministrations the precious truth of the universal atonement of our Lord." Methodism never dreams that if "right be worsted, wrong will trumph." It never for a moment imagines that God is fighting a losing battle. Over the din and noise of strife and through the smoke of conflict it hears the heartening assurance: "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasuro to give you the kingdom."

This spirit is illustrated by the legend to the effect that somewhere on the walls of some house in Florence there was a fine portrait of the poet Dante. No one had ever seen the picture; it was just a dim and musty tradition. But one day a lover of the old poet heard the tradition, and after long and patient searching found the supposed house. There was not a sign of a portrait anywhere. The walls were covered with whitewash and the floors littered with the debris of neglect. But the seeker was not discouraged; he had the floors swept and cleaned and then patiently began to have the whitewash taken from the walls. At last on one of the panels he had the joy of seeing the sad, strong face of the old poet of the Middle Ages. So Methodism believes that beneath all the litter and debris of life, beneath all incrustations of sin, misery, squalor, wretchedness, and crime—at the heart of the lowest man there may be found the image and likeness of the divine. It believes that

"'Tis not in the high stars alone,
Nor in the cups of budding flowers,
Nor in the redbreast's mellow tone,
Nor in the bow that smiles in shower,
But in the mud and scum of things
There alway, alway something sings."

And the purpose of Methodism's evangelism, of its revival services, is just to touch that singing something latent in the soul of the lowest man, evoke it, give it wings, so that like the lark "it may sing hymns at heaven's gate."

Greatly do we rejoice in the evangelistic emphasis which has been so characteristic a note in your church, and most heartily do we congratulate you upon the large success that has crowned your evangelistic services during this quadrennium. God forbid that the fires of evangelism should ever smolder on Methodist altars, and God grant that our hearts may be continuously cheered with the gladness of the redeemed as they sing:

"O happy day, that fixed my choice
On thee, my Savior and my God!
Well may this glowing heart rejoice
And tell its raptures all abroad."

But Methodism knows that it is not enough to rescue the perishing. It must mediate the life of God to the child in the cradle and hold him Godward from the cradle to the grave. God plans a Christian world, and that means Christian citizenship from start to finish. No chapters are more luminous than those chapters in the Discipline of both churches that deal with the religious nurture and instruction of the child, and none are more important. Religious Education is the watchword of the modern day. We need not be afraid of the term. It is biblical. "Culture thy heart with culturing, for out of it are the issues of life." Jesus was taught in the best Christian home the world then knew. Later he himself became a teacher of religion. How often it is recorded: "He opened his mouth and taught them." Placing all possible emphasis upon the value of reclamatory evangelism, it is none the less true that the supreme opportunity of Methodism is with the children in her homes and Sunday schools. These millions are in the plastic, impressionable period of life, and it is for parents and pastors and teachers to fire their imagination with visions of the kingdom and fix their purpose to realize that kingdom. For a generation and a half Germany filled the minds of her children with the idea of world conquest and came near achieving her unrighteous purpose. What she did out of a wrong motive and to a wrong end Methodism must do out of a pure motive and to a right end—the establishment of the kingdom of God in the earth. The wars of the world are fought by youth. The armies will not take grayheads like you and me. They want our sons and our grandsons. The armies of the King of Righteousness must be recruited from the ranks of childhood and youth. Let us cease describing righteousness in terms of negation and begin to set it forth affirmatively. In home, Sunday school, and week-day schools of religion let us set forth in glowing terms the joy of righteous conquest as more than the moral equivalent for war.

Too much we have told our young people what they must do. The time has come to show them what they may do. Let them see that Christianity means the life of God in society, literature, politics, and trade. Train them religiously and say to them: "Go out into society and lift it out of its inanity and weakness into something of sanity and strength; touch literature and lift it out of decadence and sensuality into sweetness and light; go into political life and let it be seen that it is not an opportunity for selfish aggrandizement, but a chance for high and unselfish service; go into business with the purpose not merely of enriching yourself, but of establishing relations and contracts that shall be world-wide and mutually helpful and beneficial!"

This is Methodism's supreme opportunity. She has the theory, she has the childhood and youth by millions. Let her put her theory into practice; and these joyous, idealistic, altruistic, sacrificial, resilient hosts will crowd to her standards. They will girdle the globe with a song of gladness, will march across it with the step of conquest, will lift it in the arms of their faith, love, and prayer, swing it in its divinely appointed moral orbit, and ultimately bind it as "with chains of gold about the feet of God."

Methodism envisages the world. Its thought ranges the universe. Its message is to all peoples. Here again it is simply mediating the mind of God who so loved the world as to come into it and die for it. It was the world vision that enabled Wesley to say, "The world is my parish." It brought him and Whitefield to these shores as missionaries to a strange land. Later it brought Asbury and Coke, sent Coke on long voyagings, your Lambuth and our Taylor and Bashford to Africa and India and China, and to-day keeps our workers in all lands and explains the marvelous achievements of our missionary movement. It was the sense of world message and mission that caused your leaders to designate March 26 last as World Sunday—a day for the matching of your marvelous resources against your world obligations and opportunities. Methodism feels that the consciousness it has of God, the work it does in co-operation with God, the vision it has of God and God's plans—all this is a sacred trust. It is under the compulsion of an inner urge for the discharge of this trust. It is in haste to proclaim the experience, to extend the work, and to widen the vision in the hope that it may at least be "a bugle at the lip to scatter a divine contagion on mankind."

IV. Methodism and the World Situation.—Every thoughtful person must necessarily be concerned about present-day religious conditions. A prominent educator recently declared that a marked characteristic of our day is the absence of the sense of God. Is he right? Does the world today believe in God? and does it make that belief a controlling factor in world affairs?

Note the situation. Recall the marvelous advance of physical science with the consequent and unfortunate intrusion of scientists into the realms of philosophy and religion, and the equally unfortunate intrusion of would-be theologians into the domain of science. Note, again, the materialistic tendency of the last half century, the growing sense of the value of things and the vast accumulations of wealth, especially in connection with the World War. And last of all, the war itself, with its appalling wastage, its wanton destruction of things most valuable and sacred; while life, God's most precious and priceless gift, was sacrificed on the altar of materialism with a prodigality and recklessness unsurpassed and hitherto inconceivable.

In view of all this, can it be wondered that the sense of God—living, present, vital, and active—has been dimmed and has well-nigh lost its compelling power?

Of course, I know that the world repeats its creeds, says its prayers, sings its hymns, and performs its ritual observances. I make no doubt that it believes in a God who was very close to Assyria, Egypt, Babylon, and Palestine. That is far enough away to be innocuous. To-day the world is a good deal like those ancients of whom it was said that > "They did not abolish the gods,

> But they sent them well out of the way,
> With the rarest of nectar to drink,
> And the blue halls of nothing to sway."

Oh, no; the world does not abolish God. It is not quite ready for that. But it relegates him to the dim, the distant, and the past, a God who used to do things and who used to be interested in places and people—largely the old deistic notion of an absentee God. Now, a dim, vague, and hazy recognition of God is doubtless better than no recognition at all, and yet it is of very little value as a solvent of present-day conditions and difficulties. To be of real value the old-time belief in a living, speaking, acting God must come back to us with all its old-time sanction and virility.

Right here is Methodism's mission and opportunity. Methodist doctrine and teaching, first, in respect of God in experience, that is, a living God in vital contact with the individual soul, guiding and controlling the life; then of God as a working force, manifesting himself through individuals and institutions and peculiarly through his church, in the interest of righteousness—flaming forth in wrath against all ungodliness and flaming forth in love and power toward all righteousness of life and contact; and, finally, its conception of God as a world power—guiding, controlling, undergirding, overruling—until that day when all men everywhere shall gladly own his sway and triumphantly acclaim him King of kings and Lord of lords—all this is precisely what the world needs to-day. Methodism has the message, the doctrine, the ideal, as no other church has. In the providence of God she has been intrusted with these truths. Will she meet the expectation of her Lord and the need of humanity, or will she prove recreant to her trust and let another take her crown?

In our connectionalism is our strength. The forces of evil rightly fear a connectional church. An institution that can mobilize its forces for united action, that can throw in its reserves at the point and time of immediate need, is a power to be reckoned with. One of the most dangerous tendencies of our American life is the disregard of law. This disregard is not confined to one law nor to any section. While it is just now most evident in regard to the Eighteenth Amendment, it is in fact a revolt against all law and threatens the very existence of democratic institutions. This flouting of the law is not confined to overt acts. If it were, it would be less dangerous. But the foes of democracy have enlisted the power of the press—daily and periodical—in this propaganda. One of these organs recently, in praising a leader among the new intellectuals of our days, says: "He has had the fearlessness to avoid the respectable and the wholesome, those two devils, which so often betray in the end even the most intelligent of Americans." Nothing could be clearer—whatever is wholesome and respectable is marked for slaughter; only the indecent and the unwholesome are fit to live.

Now, Methodism, not only by its doctrine, but also by reason of its organization, has an opportunity to serve America as no other church now on the horizon possibly can. In point of fact, when we remember our quarterly, district, Annual, and General Conferences; when we think of the presence of our ministry and laity, now or soon to be, in every one of these Conferences; when we know that we are strategically placed in every State and Territory of the nation—it must be apparent to all who think constructively that the opportunity of Methodism to be in fact the American church for the carrying out of American democratic ideals in morals and religion is an opportunity that can be forfeited only by Methodism itself.

Brothers, thus far I have not said anything about unification, and yet it has been implicit in all my thinking and speaking. The doctrines that have been emphasized, the ideals that have been set forth, the achieved results that have been declared, the opportunities just presented, are common to Methodism. They are yours and mine—ours. They are a common inheritance and represent a common task. We are in debt to our forbears, and all we are and have and do bespeaks a common ancestry.

I love the Methodist Episcopal Church. I have a right to love her. All I am under God and godly parents I owe to her. She found me at her altars a lad of tender years, she trained me in her schools, she admitted me to her ministry and now she has crowned me with honor in sending me to you to tell of her love and to pledge anew her unfaltering fealty to the ideals and tasks that are common to us both.

It is not fitting that I should argue the question of unification, but this much is fitting, and and my church would hold me recreant did I not speak this word of interpretation. The action of our last General Conference at Des Moines was an action taken in the interest of unification and with an intense desire therefor; a unification that will bring us together on a basis of equality, with every right and interest of all minorities amply protected and guaranteed. It is a word from the heart uttered in all sincerity by men of good will to men of good will, an action that looks expectantly, eagerly, longingly, for the speedy coming of the day when the total impact of a united and closely knit connectional Methodism shall once again be against everything hostile to the best in national and international life, and for everything everywhere that makes for the swift coming of the kingdom of truth and righteousness.

So far as the Methodist Episcopal Church is concerned nothing is closed, everything is open. The present plan, any other plan—present proposals, past proposals, new proposals—all open! For the emphatic official declaration is, first—

"We reaffirm our deep conviction that the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should be reunited in one church. And so earnestly do we desire such a reunion that we declare ourselves ready to accept any equitable plan of union that shall be mutually satisfactory to the membership of both churches."

And, second, after arranging for the personnel of its Commission, the declaration is:

"This Commission is hereby authorized and instructed to act with the Commission from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, either in arranging for the Convention proposed above, or in perfecting the plans already before the two churches, or in working out new plans of unification for submission to the churches."

As I stand here, facing with you this day of humanity's need, this hour of national and international opportunity for our beloved Methodism, I am thinking of those who have gone before and who are watching us with eager and expectant hearts. I am thinking of Wesley and Asbury; of Philip Embury, Barbary Heck, and Robert Strawbridge; of William McKendree and Joshua Soule; of Atticus Haygood and Matthew Simpson; of Elijah Hoss and Wilson Lewis; of Alpheus Wilson, Walter Lambuth, and James Bashford—and my heart cry is: "Wherefore seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the beginner and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." The way of the cross leads home, for churches as for individuals.

Brothers, it is not sunset; it is sunrise! "Not yet broad day, but day's white birth which promiseth, and blesseth, promising." I believe in God Emmanuel, God with us!

"God works in all things; all obey
His first propulsion from the night:
Wake thou and watch! The world is gray
With morning light!

GREENWOOD DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Greenwood District Conference of the North Mississippi Annual Conference convened in the Methodist church at Ruleville, Miss., April 28, 1922, and continued its deliberations until the evening hour of the 30th.

The presiding elder, Rev. S. L. Pope, directed the proceedings of the Conference with ease and efficiency.

All of the pastors and twenty-one lay delegates were in attendance. The presence of Rev. John Ritchey and Rev. W. S. Shipman, who in former years had served the Ruleville church as pastor, added joy, wisdom and edification to the occasion.

The reports from the pastoral charges were quite good and indicated progress, optimism and faithful services. Worthy of special note is the fact that they showed that two hundred and forty-two members had been added to the church.

Rev. E. J. Rutlege, Rev. B. H. Adams and Rev. W. H. Hester were recommended to the Annual Conference for deacon's orders. Rev. E. J. Rutledge was also recommended for admission on trial into the traveling connection. J. W. Nix, of Carrollton, Miss., was granted license to preach.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: J. M. Forman, G. R. Stokely, A. L. Marshall, R. L. Ward, J. H. Price, Mrs. G. C. Jones, W. T. Johnson and Mrs. F. Z. Whitehead.

V. C. Curtis, J. T. Lockhart, S. C. Yates and W. D. Bennett were constituted a Licensing Committee to serve until the ensuing Annual Conference.

Hon. J. M. Forman, of Indianola, Miss., was chosen District Lay Leader.

Rev. L. H. Estes, secretary of the Methodist Hospital at Memphis; Mrs. S. F. Riley, field secretary of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson; Rev. J. E. Stephens, Professor of Religious Education in Grenada College; Rev. B. P. Jaco, Centenary Secretary and Treasurer of the North Mississippi Conference; Rev. J. H. Holder, Conference Secretary of Education, and Mrs. F. Z. Whitehead, District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, honored the conference with their presence and gave brief but stimulating reports of the great work committed to their care.

The preaching of the occasion, which was done by Rev. J. T. Lockhart, Rev. W. C. Galceran, Rev. W. N. Dodds, Rev. W. D. Bennett, Rev. John Ritchey and Rev. T. H. Mills, was of a high order and deeply impressive. They proclaimed the Gospel in great earnestness, with convincing confidence in the Holy Scriptures, and with manifest devotion to God and the church.

Among the things recommended are the following important matters: A committee consisting of three laymen to work in co-operation with the presiding elder in devising a plan for serving the unoccupied territory of the district and to submit this plan to the Conference Board of Missions for its careful consideration and approval; a committee from each pastoral charge to act with a like committee from the Woman's Missionary Society in standardizing the parsonages of the district as well as the furniture of these homes; a more conscientious observance of Sunday School Day, the primary object of which is to bring the Sunday school to the attention of the church and to secure for it a more efficient management and a more adequate support; a thorough endorsement of the District Standard Training School for Sunday school workers, that it may accomplish the largest possible results and become a permanent institution of the district.

The entertainment afforded the Conference and the attendance upon its sessions are things in which the Ruleville people excelled, extending as they did a very gracious hospitality and manifesting a very hearty interest in each day's proceedings. It was, indeed, a notable conference, full of interest, deeply spiritual, and delightful in every particular.

Inverness was chosen as the place for the next conference.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

The baccalaureate sermon for Centenary College was preached by Bishop Samuel Hay and that for Mansfield by Dr. H. F. Brooks.

Centenary had seven graduates and Mansfield twenty-four.

Definite plans have been worked out for the summer school at Centenary College, which will begin June 13th and run to August 6th.

A new radiophone has been installed at Centenary by a local company. A number of successful programs have been received from New Orleans, Chicago, Pittsburg and Dallas.

The Centenary "Alma Mater" song was composed by Dr. James Church Alvord, one of the professors, and is as follows:

"Where the sleepy silvery bayou
Gleams among the pines,
Watching o'er the throbbing city,
Alma Mater shines.

Chorus—
"Forward, forward, Centenary!
Time and tide may fail,
But our hearts shall love thee ever—
Centenary, Hail!"

"Like a wave the mighty city
Surges 'round thy feet;
Guide it, train it, teach it wisdom,
Alma Mater, sweet.

"Green the boughs that rustle 'round thee
On thy stately erest.
Greener is our memory of thee,
Alma Mater, blest."

Mansfield College's song is sung to the tune of "Juanita," and thrills the soul with delight in the following words:

"In fair De Soto, where the corn and cotton grow,
In Mansfield village is a school we know.
In those halls of learning where for years we love to dwell,
Seeking, striving, yearning, under wisdom's spell.

Chorus—
"Mansfield, Mansfield College,
Be our Alma Mater's name;
Mansfield, Mansfield College,
We will sing thy fame.

"From all around us hear we now the note of joy,
For Mansfield College we our best employ.
'Round each nook and corner mem'ries dear have been entwined,
And each spot we cherish, for 'tis mine and thine."

Let our Methodist boys and girls learn to sing these songs in their social meetings.

Our Louisiana Preacher's Institute was a pronounced success. Sixty preachers were in attendance during the sessions. The lectures were inspirational, cultural and practical. The night services were largely attended by church people. The country problem was seen in a new light and no doubt will be grappled with with renewed vigor. The Board of Education acted wisely in asking the Conference to project this movement. Next year we will have additional features and a much larger interest.

Interest in the prayer meeting is growing. Report your attendance. Put something into your prayer meeting and you will more than likely get something out of it. We want a prayer meeting in every church and a family altar in every home. Start with your own—then the movement will have progressed at least that far.

First Church, Shreveport, has a real live prayer meeting. The interest is growing and deepening, and will culminate in a great revival to begin on September 27.

Centenary College had a very fine commencement. All of the traditions of old Centenary were maintained. The orations were superb, the rivalry between the societies was keen. The Franklin Institute won the cup.

Centenary College has made a bigger advancement this past year than any one year of her history. The solid foundation for her growth was laid in the faithful services rendered by those who in former years gave their life in behalf of Christian Education. There is glory enough to pass around to every one. Now is the time for the friends of Centenary to pull together for a new dormitory to be built this summer. It must be done and will cost $100,000. More boys have signed up for rooms than we have space for. Still more are coming. Send in the names of boys that are available. It is a venture of faith, which God will honor. Help Centenary's President, Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, to put this enterprise over, so that when our Conference meets here in the fall we can truly sing, "'Tis done, the great transaction's done."

The commencement exercises at Mansfield College were the very best in the history of the institution. The graduating class was very large. The musical advantages were very fine, and for next term will even be better. The buildings are in better condition, with more conveniences and comforts, than at any time before.

Mansfield can take care of 115 vigorous, ambitious, sensible girls. Reservations must be made early; so send on the names of any girls that are available. We need to put an additional wing to our main building to make more dormitory space. It will take $100,000 to do this, and we would like to see this done before the meeting of our Annual Conference.

On a sun dial which stands on the pier at Brighton these words are inscribed: "'Tis always morning somewhere in the world." So may we say of our Christian colleges: "'Tis always a need somewhere in the school." Why should we grow weary of life when the clouds hang low and the sun will not shine? The morning sun will drive the mists all away. The brighter day is coming—yea, is already at hand. Balmy breezes, blown softly from a land of flowers and fragrance, will make us forget the chill and damp of these lowlands. Hurry across the valleys to the hills beyond.

Let the pledges to the Christian Education Movement be paid promptly so that the bright morning of "everything in full" will be ushered in. This can be done by one of the simplest plans imaginable. It is as old as history. It is God's financial plan, the tithe. Are you a tither?

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Sec'y of Education.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

A preacher's inner consciousness is a repository in which are stored many strange and startling secrets. I sometimes think the ministers of God's grace are not half worthy the confidence and trust reposed in them. If there is anything that arouses my unrighteous ire it is for one to betray a sacred trust, for this faith which men have in their spiritual leaders is no light thing, but beautiful and sacred. Like the anmone, or windflower, it sometimes grows in the toughest sod.

Another secret place is the preacher's thought as he envisions the sins, foibies and selfishness of those about him. If he would really speak all he knows there would be dynamite in the camp and T. N. T. in the trenches. But, poor fellow, he just takes them as they are, being oue of them, and does sometimes just a little better, or the best he may. Herein is the grace of God magnified.

Progress is the law of life. New forms of expression in the world of thought and action mark the supreme struggle of the race toward the nobler and higher. Great epochs in the world's history are a culmination—the rich heritage of earnest, progressive endeavor. The private life, or better, inner life of each good man and woman counts for the mass movement of the race. No Italian vales and sun-kissed plains can be found but by scaling the Alps. Out of the turmoil and strife of to-day come the millenniums of to-morrow. And these can be reached in no other way for not infrequently the joy of life is paid for with the coin of pain and tears. Wrecks of systems which men held dear in days since gone, strew the pathway of man's onward march toward the ideal. Laying aside that which is effete and outworn in the old makes room for the new and the better. Therein let us rejoice and be glad.

There were two things which seemed to arouse the wonder of Jesus. One was the want of faith in God; and the other, faith in Him. He did not many mighty works because of their unbelief, and he marveled at the faith of the centurion whose servant he healed.

The faith of this Roman captain was so unpretentious, so absolute, so simple in its trustfulness and willingness to acknowledge the complete lordship of Christ, that it has passed into the history of the church as a splendid example, worthy of emulation. His argument is this: I am under authority to obey and to command. I am faithful to the tribunes over me, and I exact implicit obedienco from those subject to me. So he recognizes that Jesus is Lord of the great spiritual empire. And his faith was signally honored. He only can command who knows how to obey. An old lesson, yet one of vast import and value.

WANTED: BOOKS FOR CENTENARY COLLEGE LIBRARY.

Will every preacher and every lover of our College assist us NOW in placing four thousand more volumes in our library? The new requirements for standard A-grade colleges in the Southern Association demand that we increase our library at once. If every one of our friends would look through his or her book shelves, he or she would find scores of books that will never be used again there, but would be used constantly here by our boys. What a help it will be if you will send us a few good histories, old classics, commentaries, biographies, essays, and so forth.

If you will send me a list of books you could spare, I'll be glad to check it up and tell you which ones we need. Also, we shall gladly pay the freight. Please let me hear from you at once. If you know of a good set of books that could be bought at small price, please let me know about it.

BISHOP CANDLER DECLINES TO SERVE LONGER AS CHANCELLOR.

Although the Trustees of Emory University desired Bishop Candler to continue to serve as Chancellor, when nominated at their meeting on June 2 he declined re-election. It is understood that, in addition to his work as a bishop, he will now give himself to the completion of the Life of Thomas Coke for the Methodist Founders Series and the preparation of the biographies of Bishop Charles B. Galloway and Dr. Young J. Allen, which he engaged to write several years ago, and which have been delayed by the double work he has carried since 1914.

THE GRENADA TRAINING SCHOOL.

We have just closed our third Standard Training School at Grenada College, with an attendance of about 125. About 85 credits were given. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, the efficient Field Secretary, was greatly pleased with the results, as we all were. Dr. Milden, Professor of Greek in the State University, gave a most popular course in Methods of Training. Mr. E. E. French, of Nashville, taught Intermediate work again, as he did last year. Mrs. W. N. Duncan, of Drew, taught psychology. Mrs. J. M. Wyatt gave the same course in Adult Methods that she gave last year. Miss Ramey taught Primary Methods, and Mrs. W. W. Adams, of Memphis, gave the work for the Beginners. Miss Mary Alice Jones, editor of the Graded Lessons, had charge of the Junior Methods. All of these did their work in a most satisfactory way, and were highly commended by their classes. But the one outstanding teacher of the school was Dr. Norman E. Richardson, of the Northwestern University. He is one of the brightest teachers that ever came this way. His great sermon on Sunday morning on "Jesus, the Master Teacher," was a great utterance. One does not hear just such a sermon many times in a lifetime. The management were urged to see to it that Dr. Richardson is brought back another year. If he can be had, he will be there.

One of our regrets was that so few of our preachers were present. Many of the courses given at Grenada are just as good as they give at Junaluska because they are by the same people who give these courses at Junaluska. Our aim is to bring the very best teachers to our school, so that our people may have the very best advantages at the smallest possible cost. We hope another year to have 200 people present. The need is great.

SCHOOL FOR PASTORS AT BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

Dear Brother Carley: This is the fifth day of the School for Pastors of this section, and the work is making fine progress. The entire staff of teachers is here, and on the job to a finish. We have three men here from other connections, namely: Dr. Worth M. Tippy, of New York; Dr. Laird, President of Albion College, Albion, Mich., and Dr. Clark, of Indiana.

This is a real school, and the boys are putting in full time. I don't think I have ever seen a more enthusiastic body of men. We have five Conferences represented: the Mississippi Conference, the North Mississippi, the Alabama, and the Georgia. There are more than a hundred men here from these Conferences.

We have a great sunrise prayer meeting every morning, and the spiritual tide runs high. There does not seem to be any sign of "modernism" cropping out at any of the lectures. One of our leaders says it is the best thing of the kind he has ever attended, and he has attended many.

One of the most interesting features of this day and of the school so far was the lecture delivered at the 11 o'clock hour by Prof. George W. Carver, of Tuskegee, Ala. Prof. Carver is a noted chemist of national reputation, and is known in other countries, while but few of the people of the South have ever heard of such a man. He confined his lecture and exhibit largely to the sweet potato and peanut. He has derived from the potato one hundred and fourteen different useful products. Just to give the reader some idea of what this wonderful man is doing, I will give a few of the many things he is turning out of his laboratory: four grades of potato flour; a half-dozen or more of breakfast foods; potato candies; syrups; chocolate; tapioca; starch of the finest quality; two beautiful brown paints; milk; stains for wood; dyes for cloth of quite a variety of beautiful shades; substitute for the yellow of an egg; ginger of a good quality; a good quality of rubber; stock feed of a high quality from peeling and vines.

He says he has not half finished the potato. He says he has two hundred useful products from common red clay. He thinks as much can be done with the pecan as with the potato, or even more. He has two or more carloads of specimens in his laboratory.

This wonderful man is a pure blood Negro, born in Missouri, educated in Kansas and Iowa. He has been at the Tuskegee School for Negroes twenty-eight years. His simple faith in God is the most beautiful I have ever witnessed. He gives God all the glory, and says much of his discovery is directly revealed to him by the Divine Spirit. One of the most wonderful things about him is his deep sense of duty and his loyalty to his God-called work. He was offered two millions by English syndicates for his services in some way, but he refused. Mr. Edison offered him more than $50,000 a year for his services, but the offer was refused because he felt that God wanted him where he is now working.

When you see this simple, humble man, and see spread out before him his wonderful display, you are constrained to say, "What hath not God wrought! Is the day of miracles past? How inexhaustible His resources! How wonderful his way!"

DISCONTINUANCE OF PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT, MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: The notices appearing in the daily papers doubtless have apprised the many friends of Millsaps College of the decision reached by the Board of Trustees at their recent meeting to discontinue the Preparatory Department.

This step has been under consideration several years and the final determination in the matter simply means that in the judgment of the authorities of the College the point has been reached which normally comes in the history of every growing A-grade college, where the increased attendance upon the college classes makes necessary the directing of the entire power of the institution upon that element of the student body.

The decision was influenced, also, by the recognition of the number and excellence of the high schools of the State.

Some of the patrons of the Academy will be disappointed, and for this reason the discontinuance of the Academy is to be regretted. But we shall have to content ourselves with thanking them for their patronage and indulging the hope that these fine boys will in time become students of the College.

Very cordially yours,

A. F. WATKINS, President.

INCARNATE LOVE.

By Wilbur Fisk Tillett.

O Love of God incarnate,
Who comest from above,
To show us God the Father
In human life of love.
God's love to earth thou bringest
That men may see in thee
How like man is the Father,
How like God man may be.

O Love of God incarnate,
Life bearer sent to men,
Who drinks at thy deep fountain
Shall never thirst again:
God's life to earth thou bringest,
And, though the thorn-path trod
Led thee to death on Calvary,
Thou wast the Son of God!

O Love of God incarnate,
Thy resurrection hour
Revealed the life eternal,
And robbed death of its power:
Enthroned on high thou reignest
That men may share with thee
Thy life, thy love, thy glory,
And live eternally.

O Love of God incarnate,
Thou everliving Word,
Through whom the Father speaketh,
In whom man's voice is heard,
In thee all love and wisdom,
Divine and human, meet;
When God through thee hath spoken,
Love's message is complete!

RESTORE THE COLLEGES TO THEIR TRUE MISSION.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

The season for the commencement exercises of the colleges has come, and Boards of Trustees are meeting.

All college authoritics—both trustees and faculties—will do well to set about at this time the restoration of our institutions of learning to the fulfillment of their true mission. There is widespread discontent with some tendencies which have been prevalent for quite a long period.

More than twenty years ago, when Woodrow Wilson was President of Princeton University, he said: "I have found everything a note of apology. Learning is on the defensive. We have fallen of late into a deep discontent with the college. The college has lost its definiteness of aim. There is utter confusion and a hopeless dispersion of energy."

Conditions in the colleges have grown worse since President Wilson made that utterance. Institutions of higher learning, Northern institutions especially, have fallen too much under the control of schoolboys, who have turned them into places of recreation and carried them away from the fulfillment of their true mission. Students and young alumni have been allowed to determine college policies.

The unworthy ambition for large enrollments has induced college authorities to yield to boyish demands for all sorts of easy courses, diversions and sideshows. The boys have been accustomed to rule their parents. Why should they not reign over the institutions to which thek go? If their rule over college authorities is denied by any institutien, will they not go to other educational establishments where their demands will be allowed and their mandates obeyed? Their "coaches" cost more than their instructors; why then should instruction outrank games? Their clubs are more costly than their courses; why should study displace social engagements?

By all the cross currents set in motion by games, dances, diversions, etc., very many colleges have been diverted from the true ends of education at which they should constantly aim, and have been carried whithersoever their youthful governors have listed.

The case was put clearly and cogently by Dean Roe of the University of Wisconsin in an article published by Scribners Magazine some time ago. Dean Roe said:

"Verily the American College, like the American city, has been called the melting pot of nations! Little wonder that faculties have been stricken with confusion before the task of creating order out of this chaotic mass.

"Then, too, the 'college life' of these young people has been immensely distracting. Mr. Slosson, in his book, 'Great American Universities,' after discussing the life at fourteen of our representative institutions, concludes his survey with this significant statement: 'The most vulnerable point in our collegiate system is the diversion of the interests of the student body, from the true aims of the college. Social life, athletics, dissipation, and the multitude of other students' activitles have cut down to the minimum the attention given to their studies.' We all remember President Wilson's summary of the situation in the graphic phrase: 'The sideshows are so numerous that they have swallowed up the circus, and wo in the main tent do not know what is going on.' For the past twenty years faculties, student bodies and committees without number have wrangled so interminably over intercollegiate athletics that it is possible for Dean Keppel, of Columbia, in a book on undergraduate life published last year, to say with truth of this evil that 'it is not a co-operating, but a splitting factor between students and faculty, and it has done more than anything else to delay the coming of the new spirit of working together and thinking together.' He quotes President Garfield, of Williams College, in a recent paper to the effect that 'in the New England colleges the average expenditure per student for athletic purposes was one hundred and seventy dollars, with only sixteen per cent of the students partlcipating in them. The figures for the country at large were correspondingly fifty-nine dollars and seventeen per cent particlpating.' Any number of college officials in public and in private have vigorously attacked this major distraction of undergraduate life, and yet they have allowed it to flourish because they seemingly have lacked the courage to abolish it."

More recent than the article of Dean Roe is a series of papers in the New York Evening Post by Mr. John Palmer Gavit, in which the writer publishes his conclusions after questioning a great number of graduates and undergraduates concerning what was the most important thing they had acquired, or were acquiring, at college. Mr. Gavit says that "with a proportion of exceptions so small as to be almost negligible, the list of advantages cited had to do with purely social relationships and experiences," and that he could count on his fingers "the men who even mentloned the studies they pursued, or any purely intellectual activity in which they engaged." He says that he even found many undergraduates whose chief concern in the president, dean and faculty was to outwit them and "beat the system," not so much by breaking rules of conduct without detection as by maintaining the lowest possible minimum of grades that would keep them out of trouble.

The Springfield Republican, commenting upon the facts presented, says:

"Mr. Gavit's indictment will probably not be seriously challenged save by those who think that he has given insufficient attention to the minority who really take advantage of their opportunities. Some, too, believe that the amiable drifting of the past is being checked by the adoption of a better organized curriculum and by the exaction of higher standards. But few will deny that trustees and faculties have it in their power to correct still further the defects of the college. Alumni may be complacent and reactionary, but trustees and faculty who set out to reform a college by making their students study a reasonable amount will have a backing in public sentiment that even a proud and self-satisfied alumni association can not permanently ignore.

"In time the public may insist that the great financial investment in the higher educational institutions shall represent more than the endowment of a high-class social organization from which hardly 50 per cent of the students receive any direct educational benefit. The college is too expensive to be maintained as a club for the benefit of from 500 to 2000 favored youths for a period of four years."

Mr. Gavit's investigation and indictment probably concerned Northern Institutions mainly. The colleges and universities of the South, with few exceptions ,have not gone so far astray as have those of the North. But the tendency in our section is running strongly in the same evil direction, and it should be checked before it goes further.

In many of our Institutions there is scarcely a week in the collegiate year when a considerable number of students are not absenting themselves from classrooms and laboratories in order to attend some game, or go on a glee club junket, or some other club engagement. High scholarship, or even moderate success in study, can not be attained under such conditions.

Moreover, all these things increase the cost of education as well as impair its quality. If any considerable number of students are absent weeks at a time, scholastic terms must be lengthened and expenses thereby increased, or poorer work must be allowed.

There are too many poor boys in the South needing education for our colleges to allow anything which adds needless expense to college life. Extravagance in this field involves nothing less than tragic ignorance and incompetency where the highest interests of our section call for superior inteiligence and efficiency.

Those colleges and universities of the country which have allowed these things must be restored to their true mission, or abandoned to their fate. If they can not be reformed, and can not be restored, let them depend for their financial support and student enrollment upon the idle and frivolous people who do not care for education, but are interested mostly in sports, recreations, and dissipations.

LIFE IS TOO SHORT.

We use that expression often in a sort of jocular way; but though half in fun the other half generally has a good deal of seriousness in it. Life is too short to waste it in disagreements and quarrellings and misunderstanding. For men, who at best seldom have more than fourscore years allowed them, to waste whole years or it in bickering and getting on badly with folks is an outrageously foolish performance, for they have so little time left in which to enjoy the huge fun and satisfaction that there is in being agreeable and neighborly. Life also is too short to spend much of it in doing the things that do not count, and that never help to get anything or anybody anywhere. Empty living is as empty of happiness as it is of anything else, and who would waste whole years in sowing seed that never, never bring harvest? Certainly, if we never put anything worth while into the years, we will never get anything worth whilo out of them, and the time and opportunity for putting the things that really count into them can never be, as life goes, too long or too generous. And, that being the case, idling and emptiness do seem to be the most supreme folly of which we can be guilty.—Christian Guardian.

NOTICE.

To the delegates and those wishing to attend the Jackson District Conference, which convenes at Harrisville, Miss., on the 27th of June:

The morning and evening trains on the G. & S. I. will be met at Braxton on the 27th. We will meet no others unless notified. Let all the brethren that can, come in their own conveyance, and bring their neighbors, too, if convenient.

OUT FISHING.

A feller isn't thinkin' mean,
Out fishin';
His thoughts are mostly good an' clean,
Out fishin';
He doesn't knock his fellow men,
Or harbor any grudges then;
A feller's at his finest when
Out fishin'.

The rich are comrades to the poor,
Out fishin';
All brothers of a common lure,
Out fishin';
The urchin with the pin an' string
Can chum with millionaire an' king;
Vain pride is a forgotten thing,
Out fishin'.
A fellow gits a chance to dream,
Out fishin';
He learns the beauties of a stream,
Out fishin';
An' he can wash his soul in air
That isn't foul with selfish care,
An' relish plain an' simple fare,
Out fishin'.

A feller has no time to hate,
Out fishin';
He isn't eager to be great,
Out fishin';
He isn't thinkin' thoughts of pelf,
Or goods stacked high upon a shelf,
But he is always just himself,
Out fishin'.

A feller's glad to be a friend,
Out fishin';
A helpin' hand he'll always lend,
Out fishin';
The brotherhood of rod an' line
An' sky an' stream is always fine;
Men come real close to God's design,
Out fishin'.

A feller isn't plotting schemes,
Out fishin';
He's only busy with his dreams,
Out fishin';
His livery is a coat of tan;
His creed: to do the best he can;
A feller's always mostly man,
Out fishin'.

DANGER IN THE STREETS.

When we were young the street was a fairly safe place for play. Very few streets or roads were improved, and the soft, dry dust provided a soft cushion for the bare feet in summer, while the lumbering horses gave generous warning to step aside ere there was danger. To-day it is altogether changed. The automobile, moving with the speed of the railroad train, turns the public highway into a track of death, while city streets are at times almost impassable.

It is the children who suffer most. Naturally careless, they often tempt accident. In the streets of Philadelphia there were one hundred and thirty-one children killed last year. So serious was the situation that the superintendent of the public schools issued the following order to the school children:

"Always cross at the regular crossing and not between streets.

"Where the traffic policeman is in control, never cross except when the stream of traffic has stopped.

"Always look both ways before crossing a street.

"Never steal rides on passing vehicles."

To those rules, more or less applicable to boys and girls alike, Superintendent Broome has added a fifth edict, directed particularly to girl students: "Never accept an invitation to ride with a driver whom you do not know."

We reproduct these orders here believing they will apply to the children of every city and town in America. The probability is that automobiles will not be forced to reduce their speed, and with the rapid development of our improved roads throughout the country the danger involved in street crossing will grow rather than decrease. Only one thing remains, and that is for children to employ care in crossing a public street.

Our children cannot be too cautious in this matter.—Exchange.

THE BOYS WE LIKE.

The boy who never makes fun of old age, no matter how decrepit or unfortunate or evil it may be. God's hand rests lovingly on the aged head.

The boy who never calls anybody names, no matter what anybody calls him.

The boy who is never cruel.

The boy who never lies. Even white lies leave black spots on the character.

The boy who never makes fun of a companion because of a misfortune he could not help.

The boy who never hesitates to say "No" when asked to do a wrong thing.

The boy who never forgets that God made him to be a joyous, loving, helpful being.—The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

BE HONEST, ANYWAY.

"I found something to-day," Ray announced one evening.

"What is it?" demanded Kent.

"Let's see it," from Boyd.

Roy shook his head glumly. "I found the owner—worse luck," he said. "I was going down Main street when I saw a nice, fat pocketbook right ahead of me. I ran and picked it up and went on, wondering what I should do or how I could find the owner most quickly. I didn't have to wonder long. An old chap came bustling along on the back track, hunting the lost loot, and of course as I was the first one he met, he tackled me. 'Did you find my pocketbood, young man?' he demanded. 'I just missed it. I lost it somewhere within this square, for I had it in my hand—' Of course it was his, and I handed it over. Then what happened? He glared at me as if I'd picked his pocket and said: 'Lucky you're honest, young fellow. You'd have been caught sooner or later if you'd tried to keep it,' and away he stalked. I don't want any reward, but next time—"

"Next time," father put in smoothly, "you'll do the same thing for your own sake rather than that of the loser, grateful or otherwise. He treated you shabbily, but two wrongs only weigh down the balance the more in the wrong direction. It is our part—our beautiful part and privilege—to restore the balance by being right, doing right, piling the other side of the scale so full that any wrong will be far outweighed."

And Roy knew he agreed in his own heart.—The King's Own.

MYSTERY OF "VANISHING RIVER."

One of the most remarkable rivers in the world flows through the northern part of Mexico. It borders the great Mexican desert, and to reach it one need travel only one day's journey on horseback from the Rio Grande, which marks the southern boundary of the United States in that region. The extraordinary river in question has its source in the hills bordering the desert. It flows southward for some twenty miles as smoothly as any well-behaved river; but, suddenly as it flows between high bluffs, it becomes whirling rapids—rapids so strong and so dangerous that no man has ever been brave enough to attempt to cross the rushing waters.

One follows the rapids, as he walks along the bluff on either side, for about two miles, and then that river vanishes utterly. Hence the name, "Vanishing River." It disappears suddenly, mysteriously, completely, into the earth itself, and not into a cave, as one would suppose. Scientists have tried in vain to ascertain where that river goes. All that they have yet announced as the result of their explorations is that the river seems to drop sheer into the earth, as over the brink of a bottomless abyss, and that this Vanishing River is the most amazing body of water known to geographers.—Exchange.

A VISIT TO SHREVEPORT, LA.

An engagement in connection with the Louisiana Conference Preachers' Institute, holding its first session at Centenary College, Shreveport, La., took us to the flourishing North Louisiana metropolis for the period of June 1-8. We felt we were going to a familiar place, for we had spent seven years there as a member of the faculty of Centenary College; but after arriving on the scene we had to rub our eyes to convince ourselves that we were not in a strange city. By the aid of certain familiar landmarks, we were able to get our bearings upon arrival, but it took us several days to become adjusted to the marvelous development that has taken place within the past four years. In the business section several great buildings have been erected, and in the residence sections literally hundreds of beautiful homes are to be found where formerly were only long stretches of idle land. Especially in the neighborhood of Centenary College has there been marvelous development. The paving program of the city has given it, we understand, a greater mileage of paved streets than is possessed by any other city of equal size in the South. Shreveport is a wonderfully attractive place.

The Louisiana Conference Preachers' Institute held its first session this year pursuant to the action of the Annual Conference last year providing that such institute "be established at Centenary College, to be held immediately following the college session each year," the plan providing that the Institute should be financed by the Shreveport District this year and by the Board of Education for the future. Under the direction of a committee consisting of R. H. Wynn, Geo. S. Sexton, A. S. Lutz, W. W. Drake, and Briscoe Carter, a splendid program had been arranged, and a very successful meeting was held. The entire college plant was placed at the disposal of the visitors, and the expenses of the brethren for meals and lodging were reduced to a minimum. Altogether, there were sixty in attendance. There was unanimous approval of the establishment of the Institute, and a resolution was adopted requesting the same committee to make plans for the meeting next year.

The visiting speakers were Dr. E. W. Alderson, professor of Old Testament Literature in Southern Methodist University; Dr. W. W. Patton, of the Presbyterian Church, of Watertown, Tenn., and Rev. John E. Brown, the distinguished evangelist of Siloam Springs, Ark. The addresses of Drs. Alderson and Patton were delivered in the College Chapel during the morning hours, and the addresses of Dr. Brown were given in the Noel Memorial Church at the evening hour. The afternoons were reserved for recreation, though on several days interesting and profitable round table discussions were held at that time.

Dr. Alderson is so well known throughout the church at large that it is scarcely necessary to speak a word of introduction for him before any Methodist audience. As a preacher, he has held the leading appointments of his Conference for years, and his influence has been felt for good in the councils of the church and in the General Conference, where his recognized ability made him a leader for many sessions. He is a passionate lover of the fundamental doctrines of the church he has served so long and a powerful defender of those doctrines wherever they may be called in question. In the days when the "water war" raged throughout the Southwest, he became known—and feared by the opposition—as the matchless champion of the Methodist view of baptism. His wide and accurate scholarship is a testimony to his love of truth and his indefatigable efforts to search it out. Thoroughly modern and progressive in his point of view and methods of work, he is a staunch defender of the fundamental doctrines of Methodism. His addresses made a profound impression upon those who heard him at Shreveport.

Dr. W. W. Patton is regarded as one of the best qualified men in the country to discuss the rural problem and its solution. For about ten years he has been pastor of a group of four Presbyterian churches in the rural sections, and his achievements in community building have given him nation-wide prominence—the editor of the Country Gentleman, the oldest agricultural journal in the United States, recently visited him at his home to get a first-hand view and knowledge of the developments that have taken place under his leadership. The religious motive in all his work is so evident that there is no mistaking his aims in seeking to improve the social, industrial, and economic conditions of those who are faced with the deplorable situation that so often exists in connection with our rural churches; what he has accomplished shows that the problem can be solved. It is safe to predict that the rural work in the Louisiana Conference will show the beneficent results of his visit for years to come.

Dr. Brown gave three great addresses on the Holy Spirit. These addresses contained much of the results of the years of study Dr. Brown has given to the personality, mission, and work of the Holy Spirit, and they were an inspiration not only to the preachers who heard them, but also to the many men and women of the community who attended the evening services. Dr. Brown has held two evangelistic campaigns in Shreveport, where he is held in the highest esteem.

An account of a visit to Shreveport would not be complete without a word concerning Centenary College. Under the leadership of President Sexton, the institution has reached within one year all the goals that were laid down for a three-year period when he began his administration. The productive endowment now amounts to $665,000. The student body has increased to such an extent that the need of increased dormitory facilities before the opening of next session has become imperative—on June 7 more students were registered for the college classes next session than were enrolled during the entire session just closed, and applications are coming in daily. To meet this need, the contract will be let in a short time for remodeling and doubling the capacity of the brick building that was erected when the college was moved to Shreveport. The faculty has been enlarged to meet the new situation, and everything possible is being done to take care of a situation that presents to Louisiana Methodism the greatest opportunity in all its history for the establishment of a really great educational institution for men. Men of means have it within their power to erect a monument to themselves that will last for all time to come by providing the money necessary for carrying out a building program that will enable Centenary College to go forward magnificently as this wonderful new era opens before it.

In this connection, it is interesting to know that the town of Mena, Ark., has deeded in fee simple to the College a tract of forty acres of land not far from that town, and has undertaken to put up a building that will meet all requirements for a summer camp and school. The location is at an altitude of 2200 feet and the scenery is wonderfully beautiful.

An incident that gave us special pleasure was an invitation from Dr. Sexton to accompany him as a guest to a fish-fry at Caddo Lake, where Dr. Worley, of Gillam, was spending the day with his family. Unfortunately, we did not get to do any fishing, but we greatly enjoyed the picnic dinner and the opportunity of meeting Dr. Worley and his family and other guests. The doctor's son, Wyeth, received his degree at Centenary this year, and he has another son who is a student at the institution. Dr. Worley himself is a great Centenary "booster."

After a visit to St. Louis as fraternal messenger to the General Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, a ten days' stay at Hot Springs in attendance upon our own General Conference, and this visit to Shreveport, it is pretty hard to settle down to the quiet (!) of 512 Camp Street, New Orleans—but here we are, ready to "carry on" to the best of our ability. We are under heavy obligations to Rev. R. H. Harper for editorial assistance during our absence.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. W. Jones, of Greenwood Springs, Miss., writes that the work is moving along nicely on his charge.

Rev. G. A. Morgan, our pastor at Bastrop, La., recently preached the commencement sermon for the Bastrop High School.

Rev. P. H. Howse, of Silver Creek, Miss., is meeting with success in his work, and looking forward expectantly to the revival season.

Rev. Leon I. McCain, of Lafayette, La., reports that he had an attendance of fifty-nine at prayer meeting on Wednesday evening, May 31.

Rev. T. L. Oakes, of Cockrum, Miss., writes that progress is being made on his charge and that he is looking forward to some great revivals this summer.

Rev. F. J. McCoy, our pastor at Houma, La., received twenty members into the church during the month of April. The finances of the church are in good shape.

A meeting of the College of Bishops has been called for June 15 at Atlanta, Ga., for the purpose of arranging the course of study for undergraduate ministers.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of Columbus, Texas, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, recently preached three high school commencement sermons on one Sunday.

Brother James Hand, of Purvis, Miss., in renewing his own subscription to the Advocate, included an additional amount to send the paper to some who are not able to pay for it. This was a most thoughtful act.

Our sympathy goes out to Rev. J. W. Dorman, of Louisville, Miss., who has recently undergone a series of surgical operations. Our earnest prayer is that he may soon be restored to health and strength.

Rev. and Mrs. Thos. H. King, of Scooba, Miss., announce the marriage of their daughter, Inez, to Mr. William D. Myers, on Sunday, June 4. The Advocate prayes the richest blessings of heaven upon the young couple.

Rev. R. I. Collins, of Shannon, Miss., is [illegible]erving his fourth year on that charge, and it [illegible] a very happy one. Congregations are good at all the churches, and he is the reciplent of many kindnesses at the hands of his parishioners.

Rev. W. W. Murray has just closed a fine meeting at Foxworth, Miss., in which he was assisted by Rev. J. M. Smith. There were nine additions to the membership of the church, and the entire membership was greatly blessed by the meeting.

Mr. N. E. Alford, son of Rev. J. M. Alford, our pastor at Winnsboro, La., recently completed the course of the Commercial Department of Centenary College. He is well equipped for a business career and would be glad to find employment as bookkeeper.

Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, who declined to stand for re-election as Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, has been appointed pastor of our Laurel Heights Church, San Antonio, Texas, to succeed Dr. A. Frank Smith, who was appointed to First Church, Houston, to succeed Bishop Sam R. Hay.

Dr. H. F. Brooks is having a great pastorate at First Church, Shreveport, La. About three hundred and fifty members have been added to the church this year, and every department of the work is thoroughly organized and active. The Sunday school is one of the greatest in Southern Methodism.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, has favored us with the program of his district conference, now in session at Sherman. It furnishes a most appealing bill of fare. We regret that we were unable to accept his cordial invitation to attend its sessions.

Rev. James M. Smith, one of the Mississippi Conference evangelists, requests us to say that he has the entire month of November open, during which time he will be glad to assist any of the brethren who may desire his help in holding their revival meetings. He may be addressed at Poplar Springs Drive, Meridian, Miss.

The Sunday school of Indian Bayou, La., Rev. P. O. Lowrey, pastor, gave to each of its graduates from high school and college this year a Bible, thus honoring the boys and girls who have finished so important a task as a school course, and putting into their hands the one unerring guide to a right life for all the years to come.

In a meeting recently held at Zwolle, La., in which the preaching was done by the pastor, Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., there were eleven additions to the Methodist church and three to the Baptist church, and five young ladies volunteered for life service. Rev. J. B. Grambling, of Shreveport, La., led the singing and assisted in the work.

Dr. John S. Chadwick will continue for sometime at least with the Department of Publicity of the Missionary Centenary. The Centenary force at headquarters will be greatly reduced during the present quadrennium, but an intensive policy of publicity will be maintained. Dr. Chadwick is one of the most efficient publicity experts in the church.

Some beautiful vases were recently presented to the Algiers Methodist Church by Mmes. Kinkaid, Mohr, and McEkron, in memory of their mother, Mrs. Mary Bevans. At the same time some marble pedestals were presented by her granddaughter, Miss Mary Harvey. These gifts are greatly appreciated by the congregation and the pastor, Rev. C. C. Wier.

A very successful "get-together" meeting was held in the social hall of the Methodist church at Crowley, La., on the evening of May 31. The attendance taxed the capacity of the building, and a most enjoyable program was carried out, refreshments being served at the close. Rev. F. M. Freeman, the pastor, is in high favor with his people.

Mr. J. U. Melancon, of the Algiers Methodist Church, who rendered such efficient service in superintending the erection of the beautiful new church, was recently presented a testimonial of appreciation, neatly framed and signed by Bishop W. F. McMurry, Rev. J. G. Snelling, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, Rev. C. C. Wier, the pastor, and the Board of Stewards.

Rev. J. B. Cain, our pastor at Ellisville, Miss., and Miss Amy McNeil, of Washington, Miss., were married at the Methodist church in Washington on Friday, June 9, Rev. W. T. Griffin, Rev. J. O. Ware, and Dr. Rolfe Hunt officiating. Mrs. Cain is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. McNeil of Washington. Brother Cain is one of the best equipped members of the Mississippi Conference, and there is before him a career of great usefulness. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to this fine young couple and prays the blessings of God upon them.

Rev. M. E. Lazenby, of Opelika, Ala., has been elected editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate, to succeed Dr. L. C. Branscomb, who has been appointed pastor of the First Methodist Church at Anniston, Ala., to take the place made vacant by the election of Dr. Hoyt M. Dobbs to the episcopacy. Dr. Branscomb has made a great editor, and we regret to lose him from the fraternity. At the same time, we give Dr. Lazenby a cordial welcome to the editorial ranks.

The Seashore Divinity School is now in session at Biloxi, Miss., and will continue until June 23. We wish every preacher in its patronizing territory could enjoy the advantages of this great gathering. There are many congregations that could easily make it possible for their pastors to attend by giving them a purse for necessary expenses—and such action would be an investment as well as a gracious token of appreciation.

Rev. J. O. Hanes, one of our general evangelists, and Mr. W. G. Waltermire, his singer, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Saturday of last week. They were en route from Booneville, Miss., where they had recently assisted Rev. H. P. Lewis in a fine meeting, to Bunkie, La., to assist Rev. Geo. Fox in a meeting. As a result of the meeting at Booneville, thirty members were added to the Methodist church, twenty-four to the Baptist, and one to the Christian. The business houses were closed for the day services, and there were many conversions and reclamations.

We have greatly rejoiced over the reports that have come to us of the success of the various training schools, assemblies, and institutes that have been held within the bounds of our three Conferences within the past few weeks. It is impossible to estimate the good that will come to the work of the church through these gatherings where our young people and others get together for training in the Sunday school and Epworth League. There are still other meetings of this kind to be held—district schools, institutes, etc.—and we urge all our people to attend them as largely as possible. Time spent in real preparation for work is time well spent, and these gatherings are places of preparation.

Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., at its recent comencement conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. Wm. H. Coleman, pastor of our Central Methodist Church, Fort Worth, Texas. Dr. Coleman was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, where he held some of its leading appointments, and his many friends in this State will rejoice at the honor that has been bestowed upon him. Dr. Coleman has received nearly five hundred members into the church since he began his present pastorate, giving him a great working force now of over fifteen hundred. A great building program is now under way at Central, including the erection of a four-story Sunday school building and doubling the size of the auditorium. Dr. Coleman is assisted by Rev. T. F. Burnside, who has recently gone to Central from Emory University as assistant pastor and director of religious education.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. R. G. Williams, Perkinston, Miss., 3; Rev. Guy D. Burt, Duck Hill, Miss., 2; Rev. Guy Ray, McCool, Miss., 2; Rev. N. G. Augustus, Byhalia, Miss., 2; Rev. J. W. Jones, Greenwood Springs, Miss., 2 (six months); Mrs. John Bush, Learned, Miss., 2; Rev. J. T. Abney, Galiman, Miss., 2; Rev. R. I. Collins, Shannon, Miss., 4; Rev. W. W. Murray, Foxworth, Miss., 2; Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., Zwolle, La., 7; Rev. J. F. Waltman, Elizabeth, La., 2; Rev. V. C. Curtis, Greenwood, Miss., 4.

PRAYER MEETING ATTENDANCE.

We have had the reports given below of prayer meeting attendance last week. It will be noted that the interest in making these repors is spreading, some of them coming from without the bounds of the Monroe-Ruston District, where the movement originated.

Ruston, N. E. Joyner, pastor, 25 (rain); Epps, P. B. McCullin, pastor, 39; Algiers, C. C. Wier, pastor, 65; Elmore, L. W. Smart, pastor, 41; Lafayette, L. I. McCain, pastor, 60.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL'S SHARE.

The Sunday schools of the church have paid to date approximately $950,000 on Centenary pledges. The One Million Goal was not reached by the time announced, but we are so near that figure there is reason for encouragement, and, perhaps, for some boosting. Doubtless the goal would have been reached had reports been secured from all schools, if only the Centenary money on hand had gone forward to Nashville. Will you see to it that the pledge of your school is brought up to date, thus helping the Sunday schools of Southern Methodism to make a record worth while? And, just as important, see to it that the amount is sent not later than June 26, to John E. Edgerton, Treasurer, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tenn.

—Bulletin.

THESE LEAD IN CENTENARY GIVING.

In total amount paid on Centenary pledges, the first ten Conferences are, in order named: Virginia, North Carolina, North Georgia, Tennessee, South Georgia, Western North Carolina, Baltimore, Holston, South Carolina, North Alabama. In percentage of pledge paid the first ten Conferences are: Pacific, Missouri, Baltimore, Denver, Mississippi, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, Northwest Texas, Illinois. In amount paid by the Sudnay schools the first ten are: Virginia, South Georgia, North Georgia, North Alabama, Western North Carolina, Florida, Holston, Central Texas, North Texas, Alabama.—Bulletin.

THE BIG TASK.

We are now more than three years beyond the date of the Centenary "Drive," and there is due 80 per cent of the amount pledged. Appropriations have been made for the fourth year of the Centenary period, while payments on pledges do not yet take care of three years' appropriations. This presents a situation that is really serious, for the work suffers to-day in every field because funds promised and past due are not available. It is the day of opportunity for Centenary subscribers—the opportunity to prove by their sacrifices their interest in the enterprises of the Kingdom of Christ. What will it be worth to us to make our payments after prosperity provides a surplus such as will take from our giving any element of sacrifice? The Centenary needs greatly the money now due. We need to know the joy of giving that really hurts. Let's use the opportunity the Centenary brings.—Bulletin.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Mrs. MARTHA G. STEWART, wife of B. W. Stewart, was born in Leake County, Miss., July 31, 1854, and died in Long Beach, Miss., March 11, 1922. She, as Miss Martha Horn, became the wife of B. W. Stewart, then of Walnut Grove, Miss., on Sept. 20, 1876. God blessed this union with three children. One daughter preceded her mother to the good world just a few months. One son lives in Little Rock, Ark., and the other daughter, Mrs. Carl Gates, lives in Gulfport, Miss. The husband, these two children, and three grandchildren are left to mourn her going. Sister Stewart joined the Methodist Church soon after her marriage, and remained a faithful member of the same till the hour of her death. She was a constant sufferer for a long time; her husband carried her West with the hope of having her health restored, but could not. She was anxious to return to her native State to spend her last days with loved ones, and often expressed the desire to again enjoy the visits and prayers of the preacher. For more than forty-five years she stood faithfully by her husband in all the joys and disappointments of life, but her noble Christian character reached its climax just before her going. The anxious husband sat by her bedside only a few hours before the end came to read to her the news of the day, etc. She said, "No, don't read now. I want to talk. I am going now soon, and I don't want you to grieve for me. All will be well with me; I will soon be at rest. There is nothing in the way. I want you to look after the children; help them to do right. And the precious little grandchildren, see that they are reared in the right way, so all will get to the better world." This writer had known Sister Stewart for a long time; been in her home a great deal. She was a loyal wife, a loving mother, a friend to all; but, best of all, a devoted Christian. She is not dead, but sleepeth. God bless the loved ones!

W. M. SULLIVAN.

At noon, May 8, 1922, the Death Angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Mosley and peacefully bore away the spirit of their daughter, IRY ELIZABETH, aged 13 years. She was operated upon ten days before for appendicitis and bore the terrible affliction with hardly a murmur or complaint. All that kind and loving hands could do was of no avail. God

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The second Wesley Bible Class Federation of the North Mississippi Conference was held at Grenada College at the time announced. The work done at this federation of Bible classes was solid and permanent. The interest from beginning to the last session was deep. The reports from the different classes showed that a great work is being done in the Conference in carrying out our Master's command. We need 500 more classes like the ones we have at work. Our handicap is a lack of sufficient funds to finance the movement. When our liberal people find out what we are doing they will surely not let the work be hindered for the lack of a little money.

The third session of our Conference Standard Training School met as scheduled. We had the choice people of the Conference in attendance. The work done by our faculty of teachers went deeper and took a stronger hold upon those in attendance than ever before. Many were heard to say, "This is the greatest work the church is doing—would that we could get a thousand people here!" Dr. Richardson made a wonderful impression. He is the first and only specialist in the strict sense of the term we have had in our school. "He is the greatest teacher I ever sat under," was the expression heard upon all honds. He is a master mind. The one thing that made me sad was, so few came under the influence of his great personality. He promised to come back to us next year to teach in our school. The other teachers did most excellent work.

The following is a brief outline report: Seven credits were issued to those who took work in Beginner Organization and Administration; fifteen in Primary Lesson Materials and Teaching; eleven in Junior Lesson Materials and Methods of Teaching for Intermediates; five in the Psychology of Young People; sixteen in the Educational Task of the Local Church; four in the Principles of Religious Teaching. We had about 135 in attendance at diffcrent times. It will likely be ten years before the church will find out what is being done in these training schools, and then we shall have all the money needed to finance our work. We who are suffering now to carry it on may be dead, but we will not be forgotten.

Beginning June 18, Sunday, at 2:30 p.m., we begin the Sardis District Standard Training School at Sardis, Rev. E. G. Mohler, Educational Director. Courses to be taught and faculty of teachers are as follows: Primary Organization and Administration, Miss Lynda Ramey; The Psychology of Young People, Mrs. W. N. Duncan; How to Teach Religion, Rev. C. A. Bowen; A Methodist Church and Its Work, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney. We are forced to depend largely upon the preachers to get their teachers to attend these schools. All we ask is to send them, and we will do our best to give you leaders who will be worth ten times as much to you as they have been. Our people want to do the work of the church, but they do not know how. Write to Rev. E. G. Mohler, Sardis, Miss., for information.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

I don't suppose it would be fair not to mention that our Training School at Jackson was almost, if not quite, three times as large as it was last year. We are grateful for this and thankful to our Heavenly Father. Begin NOW to get ready for next year.

Sunday School Day offerings are still coming in slowly. Do your best. Each month the Treasurer will publish a statement. If any mistakes occur, let us know and we will be glad to correct them.

The Vancleave circuit is the first circuit to report an offering from each of its Sunday schools. The Scotland circuit lacks only one Sunday school, and they will be 100 per cent.

The Scotland Circuit Institute was held at New Hope Church. I had the high privilege of being with them and I surely had a mighty good time. It was such a fine crowd. Every school was represented and all seem to be interested. They took Points 3 and 5 on the program of work for "C" type schools to work to for this quarter. I was glad to see this effort on the part of these fine folks. I had the pleasure of preaching to the congregation at Union Church and one beautiful young girl answered the proposition that night to let Jesus command her life.

Tuesday we went to Anguilla for the Vicksburg District Conference. We were treated as if we owned three big Delta plantations, instead of being field hands in the Sunday school cause. The presiding elder called the Institute for Wednesday afternoon. We had some fine reports. It showed much interest in the cause and advanced work.

Holly Bluff deserves the highest commendation. It is a small town of 13 white families, with 40 enrolled in their Sunday school. On April 16, water was all over that country, and yet there were 33 present at Sunday school. They all came in boats. I don't think we have a school that can surpass this. I wish a good writer would put that in pamphlet form for me so that I could send it out all over the Conference.

I had the delightful pleasure of hearing Dr. Bulgin, who is conducting the revival campaign in Vicksburg. They seem to be doing great work. Pray for them and their efforts.

Pray for your Sunday School Board and its workers.

Hold Sunday School Day and send in the offering. Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM COUSHATTA, LA.

A report of church conditions from Coushatta, La., will no doubt be of interest to some.

Progress had been hindered no little by frequent rains and consequent bad streets and roads. Owing to the late spring and the bad weather delaying farming operations, many of our people feel discouraged. Even today, while I write, the lowering clouds threaten more rain. One cyclone swept the town, leveling many of the choice shade trees and unroofing buildings. Excessive flooding rainstorms with wind have followed this infliction with alarming frequency.

Deslte all this, and more, our church has gone steadily forward with an increase of interest and numbers. An interesting and fruitful revival was held by the pastor and Rev. Leland Clegg, of Logansport, La. Ten members united with the church on profession of faith and six others were received by certificate.

The Sunday school is a growing institution. The Epworth League was reorganized near the beginning of my pastorate, and it continues to grow.

Plans for building a new brick church have been inaugurated. The payments for our church lot have been completed and a goodly sum is now in hand for canceling the note due on the remaining lot. This happy condition is largely due to the earnest efforts of the women of the church.

The church and community mourn the loss by death of several of our choicest men and women. And in common with all the country towns near the city of Shreveport, that attractive city has also drawn its quota.

Tho W. M. S. is active and attends to its duties in a way that in the end brings qualifying results. Mrs. John Stephens also has a class of children who are organized and being taught missionary work. I might write more but when one has said enough, enough has been said. S. J. DAVIES.

FROM GREENWOOD, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I am inclosing for renewal to the Advocate, and wish to add a note from my little charge in the corner—Greenwood. We held an eight-day meeting, from April 29 to May 7. Rev. R. T. Ware, of Mooringsport, assisted me, and preached every sermon except the opening one. There were 16 accessions to the church, and the people seemed to be moved forward. Brother Ware is a strong gospel preacher, and fears nothing but God and sin. I commend him to any pastor who desires as a helper a clean-cut, uncompromising gospel preacher.

Sincerely,

B. T. CREWS.

If the Flu Left You Weak, or You're in Need of a Tonic to Build You Up, Take This Advice

Houston, Texas—"I was in a terribly run-down condition of health after a siege of ptomaine poisoning, and then the influenza. I could not seem to regain my strength and was really not able to do my housework. I knew I needed a good tonic and builder and remembered how my folks used to regard Dr. Pierce's remedies in my girlhood days, and then I decided to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After taking the second bottle I found it was doing me a world of good, strength returned rapidly and I felt better in every way. I am glad indeed to recommend the medicine that did me so much good and do not hesitate to give this statement."—Mrs. Gertrude Sell, 1236 Rutland St.

All communications for this Department should be sent to Mrs. J. G. Snelling, 6321 Freret St., New Orleans, La.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL.

Our whole church will be deeply grieved to learn of the serious illness of Miss Belle H. Bennett, the Presiednt of the Woman's Missionary Council, and one of the greatest leaders that the church has ever had. She has been ill for a number of months, not having been able to attend the meetings of the Council and Board of Missions, or to take her place as a delegate to the General Conference. Recently her condition has been critical, causing deep concern to all who love her. She has been in the hospital at Lexington, Ky., for the past three weeks, but will return to her home in Richmond in a few days. The last word from her indicates improvement, and the doctors are hopeful of prolonging her life.

OUSTS RHEUMATISM.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

EVERYBODY ASKS FOR NEW KIND OF CALOMEL

Calotabs, the De-Nauseated Calomel Tablet, is in Great Demand Because of its Freedom From Unpleasant and Dangerous Effects.

Have you tried the new calomel tablet that makes calomel taking a pleasure? If you have you appreciate the wonderful virtues of calomel, when robbed of its unpleasant and nauseating effects.

Calotabs is the sensation of the drug trade. Pharmacists regard it as a practically perfect remedy for the liver. Its effect in biliousness, constipation and indigestion is delightful.

The next time your liver needs a thorough cleansing try Calotabs. One tablet at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no nausea, no griping. Wake up in the morning feeling fine, with your system thoroughly cleansed and a hearty appetite. Eat what you please—no danger.

Beware of imitations! Genuine Calotabs are sold only in "checker-board" (black and white) packages bearing the copyrighted trade-mark "Calotabs." The large, family size sells for thirty-five cents; vest-pocket size, ten cents. All dealers are authorized to refund the price if you are not delighted with Calotabs.—Adv.

We are sure the heart of every woman in the auxiliaries and of every deaconess and missionary on the field goes out to her in loving sympathy, an that constant prayer is being offered in her behalf.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE AND THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY WORK.

Dear Friends: The object of this letter is to acquaint you with the action of the General Conference as it affects the Woman's Missionary Work of our church.

The Board of Missions has been reorganized and will carry on its work under the following departments: Board of Missions, Foreign Work; Board of Missions, Home Work; Board of Missions, Woman's Work (with home and foreign sections). Each of these departments has a standing committee.

The membership of the Board has been increased from thirty managers, of whom ten were women, to thirty-eight (one from each Annual Conference) of whom fourteen are women. The managers were elected by the General Conference on the nomination of the Committee on Missions, which had as a basis of choice one preacher, one layman, and one woman from each Conference, named by their Conference delegations. In addition, there are five managers at large, elected by the General Conference on nomination of the Committee on Missions. One of these managers is a woman. The Secretaries and the Treasurer of the Woman's Work and the President of the Woman's Missionary Council are members of the Board, making a total of twenty-four women who constitute the standing committee for the Department of Woman's Work in the Board. This places the administration of the funds and the work of the Woman's Missionary Council, including Deaconess Work, in the Woman's Department of the Board of Missions.

The Secretaries and the Treasurer, who were elected by the Council at its last annual session, were elected to their respective offices in the Board. The election of the Woman Editor of the Voice by the Council was confirmed by the Board. Therefore, the work will go forward as heretofore, under the direction of the officers who were chosen by the Council, and be supported by the funds contributed by the Woman's Missionary Societies. The Council still has the right to make recommendations to the Board concerning the appropriation of its funds and to nominate the women secretaries and treasurer of the Board, with the exception of the Administrative secretaries, who are now elected by the General Conference by ballot, without nomination.

The Home Base, Educational, and Candidate Work of the Council will be carried on through the Home Cultivation Sections of the Board of Missions. This joint arrangement will not affect the promotional plans of the Council now carried on by the Home Base and Educational Secretaries, but will afford a larger opportunity of missionary cultivation in the entire church engaged in missionary education.

The Council, with its Conference membership unchanged, will continue to meet in order to hear reports from the fields, to consider lines of work and amounts needed for the same, and to make the necessary recommendations to the Board of Missions concerning its work. While the Administration of Deaconess Work is committed to the Department of Woman's Work, Board of Missions, the deaconesses and missionaries will be consecrated at the Council meeting, as heretofore. The usual inspirational features of the Council will be continued.

The work of the Conference Missionary Societies and the auxiliaries will remain unchanged.

We believe that the new constitution of the Board of Missions is a forward step, in that it makes provision for the administration of the Woman's Work in a department of the Board of Missions, and at the same time leaves unbroken the chain of organization from the auxiliaries to the Council.

The loyalty of the missionary women of the church has made possible their notable achievements in the past. With the assurance of this loyalty in the future, your chosen leaders pledge themselves, through us, to go forward with renewed allegiance and untiring efforts, in the advancement of the missionary interests committed to the women of the church, in fields at home and abroad. The same Lord, who has directed and made fruitful our labors for Him in the years that are gone, will establish the further work of our hands as we continue to look to Him.

With a prayer that God may guide every effort in His name, we are had summoned her and "Thy will must be done, O Lord!" She leaves broken-hearted parents, two brothers, four sisters and a host of friends and relatives to mourn her loss. But we know our loss is heaven's gain, for at the tender age of nine years she united with the Methodist Church at Rocky Mount, La., and testified that she was saved. Having always been such a sweet, lovable child, everybody loved "Tencie," as she was called. She was laid to rest beneath a flower-covered mound in the Rocky Mount Cemetery to await the resurrection morning. Rev. A. L. Harper, our dear pastor, gave us some very comfortable thoughts in the funeral address. We weep, indeed, but not as those without hope, for we expect to see her again some glad day in the beautiful city of God, where there shall be no more tears, no pain, no more parting. We miss her sweet, smiling face, the ringing laughter, oh, so much. And the sweet voice that used to sing here is now singing with the angels around the great white throne in glory. May God bless the bereaved ones.

On Sunday afternoon, May 21, the death angel came to our town and W. W. ABNEY, one of our noblest men, quietly stepped out into the better land. Brother Abney was born June 2, 1842, and died May 21, 1922, lacking only a few days of being 80 years old. He leaves eight children to mourn their loss— five sons and three daughters. The sons are S. W., Dr. W. R., J. H., R. R., and M. G. Abney. The daughters are Mrs. Travis, Mrs. Pardon, and Mrs. Hickman. Brother Abney had been a faithful member of the Methodist Church since boyhood. He was a man of extraordinary business ability, and in the support of his church here at Heidelberg was the largest contributor. And as long as he was able physically he could always be counted on to be in his place at the hour of worship. His good wife preceded him to the better land only a short while, having died the first of the year. Brother Abney has now gone to join his companion, where there will be no more separation. "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

His Pastor,
J. H. JOLLY.

On May 29, Gorden Smith's home and surrounding community, the church and county, suffered a great loss when the death angel visited his home and took away A. SPAIN, one of our best men. He was a steward in the Methodist Church for over eighteen years and had never missed a quarterly meeting and never went empty-handed, but always carried something for his pastor, and always saw that the pastor's salary was paid in full. He brought his tithes to the Lord and his barns were filled to overflowing, for he always had something for the needy. He was a faithful soldier and one of the sweetest-spirited men in our country. He was a progressive man, in favor of everything that was for the betterment of his country. He lived his religion every day, and was loved by all who knew him. May the sustaining grace of Jesus abide with all the relatives and friends.

His Pastor,
J. T. GULLETT.

Booneville, Miss.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas our Heavenly Father has seen fit, in his infinite wisdom, to call to his reward Mr. HERBERT VINYARD, of Ponchatoula, La.; and whereas the patient and beautiful life lived among us by this good young man deserves commendation; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of this the Methodist Church, and especially the Sunday school, shall treasure in our hearts the memory of goodness and gentleness and the life he lived— these shall ever be an inspiration to us.

2. That we extend to the bereaved mother, sisters and brothers and others of his family, our sympathy, and pray God's richest blessings upon them.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be given the family of our departed brother, a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that they be spread or filed upon the minutes of our church and Sunday school.

Signed by William Jackson and J. R. Abels, Committee.

Ponchatoula, La.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas our sister, friend and coworker, Mrs. MARY EVA, wife of Mr. Finlay A. Vinyard, has been called from our midst by the grim hand of death, after an illness of several months, which illness she bore with Christian fortitude, never once breaking faith and cheerful to the end; and whereas this dear sister has been an active member of the Methodist Church since childhood and has affiliated with all church activities, and possessed charming musical talents which were freely given at all occasions pertaining to her duties in furthering God's kingdom, never shirking her religious duties, deeply interested in the workings of church service, sunday school, prayer meetings and missionary societies, and retained this attentive spirit until death; and whereas the church, in all its branches and activities, has sustained a great loss in the death of Mrs. Finlay A. Vinyard, be it, therefore,

Resolved, That our church of Ponchatoula, La., extends its sincere and heartfelt sympathy to the husband, daughter, mother, sister and brothers, and others of her family, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Brother Finlay A. Vinyard, her bereaved husband, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. W. E. Kemp, Mrs. E. P. Kinchen, William Jackson, J. R. Abels, Committee.

MRS. W. C. LESTER.

Mrs. Parnelia Patterson Lester, wife of Rev. W. C. Lester of the Mississippi Conference, was born in Tula, Miss., April 5, 1853, and died in Jackson, Miss., April 27 1922.

She was married Aug. 26, 1875, and was the mother of nine children. Those who survive are Dr. W. C. Lester, John P. Lester, Mrs. A. N. Bradford, Mrs. E. H. Thatcher, P. K. Lester, and Miss Daisy Lester.

Her husband, Rev. W. C. Lester, died March 1, 1918, while pastor at Tutwiler, Miss. In the years of their itinerancy, these faithful servants of the church labored together in Athens, Newport, Eupora, Ackerman, Chester, Coffeeville, Black Hawk, Itta Bena, Houston, Crawford, Webb, Isola, Arcola; and when the husband laid his burdens down, Mrs. Lester came to Jackson and made her home with her daughter, Miss Daisy.

Mrs. Lester was an invalid for a number of years. Many friends loved her and rejoiced to minister to her. Her faith was strong, and while her earthly body was too feeble to walk, her spirit followed the luminous footsteps of the Son of God. The angel of the resurrection guards her sacred dust in the burial ground at the old South Union Camp Ground near Ackerman. She is not dead. God touched her and she slept.

GIRLS! LEMONS

BLEACH SKIN WHITE

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of harmless and delightful lemon bleach. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands, each day, then shortly note the beauty and whiteness of your skin.

Famous stage beauties use this lemon lotion to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, also as a freckle, sunburn, and tan bleach because it doesn't irritate.

BEFORE BABY COMES

Watchful Care of Health Necessary

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Marvelous Help

West Orange, N. J.—"I was very nervous and upset for six months before my baby was born. One of my friends told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it for five months now. I have a big boy who weighed almost nine pounds at birth and I do all my housework and don't feel a bit nervous or upset any more. I still take your medicine and have told all my friends what good it has done me."—Mrs. MARGARET GREGORY, 440 Valley Road, West Orange, N. J.

West New York, N. J.—"The first two months I carried my baby I was in bed almost every day with sick headaches. I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the first bottle helped me. I took seven more and I know I couldn't feel better than I did. The headaches stopped and I was able to do my own work. I have a baby girl six months old who weighs twenty pounds and is the picture of health."—Mrs. J. McCOY, 207 20th St., West New York, N. J.

Nervous and Run-Down

Biloxi, Miss.—"Just a word of praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it with wonderful results before my baby was born. I was so nervous and run-down that I was a wreck of misery. I had pains in my sides and back so bad that I could not stay still or sleep nights. My husband was reading your 'ad.' in the paper and I decided to try your Vegetable Compound. After I had taken half a bottle I felt a change and was soon as well as ever. I took it the whole time and recommend it to every woman who is suffering as I was. People said that because I was so young I would never pull through and I praise your Vegetable Compound for my good health."—Mrs. ENOCH J. STEVENS, 889 Fayard St., Biloxi, Miss.

Chicago, Ill.—"I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for all prospective mothers. I suffered from weakness and faint spells and had to lie down twice a day for an hour or so before I could go on with my work. My cousin, who lives in Wisconsin, has used your Vegetable Compound for over five years and she came to us for a visit and she recommended it to me, saying she would pay for the bottle if it did not help me. I took that bottle and got more, as I found it gave me great relief. I recommend it to my friends and sisters and am willing for you to use these facts to help others."—Mrs. I. J. KUBINSKI, 1813 W. 17th St., Chicago, Illinois.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken by expectant mothers. It will assist them in keeping well and strong. This is necessary not only for their own comfort but for the future as well.

It helped these women. It has helped many others.

MARRIED.

At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. McGee, Meridian, Miss., May 23, 1922, Rev. W. A. Hays officiating, Miss MIRIAM A. McGEE to Mr. E. O. WADE, of Shreveport, La.

All which happens through the whole world happens through hope. No husbandman would sow a grain of corn if he did not hope it would spring up and bring forth the ear. How much more we are helped on by hope in the way of eternal life!—Martin Luther.

Hope quickens all the still parts of life, and keeps the mind awake in her most remiss and indolent hours. It gives habitual serenity and good humor; it is a kind of vital heat in the soul that cheers and gladdens her when she does not attend to it. It makes pain easy and labor pleasant.—Joseph Addison.

NEW ORLEANS

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 69—No. 25. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3463.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JUNE 22, 1922. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

FRATERNAL ADDRESS.

(Delivered by the Editor of the Advocate before the General Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, St. Louis, Mo., May 10, 1922.)

To the Bishops and the Members of the General Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America.

Brethren: I have presented, and you have just heard read, the credentials by authority of which I appear before you as fraternal messenger from

BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER, D.D., LL.D.,
Who will Preside Over the Louisiana Conference.

the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It is needless for me to say that I am keenly appreciative of the honor conferred upon me by my church in appointing me to be the bearer of its fraternal greetings to this distinguished body, or to say that I count it a great privilege to have the opportunity of addressing you upon this important occasion.

If I had not felt well assured that the attitude of my church toward yours, from the beginning of your corporate history to this good hour, has been one of utter friendliness, good will, and brotherly love, I should not have felt free to accept its commission to convey to you what otherwise would be but a perfunctory and formal greeting; and, speaking frankly, if I did not find my own heart in cordial sympathy with this historic attitude of my church, I could not have brought myself to a willingness to be the bearer of a message that I might speak with my lips but not feel in my heart; and if I did not know that this feeling of friendliness, good will, and brotherly love is fully reciprocated by you, I should hesitate to encroach upon your time or try your patience by appearing before you at this hour.

But, bound together as we are by the ties of a sacred relationship and working together in the spirit of Christian fellowship toward a common goal—the establishment of the Kingdom of God upon earth—I am happy to meet with you and, in the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, extend to you Christian greetings and speak to you of some of the things that must be in the hearts of us in these days when mighty movements are challenging the best thought of the leaders of all faces throughout the world. If good men ever needed to take counsel together that they might both know and do the will of God, they need to do so now.

I am glad to be able to bring you tidings of a remarkable quadrennium in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. First of all—and best of all—our records show that we now have a membership of 2,346,067, which includes a net gain of 91,315 for the year 1921 and a gain for the quadrennium of 162,093. I say "best of all," for these figures seem to me to indicate unmistakably the fact that our ministers have been faithful in preaching the pure gospel of redeeming grace, and that our people have been active in those evangelistic efforts that have as their end the salvation of the lost. We give God the glory for the marks of his favor thus resting upon us.

Our Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues have had a healthy growth, the present figures showing an enrollment in the former of 1,881,715, and in the latter of 197,118. The women's work of the church has steadily grown in extent and usefulness, the Woman's Missionary Society being one of the most efficient and useful organizations of the church.

The past quadrennium has been especially remarkable for the interest developed in the missionary and educational work of the church, the two great movements, the Centenary and the Christian Education Movement, having laid upon the hearts of our people the need of a wider vision in relation to a world program of evangelization, and having inspired them to unparalleled liberality in support of these great interests. In the Centenary, nearly $40,000,000 was pledged for the extension and maintenance of our missionary enterprises at home and abroad; and in the Christian Education Movement, nearly $20,000,000 was pledged for the endowment and equipment of our educational institutions. Every phase of our work has felt the beneficent influence of these church-wide campaigns for the causes that lie at the very heart of evangelical Christianity.

Our Board of Church Extension has reported receipts for the year 1921 of $960,954.17, out of which scores of churches and parsonages have been aided. The Loan Fund capital of the Board at the close of 1921 amounted to $1,836,623.64.

The conscience of the church has become aroused to the necessity of making better provision for the support of our worn-out preachers, their widows and dependent orphans, and it is a foregone conclusion that our General Conference, now in session, will authorize a movement that will result in adequate provision for these noble men and women to whom the church owes so much of its present prosperity and power.

As we look back over the accomplishments of the past four years, both in a material and a spiritual way, we cannot refrain from exclaiming, "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."

I am glad, too, to be able to say that the fraternal relations between our churches—yours and mine—have in no wise grown less warm during the quadrennium just coming to a close; rather, in a most practical way have those relations been strengthened and cemented. It would naturally be expected that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, because of its historical relationship to the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, would express its interest in that church in a substantial way; and that expectation is met by the facts in the case. Without taking the time to enumerate the ways in which our Sunday School Board, our Board of Education, our Board of Missions, and other agencies of our church have cooperated with you in the great work in which you are engaged, with which things you are doubtless familiar, I cite simply the action of our Board of Church Extension to show that in the most practical way we have labored together to carry forward our common cause. I quote from the current report of the Secretary of our Board:

"Provision was made at the Annual Meeting of the Board in 1918 for more systematic and increased assistance to the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. During the quadrennium, churches have been aided with donations to the number of 43, and in the amount of $15,915.21. A proposition was submitted during the quadrennium to contribute loan funds to our colored brethren to an amount not to exceed $50,000 on condition that they raise a like amount. The conditions of the proposition have been met, and there has been paid over to these brethren for their Loan Fund capital $37,991.83. The unpaid balance due under the proposition is $12,008.17.

The headquarters of their Church Extension Department have been moved to Louisville, and your Board made a contribution towards securing for them permanent headquarters. They seem to have made genuine progress in every department of their work."

It is not too much to believe that these practical demonstrations of fraternal feeling will continue throughout the years to come, and to believe that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South,

WHY IS METHODISM?

By Rev. R. E. Smith, D.D.

(An address delivered before the Louisiana Conference Preachers' Institute, and published by request of that body.)

Without bigotry, in no spirit of controversy, without the least desire of antagonism to others, let us study the rise and genius of Methodism. One may not accept the doctrines, nor approve the plan, but the stupendous fact of Methodism meets every student of history and must be dealt with. It cannot be ignored. It is one of those colossal movements, one of those pivotal and strategic crises upon which the world's destiny turns.

Methodism is not simply a church—a peculiar denomination, one more sect—it is a system of Truth, ageless and universal; or, to change the figure, it is a drop of anilme that has colered all other ecclesiastieal waters.

If the world owes anything to English civilization, it owes more to Methodism. If England has taught the world anything of Democracy—if she has popularized the Bible, if she has spread commerce over the seas and humanized governments and education—it has been because there was a man sent from God whose name was John Wesley!

Lest some one should think this to be the outburst of an enthusiastie devotee of Methodism, let me quote the sober statements of non-religious historians who know.

Says Leslie Stephens, "Wesley was the greatest captain of men of his century."

Macaulay ridicules any historian of England who fails to see among the greatest factors of English history the rise of Methodism. He declares, "Wesley had a genius for government equal to that of Richelieu." Indeed, the greatest compliments come from those non-Methodists who are scholars. Southey says: "His was the most influential mind of the last century, the man who will have produced the greatest effects centuries or perhaps milleniums hence—if the race continues." Lecky declares that Wesley's conversion "forms an epoch in English history." Again "Methodism is of greater historie importance than all the splendid victories by land and sea won under Pitt." And that included the colonial wars that gave America to England, also the accession of India to England. Yet, says Leeky, Methodism was greater than all these, for, he adds, the Methodist Revival saved England from collapse, from Revolution worse than that of the French—it saved English Civilization. Says Birrell: "No other man did such a life's work for England. You can't cut him out of our national life!" Says Fitchett: "England is as truly interested in Wesley as in Shakespeare; and in determining the history of the English speaking race Wesley counts for more than Shakespeare."

Methodism has changed the history of the world. In order to begin to understand this statement, it is necessary to see the condition of England and of civilization just before Wesley began his titanle work. It was the 18th Century. Let us try the difficult task of visualizing the actual social, political and moral conditions at the dawn of Methodism.

Says Fitchtell: England's "ideals were gross; its sports were brutal; its public life corrupt; its vice unashamed. Cruelty fermented in the pleasures of the crowd; foulness stained the general speech; judges swore on the bench; the preacher cursed the sailors to make them listen to his sermons; the King swore incessantly and at the top of his voice. Ferocious laws still lingered on the Statute Book. Justice itself was eruel. Men were put to death for minor offences; women were publicly flogged or burned at the stake; it was the age of the pillory and of the whipping post; human heads were hung from public places; drunkenness was the familiar and unrebuked habit even of Ministers of State; adultery was a sport and the shame lay not on the false wife or the smiling gallant, but on the betrayed husband"—so dull and stupid.

Bribes abounded in all public offices. Jails were filled with debtors. Prisons reeked with filth and vermin and as the jailers had no salary hut lived off fees, frequently men who were deelared innocent had to linger for months in jail until some friend could pay the jailer's fees for board, such as it was. Although thousands were executed upon slightest offences, many more died from prison fever.

Gambling was the national and almost universal pastime. Lotteries prevailed everywhere, even in the churches. Sundays were desecrated by bull-baitings, cock fights, rat hunts and other repulsive sports. Prize fights were more frequently with swords, knives, sticks and clubs. Descriptions of these are too brutal and vulgar to be quoted.

There were no railroads and the best roads were full of ruts and chuck-holes and precipitous hills. Coaches were often unable to pass each other without overturning and many a quarrel and fight ensued as to which would be the victim. For days and weeks thero could be 'no travel whatever. Often two or four pairs of oxen had to be hitched to coaches to drag them out of the mire. In going 18 miles Wesley's friend broke and shattered three wagons.

Highwaymen also infested these bogs and preyed unmercifully upon the unfortunate travelers. The taverns and inns along the way were in league with these robbers and would give them information as to the guests that had money, thus sharing in the profits.

London with 500,000 people had few payed streets, no sewers, no system of lighting, no sanitation. Wagons mired down in the thoroughfares of London. Coaches splashed the beautiful dresses of ladies on foot—much to the merriment of the drivers. From hotel windows buckets were emptied upon the innoeent pedestrians below while the street urchins yelled with delight. No woman ventured out at all at night, and very few men unarmed.

Conditions in the country and rural sections were unspeakable. Nearly one-half of the land was uncultivated. Great tracts of waste, vast forests full of game were withheld from eultivation in order that some nobleman might have his hunting ground. Large districts within sight of London were useless. The people were extremely poor and tax ridden. There were, of eourse, tho two extremes—rich and poor. Farm laborers received a wage of 4 eents per day with hoard, or 6 to 8 eents per day without board. In some seetions wages were fixed at $1 per week without board. Workmen in towns and factories received a little more. Children of tender years were employed in factories and paid miserable pittances, growing up dwarfs, ignorant and degraded, dying young. All this within the law and every effort at reform vigorously opposed hy even leading church men.

Home eenditions were despicable—no conveniences, few comforts. Good wheaten hread was unknown except in cities among the rich. The farmers lived on bread made of oats, rye and barley. Suger, salt, and soap were so expensive as to be luxuries. One in five aged people died in the poor-houses.

There was no system of free schools. Popular education was unknown. Yet there were private schools for the rich and a few universities for sons of uoblemen, also a few charity schools.

Slavery abounded in the colonles and wherever it could bo made profitable in England. But we must drop the curtain, staying only long enough to say that Wesley touched every one of these conditions and Methodism was a powerful factor in correcting every phase of these abuses. Social reform has good preeedent and fatherhood in John Wesley and Methodism.

No age should be judged by its vices. No century should be condemned by its worst, but by its best. Let us turn to the religious condition of England. Surely it is fair to estimate any era by its religion and its evangel. In this realm England before Wesley is in no way able to stand the test. Her religion was all but dead. The Church of England had long been the Established Church, hut schism had rent her beautiful seamless robe. Cromwell and Puritanism had given place to the restoration of the Stuart Kings with their carnival of licentiousness and vice. Many of the preachers took their stand with the king as to Divine right to rule; some were with Parliament and the people against such divine right. Then eame the reign of William and Mary and conditions were reversed. William, the great protestant, gave the people the Bill of Rights, which forever declared against the Divine Right of Kings and took rank almost with tho Magna Charta. Four hundred great preachers resigned or were displaced rather than consent to this democratic idea. Thus was the Church of England weakened by dissension.

Then came the great Deistic contioversy. So fierce was the onslaught of skeptics that the pulpit and clergy were put on the defensive and genuine religion all but perished. Voltaire declared that in 50 years Christianity would be only a memory. The preaching became so weak, so diluted, that only moral essays were heard instead of sermons. They did not deny the existence of God—but He was no longer a force in human affairs. The Bible was no more than good history and there was no Divine revelation. Natural religion is sufficient aud respectability is the highest standard. "God," says Stephens. "was an idol eompounded of tradition and frozen metaphysics." Lecky says: "Beyond a belief in the Trinity and a general acknowledgment of the veracity of the Gospel, the preachers of that day taught little whieh might not have been taught by disciples of Socrates or Confucius." One great writer visited more than a dozen great churches and heard so many sermons in which neither the name nor the work of Christ was ever mentioned. It was a frozen theology—a lifeless form. The church was making no saints, ereating no martyrs, sending out no great missionaries. Even the good Bishop Butler said: "The deplorable distinction of our age is an avowed scorn of religion and a growing disregard for it." Drunken men laughed at having to go to communion to hold their jobs in the State, but their trembling hands fingered the sacraments long enough to keep their salaries. Prayer was outgrown and often ridiculed even by the elergy. Only the printed prayers of the ritual were heard to any great extent. If this was the state of the great established church, what of the Dissenters and independent churches, such as the Presbyterians and Baptists? Let me quote a great English historian who knows: "Open and confessed Arianism had almost completely captured the dissenting churches and the sense of sin was faint—also the doctrines of a Divine and redeeming Christ."

The bishops and leading ministers declared that the great superstition was the belief that God ever revealed Himself in the modern world. It was the highest folly to think that He could be influeneed by prayer to aid any individual soul. Fanaticism was defined as any thought that man eould be conscious of any change in his spiritual relationship. "Go to mass and confessional," said the Catholic. "Go to saerament, repeat the creeds and forms and hope against hope at death to get in," said the good Episcopalian. "You can do absolutely nothing," said the good dissenter and Baptist, "but wait in hope; if you are the elect, you will get in anyhow—if not, nothing you can do will help." Calvinism had captured all faiths and churches and gone to its limit.

Into an age and civilization like this came John Wesley—the trim young scholar who, said Stephen, outranked Wm. Pitt and Samuel Johnson. For years he too (Wesley) fell under the paralyzing influence of this frozen preaching. He was a good Episcopalian and remained so to the day of his death. But he sought something which neither Anglicanism nor Dissent could give. How he tried to do the works of charity and religion that would bring peace! What watching and prayers! What heart-searchings and self-denials! What study and introspection! All to no avail. Then into the wild woods of America he came as a missionary to the Indians. Even the peerless Susanah Wesley, his mother, wrote him that it is impossible to know your sins forgiven—even she trusted that by systematic and consistent deeds of duty, duty well done, she might know at her dying moment the assurance of forgiveness—but no one could before that solemn hour.

Still he felt that he must have the assurance if he is to do the works of God! Back to England he came sadder than ever. Every day now became one long search for God. His Bible was read through again and again. Every morning he went to communion. Prayers wasted him away. But his redemption was drawing nearer. On the eve of May 24, 1738, while listening to one read Luther's Preface to the Epistle to the Romans, about a quarter before nine, "I felt I did trust in Christ—Christ alone for salvation. And an assurance was given me that he had taken away my sins, even mine. I began to pray with all my might for those who had persecuted me. I then testified openly to all what I now first felt in my heart." Here are the elements of Methodism—simple trust (Faith), Assurance, Testimony.

Now he began indeed his wonderful career. He preached everywhere this good news that every one may know his sins forgiven. He visited the jails, and hardened criminals heard and believed. By sick beds he knelt and the sick arose and praised God. Enthusiasm spread. The news caught fire and friends and foes rushed in. The bishops and those in authority remonstrated with the zealot. He was not only preaching heresy, but fanaticism. The world was not quite ready for practical Arminianism, for a who-so-ever-will gospel. One by one the churches were closed against him. Then he went to the jails and alms houses—at length to the fields and open air. The fire burned in his bones—he must speak! So many thousands heard and believed, he was forced to use laymen to help him preach. Everywhere they went heralding the tidings and offering men salvation present and conscious upon simple faith and trust.

Wesley was mobbed and egged all over England for preaching what we hold as commonplace today. Gradually, his thought has taken hold of the churches of the world. Other folds have felt the touch of his genius and accepted much of his truth. Every evangelical church to-day owes a debt to Wesley that not all of them recognize. It was Wesley who began the modern revival methods. It was Methodism that first dared to teach the worth of all men as men—that any man could come and be saved! It was Methodism that first taught an assurance of salvation. It was Methodism that first had the Annual Conference or Association or Convention idea. It was Methodism that first taught social reform, that sought the abolition of slavery, prohibition, and urged popular education. John Wesley, not Robt. Raikes, organized the first Sunday school. Methodism first began teacher training.

Although Methodism came to America nearly 150 years later than most of the other evangelical denominations, it has spread rapidly and to-day outnumbers, we believe, any other Protestant body. We do not here discuss the ambitious claim of some other churches to apostolic succession, but we do declare most positively that such denominations never were numerous or felt as powers until they took up Wesley's great practical, preachable Arminianism—his who-so-ever-will gospel!

Brethren, when we are tempted to become discouraged with present-day conditions, when men say the world is becoming worse, let us refer to the state of affairs before Wesley! Finally, what Methodism has already accomplished is only a beginning—a prophecy of what she shall do yet in making the knowledge of God cover the earth or the waters cover the sea.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE—A GREAT INSTITUTION.

Dear Brother Carley: Since the death of our long-time friend of the boys and of the college, Rev. T. B. Holloman, I do not know whether we have a man who feels under obligation to give an account of the work of the College as seen by a visitor and trustee as he was accustomed to do.

I appreciated the work and the interest manifested by Dr. T. B. Holloman in the college and the boys very much, and while I cannot fill his place, yet I feel constrained to write a brief message concerning the College, its past, present, and possible future.

You know that Henry Carley, the Editor of the New Orleans Advocate, and this writer date back to the beginning of things at Millsaps, though we are both young men yet, and are possibly the finest looking fellows ever graduating from that College.

It has been just twenty-five years since I received my diploma. This year I attended the Commencement exercises as one of the Trustees of the College, being placed on the Board by action of the Alumni and the Mississippi Annual Conference, December, 1921.

I went over on Friday afternoon to be present at the Annual Debate between representatives from the Galloway and the Lamar Literary Societies, which in our day and for some years later, was possibly the most exciting feature of the whole Commencement. The chapel was always crowded with students, members of the faculty, and visitors; and there were flowers for the debaters until they scarcely knew what to do with them.

Now the contrast in the interest manifested in that particular event was painful to witness. A great majority of the student body had gone home; hence a very small audience assembled to hear that wonderful debate. In our day, the Commencement exercises from beginning to end were regarded by the student body as one of the big things of the whole college year, and but few of the students left before Dr. Murrah announced on Tuesday morning, after the delivery of the diplomas, that the session was then closed.

The vacant rooms in the dormitories, the small attendance on the Commencement exercises, present a sad experience to one who was a student twenty-five years ago. But our President, Dr. A. F. Watkins, thinks he will have the boys present another year when we meet, by having the Commencement sermon before the final examinations. I hope he will be successful in that effort. But we must turn from this unfavorable contrast to one that gives a delightful feeling. So let us note the growth of the College along several lines.

At the session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, December, 1897, the year I received my diploma and was admitted on trial into the Conference, the following College statistics were reported to that Conference: Value of Property, $70,000; Endowment, $107,000; Professors, Including Law Department and Preparatory work, 12; Pupils, including law students, 206. Now, last December, twenty-four years later, the statistics reported to the Conference were these: Value of Property, $335,000; Endowment, $600,000; Teachers, 17; Pupils, 366.

These figures show that during these twenty-four years there has been an increase in both property value and in endowment of approximately five hundred per cent. Taking into consideration the fact that the Law School has been discontinued, the student enrollment shows an increase of approximately one hundred per cent.

There are some other contrasts that the present student body would not know about unless some of us old fellows told them. When we were there, we drank the muddy water from Pearl River, without filtering; now the water is as clear as crystal. Then there were no electric lights, steam heat, modern baths and sewerage at the college. There were no electric cars, paved streets, concrete sidewalks in the city of Jackson. The shade trees which were planted on the campus in my day, have grown to be a thing of beauty. The new dormitories give a different appearance to the campus. The cottages, or "shacks" as we called them, are about the only thing that remain as they were then.

Material equipment, conveniences, and facilities are far in advance of what they were in our day. But upon investigation, we find that the student has to pay approximately twice as much for his college privileges as we did. But I think that is just about in keeping with the general increased cost in living now, over what it cost in 1897. I think it costs twice as much to stay at home now as it did then.

Upon the recommendation of the President of the College, the Academy, or Preparatory School, was discontinued. Prof. Huddleston, who had given twenty-two years of service in that department, was elected Associate Professor of Ancient Languages in the College. Rev. John Lambuth Ferguson, Headmaster of the Academy, was elected Associate Professor of Religious Education.

The alumni of the College had a very interesting meeting at their annual banquet on Monday night. The enrollment in the Freshman Class has been by far the largest in the history of the College.

The Methodists of Mississippi have a great a institution in Millsaps College, and we hope that every Methodist in the State will feel a vital interest in said College, and that he will do his best to make the College grow from year to year in all those things which make an institution of learning really great. L. E. ALFORD, Class of 1897.

HONOR ROLL.

Correspondence School Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas.

At the beginning of this Conference year notice was given of an Honor Roll to be published of all students completing their Conference Course with the Correspondence School, Southern Methodist University, by June 1. The following men deserve much credit for the splendid work they have done in completing their courses by this date.

Admission on Trial—A. W. Blackford, East Oklahoma; J. D. Gilliam, Jr., East Oklahoma; M. J. Jackson, Texas; Roy T. Johnson, St. Louis.

First Year—Roy E. Briggs, Central Texas; John R. Bright, Northwest Texas; J. O. Cox, New Mexico; J. L. Greenway, Louisiana; T. L. Hunt, North Arkansas; J. H. Malone, Texas; C. A. Mangham, Texas; Clark M. Oursler, West Oklahoma; H. J. Roberts, Missouri; P. L. Shuler, Central Texas; C. B. Thompson, Northwest Texas; G. W. Warren, Little Rock;.

Second Year- Warren A. Bonner, Pacific; J. G. Ditterline, North Arkansas; W. A. Fulbright, New Mexico; George W. Hooten, North Arkansas; J. H. Jones, St. Louis; J. D. Kursell, Central Texas.

Third Year—J. O. Manning, West Texas; J. F. Michael, Denver.

Fourth Year—H. E. Corbin, Missouri; Earl F. Dillon, Southwest Missouri; James B. Douglas, Louisiana; G. S. Dowdy, West Oklahoma; J. P. Evans, New Mexico; H. C. Henderson, Denver; R. J. LaPrade, Central Texas; A. J. Martin, Louisiana; J. G. McCollum, North Arkansas; J. W. Nelson, Southwest Missouri; C. L. Stillwell, Southwest Missouri.

Thou alone knowest what is good for me; thou alone art Lord of all; do therefore what seemeth to thee best. Give to me or take from me; conform my will to thine; and grant that with humble and perfect submission and in holy confidence I may be disposed to receive the orders of thy eternal providence, and may equally adore every dispensation which shall come to me from thy hand.—Pascal.

FRATERNAL ADDRESS.

will always rejoice in every opportunity it may have of strengthening your hands for the great work to which you are giving yourselves. As the sainted Lambuth and your own noble—now suffering—Gilbert labored together in Africa for the establishment of the Kingdom of God in the Dark Continent, so will we continue to work together for the coming of that Kingdom throughout the earth.

At this point I desire to express to you the felicitations of my church upon your own prosperity and growth. According to the latest figures available, you have a memebrship of 245,749—and you report for 1921 the magnificent gain of 95,235; this membership worships in 2,621 churches, served by 3,402 ministers; you have a Sunday school enrollment of 186,770; and during the past year you raised for all purposes the splendid sum of $1,736,682.

It is needless to say that your church constitutes a mighty force for righteousness among a people who are peculiarly responsive to the appeals of the gospel, and that your responsibility is commensurate with your opportunity as you minister to the multiplied thousands who are providentially placed under your care and leadership. We bid you Godspeed in your great mission, and pray the blessings of the Almighty upon you as you move forward, with consecrated wisdom, unflagging zeal, invincible faith, and utter consecration, to the accomplishment of your glorious task.

I ask your further patience while I speak to you briefly of some of the things that I conceive to be of importance to us as we face the tasks that the future holds in store for us—tasks that can be performed only by those who understand and practice the principles of Christian fraternity.

Your church and mine have already settled a problem that is still vexing some of our brethren who have not yet come to realize that organization into separate ecclesiastical bodies of our two races is completely in accord with the principles of brotherhood, and that such organization is essential for the best and fullest development of all the Christian virtues and graces. I believe we are both fully convinced—our conviction being based upon the irrefutable logic of facts established through experience—that the best interests of both races are subserved by the kind of relationship that has marked our friendly and helpful attitude toward each other for all these years. The substantial and permanent rewards of a preserved racial integrity are altogether too great to be sacrificed upon the altar of a so-called social equality which not only violates the fundamental principles of helpful social contact, but also destroys the true meaning of equality as applied to the rights and privileges of individuals and races from the beginning of time to this good hour. Having settled this question to our own complete satisfaction—yours and mine—we will give ourselves to the more glorious task of demonstrating how we, as brethren, may dwell together in peace and harmony, helping one another, ennobling our own lives and enlarging the ideals of those who look to us for guidance, and being a blessing without disguise to the age in which we live and to all the ages that are to come.

Believing, as we do, in the doctrine of Christian brotherhood, we accept unreservedly—all of us, I am sure—its obligations, face unflinchingly its problem, undertake courageously its task, and hope confidently for its rewards. It is of these things in turn that I shall speak.

The obligations of brotherhood are easily discerned and easily stated—but their perfect fulfillment requires a full measure of the grace of God in the hearts of all those who call themselves brothers. These fundamental obligations are two—to love, and to serve. By long and frequent use these words have become so trite that we may utter them with but little comprehension of their significance; but they still contain within themselves the dynamic principles upon which the realization of "a new heaven and a new earth" is ultimately dependent. We do not have to read into them a meaning they do not inherently possess, or place upon them a strained interpretation to make them express for us the obligations of brotherhood; all we have to do is to understand the meaning given them by the Master, for them to become the full and sufficient statement of the debt we owe one another as we dwell together in the household of the saints. We cannot be brethren—we canot even act as brethren—without loving and serving one another; and we cannot love without serving, just as we cannot really serve without loving.

It is hardly necessary for me to remark that the harboring of hate is so contradictory of the principle of love and so out of keeping with the teachings of the Master that we are bound by every consideration of ethics, morals, and religion to keep our own hearts free from its embittering influence, and to do all in our power to overcome and remove the causes that engender personal and class hatred; or to say further that we practice brotherhood only as we strive with all our might to help one another overcome the difficulties that confront us severally and in common. The fomenter of hate anywhere at any time is a menace to the well-being of the whole world.

We accept, I say, the obligations of brotherhood—the obligations to love and to serve—and our helpful relationship in the future will depend, as it has done in the past, upon our unswerving allegiance to the high requirements of these divine imperatives. There is not one of us, I am sure, who would say here to-day that he will not be bound by these obligations throughout the years to come.

The problem of brotherhood, as I see it, grows directly out of its obligations. That problem is to know one another—to know one another so well that to love will be an inevitable consequent, and to serve will be a joy.

The right solution of any problem is dependent upon a fair and square facing of that problem, an understanding of the factors of the problem, and a readiness to do whatever may be necessary to clear away misunderstandings and adjust ourselves to the evident requirements of the case if a solution is to be reached. Dodging the issue is as poor policy as it is bad morals. Having accepted the obligations of brotherhood, we must inevitably face its problem and work out its solution.

I think we have already gone a long way toward the solution of this problem, and—please God—we are going to continue working at it till we stand face to face and see eye to eye. We are not going to be led astray by any false doctrine of brotherhood that ignores the fundamental requirements of racial integrity, or that transgresses the bounds laid down by the Almighty for the preservation of a social order in which the rights of all are respected and their inalienable privileges protected; but we are, with manly frankness and Christian candor, going to tell each other and all the world what is in our minds and hearts. Only by so doing can we be true to each other and to the high requirements of our fraternal obligations. Only by sincerity of speech and action can we come to know one another in a way that will enable us to perform the tasks of brotherhood and enjoy the blessings of brotherhood; otherwise, we are at best only acquaintances—and at worst, suspicious and distrustful strangers.

It is for this reason that we cannot afford to say with our lips what is not in our hearts; nor can we afford to follow a policy in our organizational activities that is not based upon mutual understanding, confidence, and respect. "What is in thine heart?"—upon the frank answer to that question depends the final solution of the problem of brotherhood, and the application of the principles of fraternity that will enable us to meet the demands that are upon us in these days of world unrest and world readjustment.

Having stated the obligations of brotherhood—to love and to serve—and having presented the problem of brotherhood—to know—(upon which things I trust we are agreed), I come now to speak of the task of brotherhood—the task which not only tests the principles by which we profess to live, but also challenges the highest powers of mind and heart with which we have been endowed. As children of God we are called to be co-workers with him in the glorious undertaking of establishing the Kingdom of God upon earth, of bringing all people everywhere into a saving knowledge of the truth as it has been revealed in Christ Jesus, that we may hasten the coming of the time when we shall be able to present to our Lord even the heathen for his inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession. This is the task of brotherhood—to make all men brothers in the household of faith, so that prejudice and distrust and hate will give way to cordial good will, mutual confidence, and a love like unto that of Him who counted not even his life dear if only he might serve and save. In short, it is ours to bring about the establishment of the Kingdom of God upon earth.

That it is a difficult task, we will not deny; but its difficulties are swallowed up in the glory that shines upon the pathway of those who are willing to enter upon so noble an emprise, and in the radiance that streams from the battlements of heaven upon the banners of those who join themselves together for the accomplishment of such a holy purpose.

God pity the man, anyway, who is looking for an easy job or seeking for himself ease and pleasure and honor when multiplied thousands are treading the way of sorrow, mutely pleading for a brother's love and pitifully stretching out their hands for a brother's help!

It is only as yesterday that men counted it a privilege to enroll themselves under the flag of their country to fight for freedom on foreign shores—and they counted it a privilege in spite of the sorrows, difficulties, and dangers that lay in the way. They smiled through their tears as they kissed their loved ones good-bye, for they were going on a noble mission. It was hard—yes! The unseen but tragic dangers of the deep were before them, and death was stalking openly through the trenches and across the fair fields of France. But they were not afraid—and children will tell their children's children of the heroism of their sires when duty called.

It was not an easy thing for the Son of God to empty himself of the honor he had with the Father, to leave the courts of heaven for a cradle in a manger on earth, to pace the weary roads of Galilee despised and rejected of men, to pass through the agony in Gethsemane and endure the shame of the cross on Golgotha; but he did it—and he did it for you and for me!

And shall we hold back from any service we may render, from any sacrifice we may make for our brothers, since our Elder Brother has done so much for us? It cannot be so; rather, let us face the task, no matter how difficult it may be, with shining faces and jubilant hearts, for the great God calls us and the Prince of Peace is our Commander.

Lead on, O King Eternal,
We follow, not with fears;
For gladness breaks like morning
Where'er thy face appears;
Thy cross is lifted o'er us;
We journey in its light:
The crown awaits the conquest;
Lead on, O God of might.

Will you bear with me while I venture to suggest how, it seems to me, we must go about the accomplishment of this glorious task?

First of all, we, as professed followers of Christ, as members already of the household of faith, must make our personal lives conform to the holy standards of living prescribed by the gospel we preach; and we must lay such emphasis upon personal purity and uprightness that we shall be blameless before all men in this respect. One of the most tragic possibilities of the life of service is expressed by Paul in those significant words: "Lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." The strength of any brotherhood is in the personal lives of those who are bound by its obligatious; and if we, as members of the Christian brotherhood, do not commend that brotherhood by exemplary lives, we are in very poor position to undertake the task of making the whole world Christian.

This is a matter of tremendous importance, as I conceive it, in these days when there is a strong tendency to shift the emphasis from personal righteousness to social morality, and from individual right living to mass respectability. I will not say that it is so, but it is possible that the distressingly low social standards of the present day have grown out of a failure to place continued emphasis upon the necessity of personal purity. Certainly this is true—that a society made up of good individuals will be a good society; and while it may be a slow process, I believe the best method of making a good society is by making good individuals.

It is hardly necssary for me to call attention to the ways in which we must maintain this high standard of holy living aud tho places where we must exhibit it. Prayer and Bible reading and meditation upon the great truths of our religion are commonplaco things we may think—but they are the foundation stones upon which rest all our hopes of high attainment in the things of God; and in the home, in business, and in our social contacts the world is watching us to see whether or not our lives express the holy gospel we profess. And we may bo sure we cannot deceive the world into believing that we are what we are not.

But In this task that confronts us as a Christian brotherhood—tho task of establishing the Kingdom of God upon earth—there is another matter to which all churches, yours and mine not excepted, must give the utmost consideration. I refer to the carrying out of an educational program by which, first of all, we may develop a leadership competent to guide us in the onward and upward way, and then lift our people to higher and broader planes of usefulness and power. There is not one among us who believes more completely and unreservedly than I do in the providence of God, who

> Moves In a mysterious way
> His wonders to perform, or who realizes more fully that ho can use the weak things of the earth to confound the mighty; but I believe with all the strength of my soul that "a call to service is a call to get ready for service," and we are negligent of our duty and recreant to our trust if we are presumptuous enough to suppose that the Almighty is going to use lazy and ignorant men and women to carry out his glorious purpose in the redemption of the race. We must educate our leaders—and we must educate them in Christian schools and colleges if we are to rely upon them for leadership in the great task of brotherhood.

No matter what we have accomplished thus far In tho way of founding, equipping, and supporting our educational institutions—and we are not to be reproached at this point, for we have done much In the face of almost insuperable difficulties—we must go forward in a way that will show that we are determined to make all the use possible of the talents God has given us, by developing them to the highest possible degree. "If the blind lead the blind, both will fall into the ditch;" and the tragedy of their fall will be chargeable to us unless we do all In our power to remove the darkness through which men cannot see.

I wish we might come to realize fully that education is not merely a human process for sharpening the wits of those who have to wring a living from the world, but that it is inseparably wrapped up with God's plan of making men meet to do his will on earth. The leaders in all ages went through this educational process: Moses was skilled in all the learning of the Egyptians; Jesus himself waited until he was about thirty years old before he began his public ministry—and those early years must have been a period of preparation; Paul did not enter upon his great career immediately after his vision on the Damascus road, but, after that miraculous experience, he went aside into the Arabian desert to prepare himself for the difficult days that lay ahead of him. And who are we, that we should think ourselves fit for leadership in the Kingdom of God without that disciplining of the faculties that comes through a similar educational process?

You do well—and we are trying to set you a good example In the matter—to rally your people to the support of your educational institutions; and I feel at liberty to assure you that you will find the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, In hearty sympathy with all your efforts to establish and maintain an educational system adequate to your needs, and that you may rely upon my church to co-operate with you, in every proper way, to the extent of its ability in carrying out so important an undertaking.

I must speak of one other way by which we are to go about performing the difficult but glorious task of brotherhood, and that is by maintaining an evangelistic activity that will not be content until it has carried out the Great Commission of the Master and preached the gospel to every creature, even to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Preaching the gospel is the most glorious privilege ever committed to mortals by the Omnipotent God; and I sometimes fear it is coming to be the most lightly esteemed. I grant you that most of us like to hear good preaching, and we like to talk about what a great and wondrous thing it is—but precious few of us hurt ourselves doing it when we go into the pulpit. (I am thinking especially now of us white preachers—you colored brethren may do differently.) But, seriously, I am afraid we are allowing ourselves to be so taken up with various and sundry other forms of religious activity that we are negiecting the most important of all—for it is by the "foolishness of preaching" that the world is to be saved. Woe unto us if we preach not the gospel!

Back of preaching lie two indispensable things—a divine call, and a personal experience of divine grace. Contrary to the views of some moderns, I am old-fashioned enough to believe that God still directly and specifically calls men to the work of preaching his gospel, that he lays his hand upon them in a way that peculiarly sets them apart for that service, and that it is dangerous presumption for any other to enter that holy calling. And in the performance of the difficult task of brotherhood, I cannot see how any others than those upon whom rests a divine compulsion can give themselves unreservedly to so trying a work. It is evident, therefore, that as we recruit our ministry—and we ought continuously and earnestly pray the Lord of tho harvest to send forth laborers into his harvest—we must guard its ranks against those who would enter them for any other reason than that the Lord has called them.

What shall we say, then, of those who would stand in the pulpit as teachers sent from God who themselves have no experience of saving grace—who have not felt the burden of sin and the blessed relief that comes through repentance and faith when God, for Christ's sake, pardons our transgressions and removes our iniquity as far from us as the east is from the west; who have not experienced that change of heart through which old things are cast aside and all things become new; who are not constantly growing in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ? There can be no such thing as evangelistic zeal in an individual or in a church that is a stranger to an evangelistic experience.

But with such a ministry, preaching will become a passion, and the evangelization of the world will be the only program that will satisfy the longing of every brother's heart for the blessing of the Father upon all mankind. And in carrying out that program, the task of brotherhood will be accomplished.

I cannot but feel that this task appeals to us with all the urgency of a tragic need and a glorious opportunity. Its difficulties we know; but these things cannot hold us back from attempting the glorious mission with which we have been entrusted. We will gird our loins with truth, put on the breastplate of righteousness, shoe our feet with the preparation of the gospel of peace, take up the shield of faith, and, with the Sword of the Spirit, we will go forth, mighty as an army with banners, to conquer this world for our Lord and his Christ. "Whosoever is fearful and afraid, let him return and depart early from Mount Gilead;" and whosoever loves ease and pleasure rather than heroic endeavor, let him now be tested of the Lord. But we will go forth to the task to which our King has called us.

Having pointed out the obligations of brotherhood, having stated its problem, and having discussed its task, it remains for me now to speak of its reward—and of that I shall speak briefly.

The sufficient reward of brotherhood—as it is the sufficient reward of all our labors—is the presence and blessing and power of the Lord in our lives and in our work. Would we see the Lord? We may see him if we will hear and obey his voice as he calls us this day to the supreme duty of loving and serving one another as brethren in the household of faith. Our trust is in God, and our only hope of his favor is in doing his will.

In tho long ago, a monk prayed long and earnestly that he might have a vision of his Lord. After many years of prayer and meditation and useful service, as he was sitting at the close of day in his cell, suddenly a wonderful light shone round about him; looking toward the door to see whence had come such a glorious light, he saw the Lord standing there. His prayers were answered and his joy was complete! But just as he was about to give ecstatic expression to his happiness, the monastery bell rang—the bell that called one of the monks each day to give bread to the poor who came to the monastery gate—and this day it was this monk's duty to serve. His first thought was that he could not go away from the Lord—had he not prayed all these years for his coming? But when he thought of the hungry poor waiting for their bread, and when he remembered that no other would give to them that day, for it was his appointed task, he yielded to that call of duty and went to serve the needy—sorrowful as he thought of the vanished vision of the Lord, but happy in his humble ministry to the poor. But when he returned to his cell, the light was still there—and the Lord was still there!—and as he entered the Lord said to him, "If thou hadst not gone, I had not stayed."

Help us, O Lord, to do thy will, that we may have Thee with us always!

EXTRA EFFORT FOR THE DULL SEASON.

There is the disposition to relax efforts for the collection of Centenary pledges during the months of the dull season. In fact, all Church finances "drag" at this time of the year. Some of our people have little spare cash, while others use their surplus for vacation trips. Those who have regular incomes in monthly salaries or otherwise, can help more now than at any other time of the year. Payments on Centenary pledges between this date and September 1, will help to relieve a situation that is embarrassing to the workers in every field to which Centenary money has been appropriated.

Our missionaries In foreign fields, the various enterprises in these lands and at home, the pastors in home mission charges who look to Centenary appropriations for more than one-half of their missionary appropriations—all of these are feeling the effects of past due Centenary pledges, and feeling this to hurt. Make the special effort and the sacrifice demanded to pay all or part of your Centenary pledge NOW.

Be sure if you do your very best in that which is laid upon you daily, you will not be left without help when some mightier occasion arises.—Jean Nicolas Grou.

Deeds to thy knowledge answerable; add faith,
Add virtue, patience, temperance; add love:
Then wilt thou not be loath
To leave this paradise, but shalt possess
A paradise within thee, happier far.

THE SUPERANNUATE.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Tune—How Firm A Foundation.

When we are retired, and stand in the lot
Of men who will soon by the church be forgot;
When appointments are read, and our names don't appear,
And our eyes are bedimmed by the unbidden tear;

When salaries cease, and support is no more,
And harship and want enter in through the door;
When with unsteady step and our strength gone away,
We totter along at the close of the day;

Shall we murmur and fret, and repine at our fate,
And our zeal for the service of Jesus abate?
Shall we slacken our speed in the glorious race,
And dishonor our Lord by distrusting his grace?

No never, no never give over the fight!
Even down to old age let our armor be bright;
Assured that we still may in Jesus confide,
Whose love for our need will most surely provide!

Though faint, still pursuing, hold out to the end,
Never doubting the love of our heavenly Friend;
Rejoicing in hope of a mansion on high,
And rest in the Lord "in the sweet by and by."

METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOLS IN NEW ORLEANS A GENERATION AGO.

By Allen F. Godat.

I was glad when I was asked to write about Sunday school work in New Orleans a generation or so ago, because it gives me an opportunity to pay a merited tribute to some of the consecrated Christian workers of those days, and also to try to remove some misconceptions of our schools as they were then. I have sometimes felt, and I believe others have shared the same feeling, that not infrequently speakers in Sunday school conventions and writers in church periodicals unnessarily disparage the Sunday schools of a generation or more ago. Looking back upon our Sunday schools as I knew them in my "teen age," and in the days when I was a young teacher, I am certain that the teachers under whom I sat and with whom I served, compare very favorably and some of them most favorably with those of to-day.

When I entered Carondelet Street Sunday school in 1875, and for nine or ten years afterwards, Mr. Robert M. Walmsley was its superintendent. A cotton merchant, and afterwards one of the city's leading bankers, he was a prince among men. Quiet, reserved, sparing of speech, but not of money or time, he was one of the most efficient superintendents I have known. One of his mottoes was, "Let all things be done decently and in order," and few schools have ever been conducted more orderly, effectively or with so little apparent effort. Although a combination of unfortunate circumstances in after years led to his withdrawal from the Methodist Church, Methodists should never forget that it was his initiative and liberality that made it possible for Bishop Keener to inaugurate, and during its first years carry forward, the mission of our church in Mexico.

We had a fine corps of teachers, and I know none to-day whom I consider their superiors. My first teacher was Mr. Charles J. Shepard, a prominent cotton broker, a man who had traveled extensively, and who took particular pleasure in teaching our class of boys. My next teacher was Sylvester L. Hill, a gentleman of cultivated mind, deep piety, and earnest consecration. His influence in my life still abides. I was afterward placed in the Bible class which the saintly William Sherry taught for forty years. He had been the Sunday school teacher and class leader of Bishop Linus Parker, and lived to watch with loving pride the career of his pupil as pastor, as presiding elder, as editor and as bishop. Among the other teachers were Abner A. Parker, worthy son of a worthy sire; John C. Shansy, Geo. H. Wasson, Thomas W. Dyer, at that time prominent in the public schools and later organizer and head of the University School; Warren Easton, then principal of a large public school, and afterward State and city superintendent of education; Rev. D. L. Mitchell, Hugh Jamieson, Sr., one of the publishers of the Christian Advocate; Mrs. Augusta Bartels, Miss M. E. Tank, a highly regarded public school teacher, and others.

Among the superintendents who succeeded Mr. Walmsley were the saintly Thomas J. Carver and John G. Grant. As a Christian worker the latter had a greater variety of accomplishments than any other layman I have known. He could successfully handle a primary class and a Bible class. As conductor of a teachers' meeting he was unsurpassed. He could lead prayer meeting better than many preachers. He could preside acceptably over a meeting, or hold his own with any one on the floor deabting a question of parliamentary procedure. For 20 years the secretary's desk was most competently filled by Henry W. Spear.

We had good music. Mrs. Walmsley led the singing with the assistance of a competent organist. We had the best and freshest Sunday school hymnals, the "Amaranth," the "New Life," numbers one and two, being among them. In common with the books of to-day they contained many bright and pretty pieces we all liked, and most of which we have forgotten. But they also contained many of the standard hymns, such as: "Jesus shall Reign Where'er the Sun," "There is a Green Hill Far Away," "Rock of Ages," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and "Yield Not to Temptation." I did not like them so much then, but we learned them and I sang them and am glad I did.

The uniform international lessons were used. Whatever may be thought of them now, they were considered the very best in those days, and that our Methodist schools, and those of other denominations in New Orleans adopted them so soon after their introduction is proof that their leaders were alert and ready to accept any scheme, however new, that commended itself to their judgment as possessing real merit.

I have written so fully of old Carondelet school because it was the one I attended, but the others were also favored with fine leaders and teachers. For many years the superintendent of Felicity Street school was William H. Foster. He was one of the leading lawyers of his day, a man of fine talents and rare personality. He was the founder, and for forty years the president, of the New Orleans District Sunday School Union. Rev. John F. Foster, of the Louisiana Conference, and H. Frank Foster, a leading layman of Parker Memorial, are his sons. At his death he was succeeded by Edward P. Mackie, a man of singular purity of character and devotion to the Sunday school cause.

The superinenent of Rayne Memorial was John G. Parham, a man in every respect the peer of those already mentioned.

For thirty-three years Louisiana Avenue school was presided over by W. Blaney Thomson, who is still with us, and who during the best years of his life gave unstintedly of the best that was in him for the work of training the young for the Master.

For many years Dr. John W. Adams was the superintendent of Moreau Street Sunday School. In zeal, faithfulness and in love of the work, he was in no whit behind the others.

Over in Algiers, Frank A. Daniels was superintendent. Honored by his fellow-citizens with a seat in the city council, so clean was his private and public life that no political opponent dared assail it; appointed postmaster of New Orleans by President Cleveland, he served most efficiently; beloved by teachers, officers and scholars of his school, a school that more frequently than any other carried off the Union Banner for the highest averages, he was a Christian gentleman. What more need be said of him?

At Dryades Street, then the German church, now merged with the Feilcity, the princely business man and Christian gentleman, John H. Keller, was superintendent.

Carrollton school was then but a mission, conducted by its founder, A. H. Ahten, who still lives to enjoy the sight of what God has wrought through his faith and labors.

Parker Memorial was also then in the making, under the leadership of the sainted James D. Parker. No sweeter-spirited, purer-hearted and more consecrated man of God ever lived.

But how about the products of those schools, the result of the labors of those men and women? Among the pupils of those days were many who are now leaders in the ministry and lay activities of the church. In Carondelet there were the Carré brothers, Walter, Beach and Tudor, to be counted on for support and leadership in every worthy movement, and Henry B. Carré, now of Vanderbilt University; and Tom Carter, Rev. Thomas Carter, B. D., D. D., if you prefer, and his brother, Rev. Bricoe Carter, and Nicholas Joyner and Felix R. Hill, Jr., and William H. La Prade, Jr., and the Knickerobckers—Herman, Hubert and Percy, now and for years past markedly successful in the Texas and Oklahoma Conferences as preachers, as revivalists and builders of splendid churches.

At Felicity was Geo. D. Parker, now of our mission in Brazil; John F. Foster and his brother, Frank, and W. W. Holmes; at Rayne Memorial were Harry Rickey and Franklin and Fitzgerald Parker, and James R. Westerfield; at Dryades Street, Paul Voss and W. D. Kleinschmidt; at Moreau, Morris DePass and Martin Woofley, and at old Craps Street, Henry Ahrens.

Some of these, like the Parkers, the Carters and the Knickerbockers, attended more than one of our schools at different times and so several of the schools mentioned can claim the honor of having trained them.

Surely the schools that sent forth these men were not inefficient. Whatever they may have lacked of twentieth century methods or equipment, they did not lack men and women of intelligence, culture, common sense, piety, love of God, love of His Word, love of children, love of young people. They knew their Bibles, they prayed, they worked, and of course their efforts were crowned with success.

We can have all that they had, and with the aid of improved methods and equipment of to-day added, should produce even greater results.

CHRISTIAN COURTESY.

This is part of the practical side of the Christian life. Courtesy is one of the finest virtues. It may be superficial, a courtesy which manifests itself simply in the outward act, or it may be vital, a courtesy which rises from the heart. The world has never known a character who approached Christ in manly courtesy. That courtesy was born of the love for humanity and a true estimate of the individual. It was a courtesy, unlike ours often is, that marked His relations with all people. It was not something that He showed to the rich and the educated and denied to the poor and uncultured. Have we such a conception of courtesy? One of the most distinctive things about life in big cities, where people are thrust among crowds, is a lack of courtesy which begins in our attitude toward strangers and before we know it, will carry into all our human relations. The follower of Christ must be truly courteous.—Calendar of Washington Heights Church.

Ministers and churchmen who expect to be in France this summer are cordially invited by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America to call upon Pastor Andre Monod, of the French Protestant Federation, 8 Rue de la Victoire, Paris, who will be glad to give his special attention to seeing that such visitors are afforded an opportunity to become acquainted with the important Protestant institutions in France.

Where Thou art, there is heaven; and where Thou art not, there is death and hell.—Thomas A. Kempis.

'CAUSE 'TWAS ME.

"When I was at a party,"
Said Betty (aged just four).
"A little girl fell off her chair
Right down upon the floor;
And all the other little girls
Began to laugh, but me—
I didn't smile a single bit,"
Said Betty, seriously.
"Why not?" her mother asked her,
Full of delight to find
That Betty—bless her heart!
Had been so sweetly kind;
"Why didn't you laugh, darling?
Or don't you like to tell?"
"I didn't laugh," said Betty.
"'Cause 'twas me that fell."—Ex.

THE STORY OF THE SEAL.

About twelve years ago, an old mate and myself, in company with eighteen other men, leased an old ship and sailed for the far North on a seal hunting expedition.

As you proabbly know, the Pribilof Islands, a small group lying about two hundred miles off the coast of Alaska, are known as the home of the seals. We arrived on these islands very early in the spring, when scarcely any seals were there.

Why the seals leave these islands each fall, returning in the spring, is a mystery to scientists, unless it is that they return to their homes for mating. It is claimed that the mother seals inhabit the very same homes each spring. During the month of May the seals begin to appear. The males, or bulls as they are called, come first, and these, like the females, or cows, have favored places which they seize each year, fighting to the death any intruder.

A seal bull is a large, ugly creature, weighing as much as four hundred pounds He is master of his household. Several weeks after the bulls have arrived, the females, or cows, come. These are graceful, gentle creatures, weighing as a rule not more than one hundred pounds.

Each bull gathers about him as many females as he can, sometimes as many as a hundred, and over these he exercises the strictest authority. Other bulls, a great many times, will try to steal some of the cows, and then a great fight takes place. Hundreds of females are torn to pieces every year by these contending males, and the rocks echo with their roaring.

A seal on land is very awkward, but in the water it is graceful and beautiful. It has a tapering body, with thick, woolly fur, and long shining hair, and is so oily, it glides easily through the water, its fin-like feet serving as a paddle and a rudder. The seals are especially fond of small fish, which are their principal diet. It is very amusing to watch their quick, darting movements in the water, diving after their meals.

The seal has a tail, but it is so very short as to be practically useless. The limbs also are short, the greater part of their length being hidden beneath the skin. The head is small, but they have a very large mouth and, like a cat, are provided with feelers.

Soon after the females have arrived and are comfortably situated in their homes again, the little seals or puppies are born. These are sleek squirmy little animals, weighing from six to eight pounds, and are as playful as kittens.

We spent much time sitting along the shore, watching the puppies play on the rocks. A few days after the baby seals have arrived, the mother leaves them and goes out in the sea in search of food. The little seals are left in a group, perhaps a hundred of them together, with nothing to distinguish one from another, but the mother on her return after several days' absence, picks out her own baby with no difficulty. Whether or not the mother seal has any affection for her young is yet unsolved.

It is very amusing to watch a group of young seals learning to swim. The baby seals take their first swimming lessons when about six weeks of age, and it seems as though it is not natural for them to swim as it is with a young duck, for their heads are so very heavy and their bodies so light that they have a very hard time keeping on top of the water.

The seals are so innocent looking and harmless it seems cruel indeed to see seal hunters slip up the rocks with large clubs in hand ready to kill the animals for their furs.

The young males are the ones that go to make up the fine sealskin coats which you see in the stores. As there are as many males born as there are females, and as one one male has jurisdiction over perhaps a hundred females, it is not necessary that so many males be retained. The seals are always killed with clubs, as there is danger of ruining their fur by shooting.

At the time I was on the islands the Alaska Commercial Company had the Islands leased from the United States and were responsible for the fur industry. They were limited to a certain number each year. I think perhaps at this time the limit was 100,000 each year, and these only from male animals, but the demand is far greater than this, and seal stealing became very common. The robbers did not dare to land on the islands, but sought the seals in the water and killed them, mostly with spears. The worst part of this was that in every instance the seals killed in the water were mother seals, as in the summer months the females do not go out in the water far from shore. Every time the robbers killed a mother seal, a baby seal on the rocks starved to death. It has been estimated that in a few years there were at least a million mother seals killed in the waters, and, in consequence, a million baby seals starved to death.

The seal is fast becoming exterminated. More strict regulations were imposed from year to year, until, in 1910, a law was passed prohibiting the killing of any seals for a period of five years. But that has not stopped the killing of the seals out in the water, and the slaughter is now much greater.

It is strange that, until very recently, not one of the seal furs ever came to this country for a market, as they were mostly all sent to London and there sold to the highest bidder, just as our corn and wheat sells on the market in the large cities. Within the last few years, however, a fur market has been established at St. Louis, Mo., and I presume a great many furs from this region are handled annually at this place. A sealskin untanned is worth from fifteen to twenty dollars, if properly skinned. That does not compare very favorably with the price of a seal-skin coat, but the fur changes through a number of hands before it is finally made into a lady's seal-skin coat.—Our Dumb Animals.

CROW MADE SHIP ITS HOME.

Many years ago, as the sealing ship Diana was returning from a voyage in the Arctic Ocean, her captain and crew were surprised one day to see a crow, in a state of great exhaustion, flutter into the rigging. The nearest land was more than two hundred miles away, so such a visitor was quite unexpected.

With great care and gentleness the bird was caught; and after receiving as much attention as any storm-tossed traveler would require, it was offered its liberty again. But, though thoroughly restored to health and vigor, it refused to leave the ship. With loud caws of contentment it would hop about the deck as though that were its real home; and when darkness settled down upon the ocean, it retired into the rigging, there to roost as comfortably as any of its stay-at-home relations among their leafy elms.

When the Shetland Islands were reached, the captain of the Diana sent his feathered passenger on shore, naturally thinking that this would be in accordance with its wishes; but the next day, when the ship was forty miles farther on the route to Hull and was quite out of sight, the sailors saw a dark speck in the sky which grew and grew, till, to their astonishment and delight, the passenger they had left behind fluttered joyously on board, cawing its satisfaction at reaching home once more, if not reproving them for giving it the slip.—Exchange.

Now the spirit of God lies touching, as it were, the soul of man all over around and near. On the outside of earth man stands with the boundless heaven above him: nothing between him and space—space around him and above him—the confines of the sky touching him. So is the spirit of man to the spirit of the Ever Near. They mingle. In every man this is true.—F. W. Robertson.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

One of the most attractive spots in all the land is the historic Seashore Camp Ground, Biloxi, Miss., where the annual sessions of the Seashore Divinity School are held. If there were nothing there but the shining water, the beautiful stretches of sandy beach, and the magnificent shade trees, it would be worth a visit from any section of the country, especially from the territory immediately adjacent; but when each year there is held a meeting especially adapted to the needs of all our preachers, both undergraduates and those who have completed all their Conference courses, it becomes a place that ought to attract hundreds of the men who need recreation and who ought to desire better preparation for their work.

For a long time, the great majority of our young preachers had to work through their courses of study as best they could with only the textbooks in their hands. This was a method that required and developed splendid habits of study and that produced men well equipped to do the responsible work to which they had been called; but it was about the hardest way imaginable to to do a necessary thing. Later, the correspondence idea was developed, and the student had the advantage of expert assistance from trained teachers—but this assistance was by printed communications and not by personal contact. At the Seashore Divinity School, however, the student has the privilege of sitting in class with the instructor present, and of going over the subjects of study in company with other students who are inspired by a similar motive and where interest is necessarily stimulated by the daily interchange of ideas. It is undoubtedly true that the ideal method of study is that of the class with the teacher—and this is the method that is followed at the Seashore Divinity School. In general, we should say that the method of private study is good, that the correspondence method is better—and the Seashore Divinity School method is best.

In addition to the advantages offered the undergraduates, every year those who have already completed their courses are given the opportunity of hearing some of the most capable and most distinguished preachers and lecturers on the American continent—men whose services are in demand on the most important occasions because of their demonstrated fitness to discuss the questions to which they have given special study. It has been our own privilege to hear at the Divinity School great leaders of religious thought with whom we have had no other opportunity to come into contact, and our own life has been greatly enriched by the contributions it has received from the men who have delivered their messages under the auspices of this School.

It was not our privilege this year to attend all the sessions of the School, but we were able to spend a few days in fellowship with the brethren gathered there and to enjoy some of the lectures. The directors of the school—composed of representatives of the three patronizing Conferences, the Alabama, the Louisiana, and the Mississippi—had arranged a course of lectures that were worth going many miles to hear. Dr. W. A. Shelton, of the Chair of Semitic Languages and Literature in Emory University, is a recognized authority in that department of learning, and his recent original investigations in Oriental lands have given him a message concerning the history and meaning of the Old Testament that is both thrilling in interest and immensely suggestive in its religious significance. Bishop Warren A. Candler is a speaker and thinker whose fame has gone around the world. It was a great program.

The president of the School is Rev. H. M. Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference, and to him is due, more than to any one man, perhaps, the success of the School this year. Vigorous, enthusiastic, hard-working, he has given himself unreservedly to the work of his responsible position, and in the face of difficulties he has carried out well a great plan. Dr. H. H. McNeill, of the Alabama Conference, is dean of the Divinity School, and under his direction the work of undergraduate instruction was splendidly carried out by a coompetent corps of instructors. To these, and to the others who labored with them, is due great credit for the success of the 1922 session of the Seashore Divinity School.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Lamar School of Law, at Emory University, has been opened to women.

Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon will make his home for the quadrennium at Nashville, Tenn.

Bishop W. F. McMurry has established office headquarters in Room 513, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Rev. W. W. Nelson, of Auburn, Miss., was recently assisted in a meeting at McCall by Rev. J. A. Wells.

We regret to learn of the death last week of Dr. J. P. Scott, of Shreveport, La., a prominent member of the First Methodist Church of that city.

Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor of the Algiers Methodist Church, delivered a stirring message on the evils of the modern dance at a recent Sunday evening service.

Dr. O. E. Goddard has been appointed to serve as pastor of McKendree Church, Nashville, Tenn., until the meeting of the Tennessee Conference in October.

On the occasion of the annual "Felder Reunion," held at Topisaw Camp Ground, Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Millsaps College, delivered a notable address on June 9.

Our latest news from Bishop Kilgo is to the effect that he has been removed from the hospital at Memphis, Tenn., to his home in Charlotte, N. C., but that he is still in a very serious condition.

Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Terry, of Summit, Miss., are happy over the arrival of a son in their home recently. Brother Terry recently held a good meeting at Summit, in which he did the preaching.

Rev. J. C. Price, of Jonesboro, La., writes: "We are engaged in a fine meeting at Hodge, and will begin at Jonesboro on the 18th. Pray for us. We are holding union meetings, and the Lord is blessing."

Dr. Rolfe Hunt, formerly president of Port Gibson Female College, is now living at 126 Adams Street, Jackson, Miss. He will be busily engaged for some time in helping pastors in their revival meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Abels, of Ponchatoula, La., are enjoying a vacation on the Seashore Camp Ground. Of course they attended the splendid lectures given under the auspices of the Seashore Divinity School.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey, of Indian Bayou, La., proposes a contest among the Sunday schools of Louisiana for enrollment in the Cradle Roll Department. In his own Sunday school there are 135 enrolled in this Department.

Rev. J. F. Waltman, of Elizabeth, La., is desirous of purchasing a second-hand set of commentaries, Clarke's preferred. Those who have such books to dispose of may communicate with Brother Waltman at the above address.

We learn from one of our exchanges that Dr. W. R. Bourne, formerly president of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., has been elected head of the newly created department of philosophy and psychology at Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs was a recent visitor to Arcadia, La., where he is thought of as "home folks," that beautiful little city being the home of his wife at the time of their marriage. Bishop Dobbs preached for the pastor, Rev. W. S. Henry, while on his visit.

We are glad to learn that Mrs. J. B. Williams, wife of the presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, is rapidly improving and the indications are that she will soon be restored to health.

Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of the First Methodist Church, this city, was one of the instructors at the Louisiana Conference Epworth League Assembly, which has just closed its sessions at Mansfield, La. The editor of the Advocate preached for him at First Church last Sunday morning.

Rev. D. L. Cogdell, a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, whose home is at Corinth, Miss., was run over by an automobile in the early part of the year and he is still suffering from the effects of the serious injury. He has, we are sure, the deep sympathy of a multitude of friends.

The Summer School of Missions and Missionary Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will convene at Lake Junaluska, N. C., on July 28 and continue through August 6. The various courses will be given by distinguished teachers. The School is under the direction of Dr. A. C. Zumbrunnen.

We have received no account of the recent Gipsy Smith, Jr., meeting in Jackson, Miss., but from press reports we learn that it produced one of the greatest religious awakenings the city has ever known. Some of the leading business men of the city were brought into the church and into active Christian service.

We especially commend to the readers of the Advocate the article of Dean Smith, of Centenary College, "Why Is Methodism?" appearing on page two of the Advocate this week. It will be hard for the reader to believe that the world is growing worse, after he learns of the conditions that existed before the Wesleyan revival.

Rev. H. B. Thomason, of Gibsland, La., has just closed a meeting at Gibsland in which he was assisted by Rev. R. W. Tucker. The meeting is said to have been the greatest revival the town has ever had. The membership of the church was greatly benefited, and there were twenty additions to the church. Brother Thomason reports that the work of the entire charge is in good shape.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, pastor of our church at Rolling Fork, Miss., is a busy man nowadays. In addition to his regular work, he is chairman of the Sharkey County Red Cross Chapter and chairman of the Sharkey County Flood Committee, which fed between seven and eight thousand people during the recent flood. In addition, he has been in great demand for commencement sermons and addresses.

Dr. W. H. LaPrade, pastor of College Park, Atlanta, Ga., spent several days this week in New Orleans, having come to officiate at the marriage of Miss Dorothy Wilmot, of this city, to Mr. William Seward Allen, of New York. Dr. LaPrade was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference. He preached twice on Sunday—in the morning at Rayne Memorial, and in the evening at First Church.

We acknowledge with thanks receipt of a copy of the Directory of the Cedar Grove Methodist Church, Cedar Grove, La., Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor. The booklet gives a splendid summary of the work of that church, including the membership roll. It also calls attention to the publication of the church and stresses the value of the New Orleans Christian Advocate as the official organ of the Louisiana Conference. The Directory is adorned with pictures of the pastor and of Rev. W. F. Henderson, Sr., an honored superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference who makes his home at Cedar Grove.

A unique entertainment was given in the Sunday school rooms of the Methodist church at Durant, Miss., on Friday afternoon, June 16—a get-together meeting for the people of the community who are sixty years of age and over. There were sixty persons present to enjoy the program. Col. Norman Guess and Capt. Joe Owens sang several old-time songs; Mrs. E. Welch gave a talk on a passage of Scripture used when she was a child; Capt. F. A. Howell, aged 82, sang a solo. Five people were present who were citizens of Durant during the Civil War—J. H. Lockhart and his sister, Mrs. E. C. Shines; Mrs. W. A. Buckley, C. R. Dickens, Sr., and Mrs. E. C. Mayfield. Delicious refreshments were served at the close of the gathering. Rev. R. P. Neblett is the pastor of the Methodist church at Durant.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. J. C. Nelson, Mooreville, Miss., 2; Mrs. S. E. Burt, Lyon, Miss., 2; Rev. H. Meliard, Sumrall, Miss., 5; Miss Winnie Long, Philadelphia, Miss., 2; Rev. M. W. Porter, Avera, Miss., 2; J. L. Bell, Newton, Miss., 2.

PRAYER MEETING ATTENDANCE.

We have received the following reports concerning prayer meeting attendance last week:

Algiers, C. C. Wier, pastor, 64; Bernice, O. L. Tucker, pastor, 25; Epps, P. B. McCullin, pastor, 55; Lafayette, L. I. McCaln, pastor, 56; Ruston, N. E. Joyner, pastor (no prayer meeting on account of commencement exercises).

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The 1922 district conference for the Vicksburg District, Mississippi Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is now history, and will long be remembered by those who attended it as an interesting conference.

This convocation was held in the beautiful new brick Methodist church in Anguilla, Mississippi, in the heart of the Yazoo-Mississippi Delta, a land of superlatives, for in this Delta are to be found the largest plantations and the most fertile soil that are to be found anywhere. Here also are some of the most beautiful highways and most elegant manor houses to be found in the South. And all laved by the longest river in the world.

The opening sermon of the conference was preached Tuesday evening, June 6, by Rev. V. G. Clifford, pastor of the Methodist church at Centreville. The sermon was followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, administered by Revs. C. F. Emery and C. C. Evans. During the conference, sermons were preached by Dr. Rolfe Hunt, Revs. W. B. Alsworth and Robert Selby. All the preaching was of a high type, and perfectly innocent of any evidence of "advance study." Dr. Hunt's sermon was truly a great one.

The first business session of the conference was called to order at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning by Presiding Elder J. R. Jones, who presided throughout the conference in his usual affable manner, to the delight of all present.

Wednesday afternoon, the conference was resolved into a Sunday School Institute, directed by Rev. J. C. Chambers, the wide-awake, efficient Sunday School Field Secretary for the Mississippi Conference, whose versatility, wit, and good nature win his auditors wherever he speaks. He was assisted in his work by Assistant Field Secretary O. C. Hull, who is never a pretext at anything he undertakes, but in a plain, practical manner presents truths, new and old, to the edifying of all who hear him. Many of the older members of the conference pronounced the institute the best they had ever attended.

The conference was visited and addressed by Rev. B. F. Lewis, Superintenent of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss.; Prof. G. L. Harrel, of Millsaps College; W. W. Bowie, District Secretary of Epworth Leagues, and Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society. The addresses delivered by these visitors were a feast of good things to the conference.

Two fine young men, A. D. Hackler, of Oak Ridge, and Webster Ezell, were licensed to preach. Dr. Rolfe Hunt and Rev. N. S. Loftus, both of whom are doing supply work, were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission into the traveling connection.

Hon. M. M. Satterfield, of Port Gibson, who has served the district well for several years, was re-elected District Lay Leader.

Centreville was selected as the seat of the next conference.

The following were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference: M. M. Satterfield, Dr. Rolfe Hunt, W. W. Ellis, J. R. Bankston, S. W. Sharbrough, Mrs. Z. D. Clark, Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, R. E. Sullivan, with Mmes. Bertie Saxon and Pauline Sharbrough, alternates.

The good people of Anguilla were unstinted in their hospitality. They placed their homes and automobiles at the command of their guests, and yielded themselves willing servants of the conference.

Rev. C. A. Schultz proved himself a conference host without a peer. He was ever on the alert in the interest of his brethren, cheerfully performing every office of kindness which he thought would add to the comfort of those attending the conference. As he has enshrined himself in the hearts of his people, so he has won a warm corner in the heart of the conference.

T. J. O'NEIL, Secretary.

A CHRISTIAN PROGRAM FOR A WARLESS WORLD.

The Washington Conference on Limitation of Armament established a naval holiday, thus saving the country some $4,958,000,000 during the next fifteen years. It also took steps toward assuring peace in the Pacific for ten years. These two achievements give the churches and Christians of America a "Day of Grace" in which, under relatively favorable conditions, they can push their program of education for a Warless World.

The basis for such an educational program may well be found in the following declarations of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America in regard to the "International Ideals of the Churches" and "America's International Obligations."

International Ideals of the Churches of Christ.

1. We believe that nations no less than individuals are subject to God's immutable moral laws.

2. We believe that nations achieve true welfare, greatness and honor only through just dealing and unselfish service.

3. We believe that nations that regard themselves as Christian have special international obligations.

4 We believe that the spirit of Christian brotherliness can remove every unjust barrier of trade, color, creed and race.

5. We believe that Christian patriotism demands the practice of good-will between nations.

6. We believe that international policies should secure equal justice for all races.

7. We believe that all nations should associate themselves permanently for world peace and good-will.

8. We believe in international law, and in the universal use of international courts of justice and boards of arbitration.

9. We believe in a sweeping reduction of armaments by all nations.

10. We believe in a warless world, and dedicate ourselves to its achievement.

America's International Obligations.

We believe that the government of the United States should associate itself promptly with the other nations of the world to establish permanent institutions for the formulation of international law, for the effective operation of the International Court of Justice and of boards of arbitration and conciliation, for the assurance to law-abiding and peace-loving nations of security from attack and spoliation by any lawless and aggressive nation, and for the provision of fair treatment and equal economic opportunity to all.

NEARLY ONE MILLION.

The Sunday Schools of the Church are so near to the One Million Goal in Centenary giving that a hard pull and a determined pull will carry them over by July 1. Less than $40,000 will reach the $1,000,000, and this amount is in easy reach if only every dollar in the treasuries of the schools, including the June offering is sent to Nashville. See that your Sunday school makes a liberal offering on Centenary Sunday for June and that the amount on hand is sent not later than June 26 to Col. John E. Edgerton, Treasurer, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tenn.

THE WILL TO DO.

We know the path wherein our feet should press;
Across our hearts are written Thy decrees;
Yet now, O Lord, be merciful to bless
With more than these.

Grant us the will to fashion as we feel;
Grant us the strength to labor as we know;
Grant us the purpose ribbed with steel
To strike the blow.

Knowledge we ask not—knowledge Thou has sent;
But, Lord, the will—there lies our bitter need;
Give us to build above the deep intent,
The deed, the deed.

—The Spectator.

FIRST HEBREW CHRISTIAN SYNAGOGUE.

The first Hebrew Christian Synagogue in the United States was dedicated February 25, 1922, by Bishop Thomas J. Garland, of the Protestant Episcopal Church. The building was originally the Parish of the Church of the Advent, at 517 North 5th Street, Philadelphia, Pa., where Phillip Brooks was at one time the rector. It has now been re-arranged to suit the requirements of Hebrew Christian worship and missionary service. This is said to be the fifth Hebrew Christian synagogue in the world. The only other one on the American continent is at Toronto, while there are three in Eastern Europe. Relatively few converts have been made from Judaism to Christianity in the last few centuries, and these have become identified as individuals with other Christian churches.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Dr. M. A. TAYLOR was born in East Feliciana Parish, on April 12, 1856, and departed this life on Sunday night, May 21, 1922, at his home at Torras, La. His parents were Christian members of the Methodist church. He was the youngest of five brothers, two of whom survive him. He studied medicine as a profession, and after graduation at a Pennsylvania institute, practiced his profession successfully in this and adjoining parishes until stricken by his fatal illness. Dr. Taylor had never associated himself with the church, which he regretted in his declining days, but we have every reason to believe that he had peace with his Lord. He loved Christian people, especially ministers of the gospel, and often entertained them at his home. He was fond of religious reading and was a subscriber to the Christian Advocate for the past few years, which he so often discussed with the writer. He asked for prayer, and it was our privilege to read the Word and pray with him. Dr. Taylor was possessed of a warm heart—no appeal for charity was ever turned away. His two brothers and the writer took his body to St. Francisville and laid it to rest among his own people, his loved ones who had gone before, Brother Newsom officiating. Poor Dock is gone, and his friends do miss him, but we feel that our loss is his eternal gain. Blessed be the Name that inspires us with radiant hope, no matter how dark the hour.

His Friend,
H. H. DENHAM.

Our home was made sad when we lost our dearly loved Brother JEFF D. PICKERING, on May 12, 1922. His death came as a thief in the night. He got up in the morning seemingly well, and did his half day's work as usual—and at 11:30 God took him. He fell sweetly asleep in Jesus to await our coming. He lived with us 70 years, 6 months and 9 days. He was born in Williamsburg, Miss., Nov. 3, 1851; moved to Monroe, La., in 1872, and in 1873 joined the Methodist church, in which he lived a consistent member. He was left to care for his mother and sisters when young, and was a true son and brother until God called him home. God knew best, and we must submit to his will. While our home is so desolate and lonely without him, still we know by his life he is sleeping in the arms of Jesus. We shall soon meet him, and there will be no more sad parting. He leaves four sisters and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Signed: His Niece and Sisters, Miss Eric A. Pickering, Mrs. Eva J. Upton, Mrs. Lizzie Whittington, Mrs. L. Martin.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The Conference Training School is history. It was a most successful session; 57 credits were issued; there were 64 paid enrollments; about 100 attended the classes.

Rev. C. A. Bowen, of the Chair of Religious Education of Millsaps College, deserves all the glory for this success. We all helped as best we could, but he was the "mainest most" one. I pray that you will pray for him and help him to make a real working plant out of his department.

Mr. O. C. Hull, as the resident representative of the Board, was worth his weight in gold and endeared himself both to the Board and the student body.

One of our students has decided to go to Junaluska. This is fine—I do wish more of our folks would try to go.

The Junior Methods Class in the Training Schools had 100 per cent to get credits. The teachers seemed to have a good time and put over the idea of Training School. We are very thankful and hopeful for better things in the future.

There was a hot debate as to which was the best class. I had to leave before the argument was decided.

How about a training class with the workers this summer?

Sunday School Day. If you will hasten to send in the money, we can pull through this month and not borrow one penny. Will you do that? It is bringing joy to our hearts the way the work is responding.

Pray for your workers. We need your prayers. Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Corinth District Standard Training School for leaders in religious education and Sunday school work will hold its second session at New Albany, Monday, 2:30 p.m., July 3, and will close Saturday, the 8th. The first thing that will be done will be to enroll and classify those who take work. There will be two lessons Monday afternoon. This arrangement will give time for study and recreation. Students will be expected to attend every class period, 12 in all. The following courses are offered: Beginner Lesson Materials and Teaching, taught by Mrs. W. W. Adams, of the Memphis Conference; Primary Organization and Administration, taught by Miss Lynda Ramey, Elementary Superintendent of North Mississippi Conference; How to Teach Religion, taught by Dr. A. W. Milden, of the University of Mississippi; Organization and Administration of the Sunday School, taught by Rev. Melville Johnson; The Church and Its Work, taught by Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Conference Field Secretary.

If you are in doubt as to the course you should take, write to Rev. Melville Johnson, New Albany, Miss.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, P. E., will be the Educational Director of the school. Each student will need notebook and pencil the first lesson. Books and other materials needed will be on hand for sale. The Sunday School Board is putting these schools within the reach of all our people, so the poorest school may have the advantage of trained teachers. It will be a good investment for a school to send some one to take a course and return home and teach a class of teachers in the local school. This is the quickest and best way to secure the help all schools need. The people of New Albany are very generous in offering entertainment to those who will send in their names to Rev. M. Johnson, New Albany, by the first day of July. Those who delay will be furnished board at a reasonable price. It is up to the pastors and superintendents to get their teachers to attend this school.

The Sunday School Board cannot spend any more money than people furnish for these schools. The following schools sent in the offering taken on the fifth Sunday in January. If this list is not correct, you may write Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss., and tell him about it. If you want to do as your Conference requested, you may send in an offering taken on last Sunday, this will do as well. Potts Camp, $4.69; Macedonia, $1.25; Corinth, $25; Guntown, $5, Baldwyn, $3.04; Tishomingo, $5.25; Rienzi, $1.68; Booneville, $5.47; Corinth, South Side, $1.50; Iuka, $4.11; Wheeler, $2; Ripley, $5; Hickory Flat, $5.72; Golden, $3; Burnsville, $2; New Albany, $20. Total, $94.71. It requires not less than $150 to pay the expenses of a school of the type we offer. You readily see we need not less than $60 to pay for the school we are to give you. This offering is for the sake of your own children.

SOUTHERN METHODISM'S GREATEST CHURCH, AND THE WORLD'S GREATEST SUNDAY SCHOOL.

It should be of interest to every Methodist to know that the M. E. Church, South, has the greatest Sunday school plant in the whole, wide, wide world. That plant is with the First Methodist Church in Birmingham, Ala. So it was pronounced by the president of the International Sunday School Association not long since. Here are facts as gathered from the superintendent by the writer: On active roll, nineteen hundred and ninety-seven; Cradle roll, one hundred and twenty; Home department, one hundred and fifty; officers an teachers, one hundred and five. You can see here is a Sunday school with more than twenty-five hundred pupils, officers and teachers.

The Sunday School Annex is separate from the main building, and was erected at a cost of more than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. This Sunday school has every modern equipment possible. It has a gymnaslum, where weekly meetings are held for recreation, and a moving picture outfit where good pictures can be shown. There are nearly a hundred classes. It often has an actual attendance of about twenty-five hundred. A real man with heart and head is superintendent of this school, and has been for more than seven years; the man of this big task is Mr. Frank Dominick.

From this greatest Sunday school I went to hear one of Southern Methodism's greatest pulpit orators, and sat in an audience of more than two thousand people that were held under the spell of his matchless oratory for nearly one hour. I would name his theme "The Majesty of Law," but I believe he put it, "Enforcement of of Law." There is but one George Stuart. Without any special personality, or commanding voice, he catches the attention of his hearers from the first appearance on the scene and holds it till the last word is spoken. I heard him over twenty years ago and he has lost none of the zeal of those palmy days. He is unique in style, rather dramatic at times, always deeply in earnest, and seems to pulsate with mental power and glow with spiritual earnestness.

He has made a great start on his sixth year as pastor of First Church, which is said to be the largest in our connection. This church has two assistant pastors and deaconess, and pays more than ten thousand dollars to the support of the ministry. The building itself is imposing, being composed of massive brown stones, yet it is very ornate in appearance. It has a great auditorium, a great choir and a great pipe organ; one is impressed with the greatness of the plant as a whole. Let all Southern Methodism rejoice in such achievements.

REVIVAL AT BOONEVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: When we came to Booneville last December and began to get acquainted with our new field, the officials of the church told me, "We must have a revival this year." The time for the revival was set and I was instructed to secure suitable help. During January we got in touch with Rev. J. O. Hanes, of Birmingham, Ala., who. with his song-leader, Mr. W. G. Waltermire, was secured to assist us.

From that time till the time set for the revival campaign to begin, we talked, prayed, preached and advertised for the coming revival. The whole town became interested. The hearty co-operation of the other local pastors and their congregations was pledged. A large tent was secured (and purchased since the meeting). The evening that our helpers came a large delegation of the laymen were at the train to meet and welcome them. From the first we were made to feel that the time for a visitation from God was at hand.

God mightily used Brother Hanes in preaching the Word. Brother Waltermire led effectively in the song service, and the solos he sang were appropriate messages to enforce the sermons. As the meeting progressed, more earnest and intense prayer was made. The men met in the business houses at 4 p.m. for prayer. The women kept several group prayer meetings going. The young people met with Brother Waltermire every evening just before the preaching service. God honored the prayers of His people. Many family altars were pledged. Every one who attended the meeting claims to have been wonderfully blessed. The last day was the greatest. At a love feast that lasted two hours, there were more people who wanted to tell what the Lord has done for them than there was time to tell it. Also fifteen applied for church memebrship. At the last service the power of God fell mightily upon the people, and twenty-three more applied for church membership in the churches.

It is the common expression heard everywhere that this is the greatest revival ever experienced in Booneville. One man said he never before witnessed a meeting to close out in such a wave of glory. Everybody is rejoicing over the results, and all feel that the results will abide.

The men of the town will continue a Business Men's prayer meeting to meet every Tuesday at 8 a.m. The union prayer meeting among the women is placed upon higher ground.

In all over 60 have applied for church memebrship in the various churches, all but five by baptism and vows. We received a class of 20 on profession last Sunday and have a class of 12 children to receive next Sunday, and five were added by letter.

At the first of the year we set our hearts upon taking in fifty members on profession this year. With the reception of this class of children, we will have taken in 43 already. God has wonderfully blessed us in our labors and honored His Word.

Deficient Vitality a Great Misfortune.

Persons that can rarely or never say that they feel full of life are really among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but merely exist; for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by them—to feel life bounding in the veins.

A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings. Such a medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, rundown, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abounding. It is simple justice to say these words in its favor. Hood's Pills very effectively supplement it in cases where a cathartic or laxative is needed.

QUEER FEELINGS AT MIDDLE AGE

Women Should Know How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helps at This Trying Period

Sheboygan, Wisconsin.—"I was run down, tired and nervous. I could not even do my own housework, could not sleep at night and all kinds of queer thoughts would come to me. Finally I gave up going to the doctor and a friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After the first bottle I could sleep better and I have kept on improving ever since. I have taken seven bottles now and am so happy that I am all over these bad feelings."—Mrs. B. LANSER, 1639 N. 3rd St., Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

For the woman entering middle age Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can be of much benefit. During this time of life certain changes take place which sometimes develop into serious trouble.

Melancholia, nervousness, irritability, headache and dizziness are some of the symptoms. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a natural restorative, especially adapted to assist nature in carrying you safely past this time. Why not give it a fair trial?

THE CENTENARY AND THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

At one of the morning sessions of the General Conference, right of way was given to the Centenary, and it was one of the most interesting features of the Conference session. The report of the Centenary Commission was read by Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, Director General, and Bishop James Atkins, John M. Moore, W. F. McMurr, James Cannon, Jr., U. V. W. Darlington, and W. N. Ainsworth spoke on the report and for the Centenary. It was one of the great hours of the Conference, and the enthusiastic applause throughout the reading of the report and the speeches showed that the Centenary held its place in the interest of the church.

Some of the statements of the report submitted to the Conference are:

"As to the third commitment of the General Conference at Atlanta, namely, the raising of the great thank offering of $35,000,000 your Commission realized in the midst of seemingly adverse conditions the greatest success. Every Annual Conference in our connection unanimously, and frequently with great enthusiasm, accepted their quota. Since no limit was put upon the amount of money to be raised, many of the Conferences during the Eight Day Drive went far beyond their quota in money subscribed. Notable among these were the Kentucky, Baltimore, Virginia, Illinois, Tennessee, West Virginia, Louisville, North Carolina, Florida, Central Texas, Holston, Louisiana, South Carolina, Upper South Carolina, New Mexico, Little Rock, North Alabama, West Oklahoma, East Oklahoma, and South Georgia Conferences. The total amount pledged during the Eight Day Drive was $36,911,166, as the records of our office show. This is nearly two millions more than the amount asked for both in new money and the regular incomes of the boards for five years, which brings the total amount of income for that period up to about $50,000,000. This wonderful achievement of our people created in very truth a new church and stirred every great Protestant denomination in America to similar advance movements for the Kingdom of God. The Centenary Commission received from the Sunday School Board and Epworth League Board in this great enterprise the most hearty co-operation and to their enthusiasm and loyal support is due much of its success.

How Used.

"Your Commission has collected to March 31, 1922, $13,590,075.40 on pledges from various sources. Of this sum $10,187,498.91 have been disbursed to the various causes as set forth below and $1,529,492.55 are in cash securities and equipment in the hands of the Commission. The disbursements are as follows:

Board of Church Extension .....$	832,769.28
European Reconstruction	1,350,077.96
Foreign Department (Woman's Work)	1,161,704.24
Foreign Dept. (Board of Missions)	2,770,083.27
Home Dept. (Board of Missions)	1,677,107.30
Home Dept. (Woman's Work)	515,887.52
Conference Boards 10 per cent	1,096,050.31
War Work Fund	382,818.03
Mission Building	400,000.00

In addition to this, on April 1, we made a distribution of $1,000,000 to the departments in the askings. We are in the process now of making another distribution of $1,000,000 which will bring the total distribution to the departments in askings something more than $12,000,000 of new money."

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas it has pleased God in his unfailing wisdom to call unto Himself our beloved friend and Sunday school worker, MRS. W. T. ALLEN; and whereas the Sunday school of the Lyon Methodist Church do hereby express their grief at her passing to her eternal home, and feel that we have lost a lovable, true and faithful co-worker; and whereas she was faithful in attendance, ever ready to help where needed most; and whereas she was at one time superintendent of our Sunday school, the organizer and for years the teacher of the Wesley Bible class; and whereas we shall miss her from her accustomed place, and we shall miss her wise counsel and gentle influence; therefore be it resolved:

First—That we tender to the family our deepest sympathy, and pray God's blessings in their deep bereavement.

Second—That we the members of the Sunday school shall treasure in our hearts the memory of her many noble deeds, as a beacon light to inspire within us a truer interest and finer service to the cause she loved.

Third—That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Sunday school record book, a copy be sent to the bereaved family, and that a copy be sent to the New Orleans Advocate for publication.

Signed by Mrs. J. W. Simmons, Mrs. J. P. Stevens.

CORINTH DISTRICT MEETING.

The Corinth District meeting was held at Myrtle on May 25-26, 1922. Miss Etter Murry, the capable and efficient District Secretary, was in the chair. Her opening message was indeed an inspiring one. Among other things she said: "We feel secure in enlightened Christian America while the ninth Mormon temple is being erected at a cost of two million dollars; while enough opium is being shipped from our ports each year to give every one of China's four hundred million people one dose; while eight girls every hour are paying the price of sin and shame. As women and girls we must organize to stop these things, and each auxiliary should stand sponsor for at least one organization." Splendid reports were given from all delegates present.

Mrs. T. M. Clark was introduced and she told of our new Rural worker, Miss Brand, who is to come to us in July. Mrs. Clark also explained the Budget system.

The presiding elder, Brother Randolph, was also introduced, and by the help of the splendid map of the district which Miss Murry had drawn, he showed where organizations might be successful.

At the evening service the devotional was conducted by Brother Baker, of the Myrtle church, who also gave a beautiful welcome in behalf of the Myrtle people.

Mrs. Clark then told of the Volunteers who would enter Scarritt this year.

The remainder of the service was given to the Council Message, which was delivered by Miss Corinne Rogers.

The next morning the opening devotional was led by Deaconess Falla Richardson, who stressed the thought that God has chosen us to be his special friends and co-laborers in the great work of evangelizing the world.

Mrs. R. P. Neblett, Conference Superintendent of Children's work, was given almost the entire morning in recognition of the fact the most important work is with the child in our midst.

The Myrtle and New Albany Juniors gave a very attractive program, which was followed by a very stirring yell from Corinth Juniors. The Corinth Juniors were represented by three manly boys, and their contribution to the program was much appreciated.

Miss Falla Richardson explained the tools used in Junior work. Mrs. John Finger spoke on the importance of prompt and accurate reports. The failure to get one report will clog the whole missionary machine. Mrs. Neblett closed with a strong appeal for Junior Work and Workers.

Mrs. Riley, Field Secretary for the Orphans' Home, was introduced, and her message appealed to the hearts of all present. But the greatest appeal was the presence of one of the orphan children, little six year old Mattie Hopkins, who sang "Jesus Loves Me" and "I Washed my Hands This Morning."

The Myrtle ladies assisted by their Baptist sisters served dinner at the church, and the table fairly groaned under its load. There were all kinds of good things to eat, and all present did justice to this abundance.

Mrs. Neblett conducted the afternoon devotional, reading the parable of the Ten Virgins, and emphasizing watchfulness.

Mrs. J. H. Holder, Assistant Superintendent of Young People's Work, conducted a very interesting Young People's service. Reports were given of the work by the Y. P. delegates, after which pledges for next year were taken, which resulted in more than the 25 per cent increase promised by the Conference. The Young People's Specials were presented in a very attractive story of their work by Miss Bama Finger. A model executive meeting was held by the Young People. Mrs. Holder closed the program with an earnest appeal to the young people to make their motive for service love rather than duty.

A beautiful service was held in memory of the six members who have entered into eternal rest since last district meeting. As each name was called a white rose was placed on the altar.

Mrs. Coltharp, of Myrtle, gave a very intersting discussion of Mission Study.

The meeting closed with a consecration service, at which eight new family altars were pledged.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT MEETING.

The Baton Rouge District meeting which was held in Hammond, May 30 and 31, was undoubtedly one of the best meetings ever held in this district. The program reflected the care and thought of the District Secretary, Mrs. R. E. Stearns; while the reports showed the efforts she had made throughout the year to bring the organizations of the district up to a higher standard, increased interest, increased numbers, increased pledge is certainly a good record, and all of this was shown to be true of the Baton Rouge District.

Miss Nell Richardson spoke on the work for the children, causing every woman present to resolve that this—the most important branch of the work—should receive a larger share of her time and effort.

Mrs. Skofield, of Baton Rouge, told in a most interesting manner of some of the things accomplished by the pledge money. Mrs. June, of Amite, presented the "Quiz" on the Conference minutes.

Perhaps the most interesting hour was the one devoted to the work at Houma. Mrs. Laura White told in a happy way the work that is being done, and told also of the new Industrial school which it is hoped will shortly be begun.

Another most interesting hour was the one spent in the church where the entire district conference was assembled. At that time Dr. Crisler, of Baton Rouge, spoke on the work of the Woman's Missionary Society. It was somewhat discouraging to learn that of the 2500 Methodist women in the Baton Rouge District, only some 400 are in the Woman's Missionary Society; of the 71 churches in the district only 17 have Missionary organizations. It is hoped that the earnest words of Dr. Crisler will bear much fruit.

Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, of New Orleans, Conference President, spoke on the work in general, and upon the Council meeting at San Antonio.

No report of the Baton Rouge District meeting would be complete without special mention of the report from the new organization at Backwater, near Baton Rouge. No older or larger organization in the district made a better report than did this new organization. It is hoped a more detailed report of the work done by this organization will appear in the near future, and inspire others to greater things.

ENTHUSIASM.

A man came to three stone masons cutting stone in a great enclosure.

"What are you doing?" he asked the first.

"Working for $5 a day," the stone mason answered.

"What are you doing?" the man asked the second.

"Trimming this stone — can't you see?" the stone mason replied.

The man approached the third stone mason. "What are you doing?"

"I am building a cathedral," said the third stone mason.

And there, you see, is the whole secret of enthusiasm. You cannot buy it at $5 a day or at any other amount. There can be no enthusiasm in chipping stone or doing any other mechanical task. But the man who builds a cathedral—his part of it—is a fellow with a God, for he is a creator, too. If you don't believe it, have a look at the cathedral at Milan, or that at Cologne.—Selected.

BUILDING A HOME.

Let others build their palaces,
Their stately marble halls,
And hang with silken tapestries
The cold, far-reaching walls,
But what to me their castles grand
With turret, tower and dome?
They may build for the eyes of the world to see,
But I shall build a home.

Of hope and love and a holy faith
The walls of my home must be,
Where Love will evermore keep watch
Over my own and me.
And here will be a haven safe
Where weary feet that roam
Will come back from the world to find the place
Where I have built a home.

Relief from Rheumatic Pains

Rheumatism is a constitutional disease. It causes local aches and pains, inflamed joints and stiff muscles; but cannot be permanently relieved by local or external applications. It must have constitutional treatment.

Take the great blood-purifying and tonic medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which corrects the acid condition of the blood on which rheumatism depends, and gives permanent relief. It combines the most effective agents in the treatment of this disease.

SUFFERING?

Most of the pain we suffer is unnecessary. Why continue to endure it—to sacrifice your youth, beauty, and enjoyment to it?

The combination of simple harmless medicines found in

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

is especially effective in relieving pain without bad after-effects.

For more than thirty-five years sufferers from headache, neuralgia, backache, toothache, sciatica and pains from other causes have found relief by taking these pills. Why don't you try them?

GIRLS! LEMONS WHITEN SKIN AND BLEACH FRECKLES

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of harmless and delightful lemon bleach. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day, then shortly note the beauty and whiteness of your skin.

Famous stage beauties use this lemon lotion to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, also as a freckle, sunburn, and tan bleach because it doesn't irritate.

FROM SEMINARY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a splendid meeting in our church at Seminary, Miss. Rev. J. M. Morse, of Jackson, Miss., assisted us. The church here was benefited spiritually. Brother Morse is a fine man to have with you in a meeting. He is to be with us in our meeting at Sanford, Miss., beginning on the evening of the 23d of this month.

We are getting along smoothly with our work for Him on this charge. We are hopeful that great and lasting good may be the culminating outcome of our revival efforts this summer.

Faithfully yours,

FROM EPPS, LA.

I love to work in the town of Epps,
And strive to follow in Jesus' steps;
When I think of his mission at Galilee,
It always strengthens and comforts me.

The prayer meeting thrives, and the Sunday school, too;
God wonderfully blesses whatever we do;
We can feel the touch of his loving hand
Guiding us straight to the Promised Land.

So let's remember, when tempted and tried,
Always to keep close by his side,
And trust his grace as others have done;
Till we a starry crown have won,

Then while for him we watch and wait,
Let's read the pages of the Advocate,
And see how other workers true
Are helping this noble work to do.

HIGHBROW HAS BETTER CHANCE FOR HAPPINESS.

A "highbrow" has probably a better chance of being happy than a man of great worldly wealth, accordng to Dr. J. H. Hildebrand, professor of chemistry of the University of California. He declares that money is not the main object in life because the richest men are often the most miserable.

In advice to students, Dr. Hildebrand says everyone should do his utmost to develop his latent capacity for enjoying the wealth of drama, art and music, which affords inexpensive pleasure to all who will take the pains to cultivate the "highbrow" things in life.

Dr. Hildebrand continued:

"The real test of greatness in art is the holding of interest for a long time. Good compositions, in literature or in music, are unexhausted on the hundredth review.

"Truly the benefits are such that one can well afford to sneak away to a concert or the library now and again, even at the terrible risk of being called 'highbrow' by his friends."—Selected.

Science Robs Calomel of Its Nausea and Danger

Sickening and Dangerous Qualities Removed —Medicinal Virtues Retained and Improved — Calotabs the New Name.

What will human ingenuity do next? Smokeless powder, wireless telegraphy, horseless carriages, colorless iodine, tasteless quinine—now comes nauseless calomel. The new improvement called "Calotabs" is on sale at local drug stores and is the sensation of the drug trade.

For biliousness, constipation and indigestion Calotabs is a practically perfect remedy. One tablet at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no nausea, no griping. By morning your liver is thoroughly cleansed and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite. Eat what you please—no danger—go about your business.

Beware of imitations! Genuine Calotabs are sold only in "checkerboard" (black and white) packages bearing the copyrighted trade-mark "Calotabs." The large, family size sells for thirty-five cents; vest-pocket size, ten cents. All dealers are authorized to refund the price if you are not delighted with Calotabs. —Adv.

Your Greatest Problem—That Boy of Yours.

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now? You know, every parent knows, that it depends entirely upon the training he is getting right now, his associations, his ideals, his inspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of the Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., has been training boys for twenty-five years. He wants your boy. He recognizes in him one of the men who may some day manage big affairs and he wants to train him for that end. His school has been built and equipped, and his instructors chosen with the first and only consideration of giving the boy the mental and physical training, the associations, with clean, high-minded men, the ideals of character, the inspirations to ambition, which the world expects. Robert K. Morgan is a Christian gentleman of strong, wholesome, inspiring personality, and his school is the material projection of that character. Write Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tennessee, today, and let him send you a catalogue and tell you what this school can do for your boy.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

FACE FORWARD.

The sorrowful saint presents a sad picture in this day when the world is growing better and the church is more vigorous, more evangelistic, more successful in all its work than in any previous period of its history. We are not unaware, of course, that there are those who say that the world is growing worse all the time, that the church is fast losing its power, and that Christian character has all but disappeared from the face of the earth; but we can find no good ground for such lugubrious lamentation. We do not deny that there is still much evil, much injustice, much innocent suffering in the world, but we do deny with all our might the validity of the view that the gospel has failed, that Jesus Christ is a waning figure, and that God Almighty is about to be thrust from his throne by the forces of Satan. We do not believe the Master mocked his disciples with a vain hope when he taught them to pray "Thy kingdom come"—and we utter that petition every day with a jubilant faith and a sure confidence that it will be answered. We feel no fear as we face a new quadrennium in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Our preachers are consecrated men who "(with few, if any exceptions)" are characterized by purity of doctrine and elevation of life; our people are devout, faithful, loyal; our institutions of learning and our organized agencies for the promotion of the kingdom are doing their best with the resources at their command to serve the church and the world in a helpful way. Now is the time to "march face forward."

HE CANNOT.

This inquiry has come to us: "Can a Methodist preacher with a wife, four children, and one Ford, keep sweet religiously, happy, contented, and patient, who receives six dollars for the month of May, when his garage bill for the same month is seventeen dollars?" Somebody else may have another answer to this query, but we unhesitatingly answer, "He cannot." And wo shall go a little further than that: the people of any pastoral charge who have no more regard for their obligation to minister to the material support of the one who serves them in spiritual things than to allow him to suffer for the barest necessaries of life, are mighty poor material out of which to try to make saints; and if there is continued and persistent disregard of this obligation, the church is under no obligation to supply a preacher for that charge. There may be such—though we know of none—where the membership of an entire pastoral charge is so poverty-stricken that all combined cannot raise more than six dollars a month for the support of the ministry; but if such condition exists anywhere in the patronizing territory of the Advocate, the Red Cross, or some other agency, ought to be called into action to relieve the desperate situation.

A STRANGE SPECTACLE.

There has been presented in the Louisiana State Legislature during the past few weeks the strange spectacle of men who are under obligation to support the Constitution of the State fighting the enactment of a law the sole purpose of which is to suppress gambling on horse racing, when that Constitution plainly and unequivocally says that gambling is a vice and the Legislature shall adopt measures to suppress it. The puerile argument of some of those who have opposed the passage of the bill in question is to the effect that men will gamble anyway, and it is perfectly useless to pass any such law as the one proposed. With equal cogency the same argument might be applied to laws to punish murderers—for some men are going to commit murder in spite of all the laws in the world. There are some questions upon which a man has a right to vote according to his personal opinion; but when, as a representative of the people, he puts his own will against a specific declaration of the Constitution and refuses to carry out the plain mandate of that Constitution, he, in effect, makes the fundamental instrument of democratic government a mere "scrap of paper." We cannot fathom the mental processes and the moral habitude of a man who is unwilling to do all in his power to rid Louisiana of the curse of race track gambling. One member of the Legislature has actually introduced a bill providing for the "regulation" of the race tracks under authority of a State Racing Commission!

LOYALTY TO THE CHURCH.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has been signally blessed of God throughout all its history, and to-day it unquestionably has the marks of the Divine favor resting upon it. It is a great church measured by any right standard, and its members have every reason to be proud of the record it has made. It is great in its doctrines and great in its polity, and it is second to no church in the contribution it has made to the moral and spiritual uplift of the world. It is broad enough to recognize the right of all other churches to a place in the kingdom of God, and it is tolerant enough to accord to all Christian people the liberty that the gospel itself gives. But it is in no sense called upon to assume an apologetic attitude as compared with any other ecclesiastical organization, and it may confidently defend and propagate its teachings with all the power it possesses. We are sorry for the Methodist who is misled by any kind of propaganda into believing that his church has less of Divine sanction than have some others. Its doctrines, its ordinances, its polity are all soundly based upon the teachings of the New Testament, and God has honored it in all its years of service. We have nothing of sectarian bigotry—but we believe in the church to which we belong.

LIQUOR ON AMERICAN SHIPS.

The revelation that liquor is being sold on vessels operated by the United States Shipping Board has aroused a storm of indignation on the part of those who believe in upholding the Constitution, Eighteenth Amendment and all, that is likely to result in legislation that will make it impossible for the chairman of the Shipping Board, Mr. Lasker, to carry on a business that is manifestly illegal—and that possibly will let Mr. Lasker out of a lucrative position. We quote with commendation an editorial from the St. Louis Christian Advocate on this subject: "It is of record that we are seldom in agreement with the brewers, and more particularly in reference to the Eighteenth Amendment, the Volstead Law and kindred subjects. But it is clear that even a brewer may sometimes be right. We are quite sure that Mr. Busch is right in raising an issue with the Chairman of the Shipping Board because liquor is sold on ships belonging to the American government. Mr. Busch naturally can see no reason why the government should be selling beer (bought in England) when he is not allowed to make beer. Nor can we. The pretexts offered by Mr. Lasker are in no sense strengthened by a prsonal attack on Mr. Busch. Indeed, such an attack is an infallible sign of a weak argument. We are sorry that Mr. Wayne B. Wheeler, of the Anti-Saloon League, usually so judicious, joins in this attack. He may well have a grudge against brewers as such. They have made plenty of trouble for the League. But right is right, no matter who puts it forward or for what motive. No principle is more firmly established than that American ships are American territory. American territory is subject to the prohibition law. Therefore American ships are. There is no dodging that kind of logic. Mr. Lasker says that transoceanic passenger ships will have to go out of business unless they have bars. They cannot meet the competition of the ships that are not under the dry act. That is unfortunate, but if it is true, then let them go out of business. We do not have to have a national merchant marine, desirable as it may be. But we must as a nation observe our own laws. Anything else would be suicidal. Uncle Sam as a bootlegger naturally tickles the fancy of the cartoonists."

TWO PRAYERS.

Morning.

"Lord, the newness of this day
Calls me to an untried way:
Give me strength to bear my load;
Let me gladly take the road,
Thou my guide and helper be—
I will travel through with Thee.

Evening.

"Lord, Thou knowest how I live;
All I've done amiss, forgive:
All of good I've tried to do,
Strengthen, bless, and carry through;
All I love, in safety keep,
While in Thee I fall asleep."

PUSHING NORTH.

By Bishop Walter R. Lambuth.

(This is one of the last articles written by Bishop Lambuth for the church at home.)

The road from Changchun ("Long Spring") to Harbin runs 150 miles in a northeasterly direction. We boarded our train at midnight and arrived in Harbin at 7:30 the next morning, Wednesday, July 27. As we approached our car, there was a scene of bewildering confusion. An eager crowd of Chinese with a small sprinkling of Japanese were endeavoring to get first choice in the second and third class coaches. Some of these were double deckers. In less time than it takes to descibe it, they were occupying seats or beds with their many bundles and packages in order to secure as much room as possible. One boy of ten stowed himself away in a rack intended for luggage, above the second tier of beds, and hung his legs over. It reminded me of a midnight scene in India when hundreds of Mohammedan pilgrims bound for Mecca via Bombay, were plunging headlong into freight cars at a few cents a head. For ten minutes one could see only arms and legs in the struggling mass. Order was only restored by the British guard jumping in and hauling out a dozen or more by the feet.

We have made the change from Japanese to Russian coaches. The track is Russian, the rolling stock is Russian and the attendants are Russian. The coaches, especially the sleeping cars, are large, high and the first class ornately furnished and equipped with almost every device in wood and brass, including folding seats under the winows in the pass way. Small canopies hang over the windows, mirrors appear in unexpected places, electric lights in bulbs of different colors, the blue being turned on for the passenger's convenience after he goes to bed if he desires it, receptacles for cigar ashes, linen covers over leather cushion seats with ornamental diagrams, and other indications of the old Russian order.

The conductor and guard were dressed in frocks, with broad leather belts, leather knee boots, dark serge trousers, full at the sides, and military caps. They were polite and fairly attentive, informing us that passports would be examined after midnight and called for before leaving the train. In the morning, the Russian boy or porter served tea on the little shelf at the window in the pass way, with a slice of lemon, and sugar added if desired.

Daylight comes early in this northern latitude. At 3:30 the sky began to be gray. The country is rolling, rather than flat or mountainous, as in Southern Manchuria, and shows the effects of drouth. The ground is very dry and vegetation not so well advanced as in the sections about Changchun, Kirin and Mukden. The small stations are surrounded by brick or stone walls eight feet high, pierced with rifles. These were constructed in the early days of the railroad, to protect from attacks from Chinese soldiers, and at the present time they are supposed to inure safety from roving bandits of almost any one of two or three nationalities. The guards, at the stations, are Chinese in military uniform, who, in squads of from five to ten, are lined up facing the train with bayonets fixed.

Upon arrival at Harbin Station, we were met by Rev. J. S. Ryang, who had gone ahead of us, Mr. V. Luke Han and his brother, the wives of these two gentlemen, and a son of the younger Han. These are Koreans Russian born. We also found on the platform our Korean preacher, T. H. Kim, his wife, and two other women. Surrounding the station were almost innumerable carts, droskies, rickshas, and just in front of the entrance, eleven autos. These were all driven by Chinese, who are experts in making a noise, and for a few minutes the contention over passengers and confusion in getting possession of our luggage, together with the yelling and cracking of whips, baffled description.

We were driven to "The Palace Hotel," which was not exactly palatial, but, like many other buildings, was in Russian or French style of architecture. The walls were nearly two feet thick, the staircases of stone or concrete, the halls spacious, the rooms large, the walls painted, and high ceilings frescoed. The furniture is of heavy wood and the bedsteads of iron, but the bed rooms are lacking in what we would term the necessities and conveniences of an American hotel. No towels, no soap, no sheets, no blankets, no drinking water unless called for, and then one runs the risk of dysentery from its being unboiled, and in many cases unfiltered. No hot bath unless you order two hours in advance, thus giving time to heat up a cast iron boiler big enough to hold two barrels. One interesting item in the make-up of the room was a radiator, hidden away in a recess under the window sill. This necessitates the cutting of a slit in the broad board facing the window sill for the heat to get out. The rear windows of the halls and some of the rooms were set in a little artificial trough, stuffed with cotton batting, sand, sawdust, and charcoal to keep out the fearful cold of the Siberian winter. In consequence of its being too much trouble to repack each season, these windows remain closed and airtight, and the entire building is thus given a stuffy smell of stale air. To a newcomer, the Russian, like the northern bear, would seem to hibernate during the winter in order to keep warm. This is not the case, however, for the cold while intense is dry, and with fur caps and fur coats and water tight boots, they are able to keep going when the temperature is from 20 to 30 degrees below zero.

Our breakfast was served in the room at nine o'clock, according to the custom. It consisted of coffee bread, large slices of wheat bread, light and well baked and of the best quality of flour; coffee served in tumblers with hot milk and lump sugar; eggs to order, shirred or boiled. Food is abundant, cheap and of good quality.

Our waiter was a Chinese, who speaks Russian and understands enough English to get along. He is vigorous and good natured, and needs both qualities to keep on the run up and down two flights of stone steps to meet the wants of the guests, for there are many besides ourselves. A Korean boy has attached himself to us during our visit. He is a church member, speaks Chinese and Russian fluently, and, of course, his own language. He makes his living by going from house to house as a private barber, thus serving his patrons. During the war he traveled the length of the Siberian road into Russia, and is thoroughly familiar with the ways of the world. He seems to know a little about everything, and acts as our guide and general factotum. It is remarkable that, being only twenty-three, and constantly under a fierce fire of temptation, he has retained his character, his faith and his zeal.

A young married woman, Mrs. Yun, called during the morning, to see us, in company with the wife of the pastor. She was born in Korea, but migrated with her people to Manchuria when she was five years old. She speaks Chinese, Russian and Korean with almost equal facility. She is faithful, bright, determined, and has led a consistent Christian life in the face of opposition, especially from her husband, who made a living by the sale of opium. He was persuaded finally to give up his nefarious business, and sold out for $450. Within a week, the man who bought him out had his store raided and was despoiled of his goods. In their simplicity, the Koreans remarked that it was a kind providence that led him to sell when he did. There may be some question about the providence, but there is no question about its having been a timely stroke upon his part. It is to be hoped that he will permanently mend his ways and permit his wife to qualify for Bible Woman's work, which she desires and for which she seems to be fitted.

The Korean, as a Christian, evidences a large capacity for religion, is remarkably open to the truth, knows his Bible and loves it, has a child-like faith, carries his religion with him wherever he goes, is willing to serve, and is steadfast in his purpose. He is not easily carried away by erroneous doctrines or strange people. By some remarkable providence he has been permitted to suffer persecution, which led to a widespread dispersion. He is found in almost every country of the world, and especially in large numbers across the northern border of Korea, in Manchuria, and in the long river valleys of Siberia. He is a born linguist, and, as a pioneer, can endure the vicissitudes of climate.

Do not these point to his qualifications as a powerful factor in spreading Christianity, especially among Oriental peoples!

LET US FRANKLY FACE THE ISSUE.

By Rev. A. M. Shaw.

"In essentials unity; in non-essentials liberty; in all things charity." This memorable motto of the peerless Wesley, Methodists may be depended on to maintain. But we are in danger of forgetting that, while Wesley scrupulously and consistently lived by this principle, he was no mushy sentimentalist, passively playing second fiddle to self-assertive sectarians and cocksure dogmatists. He was a fearless defender of truth, and, like a plumed knight with Damascus blade, pierced the attenuated armor of a thousand vociferous enemies of Methodism. Denominational self-respect—not to mention more vital motives—demands that we of the present day do the same!

Methodism did not start out to make the world Methodist, but to make it Christian; to "spread Scriptural holiness over the lands." Methodism has never proselyted; never set forth any exclusive claims; never challenged the right of any evangelical church to live and work and grow. Yet Methodism stands for something distinctive in doctrine, polity and spirit. We have something to give the world that it will not get elsewhere. Every real Methodist has a profound conviction that, while Christianity is bodied forth in many noble forms, Methodism is the purest and highest expression it has had in the modern world. An English historian said, "Methodism is Christianity in earnest." By every token Methodism is Christianity at its best!

There are many lines of cleavage in the world of Christian thought; for instance, between Papal and Protestant Christians; between sacramentarians and evangelicals; between Calvinists and Arminians; between Episcopal and Congregational churches. But, after all, the most thorough-going line of cleavage is between Ritualistic or Formal Christians, and Spiritual. Jesus drew the line when He said: "Neither in this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, shall ye worship the Father—the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth—God is a Spirit: and they that worship Him must worship in spirit and truth." This does not exclude all ritual. Christ provided for certain forms; but He and His apostles distinctly condemned the laying of emphasis on any mere form whatsoever.

Now Romanism is so wholly ritualistic, and Episcopalianism so nearly so—(both churches holding much that is good, however)—that they need not engage our attention now. But certain evangelical denominations among us are so given to stressing mere sectarian forms and externals, that Methodism needs to keep a watchful eye upon them, and give the people light.

One such church operates extensively in Louisiana. While I would by no means apply all that I say here to all its ministers and members, it is true of a very large proportion. Every artifice known to the sectarian trickster is employed by many of them to advance their own cause, and to hinder the cause of other churches—particularly the Methodists. Chameleon-like, they change color to suit occasion; inveigle Methodists into their meetings, slap them in the face with a bag of ice; and then by honeyed words seek to induce our young and unwary ones to desert the slappees and join the slappers! They harp on a mere form of baptism till even a funeral is incomplete until we have been assured that "our brother followed his Lord in baptism, so many years ago;" or, "our dear sister followed Christ through the liquid grave, in early life," etc.! "Dip, dip, dip; plunge, plunge, plunge!" are reiterated with such staccato regularity that one expects to hear the Master's forerunner called "John the Dipper" or "John the Plunger!"

The propaganda is expressed in a formula about like this: "Believe on Jesus Christ as your Savior; be baptized by immersion by 'a duly authorized preacher'—and you are as certain for heaven as if you had been there a million of years!" Coupled with the zeal with which this propaganda is carried on, by preachers and laymen, women and children, the formula is very effective. Every influence is invoked; every relationship utilized; business relations, professional, social and family relations, the relations of lovers—not even overlooking "puppy love" among the younger set—everything possible is used as lever or fulcrum to pry people out of one groove and roll them into another!

Whereby more adherents are gained than can be cared for—and the woods are full of baptized sinners, and "once-in-grace" backsliders. These people have not been helped; but many of them have been placed where no other church can reach or help them. And the present program seems to be to keep a continuous round of "revivals" running, so that no other church may get a hearing. Bees can be kept from swarming by beating tin pans: but it takes more than that to set them to making honey!

Methodism in Louisiana—the land where Nolley and McTyeire and Keener and the Parkers, and many other choice sons of Methodism have labored—must awake to this situation. Methodism is manly, womanly, Christ-like; it has no sugar-coated scheme of proselytism to propagate. But it stands for spiritual religion; truth, right, light and love. Its doctrines are the truest, its polity the sanest, its standards the highest, and its spiritual ideals the holiest in this world. These are worth fighting for. Without demagoguery, strategy, or camouflage of any kind; "with malice toward none; with charity for all;" we must fairly, frankly, fearlessly, face the issue, and fight for our own—to the finish!

THE CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Dear Dr. Carley: The Corinth District Conference convened in the little town of Sherman, Miss., Tuesday, June 13, at 11 o'clock, and adjourned after preaching Thursday night.

Prominence was given to the preached Word. Rev. W. A. Wilson preached the opening sermon Tuesday morning, after which the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered. Others preaching during the session were Revs. B. F. Lewis, Melville Johnson, E. R. Smoot, H. P. Lewis, and S. A. Brown.

Twenty-seven out of the twenty-eight pastors of the district, Rev. W. M. McIntosh, one of our general evangelists, and Rev. W. A. Wilson, Conference evangelist, both of whom hold their membership in the Corinth District, were present. Rev. W. G. Burks, our pastor at Blue Mountain, was absent on account of sickness. There were eighteen delegates, ten Sunday school superintendents, and nine charge lay leaders and recording stewards present.

The visiting brethren representing various interests of the church were Rev. J. H. Holder in the interest of Christian Education, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney for the Sunday School Board, and Rev. B. P. Jaco, Secretary and Treasurer of the Board of Missions.

Rev. Dr. M. M. Black and Rev. Dr. J. E. Stephens represented Millsaps College and Grenada College respectively. Rev. B. F. Lewis, Superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss., spoke of the achievements and needs of the Home.

The presiding elder, J. B. Randolph, had very wisely planned a most interesting program, providing for reports and discussions of all the work of the church in our district. The reports of the pastors were indicative of a very gratifying state of the church throughout the entire district. Several new Sunday schools have been organized, meetings have been held in a few of the charges with good results, several churches are being built or repaired, and the finances are well up.

Cisco Knox Phyfer, of New Albany, was granted license to preach. The interim licensing committee elected is Revs. E. R. Smoot, D. R. McDougal, H. P. Lewis, and W. W. Jones. Jamie Houston, of New Albany station, was elected district lay leader, with Lee Cox, of Ripley Station, and J. A. Lowe, Corinth, First Church, assistant leaders. The following delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: D. H. Hall, G. L. Jones, S. S. Finger, W. R. Akin, T. E. Pegram, Miss Etter Murray, D. T. Yeates, and W. M. McIntosh, L. E. Alternates: Miss Corinne Rogers, J. B. Sanders, L. M. Womack, and J. L. Halmark.

The next district conference will be held at Ripley, Miss. The hospitality of the Sherman people, irrespective of denomination, was refreshing, and our entertainment was royal. The pastor, Rev. J. L. Nabors, placed us all under lasting obligation to him for his uniform courtesy and kindness. Everybody loves our elder.

FOURTH ANNUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE LOUISIANA STATE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The fourth annual assembly of the Louisiana State Epworth League was held June 13 to 20 at Mansfield Female College. For eight days there were gathered under the roof of the Mansfield College over 130 of Louisiana's finest young men and women, who had been sent there as delegates by their respective Leagues.

The eight days were spent in intensive study, religious training, and play, under a corps of as splendid instructors as could be found anywhere.

Each day's work began with morning watch conducted in the chapel. This was followed by classes in the study of Methodist Doctrine, Missions, Vocational Guidance (for life-service volunteers), and Epworth League Methods.

Hard class work was relieved by athletic games which interspersed the work. The games were in charge of Rev. Frank C. Collins, of McDonoghville, who very ably took charge of this feature of the Assembly.

Every afternoon a business meeting was conducted by Rev. L. Clegg, the Conference President. Some of the outstanding business of the Assembly will now be mentioned.

Louisiana Leagues paid for their mission work in Africa the past year $1,843.11. This year the work will be extended to include Colored Institute work and French Mission work. The missionary budget for the coming year is $2,300. At a very enthusiastic business session this entire amount was pledged. There were only 53 out of 160 chapters represented.

Eight Gold Seal Certificates representing 100 per cent Leagues were issued. Many Leaguers received 3 units towards a Christian Culture Diploma and others received 2 units. There were also 12 Christian Culture diplomas issued. Miss Laura Edwards, of the McDonoghville League, was given an Efficient Epworthian Degree. Miss Edwards is the first in Methodism to receive this high honor and Louisiana Methodists may well be proud of her.

At the banquet which culminated this happy occasion the following awards were made:

To Monroe-Ruston District the banner for first place in athletics.

To Alexandria District the banner for presenting the best stunt on stunt night. Their playlet represented the home 100 years hence in which the "Jelly-bean" cares for the home while the manly woman earns the living.

To New Orleans District the District Shield for efficient work done during the year. New Orleans District took 6 out of 10 points necessary to win the shield.

This article cannot close without a mention of two of the most beautiful features of the Assembly. One of these was the Vesper Services held every evening on the lawn in front of the college. After a song service conducted by Mr. Otis Spinks, a bright young Christian, the Leaguers were allowed to pray and testify as to their Christian experience. They seemed eager to do this and their testimonies would put to shame many an older church member. Many gave their hearts to God at these services and spoke of their determination to go home to their Leagues and churches to try to bring others to Christ.

On Monday night at vespers Miss Sadie Wilson spoke on "The Consecrated Life." Her talk prepared the young people for the service to follow. Rev. Alonzo Early then preached a consecration sermon, at the close of which he spoke of service in the home and foreign fields. Brother Early put the matter squarely before the Leaguers, stating just what sacrifice such service meant, and then called for volunteers. Twenty-seven Epworth Leaguers offered themselves for definite service in God's kingdom. Many of them will begin their preparation in the fall, after which they will be assigned to their respective fields of work. These volunteers ask the Methodist people everywhere to pray for them so they may not falter in their purpose.

We believe that the success of the Assembly was largely due to the hard work and consecrated efforts put forward by our field secretary, Jas. B. Grambling, and by our President, L. Clegg. We also owe much to the men and women who taught the classes and to the dear chaperones who kept us from getting into mischief. (This last does not refer to the boys, who seemed to make a deep impression on the ones who were attending their first Assembly. For further information see Rev. F. C. Collins.) Rev. J. W. Pearson, of the local church, and Mr. and Mrs. Bobbitt of the College did all in their power to make things pleasant for the delegates.

The League Benediction brought to a close the most successful Assembly in the matter of work accomplished, a bright and happy fellowship enjoyed by all, and a deepening of spiritual life.

New Orleans, La. SOPHIA KUNTZ.

He only is great who has the habits of greatness; who, after performing what none in ten thousand could accomplish, passes on, like Samson, and "tells neither father nor mother of it."—Lavater.

HOW TO PAY YOUR CENTENARY PLEDGE.

By R. B. Eleazer.

In 1919, in all good faith, you made a pledge to the Centenary. You fully expected to pay it. And you anticipated great joy in the privilege of doing a finer thing for your Lord and for the world than you had ever done before.

You paid up the first year—the first two years. Then came the slump. Business went to pieces. Wages were reduced. The bottom fell out of the market for farm products. You found yourself cramped financially as you had not been for years. You didn't see how you could possibly pay the pledge made in the prosperous days of 1919. So you let your third payment go by. Now the fourth is due and you have not paid that. Not because you did not want to. You honestly felt that you couldn't.

Now, wouldn't you like to find a way out—some plan for paying the sacred pledge so joyfully made? We know you would and we think we can show you the way. We believe it will work, for it is God's way. Your church is williug to chance it, if you are. This is a challenge to you to try it!

But what is this wonderful plan? The simplest imaginable, and as old as history. It is God's financial plan, the tithe.

For a long time you have been interested in the tithe. You have felt you ought to tithe your income, sacredly setting aside God's tenth. You have wanted to begin it, but you have never gotten up to it; or maybe you haven't quite dared. While times were prosperous you felt that you couldn't afford it—it might cost you too much. (Strange logic, but that's the way we reason).

But times are bad now. Your income has slumped fearfully. You are behind with your creditors. Your pledges to God are unpaid. If there was ever a time when you needed to fall back on God's plan, that time is now. And for several reasons:

1. Because it will greatly simplify your problem. When you have set aside the tenth, you can feel that you have at least made an honest effort to meet your financial obligation to God. Until you do that, you can have no such comforting assurance. The harder you are pressed—the less your income—the more confident you may feel. For God rates your gift not on the basis of what you give, but what you have left. You have tried your own plan and failed. Now try His plan—honestly, devoutly—and see if you will not do far better.

2. You should try tithing because of the spiritual blessing it will bring you. Those who have not experienced it cannot realize how wonderfully the dedication of the tithe reacts upon the whole religious life. It brings the joy that comes with fuller consecration. Till you have dedicated your pocketbook to God aud made proof of that fact by some such test as the tithe, you can never be wholly sure that you yourself really belong to Him. There is no other test quite so sure, so keen, so deep-cutting, as the test of property. God gave us the tithe more as a means of protection and blessing to us than for any other reason. If you have not availed yourself of it, you are taking a serious chance and missing a great privilege.

3. You need the tithe because it means taking God into partnership on the farm, in the factory, the shop and the daily toil of the wage earner. Thus it sanctifies and glories the common task, lifts it out of the sordid atmosphere of mere money-making and transforms it into something holy. There is nothing like it for making sacred and beautiful the whole round of life by putting into every day's toil the joy of worship and service.

4. You need the tithe, particularly in these depressing days, because of the promise of temporal blessings that goes with it. "Bring all the tithe into the storehouse and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord, if I will not pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Thousands in our day testify to the truth of that promise. There is not on record the statement of one tither in a hundred who has found it otherwise. Don't imagine you can't afford it. Multitudes have found that the nine-tenths left, with God's blessing, goes further than the whole without it. Put God to the test. "Prove him," as He challenges you!

Not that you should do it for the sake of temporal prosperity. That is but an incideutal consequence. But do it because you know you should, because you want to meet your obligation to God and His cause, because you want the consciousness of His presence and blessings in all you do. For every one of these reasons you should begin tithing.

Join today the Methodist Million of tithing stewards who are joyfully following God's plan for the financing of his Kingdom.

GIPSY SMITH HOME AGAIN.

By Arthur Page.

(This interesting account of Gipsy Smith's recent evangelistic tour in the United States, taken from the Methodist Recorder, of London, England, was furnished us by Rev. F. B. Hill, of Ponchatoula, La., himself an Englishman, who keeps in close touch with ecclesiastical happenings "on the other side."—Editor.)

Gipsy Smith was among the Mauretania passengers who arrived by the Cunard "special" at Waterloo at seven o'clock on Monday night, having been delayed for some hours by the Channel fog which spelt disaster for another liner.

At eight o'clock he was leaving Liverpool Street for his home at Cambridge. And in between, while he saw to his tickets and his luggage and his 'bus, amid all the pandemonium of porters and their trucks, and all the scuttle and excitement which attends the arrival of a boat train, he gave me some impressions of his American tour.

Under his arm he carried a paper parcel, and out of the paper peeped a shoot of ivy. It caue from Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington, and is to be planted in the Cambridge garden.

The Gipsy's first words were not about his great meetings and the wonderful success of his tour, which has outdone even his previous records in the States. They were about his father. In January last, while he was in America, his father died in the old home.

"My heart is sore," said his son. "He was father and mother to me since I was six. No man ever had a father quite like him. All that I am, all that I have been able to do in Christ's service, is due to the transparent goodness of his life in the gipsy tent. It is an untold grief to me uot to see his face this time on coming home." * * *

"I went over to America in time to begin early in September in Pittsburg. I spent a month in Pittsburg, and a month in Omaha, and a month in Norfolk, Virginia. Then came New Orleans, Nashville, in Tennessee, and Syracuse, New York. In most places I spent five Sundays, and I had a few days in betweeu each campaign for rest. In every place the buildings which the churches of the city provided were far too small, although the smallest of them seated six thousand people, and one of them seated nine thousand. In two instances the local churches built the tabernacles specially for the campaign, thereby incurring a cost of not less than $25,000. That meant faith, and daring faith. But I once heard Thomas Champness say that if the Lord has a big contract to give out, faith always gets the job. What is needed in these days is more sanctified faith—a willingness to take great risks for the Kingdom."

"And it goes without saying that the buildings were filled?"

"They were always filled. No building was big enough. We never had less than two meetings each day, Saturdays excepted, and on some days I have had five meetings. I have never missed a meeting, and I have never been late for a meeting, in spite of the long journeys and the strain and stress of the work. I often got tired, of course—so tired that sometimes I could not get my sleep. But strength has been given me all through—the kind of strength that enables a man to wear well, and equips every part of him, physical, mental, spiritual alike. I come back, I believe, more fit than I ever was in my life."

And the Gipsy looked it, with his bronzed face and stalwart figure. His voice, too, had the old winning quality, and he mentioned to me in passing that before leaving America, at the request of a big gramophone company, he sang sixteen times to the records!

And now something about the results of the campaigu.

"Even in the immediate results this campaign has been wonderful, and the immediate results are often the least. It is impossible to state the number of people I myself have spoken to, but I am perfectly safe in saying that between 50,000 and 60,000 have made public avowal of their determiuation to live a Christian life as a result of this campaign. They have been all sorts of people, rich and poor, intellectual and simple. And, of course, these public decisions do not register all that has been done, because, as any man knows who is called to do the work of an evangelist, some of the greatest results are those which are seen only after he has gone away. I have letters from the cities where the campaign took place stating that the influences are still at work—they are still having a holy time."

"You found the churches sympathetic?"

"I was the guest of the churches in every place. It was the churches which planned and organized the campaign. Without the churches it could not have been carried through. All the churches joined together in this effort—Methodists, Baptists, Congregationalist, Presbyterians, the United Brethren, the Christian Church (which is really another Baptist Church), and many of the Lutheran and Reformed Churches; very often the Episcopal Churches joined in too, for, as you know, there is less separation between Episcopal Churches and the others in the United States than in this country, because over there there is no Establishment. It was very beautiful to see officials of the different churches vieing with one another as to which could do the most for the Kingdom of God and the salvation of the people. And the Press! Why, you see that trunk; it contains six scrap-books filled with newspaper cuttings—most of them from the secular Press, mind you! Some of the newspapers gave the campaign a page and a-half a day."

"What is the present outlook in America from the religious point-of-view?"

"In America they have been passing through a very critical period. Here in this country we have largely emerged from the trouble attaching to the Higher Criticism, and we are emphasizing the things that we have tried and proved. The American churches, on the other hand, are still in the throes, and they have had to listen often to messages which were in the highest degree uncertain. They are tired now, and they want the real thing. I found that desire after assurance and reality more pronounced than ever this time. The man who has got a real live message, with the power of the Holy Spirit inspiring it, and backed up by a consecrated heart and life, will be welcomed and listened to in America more eagerly than ever before. For my own part I never saw crowds so earnest, never met with so ready a response in my life, as in the States this last winter. I remember that in one city—Nashville, in Tennessee—the building was as crowded at the noon service as at the evening; indeed, it was even more crowded in the middle of the day than at night, because they stopped the business of the city and closed the offices so that the business community could attend the meetings. The leading people of the city were there, and it was among them that some of the most pronounced conversions took place. In that city of Nashville, with its population of some 150,000, I am told that in consequence of the campaign 13,000 people have joined the churches. The letters that I get from the ministers there declare that the atmosphere is still that of Revival. The thing is still going on. There is a new feeling about the place, extending to the banks, and the business houses, and the factories. People treat one another better because this influence has been at work among them—including the people, I mean, who may not have made any confession themselves. This thing extends over the whole community, including those who are not religious as well as those who are. That is the common experience of a Revival—it makes for sweeter social relations, for more consideration between people in the workday world, more sympathy generally, a kinder community all round. The effect is not limited to those who 'come up to the front,' nor even to those who attend the meetings."

"All this is a great tribute to you."

"No," said the Gipsy, promptly, "it is a tribute to my message and to the Master. And now I am looking forward to my autumn and winter work." (The Gipsy has so far adopted American ways as to speak of the autumn as the "fall.") "I want to say to my countrymen what I have been saying to these American audiences. My advance message is this, that I am sure the harvest is ripe, the fields are white. If they will only do the work of preparation, I have got a sickle, and will come along and help to reap."—The Methodist Recorder.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

It is somewhere written, and often quoted, by such classic old scholars as Cicero, Horace, Juvenal, and others, as very practical maxim "Ne sutor supra crepidano," which, being freely interpreted, means "Mind your own business." If my readers will allow a word play, sticking to the "last" in the end, means sticking to the "first."

Benjamin Franklin, sometimes sage, at other times sager, has said, "Keep thy business and thy business will keep thee." The old-time preacher-farmer was a wonder in his day. If he was not local, his business or the church soon located him. But with the itinerant, messenger of grace and power, his battle lines were and still are too far flung, his interest in the Kingdom of God is first, foremost and intensive. Besides this, the gospel and its immediate and closely related activities are more than sufficient to engage all the time and talent of any man. Paul thought so, else he would not have given such stringent rules and full directions to one, Timothy. And what he said about giving ourselves wholly to this ministry is so clear and unequivocal that these two letters are acknowledged standards on this subject of ministerial fidelity and devotion. I might further enlarge on this subject, but think my position is clearly stated. If any man think otherwise, I am not his judge. To his own master he standeth or falleth.

The vast scale upon which all the great movements of this present time are conducted astonishes and sometimes almost appalls the man who in some measure understands these conditions. It is a veritable witches' caldron, boiling and bubbling, even blinding some by its noxious vapors. Thoughtful men can not fail to see the tremendous forces at work in America which are inimical to our cherished ideal of life, and subversive of our present form of society and government.

Roman Catholicism, having been disrupted by the changing of civil and political conditions in Europe and confessedly losing ground by the growth of democratic sentiment in the Latin countries of America, is now making a mighty struggle for dominance in the United States. And to the end the press is largely subsidized and apparently the dying and decadent power of the liquor business is shamelessly employed. Caricature and cartoon, doctored and colored dispatches, criss-crossed double meaning leaders appearing so frequently in many of our leading newspapers are evidence of this tendency. But Protestantism is too closely allied with civil and religious liberty for any student of history to be alarmed. The church of an open Bible and free conscience won her struggle against Roman Catholic imperialism even in the days of her birth and infancy. So despite all the evil forces launched against free, enlightened Christianity and the ethical standards of life this system of faith so earnestly contends for, I hold if we are but true to the rich heritage received from the past, we are safe, and need fear no disaster. Only let us be sure we are true, loyal, and faithful to this divine trust reposed in our keeping.

BABYLON THE GREAT. (Rev. 17 and 18.)

By George E. Bass.

God's judgment against Babylon the Great is both interesting and important, and for the latter reason deserves our careful and prayerful consideration.

The first thing that we need to ascertain is what city is meant by Babylon the Great. The Revelation of St. John the Divine was written many years after the fall of Babylon, the capital of Chaldea, which had been predicted by the prophet Jeremiah. Prophecies are told before the events about which they are spoken happen, never afterwards; otherwise they would not go by the name prophecy, but instead would be history. When Babylon, capital of Chaldea, flourished, there were no "martyrs of Jesus," for Jesus had not come to earth then. Hence to say that Babylon the Great has any reference to the ancient city of Babylon is absurd on the very surface. The Babylon of the Old Testament was a wicked pagan city. The Babylon the Great of the New Testament is a supposedly Christian city that stands for an apostate church.

The prophecy refers to Papal Rome. What city in all this world has been drunk "with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus" to the extent that Papal Rome has? I fear that in these days of religious tolerance Protestantism has largely forgotten the awful crimes committed in the name and service of God by the Roman Catholic Church. The guilt of innocent blood rests upon her and cries out against her, and she must pay dearly for the suffering that she has needlessly caused the saints of God. Man may forget, but God remembers. Of what city more than Papal Rome can it be truthfully said, "For by thy sorceries were all nations deceived?" This statement fits her as if it were made for her. She has existed for so long a time and her history has covered so much ground. Her historical stature is far too great to be mistaken for any other city. What city is as proud as Papal Rome? They call her "the eternal city" and their church they call "the Unchangeable Church." Nothing that is material has any right to be called "eternal," for we know, according to Revelation, Chapter 21, that there will come a time when the first earth will pass away. Dr. Clarke expresses a hope for the reformation of the Roman Catholic Church, but the fact that it is an "Unchangeable Church" has prevented this from taking place. Since Dr. Clarke lived it has had ample time in which to purify itself, but it has made absolutely no headway in that direction.

The interest of Papal Rome in material possessions has been one of her chief characteristics. Her aim has been to gain all the pomp and power of the world that she could. She has concerned herself more with material things than she has with truly spiritual things, and this is probably the chief reason for her apostasy. If individuals ought to put the kingdom of God first, so also ought the church.

Adam Clarke's Commentary says: "The inscription upon her forehead is exactly the portrait of the Latin Church."

The Pulpit Commentary says: "We cannot fail to see that there is one special form of evil more than anything else in the world that is pointed out in the symbolism of this chapter, and that is the Apostasy of the Church of Rome."

The secular and the ecclesiastical are so mixed up in the Roman Catholic Church that it is well nigh impossible to separate them and to tell where one ends and the other begins.

Part of the judgment against Papal Rome has been fulfilled. She has lost her secular power in a large measure and her influence is not as great as it was before the Reformation. However, she is still growing and continues to be a power for evil in the world that has to be reckoned with. It is the duty of those who know the truth about her to warn those who otherwise are likely to be deceived by her false doctrines and deceitful presentation of them.

Some one has fittingly called the Roman Catholic Church "a mystery of iniquity." She has grown very great in the earth and has become the wonder and admiration of the non Christian world. To-day she flourishes as a green bay tree. But we are told that "her sins have reached unto heaven" and that "God hath remembered her iniquities." Although "she hath gloried much in herself, and lived deliciously," and hath said, "I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow," yet "she shall be utterly burned with fire: for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her."

We do not doubt that there are some good people in the Catholic Church, because of the verse which reads as follows: "And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that we be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."

To doubt that a just judgment will be meted out against this corrupt ecclesiasticism is sinful, for to do so is to deny the righteousness of God in condemning and punishing evil doers. Can any one argue that He will let innocent blood go unavenged when He hath said, "Vengeance is mine; I will repay?"

Rome seeks to dazzle and blind men's eyes by her costly trappings. She is the greatest collector and fosterer of art in the world. She is great on elaborate symbolisms, long ceremonies, and upon whatever will catch the eye and win the admiration of the vulgar crowd. They tell us that the Pope has a chariot of gold. Such things do not appeal to people of sense. It is an offense to us for any one to think us that ignoble. A man's real worth does not consist in the abundance or costliness of his possessions. Character outweighs the most costly material wealth. How vain must be a church if the only things that you can admire about it are its costly trappings, its empty ceremonies, and a man at its head gilded with gold whose character is largely a cipher so far as worth is concerned!

The awful desolation that shall come upon Papal Rome is graphically depicted in these words: "And the voice of the harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more at all in thee; and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee; and the sound of a millstone shall be heard no more at all in thee. And the light of the candle shall shine no more at all in thee; and the voice of the bridegroom and of the bride shall be heard no more at all in thee."

Religious apostasy can never hope to escape punishment. The wrath of God is sure to come upon all those who are responsible for it. The infidelity of higher criticism that is to be found among Protestants in the present day will not be passed over lightly by our Lord. It is in truth not less reprehensible than are the sins of the Roman Catholic Church.

MIND-YOUR-OWN-BUSINESS WEEK.

In common with thousands of our fellow citizens we are mortally tired of "Clean-up-the-Yard" week, and "Black-the-Stove" week, and "Ragbag-and-Tag" week, and suggest a national observance of "Mind-Your-Own-Business" week. We feel sure our suggestion, if given wide publicity, would meet with instant and enthusiastic response on the part of millions of harassed, weary, patient, long-suffering mortals who are trying to get their legitimate tasks in life accomplished, despite people whose whole occupation in life seems to be minding other people's business. This suggestion is made in a spirit just as sweet as molasses candy, and with a simple-minded desire to merely give first aid to the injured.—The United Presbyterian.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

My ramble around Mississippi ended at Port Gibson on the occasion of the college commencement. It was my first visit to this town. I have been all around in that "neck o' the woods," but never there before. It is an old town, old as the hills, one of the oldest places in Mississippi, I was told; and it seems to pride itself on its antiquity. I did not see a thing in town that reminded one of the present, except the automobile. Old homes, old churches, with glorious old bells in the steeples, and some of the most charming old people in the land. I saw a big wagon drawn by five yoke of oxen, ten steers, standing in the street. That took me back to my boyhood, for I drove just such a team in the Delta away back in the previous century. My, my, how I used to enjoy cracking my long whip, double-cracking it, and so rapidly that it sounded almost like a fusillade of rifles on the firing line. Sometimes I would say to myself that I was with Forrest, and we were charging the Yankees, and then my whip would pop louder than ever. Alas, Forrest himself kept me out of the army. When I was about to mount a beautiful chestnut-brown horse, ah! Carley, that horse was a beauty, Forrest rode up. My mother instantly appealed to him whether I ought to go to the army. He glanced at my diminutive size, I was only fourteen and very small for my age, and smiling one of the grimest smiles I ever saw, he replied: "No, madam, by no means let him go. We have no time to rock babies" When my mother told him she was afraid I would run away, he said that if I did, and he caught me, he would thrash me and send me home! That ended all my prospects of serving my country, for it was with him that I wanted to ride, and I knew he would do exactly what he said. So I stayed at home and cracked my ox whip in imaginary charges on the enemy. Maybe I am here now because Forrest kept me out of the army—then, possibly the Confederacy was defeated by Forest's refusal to allow my unknown genius to have a chance! So so.

But what Port Gibson lacks in modernity, it makes up, plus, in the culture and refinement of its people. The college, I was told, is nearly a hundred years old. From the first it has maintained the high ideals of real culture, and it has that which is indispensable to genuine education and can only be acquired by age, it has atmosphere." The history, traditions, memories and associations of a long life that cluster about the place, give it an advantage over an institution of yesterday. How venerable the noble trees on the campus! What legends they could tell if they had tongues! By the way, like Columbus, one of the glories of Port Gibson is its majestic trees. The buildings are old, and while new ones are needed, adapted to the changed methods of education, these old ones ought to be preserved. Some years ago, when I was sent to Petersburg, Va., I found the old church in which the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized, was then a negro house of worship. As it stood near the business center of the city, the congregation wanted to dispose of it, and move elsewhere. I tried to get the Epworth Leagues of Petersburg to start a movement to buy it, and convert it into a Methodist Museum; but my idea provoked only a smile. The place was sold, and is now a big business house. I spoke of my idea to Dr. Goucher once, and he said: "What a pity you could not carry out the scheme. A hundred years from now it would have been a Mecca for millions." Just so, but like many more of my ideas, it was too high for the vision of the people. I had a $300,000 Epworth League Assembly located on the summit of Lookout Mountain, and was in the North, arranging with the railroads to put it over, when here came a telegram saying: "You are suspended!" The Book Committee knocked me out, and killed my scheme for a great Assembly. That was fifteen years before the Junaluska idea was born! I have always been ahead of the procession, but, like the parrot, talked too much.

The small college is the place to do real educational work. And the quiet, the absence of the countless distractions of a larger town, taken with the long record of the Port Gibson college, make it an ideal place for a school. The retiring President, Dr. Hunt, will be succeeded by a new President, who comes to the position with high commendation, and with the loyal support of the friends of the institution, I see no reason why Port Gibson College may not have a bright future. I was sorry to find Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, the pastor of the Methodist Church, suffering from nervous trouble, insomnia, he said. My prescription for that would be for him to go to the country and plow for one week. I had that same trouble once. I was pastor of a big city church, and my nerves gave way. I could not sleep. I had the best medical service in the land, but the doctors were puzzled, and at last told me to go to Battle Creek. Instead of that, I disguised myself, and got a job of shoveling rock on a popular boulevard. My millionaire members drove by but did not recognize their pastor. Once the resident Bishop drove past. I saluted his reverence, but he did not know the dirty worker. The first night I slept an hour or two; the second I was so tired and sore that I could hardly get home, but I slept half the night. The third evening I was discharged. My chum at the spade was an Irishman, whose slow and steady lick I had copied. He was very profane, and I would say every time he swore, "Now come, Pat, cut that out." That gave me away. They took me for a "spotter" spying on labor, and got rid of me: "No fault to find with your work; but you need not come back," the boss said. That night I slept all night, and I had no further trouble. Work, sure enough work, will cure it. Golf? Bosh, don't pester me with that gilded nonsense!

But then I love work, productive work, work that makes you perspire and calls every muscle into play. I am now working in my garden. I was absent when it needed me most, and labor is hard to get in Mansfield; so the grass got a big start. But I am subduing it. When at home I write in the forenoon, eat very little, take a nap at noon, work in my garden all the afternoon, read some at night, go to bed and sleep like a log.

So you are "Dean Carley!" Well, I'm the "Knight of the Pelican Pines." You got your title from that bunch over in Shreveport; I was knighted by a Virginia lady. Hurrah for the F. F. Vs.! By the way, I had a nice letter from Lady Astor, enclosing her photograph. I was about to persuade Sister Steel to acknowledge the favor of her Ladyship, when here came a letter from an old maid in the Rocky Mountains enclosing a lily of the valley. That ended it. Sister Steel said that if I am going to get photos from ladies who wear coronets and flowers from old maids, I will have to attend to my own correspondence!

EDUCATIONAL NOTES—LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The fourth annual assembly of the Louisiana State Epworth League was held at Mansfield Female College, from June 13 to June 20. This was a great gathering for inspiration, culture and recreation. One hundred and thirty young people were in attendance.

It was our pleasure to teach one of the classes in Methodist Doctrine. The young people seemed eager to know of the faith once delivered unto the saints. This assembly represents a wonderful opportunity for our young people to be informed and better equipped for life service.

The lectures were very fine and the one of special note was the masterful address of our own Dr. Alonzo Early, who has been loaned to Texas for a short time. His appeal for life service was on a high plane and led to a deep consecration service. Over twenty young people volunteered for life service.

Miss Sadie Mal Wilson, from Nashville, Tenn., a deeply spiritual student volunteer, led the "Vocational Guidance Hour," and her work will be represented in the large number that will go forth into real service for the Master.

Miss Imo Bickham, from Celeste, Texas, did very effective work among the intermediate superintendents, and her talk on "The Overflowing Life," at the vesper service started the movement in the direction of volunteering for life service.

Rev. Mr. Short, of the Louisville Conference, did effective work in his instructions on the department of missions and in the book "Wembo-Nyama's Land."

College Day was duly observed and the cause of Centenary and Mansfield was well presented to the young people.

The banner for games and sport was won by the Monroe-Ruston District. The banner for "stunt" night was won by the Alexandria District. The shield for best general efficiency was won the second time by the New Orleans District.

The first in Southern Methodism to receive the degree of "E. E." from the General Board was Miss Laura Edwards, of McDonoghville, La. This puts Louisiana in the lead.

"It's a good thing to be a Leaguer,
It's the best thing I know.
It's a good thing to worship Jesus
As Heavenward we go.
Good-by sin and sorrow;
Farewell, doubt and fear.
It's a grand, good thing to be a Leaguer,
And that's why we're here."

Let those who have pledged for Christian Education know that the summer season is a good time to pay up your subscription. We wish to lay upon your conscience this fact, that Christians must not default. Not to keep a pledged word is a sin that in the business world men hold unpardonable. How much greater is it when we have made our promise to God! Therefore, hunt up your collector and pay him your pledge. Possibly, you will have to make a pledge first. It is not too late. Come across now.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Secretary of Education.

YOUR MOTHER.

Do not forget:

To manifest an interest in whatever interests of amuses her.

To rememebr that she is still a girl at heart, so far as delicate little attentions are concerned.

To give her your full confidence and never do anything which you think she would disapprove.

To make her a partaker, so far as your different ages will permit, in all your pleasures and recreations.

To lift all the burdens you can from the shoulders that have grown stooped in waiting upon and working for you.

To treat her with the unvarying courtesy and deference you accord to those who are above you in rank or position.

To study her tastes and habits, her likes and dislikes, as far as possible in an unobtrusive way.

To remember that her life is monotonous compared with yours and to take her to some suitable place of amusement or for a little trip to the country—or to the city if your home is in the country—as frequently as possible.—Selected.

MAKE UP OF THE HUMAN BODY.

One reason why milk is so excellent a food is that it contains much calcium, which is the principal mineral of the human body, contributing to the make-up of the bones and teeth. A grown person carries in his skeleton about four pounds of it. The body contains about three ounces of sodium, combined with chlorine to form common salt. There are also about two ounces of magnesium, which is a silvery-white metal. Another highly inflammable metal contained in the body is potassium—about two and one-half ounces of it. The body contains about fifty-five ounces of phosphorous. Seven-eighths of the phosphorous is in the bones (going to form phosphate of lime); half an ounce is in the brain tissues; the rest is in the red corpuscles of the blood. Of sulphur there are about four ounces. The body is three-fifths water and one-fifth carbon.—Exchange.

TEACHERS THREE.

I rested awhile in a quiet nook
And found there teachers three—
One was a bird, and one was a brook,
And one was a green, green tree.

The wee bird sang a cheerful song
That no one heard but me,
And it seemed to say: "You've heard my lay;
Pass on its melody."

The brook flowed on in a glad, glad way,
Smiling at the rock's rebuff.
"I have no room," it said, "for gloom;
I laugh when the road is rough."

The green tree stood with wide, wide boughs,
Like hands outstretched to greet,
And when the branches stirred I caught this word:
"Be a friend to all you meet."

BLACKIE.

Once upon a time there was an old mother hen who had twelve baby chicks. They were all fluffy and yellow except one, who was so black that he was called Blackie.

Every morning the little girl who lived in the big farmhouse came out to feed the chicks.

"Cluck, cluck, cluck," said the old mother hen, and "Peep, peep, peep!" cried the baby chicks as if they were saying "Thank you" to the little girl for taking such good care of them.

"Peep, peep," said Blackie, "now that I have had my breakfast I'm going to take a journey." And away he hopped from his mother and little brothers and sisters as fast as he could go.

By and by he came to a hole in the fence, and out he went. He found himself on the nice green lawn and very near a lovely big flowerbed full of pretty red and yellow tulips.

"What a fine world this is!" thought Blackie. "I'm glad I ran away from the old chicken-yard, for it was never so wonderful as this." With that he began scratching around the tulip bed to find something more to eat.

Just then a terrible noise sounded quite near him: "Bow, wow, wow!" It was the little girl's fat brown puppy that was jumping about on his funny big feet, his tongue hanging out in much excitement.

"What are you doing out of the hen-yard?" he said. "Go right back, or I shall make you!"

"Peep, peep, peep!" cried frightened Blackie, and away he ran without looking at all to see where he was going.

Before he knew it he hopped right into the middle of a puddle of water. Little chicks do not like water at all, so poor Blackie was more frightened than ever. He fluttered his little wings, took a great hop, and up he jumped on to a smooth stone in the middle of the puddle.

"Peep, peep, peep! Mother, mother!" he cried. But the mother hen was far away in the hen-yard and could not even hear him.

The old tabby cat was curled up in the sun on the steps of the farmhouse porch, not far away. The little girl had given her a good saucer of milk, and she was napping after her breakfast.

"Peep, peep, peep!" cried the baby chick from his stone in the puddle. "I want my mother!"

The old tabby cat heard him and came down to see if she could help. She put one paw into the water, but drew it out in a hurry and shook off the drops; then she sat down as if she were trying to think of some other way, for tabby cat did not like to wet her feet.

"Peep! peep! peep! I want my mother! I'm afraid I'm going to drown."

Bang! went the screen door, and down the porch steps ran the little girl. How she did laugh when she saw little Blackie and the trouble he was in!

"Never mind, Blackie, I'll take you back to your mother," she said, and, picking him up very carefully, she carried him back to the old mother hen.

"ESKIMO PIE."

Royalties amounting to probably $30,000 a week are being paid by the manufacturers of "Eskimo Pie," the little oblong block of ice cream covered with chocolate, to its inventor, C. K. Nelson, son of the village confectioner of Onawa, Ia., and associates who have backed him in the marketing of a product which went begging for almost four years. Probably no innovation of recent years designed to meet the cravings of a sweet tooth has met with such instantaneous success in New York, Chicago and other cities.

The consumption of "Eskimo Pie" since it was placed on the market last January has encouraged its sponsors to believe that the gross income from royalties may abount to $1,500,000 in the next twelve months. The chocolate-covered cake of ice cream is being sold by the millions every day, and a company has been organized by Russell Stover of Chicago to issue licenses for its manufacture.

Although the royalties represent only a small fraction of the price, at the rate of 5 cents a dozen cakes the total is one of the biggest incomes ever received from a similar product. At the present time checkers are employed in ice cream manufacturing plants operating under the Nelson License to check the exact number of "Eskimo Pies" made and sold each day.

Combining Hot and Cold.

C. K. Nelson, the young man who performed the seemingly impossible feat of coating a bar of ice cream with hot chocolate, was brought up and educated in the little town of Onawa, Iowa, where his father operated an ice cream manufacturing establishment. After Nelson got through school his father put him in charge of the plant, where he gained a knowledge of ice cream manufacture. Nelson conceived the idea of dipping ice cream in chocolate and he worked on the plan with varying success for several years. His main difficulty arose from the fact that the chocolate would not stick to ice cream. The elder Nelson turned his ice cream plant over to another man and failure resulted.

With little else but an idea to sell Nelson set out to find capital to perfect his "Eskimo Pie" scheme. He went from town to town and met with constant rebuffs. "Cover ice cream with hot chocolate? Ridiculous!" said the men before whom he laid his plan for a new confection. Finally he reached Omaha, where he met Russel Stover, then connected with the Graham Ice Cream Company of that city.

Stover recognized possibilities in Nelson's idea. He had been superintendent of a big chocolate factory in Chicago and he saw a way in which it was possible to supply what Nelson lacked, namely, a method to make the chocolate stick to the ice cream.

Success Comes at Last.

The experiments were resumed upon a large scale, with the result that "Eskimo pie" is enjoying an enormous sale throughout the Middle West, and its fame is spreading to both coasts.

The process of manufacturing "Eskimo pie" is apparently simple. Brick ice cream is cut into oblong bars and dipped in chocolate which has been heated to 115 degrees and allowed to cool to 90 degrees, the proper heat for dipping. It would seem that hot chocolate must cause ice cream to melt and "run" before it could be placed in the hardening room. This, however, is not the case. The ice cream causes the chocolate to harden. The bar is then wrapped in foil and placed in a hardening room where it remains until ready to be marketed. Its inventor says that it is possible to leave a bar exposed in a warm room for as long as thirty minutes before it will melt. New York Times.

PATCHES OF BROWN.

Two ladies gay met a boy one day.
His legs were brier-scratched.
His clothes were blue, but a nut-brown hue
Marked the place where his pants were patched.
They bubbled with joy at the blue-eyed boy
With his spot of nut-brown hue.
"Why didn't you patch with a color to match?"
They chuckled. "Why not in blue?
Come, don't be coy, my blue-brown boy;
Speak out," and they laughed with glee.
And he blushed rose-red while he bashfully said:
"That ain't no patch; that's me!"

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial.

"A SPIRIT-FILLED CITY."

We should like to call the attention of those who doubt the efficacy of special revival efforts, to the remarkable results following the recent Gipsy Smith meeting in Jackson, Miss. That a real work of grace has been wrought in that community, no one can doubt who is at all familiar with the facts. As merely an indication of the religious fervor in that city, we mention a prayer meeting on a recent Thursday evening at the Griffith Memorial Baptist Church, where, following an address by Mr. Frederick Sullens, the brilliant editor of the Jackson Daily News, on "Soul Winning," there were ten additions to the membership of the church, eight on profession of faith and two by letter.

As a still further indication of what has been accomplished, we reproduce an editorial from a recent issue of the Jackson Daily News, whose editor, Mr. Sullens, is one of the most active of the laymen who have recently become interested in the work of the church. The editorial, under the caption, "A Spirit-filled City," is as follows:

"Nearly a month has passed since the close of the great soul-winning revival of Jackson, and it is gratifying to note that there has been no abatement of spiritual zeal among the men and women of the city who were touched by the spirit of the living God during that great event.

"At the men's prayer meeting held at the Majestic Wednesday all former attendance records were broken, the lower floor of the theatre being well filled. It is estimated that nearly 700 persons were present. Business and professional affairs had been thrust aside, luncheon neglected, while the men of Jackson gathered to join with humble and contrite hearts in this spirit of service.

"Let it not be said in a spirit of boasting, or pride in a new-found strength, but the men and women of Jackson are not backsliders. When they join forces for the accomplishment of any purpose, they stick to the job. Few, indeed, are the slackers who neglect to assume their part of the work. And this seems to be as true of our citizens in matters spiritual as well as materially. They are eager to do personal service, to carry on the great work of winning souls for Christ, to make of themselves the kind of men and women God intended them to be, and to carry the message to others.

"On Sunday morning more than 100 of our citizens will go to Brookhaven on a gospel mission. They go to tell the story of the spiritual blessing that has visited our own city, and with the earnest hope that they may be able to carry some of it to their friends in the Lincoln county capital.

"Sixty days ago, if such a journey had been proposed to the men of Jackson nearly everybody would have laughed at it. The leaders in such a movement might have succeeded in mustering a half dozen or so persons willing to render that form of service. To-day it would not be difficult, if it were necessary, to enlist 500 for that Brookhaven journey.

"Verily, verily, when the love of God fills a man's heart it works a wondrous change."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. H. M. Johnson, our pastor at Bolton, Miss., gives a good account of the work under his care.

Rev. J. O. Ware, of Mendenhall, Miss., writes that everything is moving along nicely on his charge.

Our Sunday school at Minden, La., Dr. Briscoe Carter, pastor, has a men's class with an attendance of about 150 every Sunday.

We learn frm an exchange that the Hospital Board, created by the recent General Conference, has selected Atlanta, Ga., as its headquarters.

Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., is district trustee of the Kiwanis Clubs, and a director in his local Club.

We learn from a publication of the Commission on Inter-Racial Co-operation that Mr. R. B. Eleazer, until recently editor of the Missionary Voice, is now director of publicity for the Commission.

The Sunday school attendance at the First Methodist Church, Greenville Miss., was 330 on June 11, and the attendance of the Big Brothers Class was 92 for the same day. Not bad for a hot Sunday!

Dr. J. M. Carter, editor of the Methodist Advocate-Herald, official organ of the Western Virginia Conference, passed to his reward on June 4, after a long illness. The church has lost one of its most faithful servants.

Rev. Charles Assaf, a Syrian, is doing very effective work in reaching those of his own nationality and other foreigners, laboring under the auspices of the Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference.

The summer months are usually the hardest of the year in a financial way for the Advocate. We are especially grateful, therefore, to our friends who push the work of securing new and renewal subscriptions.

A fine men's Bible class is taught in the Sunday school of the First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., by Mr. W. H. ("Corn-club") Smith, who is now the efficient secretary of the Laurel Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Pauline Wynn, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Wynn, of Shreveport, La., was graduated from Southern Methodist University at its recent commencement. She is a beautiful and accomplished Christian girl.

At the recent commencement of Southern Methodist University, the degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon Rev. J. L. Cunninggim, president of Scarritt Bible and Training School, and Rev. W. B. Nance, of our China Mission.

A note from Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Durant, Miss., brings the good news that Rev. J. W. Raper, who has been in bad health for some time, is now improving, and that his physicians hold out the hope that he will soon be fully restored to health.

A note from Rev. W. W. Graves, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, states that the work of that district is moving along well. The faithful pastors are all at their posts, hard at work, and the outlook is encouraging.

We learn from the Baltimore Southern Methodist that Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo's condition is somewhat improved. He is able to sit up a little while each day in a wheel chair, and his heart and pulse are normal, though he suffers much pain in his leg and foot.

The University of Arkansas, at its recent commencement, conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws upon Rev. A. C. Millar, D.D., the distinguished editor of the Arkansas Methodist. We venture to say that the University never conferred a degree more worthily.

The work on the Rolling Fork charge, Mississippi Conference, prospers. The church building at Rolling Fork has recently been remodeled and enlarged, making it both beautiful and convenient. The Sunday school has reached an enrollment of more than 100. Rev. T. J. O'Neil is the pastor.

Dr. J. W. Mills, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Beaumont, Texas, who was elected as editor of the Texas Christian Advocate to succeed Dr. A. J. Weeks, who resigned to accept the editorship of the Missionary Voice, declined to accept the position, stating as his reason his desire to continue in the pastorate.

Work has begun on a temporary Sunday school building in connection with our church at Cedar Grove, La., Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor. This building is expected to provide for the needs of the Elementary and the Junior Departments, and will be completed early in July. The building and equipment will cost approximately $1250.

The First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., believes in adequate publicity. In the Journal of June 23, nearly half a page is devoted to a full statement of the work of the Sunday school and of the services of the church. The pastor, Dr. H. F. Brooks, is in great favor with his people and every department of the work is prospering.

Rev. H. L. Johns, of Cedar Grove, La., in renewing the subscription of Mrs. M. E. Monk, states that she is a regular attendant upon the services of the church and the Sunday school, although she is seventy-five years of age. She has been the wife of a Baptist preacher for thirty-five years, but has retained her membership in the Methodist Church.

Prof. C. C. Norton, son of Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Norton, Fernwood, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Friday of last week. Prof. Norton holds the chair of history at Alexander College, Jacksonville, Texas. After a short visit to his parents, he will go to Columbia University, New York, for advanced work in history and psychology.

In the rush of the closing hours of the General Conference, we failed to note that Rev. J. R. Jones was placed on the General Hospital Board in place of Rev. J. T. Leggett, a rule of the General Conference making it impossible for one man to serve on more than one Board or Commission. Brother Leggett is a member of the Commission on Unification.

Mrs. H. R. McKee, wife of our pastor at Prentiss, Miss., is in sorrow on account of the death of her father, Mr. J. F. Duncan, in Fulton, Ky., which occurred the first week in June. Mr. Duncan was seventy-three years of age, and his last illness extended over three weeks. Mrs. McKee was with him during the last days. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to her and other sorrowing loved ones.

Dr. Edward Leigh Pell, the distinguished preacher and author, of Richmond, Va., often has two or three open nights between his Bible Conferences, and these he likes to devote (without compensation except expenses) to the interest of our young people. Those who may be interested in this matter can get in touch with Dr. Pell by writing him at 1030 West Grace Street, Richmond, Va.

Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference, authorizes us to announce that Rev. Brunner M. Hunt has been appointed by Bishop W. N. Ainsworth pastor of the Washington charge, succeeding his father, Dr. Rolfe Hunt, who has been serving the charge as a supply. Brother Hunt was recently graduated from Emory University.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, requests us to say that if any brother, in the Alexandria District or out of it, desires the services of Mr. Otis Spinks, singer, he should communicate with the presiding elder, whose address is 1305 Monroe St., Alexandria. Mr. Spinks has open dates from July 18 through August 10, and from August 18 through August 31.

We have received the following request from the Busy Bee Sunday school class of Montrose, Miss.: "Our revival is to begin Monday, July 17. We are having a special prayer service every Tuesday morning at 6 o'clock for this revival. We ask that all Christian people pray earnestly that we may have a great revival. Please pray especially for our pastor, Brother W. W. Hopper, and Brother Bennett, who are to conduct the revival. Also pray for our class of seventeen young women." We are sure this request will be heeded by many of our readers.

Some of our readers may have noticed sensational accounts in some of the New Orleans newspapers of charges against Rev. Jno. L. Williams, a local preacher of our church, who is superintendent of the Louisiana Child Finding and Home Society. These charges were sifted in open court, and the accusations were not sustained at a single point, the decision of the judge being absolutely clear as to the innocence of the accused. Those who have known Brother Williams for years, and those who followed the trial, felt that no other outcome was possible.

Rev. Martin Hebert, presiding elder of the French Mission District, Louisiana Conference, requests us to say that the district conference will be held at Houma, July 23-25. We thank Brother Hebert for a cordial invitation to attend the conference. The French Mission District is in the midst of a great revival campaign and most gratifying results are being had. The presiding elder has just added three preachers to his force of workers. Three church buildings are under process of construction, and two more will be begun soon. The French section of Louisiana is one of the most important and fruitful fields in our church.

The many friends in Louisiana of the late O. A. Wright will read with interest the following, taken from Zion's Herald of June 14: "In the death of Mr. O. A. Wright, Ohio Wesleyan University has lost one of its most active benefactors and loyal friends. Since leaving Ohio Wesleyan in 1897, Mr. Wright had held a constant and untiring interest in his alma mater. The last two years of his life, he had served as a member of the board of trustees. During his college days he was secretary to the late Bishop James W. Bashford, who was then president of Ohio Wesleyan. He was a close associate of the late Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus, and at the latter's death took charge of many of his benefactions. A portrait of Dr. Gunsaulus, presented by Mr. Wright to Ohio Wesleyan, hangs in Gray Chapel."

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. W. D. Bennett, Moorhead, Miss., 4; Rev. B. P. Fulliiove, Golden, Miss., 4; Mrs. Alice Casper, Raymond, Miss., 3; Chas. R. Yarbrough, Robeline, La., 3; Rev. B. F. Jones, Edwards, Miss., 5; Rev. J. O. Ware, Mendenhall, Miss., 2.

PRAYER MEETING ATTENDANCE.

The following are the only reports we have received of prayer meeting attendance last week: Algiers, C. C. Wier, pastor, 51; Lafayette, L. I. McCain, pastor, 68 (rain); Slidell, W. H. Giles, pastor, 32; Ruston, N. E. Joyner, pastor. (There will be no prayer meeting services for several weeks on account of revival meetings in the community.)

ITINERATING IN BRAZIL—THE GREAT NORTHWEST OF SAO PAULO.

By Dr. E. H. Rawlings.

V.

In no part of our journeying here have I been more interested than in what is known as the Northwest. This is a section of the State of Sao Poula that has been opened up within a few years in connection with a railroad running into that part of the wilderness and undeveloped part of the State. As recently as a dozen years ago this wilderness country was inhabited by Indians that were little, if any better, than savage. Indeed, on a map constructed by the Brazilian Government as late as twenty-five years ago, this section was marked "wild lands, inhabited by savage Indians." At a station just this side of Biriguy, the center of our work, I was shown a house in which about fifteen years ago one white family had lived for a while and had been driven out by hostile Indians, these white people later returning and claiming their house and land when the Indians themselves had been pushed by the railroad and civilization further back into the wilderness. Brother C. B. Dawsey, our missionary, told me that in the town of Pennapolis, a few miles from his home, a young Indian girl had been converted under his preaching, and returning to her people in the wilderness country in the West and refusing to live as they did, had been killed by them.

About 1912 a French company ran a railroad into the town of Bauru at the terminus of the Paulistia Railroad, straight out into the heart of the wilderness, extending it finally all the way through the Northwest section to the State of Motto Grosso. Three years ago the railroad was taken over by the Government and is now being operated as a Government enterprise. The lands from which the Indians had been pushed off were parcelled out in sections or grants to influential politicians and in time sold off to land promotion companies. One of these was an English company of which the superintendent was a Mr. Clark, a Scotchman and an excellent man. He told me that he sold off to setters 1784 sections and had never had trouble with one of the squatters and not one had failed to keep up his payments promptly. On this particular facenda the settlers were largely German, Italian and Japanese, not many native Brazilians. Coffee had been the chief article of cultivation but recent frosts in the low sections especially had "burnt" the little trees and greatly discouraged the farm and land proprietors, so that now they were turning their attention to the culture of cotton and fine stock. I saw the finest piggery or hog farm that I ever saw anywhere away out two hundred and fifty miles into the heart of this Northwest wilderness. Mr. Clark had lived in several places where our church had worked and though he is himself a Scotch Presbyterian, has always taken an active interest in our mission work, and when he moved up to the town of Biriguy, urged our missionaries to open work in this part of the country.

Finally in 1914 Brother Kennedy, who had been associated with Mr. Clark in other places, made a visit to him at Biriguy, preaching to a few people whom he could get together in his home. There was one Methodist Italian in all that part of the country and they had not yet found him. In 1915 Brother Buyers made a visit, preaching once in the home of Mr. Clark, but in 1916 the Rev. C. B. Dawsey, who had been in Brazil only two years, was sent out into this country with his wife and little child, to open up work. He tells a most interesting story of his efforts to get a house for $125. In this little hut the stick frame of which is still standing and that at we saw when we were in Biriguy, his second child was born. But he found his one Methodist Italian, and first in the home of Mr. Clark and then in the home of this Methodist Italian, he began work. But a Methodist was our missionary, and that means itinerant. He went from place to place preaching and teaching, going back over his own trail in the towns along this road till now in the Northwest there is a presiding elders' district with thirty preaching places, a splendid school for boys and girls at Biriguy and when we were there we found nine new churches in actual process of building. Further to the North is another section on the Sorocabano Railroad equally promising. The Junction of this Northwest railroad with the Sorocabano is at the town of Bauru and from this town of Bauru the Sorocabano railroad runs out into a section somewhat north of the Northwest Railroad. A little work is being done in this section by the Independent Presbyterians but it is almost negligible. Our Italian local preacher has charge of this great section under the presiding elder, and has thirty preaching places with church buildings beginning to go up through the liberality of the people themselves, since as yet there is not included in the Centenary any provision for the building of the churches in this Sorocabano section.

In no section of the country is the work being done quite so nearly after the pattern of early Methodism as in this wilderness country. The Catholics are here but they are nothing like so strong as elsewhere and are not entrenched as in the older sections of the country. Indeed, the land is largely virgin and as in the early days of the American wilderness, we are taking our course westward with the tides of empire. Nothing is easier than to get the people together and interest them in the Gospel. Brother Dawsey is coming home now on his first furlough, but comes reluctantly lest precious time be lost. In his absence Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard, two missionaries just out from Georgia, take their home and study the language. It is our intention to put them in charge of a boys' school to be opened up at Bauru, the junction of the two roads, and in reach of the two sections, the Northwest and the Sorocabano. Already a splendid young Methodist Brazilian couple is here in Bauru urging us to come. They were educated at our Granbery. The husband is a druggist and the wife a dentist. They met us at the station, took us over the city to inspect sites, one of which is to be given us by the city, told us of the Sunday school they had organized and were conducting in the city, entertained us in their lovely Christian home and gave us their intelligent interest, the pledge of success in this far away corner of the country. Brother Dawsey has great plans taking shape. He hopes to see the best there is in the evangelism of this country, get another missionary, several more Brazilian preachers and to find some one liberal enough to give him a great test, and when he goes back, it is his thought to conduct an evangelistic movement for the conquest of this whole wilderness country for evangelical Christianity, using institutes and short term schools after the manner of the Korean Movement for the training of his workers.

Our workers are reaching the frontiers as early well nigh as their ancient competitors, the Romanists, and that is not late. They are preaching a living Gospel, and building their churches and schools right down among the people, they are planting themselves and growing up with the hardy life of the land. I have found no section of our work in any field that to me was more interesting, more promising, and that looked more like the actual conquest of a civilization than did this wide-ranging country work of our workers in Brazil.

Let us stand by our duty fearlessly and effectively.—Abraham Lincoln.

MRS. MINNIE EDDINS LITTLETON.

It is with a sad and heavy heart tbat we now try to write the obituary of our life-long friend, MINNIE E. LITTLETON, who slipped away to God on Wednesday, June 14. "Minnie," as she was known by all ber friends, was horn in Stone, Ala., on Octoher 21, 1880. She was the daughter of the late Joe A. Eddins and Blanche Cook Eddins, of Columbus, Miss. She spent her girlhood days in Columhus, Miss., where she was happily married to Claire Littleton, of Harstfield, Tenn., where she afterwards made her home.

God hlessed this union with one precious bahy, but in His wisdom He called it home after only four short months spent in the arms of a loving mother. Her husband followed the hahy six months later, having died in tbe fall of 1913.

After her husband's death, Mrs. Littleton moved to Rosedale, Miss., where her brother, Joe A. Eddins, lived, and had made her home here since that time. She was elected to the office of City Clerk, and successfully filled this important office for a number of years, having resigned to become the manager of the Rosedale Ice Co., which place she filled at the time of her death.

To know "Minnie" was to love her, and her sunny and genial disposition won her friends everywhere. Her devotion to her brother and sisters was beautiful, and she was never too busy to neglect her duty to them. She was a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, having joined the church at the age of 13 years, and the church has had no more loyal friend than Minnie Littleton. She was stricken in the prime of life, at Rosedale, Miss., and rushed to Memphis, Tenn., where she died at 7:20 p.m., June 14, 1922.

The funeral services were held at tbe home of her sister, Mrs. Mattie B. Palmer, 1114 Vance Avenue, Memphis, Tenn., by Dr. T. W. Lewis, of Madison Heights Methodist Church, and Rev. Jno. W. Robertson, of Rosedale Methodist Church, her life-long friend and pastor. Final interment was at Columbus, Miss., where her hody was laid to rest to await the final resurrection. As a neighbor and friend it could well be said of her, "she loved much."

She is survived by her brother, Joe A. Eddins, Rosedale, Miss., and four sisters: Mesdames Ida E. Bland, Beaumont, Texas.; Hattie Warfield, Brickleys, Ark.; Mattie B. Palmer, Memphis, Tenn.; Francis Gunn, Montgomery, Ala., and a host of friends and more distant relatives.

Oh, how we shall miss her, and how hard it is to give her up! But her faith in God was beautiful, and her favorite passage of God's Word was John 14, and we feel that she has gone to that home where there is no sickness, sorrow, pain nor death. May we so live as to meet her there at the resurrection. Au revoir, but not goodhye, Minnie.

Her pastor,
JNO. W. ROBERTSON.

The death angel visited our community this past week and removed from our midst the infant son of Brother and Sister A. S. Bass, and Sister Emily Whittington Cudd, wife of L. C. Cudd and mother of our H. Wade Cudd. Little Alfred Small Bass had won his way into the hearts of the people of this community; and how it did hurt to break these ties that bound the lives of the family together! Every expression of love and sympathy was demonstrated by the people in service, kind words and flowers. Little Alfred died of pneumonia, June 1, 1922.

Sister Cudd's going was sad, but not unexpected—the family understood the condition, and were perfectly reconciled to God's will. There were so many things for the family to he comforted over in the life of Sister Cudd—her faithfulness to her home, community and her church, and her readiness to meet God. There was not a shadow of doubt in their minds. She was a good woman, wife, mother, friend, neighbor, and Christian. Sister Cudd was horn Decemebr 31, 1859, and died June 2, 1922. She leaves a husband, four sons, and two daughters, other relatives, and a host of friends.

"Calm on the bosom of thy God,
Fair spirit, rest thee now;
While here on earth thy footsteps trod,
His seal was on thy brow."

JELL-O
Ice Cream Powder

THE LADIES MADE IT

THE delicious ice cream served at lawn fetes and church suppers is often made by the ladies in charge since the use of Jell-O Ice Cream Powder has lessened the cost of ice cream and simplified the making of it. One package of the powder and one quart of rich milk make two quarts of ice cream. All grocers sell Jell-O Ice Cream Powder at two packages for 25 cents, a dozen for $1.50. A dozen packages make six gallons of ice cream.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Sardis District Training School for Sunday school teachers enrolled 47 and issued 18 credits: Primary Organization and Administration, 4; The Psychology of Young People 3; Principles of Teaching, 8; A Methodist Church and its Work, 3. Although the attendance was not large, the work struck in deep. The quality of the work done was much greater than the number of teachers in attendance. Farmers in this section are badly behind with their work and many could not take the courses offered.

The school at New Albany has enrolled 20 out-of-town students. We are expecting a larger attendance at New Albany than we had at Corinth last year. As announced, the school at New Albany will begin work Monday, July 3, at 11 o'clock, and continue until Saturday at noon.

The next school is scheduled to be held at Ackerman, July 31 to August 5. Miss Ramey will teach Primary Organization and Administration; Mrs. Randolph will teach The Pupil; Rev. Mellville Johnson will teach The School or Organization and Administration of the School; Rev. E. S. Lewis will teach The Bible and Missions.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

Saturday night I was with Brother Raley, at Osyka. I found them in the midst of building. They will have a very pretty and useful church when it is completed. I found a good congregation Saturday night. We had a good service. Brother Raley was in high favor.

Sunday morning we were at Muddy Springs. A good congregation greeted us at the preaching hour. There is a very small Sunday school, kept up by a few faithful ones. This church and these workers deserve a better school than they have. I enjoyed preaching to these people. This was the best kept rural church I have visited yet. I trust they will put this same zeal into the larger work of the church.

In the afternoon we were at Holmesville. It rained and rained. We had a song service, made the record for the Sunday school, and spoke to them about the work. This is a small, but exceedingly faithful and loyal group.

At night, we were at LaBranch Street, McComb. Brother Oliver is doing a good work. I attended their Epworth League. Though the program was gotten up on a few minutes' notice, it showed a faithful willingness on the part of these young people. Three young men are local preachers; I understood two called this year. Mighty fine. Brother Oliver preached a good sermon. I was so glad to be with them and doubly so to find such a good spirit.

McComb is to have a meeting under the leadership of Rev. C. M. Dunaway. Pray earnestly for them.

Pray for the work and workers.

Keep Sunday School Day in mind.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM CEDAR GROVE, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: Herewith we hand you a copy of our Directory, just published and dated April 1, 1922. Our little church has made such progress, however, in the ten weeks since the copy for this was prepared, that the booklet is almost ancient history!

Perhaps our greatest growth is in the Sunday school, where we are making a conscientious effort to organize our school departmentally and with some real educational standards in mind. Since April 1, we have had a promotion day in which we strove to get our pupils better arranged in beginners, primary, junior and intermediate groups. We have divided two classes, creating new ones, to assist this. Our enrollment has gone to something like 230, and our single highest attendance was 171, quite in advance of the 137 quoted in the directory. Such has been the development that we have a vision of a great departmental school, and are now building a 28x34 temporary building to house elementary and junior departments. To provide some additional teachers more properly to man this building, the pastor is teaching, after the weekly prayer meeting, a teacher-training class, using "Life In The Making" as a text, and there are fifteen or eighteen enrolled in this course of study.

Forty new members have been added since Conference. Our budget is paid to date. We raised our Centenary percentage from 31 to even 50 in March. We gladly gave $25 to the Preachers' Institute.

In all departments of this church is a tremendous possibility for growth and service. A spirit of zealous work is growing among our people, and the pastor feels that in the months to come the activities for the Master will be strenuous, but full of joy.

We are looking forward to the building of a new church. A $25,000 plant, modernly equipped, in Cedar Grove would be in line with the municipal progress of the town, and would revolutionize our work here. We are laying careful plans looking toward financing this enterprise.

Yours sincerely,

H. L. JOHNS.

FROM DUNCAN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am happy serving these good folks on the Duncan and Hillhouse charge. They are loyal, co-operative, and spiritual. I love them more each day.

I held a five-days' revival service at Bobo on my charge, in which ten joined the church—8 on profession of faith and 2 by letter. I christened one baby.

The striking thing about the revival was that all who joined were grown people except one girl about 15 years of age. I had the happy privilege of taking three generations into the church. I christened the great-grandson of the great-grandfather, who was more than 75 years of age and who was baptized into church on profession of faith, and took in also the mother of the child on profession of faith, who was the granddaughter of the great-grandfather of the little baby boy. Do you understand?

Already this year I have had 40 to join the church and have christened 17 babies and children. Finances are up-to-date—have over half of Conference collections in hand. Twenty of the forty joining the church have been on profession of faith. I have two other revivals to hold during the year on my charge.

We had a remarkable revival at Duncan, held by Rev. W. A. Wilson, our Conference evangelist for the North Mississippi Conference. He was with us 8 days; 20 joined the church—12 on profession of faith; one man was converted who had not been to church in 26 years, on the last Sunday afternoon of the meeting when Brother Wilson gave his experience; 200 in this service every one who had not professed faith in Christ before, did so. It was one of the greatest services I have ever been in. Brother Wilson is good and full of the Holy Spirit and fire. All fell in love with him—God bless him—I love him. We have a prayer meeting with an average of about 35 to 40.

This year I have taken into the church 1 Disciple, 2 Baptists, 4 Presbyterians, and one Catholic.

God bless you and yours,

Your friend and brother,

J. A. GEORGE, P. C.

FROM LAFAYETTE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We have had good prayer services all the year. Our prayer services were revived at the beginning of the ecclesiastical year, after having been discontinued for six years. We had 56 at prayer meeting Wednesday night, June 14 (no heat prostration). In spite of extremely warm weather Sunday, June 11, extra seats were required at both services to accommodate the crowds.

Cordially,

LEON I. McCAIN.

Science Discovers Greatest Lice Killer

Changes Old Methods. No Dusting or Spraying. Birds Delouse Themselves. Gives Lasting Relief.

A recent discovery promises to revolutionize all the methods accepted up to now for keeping poultry free from lice and mites. This wonderful lice killer keeps the birds always lice free without the poultry raiser doing any work. It is the simplest, easiest, surest and best method ever discovered.

Hick's Lice Kill, which is the name of this sensational lice killer, is added to the drinking water. The medicine taken into the system of the bird comes out through the pores and every louse or mite dies or leaves the body. It does not injure the hatchability or flavor of the eggs or meat; is harmless to chicks and does not affect the plumage. A few days treatment at the start and then a little in the drinking waer each month.

A TRIAL COSTS YOU NOTHING.

So confident is Mr. Hick that Hick's Lice Kill will kill every louse or mite, that he is making a special guaranteed offer of two regular full sized, double strength, $1.00 bottles and a regular $1.00 package of Hick's Egg-Lay Tablets all for $1.00. Use one bottle yourself and sell the other at one dollar, thus getting your own free. Send $1.00 today (Currency, money order, check, etc.) to Chas. M. Hick & Co., Dept. 393, 1018 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. If you prefer, send no money, just your name and address, and pay postman $1.00 and postage on delivery. If after two weeks trial you are not absolutely satisfied, write Mr. Hick and your money will be refunded.

A TRIP TO THE GOLDEN WEST.

Dear Brother Carley: It is not often that I have any inclination to express myself through the daily or church press, and I am leaving it to your judgment whether or not I should be allowed the privilege at this time.

Being a member of the Rotary Club here at Jackson, for some reason unknown to me they sent me as a delegate to the International Rotary Convention at Los Angeles, from the 6th to the 10th of June. As I had always coveted a trip through the western part of our country, I simply pulled down my desk top, dusted up my old suit of clothes, and joined the special train known as the Dixie Special, to attend this convention.

I had the pleasure of visiting Rev. S. H. Werlein in his home and talking over with him the interests of the church out there. He is very optimistic over the future condition of Methodism in the great West. He was enjoying good health, looking fine, and seemed in the very best spirits.

I also had the privilege of being with my old college mate, Rev. W. H. Nelson, who has been rightfully made Doctor of Divinity by the Board of Trustees of Centenary College; he had just received a letter the day before from Brother Drake announcing this fact, and I was glad to extend my congratulations. Brother Nelson was one of the boys who worked his way through college, and I was glad to see that he now has as much zeal as in college days, if not more. He is editor of the Pacific Advocate, which gives him the opportunity to do a great work for Methodism. He has a beautiful home, is well pleased, and I am sure will accomplish a great deal in the future.

I saw W. G. Wadley, who was one of the best lay workers in the Louisiana Conference before going to California, and I found him just as active out there.

The places of most interest to me were: the Grand Canyon, El Paso, Albuquerque, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, over the Rocky Mountains and through the Arkansas Valley and the Royal Gorge and one-half day spent on Pike's Peak.

Such a trip as this gives one the idea that the United States is the greatest country in the world and that it should be studied and traveled more. But it also makes us appreciate our own Sunny South more than ever, for undoubtedly we have the greatest country in the world right here in Dixie.

With very best wishes, I am

Yours truly,

JNO. L. SUTTON.

Jackson, Miss.

A NOTE FROM REV W. M. McINTOSH.

Dear Dr. Carley: I attended our district conference at Sherman, Miss., last week. We had a great time and it was one of the most spiritual conferences I have ever attended. All the business interest of the district was well cared for. Our presiding elder presided with great dignity; in fact, no bishop could beat it. The preaching was of a high order and deeply spiritual. We had some great speeches made by Brothers Jaco, Holder, Stevens, Estes, and Black along the lines of the special work which they represented.

Brother S. A. Brown, of Ripley, was our secretary and did his work well.

Sherman is quite a nice little town and the pastor with his good people treated us royally. We hope to have the pleasure of going there again some time.

We are now in one of the greatest meetings ever held at this place—and the end is not yet. Brother F. H. McGee is our pastor and he serves as fine people as can be found in the State of Mississippi. Yours fraternally,

W. M. McINTOSH.

Sunflower, Miss.

FROM THE PRENTISS CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: As you know, this is our first year on the Prentiss charge, and I might say that it is a good year if I could refrain from thinking of the things that ought to be done; and a year of doing things which ought to be done, as they ought to be done, would force us to say, however much we may have done, "we've done very little." But I must say, and I am glad to say, "we have made some progress."

We arrived in Prentiss on December 13, and were carried to the home of Mrs. J. L. Berry for the night, a very delightful home and we fared sumptuously, Mrs. Rouse, a daughter of Mrs. Berry, caring for the girls over night. The next day, while waiting for my predecessor to get out of the parsonage, we were entertained very royally in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Terrill. In the afternoon the ladies of the church got together and did some extra work at the parsonage, also putting in several new articles, after which they brought the preacher and his wife to the parsonage and introduced them not only to the home, but to a nice table laden with delicious eatables and a pantry filled with a lot of extras for the kitchen.

We have done about a hundred dollars worth of repairs on the parsonage, which has added so much to the parsonage—an extra little bed room and a bath room with a lot of minor repairs and painting inside. The good ladies of the Woman's Missionary Society, with some assistance by the ladies of another church and through and by the recommendation of the Social Service Department of the Woman's Missionary Society at Prentiss, have purchased and installed in the parsonage home a nice bath tub, for which we are very grateful.

Our congregations are not as good as they ought to be, but better now. We have very good Sunday schools all over the work. We have organized a thing which we think every charge ought to have with more than one church, namely, "A Four-Times-a-Year Circuit Sunday School Institute," out of which there has come lots of good to our Sunday school. We observed Children's Week in the Sunday school at Prentiss and in many respects it was a success. Aside from the untold value of worship, fellowship, educational and inspirational helps, there grew out of the observance of this week in the Sunday school some helpful recommendations. Among them were: That we build some additional Sunday school rooms, and the plans are being made; also a Parent-Teachers' Association, which was immediately organized. And if we can, or will, do the follow-up work, we will have accomplished lots of good, for it is much needed. We have organized five new Wesley Bible classes.

The Woman's Missionary Society at Prentiss in doing much added and new work, Bible Study, Mission Study and Social Service work. A Ladies' Aid has been dissolved and organized into a Woman's Missionary Society at Bassfield, and we have one at Carson which is doing good local work but has no connection with the general work, which we hope will be dissolved and organized into a Woman's Missionary Society in the near future.

We have one new League and hope to have another real soon.

Prentiss and Bassfield are planning new Sunday school rooms and Carson is putting on two new coats of paint and Mt. Zion is one of the most beautiful sites for a church and a graveyard, and both the church, its yard, and the graveyard are beautifully kept.

The finances are not so good, but would be with a real good system for its financial business. We have a splendid truck business here and other business is progressing and the church's business with God on our side I am sure would be better than all other business with a system. We are realizing it and part of our boards are putting on the budget system. However, the good people are not unmindful of their pastor and family in sorrows and financial embarrassments. They hurry to our relief when it is known.

We have planned for a revival in every church. Pray for us.

Fraternally yours,

H. R. McKEE.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas God, in his infinite wisdom, has called from our midst one of our true and loyal members and friends, GUY BRAMLETT; be it resolved:

First—That the members of Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, Coldwater, Miss., with sorrowing hearts, bow in submission to the will of God, knowing that he doeth all things well.

Second—That this faithful member and devoted son has gone before us, and shall be a guardian angel to his friends and love ones here, and shall be sadly missed in all of our work.

Third—That we desire to extend to the bereaved ones our deepest sympathy, and pray that they may feel the comforting presence of their Savior in this sad hour.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our Troop, sent to the family, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

District Meetings.

Mrs. Kemp Williams, Secretary of the Columbus District, has arranged to have the district meeting at Ackerman, June 20-21, the opening service being Tuesday night, when Miss Corinne Rogers, of New Albany, will give the Council Message. Mrs. E. L. Gatlin, of Ackerman, is chairman of the reception committee and all delegates should send their names to her as soon as possible. An interesting program has been prepared and as these meetings are being so well attended this season, it is expected a good crowd of representatives will greet the Conference workers at Ackerman.

Mrs. Jeff Busby, of Houston, secretary of the Aberdeen District, has announced the meeting of her district to be in Okolona. Representatives from over the district will take part on the program, as well as the Conference officers.

Greenwood Meetings at Ruleville and Itta Bena.

On Thursday, June 8, 1922, representatives of the Adult and Junior Auxiliaries of the Woman's Missionary Society, Greenwood District, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met for their annual district conference at Ruleville, Mississippi. Sixteen Junior Societies and twenty-three Adult Auxiliaries of the district were represented. The reports from all of these organizations were most encouraging.

Mrs. B. F. Whitehead, Secretary of the Greenwood District, presided over this conference. Other Conference officers present were Mrs. T. M. Clark, Conference President, and Mrs. T. W. Baker, Conference Superintendent of Young People, both of Tupelo, Miss. Miss Julia Wasson, missionary to China, at home on a furlough, was a guest of honor on this occasion. Mrs. Alma Riley, Field Secretary of the Methodist Orphanage, was an appreciated guest of the conference.

The morning session was devoted to Junior work and the afternoon session was given to Adult work. Aside from the regular reports, inspirational talks were made by the Conference leaders. The leading features of the evening session were the devotional exercises led by Rev. S. L. Pope, presiding elder of the Greenwood District, the Council Message by Mrs. T. M. Clark, and "My Work in China," by Miss Julia Wasson.

The hospitality of the Ruleville people was unexcelled. Their homes and their hearts were opened to their guests. An elegant luncheon was served to the visitors at the noon hour in the Masonic Hall.

On the following day, June 9, these Conference leaders went in a body to Itta Bena to participate in a Young People's Rally of the Young People's Missionary Societies of the district.

Mrs. T. W. Baker, Conference Superintendent of Young People's Work, presided over this meeting. Delegates were present from the Young People's Societies of Tchula, Isola, Inverness, Drew, Carrollton, and Itta Bena. The reports of these Young People showed progress along all lines. One of the most interesting features of the day's programme was the demonstration by the Itta Bena Young People: "An Ideal Executives Meeting." Miss Tommie Foster, of Tchula, discussed stewardship. Interesting papers on "Does My Mission Study Book Look New," and "Is My Bible Dusty" were read by Miss Ruth Bradley, of Inverness, and Miss Hester Frances Duncan, of Drew, respectively. The cordial hospitality extended to these guests by the Itta Bena people will never be forgotten.

DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL AT ST. MARK'S HALL.

To-day, June 19, was a red letter day at St. Mark's, as it marked the beginning of vacation school. The children as usual were on time except those who came ahead of time by something like an hour. There is nothing in the entire year's work more important or more interesting than these few weeks spent with the children during the summer months. So those of us who are responsible for conducting the school look forward with no little concern to this time of great opportunity, feeling that the time is all too short to accomplish all our desires. It is not too short for our physical strength, however, these hot, summer days. Those of you who are teachers or have taught know something of the stress and strain incidental to the school room. Now if you add to that the responsibility of a Sunday school teacher, you will have a faint idea of how a Daily Vacation Bible School teacher feels. She lacks the authority of a day school teacher and must rule with love alone, else her pupils will fail to come, but there must be order. One important thing is to keep every one busy.

The bell sounds at nine o'clock and an orderly line of children marches into the assembly room. A song is announced, a prayer is offered, more singing, a Bible story, a memory verse, an offering, and then classes assemble for the work period. This part of the program is varied from time to time and is never monotonous. One group makes rag rugs, another beads and paper flowers, another does crocheting, another makes toys, and still another carpentry. An interesting thing about these boys and girls is their desire to work rather than play. A time is set aside for play each day, but one group of girls to-day asked to take this time in working. One of the boys said, "Do you think I can finish my book shelves to-morrow?" They actually want to get things done. After thirty minutes spent on the playground all come together for a closing exercise. A feature of this will be "Habit Talks"—talks on the care of eyes, ears, teeth and body, together with suggestion of politeness in the home, on the street, rights of other people, and many other like subjects. After the closing song a salute to the flag is given and all march out homeward bound. Thus half of the day is spent and so much surplus energy used up that the remaining part of the day is much better spent than it would be otherwise.

Vacation time is not well spent by many, many children, especially in towns and cities where there is so little real work for them to do. The program briefly outlined above is being carried out here in the city of New Orleans for one month for children who could not have such an opportunity otherwise. The church has placed paid workers in this needy field and it is well, but many other places need this same kind of program and could have it without paid workers if a few people would get interested and say it shall be done.

BERTHA ELLISON.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas it has pleased our Heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom, to take from us our friend and co-worker, MRS. AGNES JONES; and

Whereas she was not only a regular attendant upon the services of the Methodist Church, and a liberal and systematic contributor to the support of the church and all its institutions, but was also willing and able to help with any movement for the welfare of the community; and

Whereas she was so long identified with the Woman's Missionary Society and served as agent for the missionary literature, continuously and faithfully, through many discouragements, for more than twenty years; and

Whereas through all her loneliness and physical suffering, she was always patient and cheerful, and upheld by the Holy Spirit, her loyal and conscientious Christian character inspired all her associates to higher and holier living; therefore be it resolved:

First—That we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society, realizing our loss and feeling our bereavement, bow in humble submission to the will of the Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

Second—That in the death of Mrs. Jones the Methodist church has lost a devoted member and the Coldwater Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society has been deprived of a faithful and efficient officer and worker.

Third—That we, the members of the Missionary Society, do hereby voice our feeling of personal loss in the death of Mrs. Jones and express our deepest sympathy for the bereaved relatives.

REVIVAL SUGGESTIONS.

Dear Brother Carley: In view of the fact that so many meetings are held during July and August, would it be amiss for me to urge our people to try to make due preparation for these meetings and thus contribute much to their success? So often we are called to assist and when reaching the community find it has only been "announced"—sometimes scarcely that; half-dozen song books, index gone; no lights; no prayer circles organized; no co-operation; and yet it is expected that the preacher shall bring the revival with him. And if the revival gets under way, it is just about the time set (annually) to close it, and all say, after interest is aroused, "What a mistake—it should run another week!" Why not get ready and start the good work, and let our Lord, through his Spirit, have his way? "Sow sparingly," we "reap sprlngly."

Organization and co-operation secured by our leading evangelists given to our honor preachers and what gracious results would follow!

Why not? Let's have big revivals.

A GREAT GOAL SET BY BOARD OF STEWARDS.

By J. G. Board.

We have been here four weeks last Saturday. The first week we spent in getting whitewashed, the "patio" cleaned up, getting acquainted, etc. The last Sunday Mr. Davis was here, Mr. Clements and Mr. Whitehead were here to tell him goodbye and during the services Sunday night they mentioned the Evangelistic Campaign. They asked the church how many members they felt they could promise. The response of the President of the Board of Stewards was "one hundred." When I came I took the promise to heart and we began a campaign for one hundred members. To date we have baptized two and will baptize two Sunday night. We now have fifty-four candidates for membership, won since we came. At the first Sunday school we had eighty-four present; last Sunday we had one hundred thirty-two. The Epworth League has from sixty to eighty present every meeting. The women's missionary meeting had six the first meeting and twenty the last. At the regular church services we are having from one hundred and twenty to one hundred and fifty. We held a church conference the second week and seventy members promised with the help of God to bring one member at least to Christ and into the church this year. The pastor is busy from six o'clock in the morning to eleven at night; but oh! such contentment to be found in doing His work. We also expect to put three natives from our church into the active ministry this year. They are to begin their study with me in two weeks. Our collections have increased about 50 per cent and God is with us, and we are marching on. Mrs. Board and I are happier than we have ever been in our lives.

Women Need More and Better Blood

To be strong, well, equal to demands of home, society, office or shop.

It is a fact proven by thousands of grateful letters that Hood's Sarsaparilla is remarkably beneficial to young or older women.

The most common ailments of women drain and weaken the system and sometimes result in anemia, nervous weakness, general break-down.

Hood's Sarsaparilla gives the blood more vitality and better color, makes stronger nerves, and contributes to the length and enjoyment of life.

MRS. HATFIELD SABINA, OHIO

In Pitiable Condition when she Began Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sabina, Ohio.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness and irregularity. I was weak and nervous and could hardly stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal. I was this way for about a year and had tried several medicines and had a physician, but to no avail. My sister was taking your medicine and finally induced me to try it. I now feel fine and can do my housework without any trouble at all. You can use this letter for the sake of others if you wish."—Mrs. WELDON G. HATFIELD, R. R. 3, Sabina, Ohio.

Housewives make a great mistake in allowing themselves to become so weak and nervous that it is well-nigh impossible for them to attend to their necessary household duties.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken when you first notice such symptoms as nervousness, backache, weakness and irregularity. It will help you and prevent more serious trouble. Give it a fair trial. It surely helped Mrs. Hatfield, just as it has many, many other women.
